Gross operating revenue in one year has jumped over $8,000,000, from $100,611,243 for the 12 months ended August 31, 1935, to $108,780,542 for the year just ended. The corporation spent $82,856,098 in operating expenses in 1936, and $85,587,392 in 1935, when the gross income, as already mentioned, was some $8,000,000 less, indicating satisfactory economies effected this year.

Earned surplus now stands at $44,354,379, against $41,088,279 one year ago.

Subsequent to the publication Tuesday morning of the corporation's annual financial statement, the board of Loew's, Inc., through David Bernstein, treasurer, announced a quarterly dividend of 50 cents and an extra dividend of $1.00 per share on the common stock, payable December 31, 1936, to stockholders of record at the close of business on December 11.

Nicholas Schenck Getting Contract

The first employment contract that Nicholas M. Schenck, president, has ever had with Loew's is expected to be approved at the annual meeting of stockholders at the home office on December 8. In addition, action will be taken at this meeting on the transfer to Mr. Schenck of the unexpired five-year option held by the late Irving G. Thalberg for the annual purchase of 9,600 shares of Loew's stock at $40 per share.

The employment contract provides for the same compensation and percentage of the profits now being enjoyed by the president. The contract will begin January 1, next. No other agreements will be considered at the session.

Mr. Schenck, David Bernstein, J. Robert Rubin, Charles C. Moskowitz, Leopold Friedman, Isidor Frey, David Warfield, William A. Phillips, George N. Armsby, William A. Parker, John R. Hazel and Thomas Nelson Perkins are all expected to be re-elected to the board at the December 8 meeting.

Film Philatelists Elect

The New York Film Philatelic Club held its first meeting last Saturday and elected Arthur Weinberger, president; Harry Gans, vice-president; Harry Brenner, treasurer; Emanuel Fine, recording secretary; Jack Levy, secretary and Howard Levy, custodian. The next meeting of the club will be held December 9.

Postpone Fox Hearing

Further examination of witnesses in the William Fox bankruptcy case at Atlantic City has been postponed until next week by Federal Referee Robert E. Steedle. Some of the attorneys involved are busy in other courts and rather than go ahead without them Mr. Steedle granted another date.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Mind Your Own Business

(Paramount)

Comedy

Exciting comedy is the element that Major Pictures and producer Emanuel Cohen selected as the essence of this contribution to the Paramount program. To that end, the film will present a new comedy team, Charles Ruggles and Alice Brady, certainly not unknown as individual comics. Around them has been grouped a capable cast of name players, including Lyle Talbot, Paul Harvey, Jack LaRue, Benny Baker, Gene Lockhart, Frankie Darro, William Demarest, Charles Wilson and Theodore von Eltz. Comedy authors and writers, John Francis Larkin and Dore Schary, prepared the story, and a comedy director, Norman McLeod, is handling it.

The adaptability of Ruggles and Miss Brady to comic themes being generally familiar, Ruggles again is presented as a henpecked husband. Conductor of a nature column in a daily newspaper, he has many hobbies, one of which is that of being an honorary member of a Boy Scout Troop. Ordered by editor Talbot either to pep up his column or join the unemployed, he is stymied. His wife (Miss Brady) comes to his rescue and writes his column in typical keyhole peeper style. It goes over big with the editor and the readers. Ruggles warms up to the job, although his knowledge of slang is limited, and goes in for inside stuff. He predicts an attack on a political candidate's life, and when the attempt is actually made, Ruggles is in a mess. The district attorney lands on his neck, and the gangsters, feeling that the snooper knows more than is good for them, resort to direct action. It takes the troop of Scouts to do a whole lot better than cops, G-men and an aroused public in rescuing Ruggles from his predicament.

Situations and dialogue are pointed solely to evoke wholesome laughter. As laugh pictures always have their place in the scheme of things, exhibitors are aware of the exploitation angles necessary.

We, the Jury

(RKO Radio)

Comedy-Drama

With only slight character and atmospheric changes, this film is a re-creation of "Ladies of the Jury," in which Edna May Oliver was featured just a few seasons ago. The theme is, or should be, very familiar. A man is murdered. Framed circumstantial evidence brings his wife into court as the guilty party. The case is heard and all evidence points to the woman's guilt. The case is given to the jury. The first vote is 11 to 1 for conviction. The dissenter is a shrewd, worldly wise society woman. By setting her confreres against one another, she causes the jury to disagree. Proceeding to the scene of the crime, she brings about a reenactment of the incidents of the fatal occasion. Her tact and foresight exonerates the woman and reveal the killer and the motive.

This time Helen Broderick will be seen in Miss Oliver's role. In her comedy role she again is teamed with Victor Moore, with whom she appeared in "Swing Time." Supporting the principals is a large group of new and veteran screen players. Among those to be seen are Philip Huston, starred in "The Big Game;" Louise Latimer, now in "The Plot Thickens;" Vinton Haworth, who made a favorable debut in "Without Orders;" Frank M. Thomas, Earle Foxe, Maxine Jennings, Billy Gilbert, Robert McWade, Charles Middleton, George Irving and Leonid Kinsky, a Russian actor seen lately in "The Road to Glory" and "Peter Ibbetson."

The story, action of which takes place in three locales, the victim's home, a courtroom and a jury room, is adapted from a play by Fred Ballard, which on the stage starred Mrs. Fiske. The present screen version was prepared by Franklin Coen. It is being directed by Ben Holmes, whose most recent credit is "The Plot Thickens."

Women of Glamour

(Columbia)

Dramatic Romance

Modern in theme and atmosphere, the story to be told in this production is a dramatic and merciless probing of human emotions and weaknesses. It tosses two men and two women into situations which, although their relations cause their lives to become considerably tangled, enable each one to find exactly what he or she wanted in life without quite knowing how to go about attaining it. Drama is the fundamental quality of the story. It is an integral part of the complicated romantic interest and the comparatively slight comedy content.

The four characters featured are members of the gay living set. A man disgusted with his own existence endeavors to effect a transformation in a girl equally dissatisfied with her own mode of life. The other two come into the story, and romantic and dramatic complications ensue that threaten to dynamite the social experiment. But their experiences bring to each one a vision of how happiness may be best assured.

The story content is poignant and powerful, and the players selected to interpret it seem to be of above average caliber. It features Virginia Bruce, currently in "Born to Dance;" Melvyn Douglas, who apparently came into his own in "Theodora Goes Wild;" Leona Maricle and Reginald Denny. Pert Kelton, Mike Morita, Maurice Cass and Thurston Hall also will be seen.

The story used is an original screen play prepared by Lynn Starling and Mary McCall, Jr. It is being directed by Gordon Wiles, most of whose previous credits were in association with thrill action films.

Murder on the Mississppi

(Universal)

Comedy-Melodrama

The story being told in this production spins through a welter of drama, comedy, romance, intrigue, suspense and danger. Essentially, however, it is a comedy, built about the familiar premise of a newspaperman who, with all the cards stacked against him and at great personal danger, solves a murder mystery and frustrates a plot to seize a huge amount of money. Standard stuff, nevertheless bedecked with considerable originality, it aims to be one of those "keep 'em guessing but always laughing attractions" for which mass audiences continually evince an appetite.

As the title indicates, the action takes place on and immediately adjacent to the Mississippi, and in New Orleans. Though these locales usually have been associated with dated pictures, this one is modern. It is based on an original by Fred MacIsaacs, with screen play by Jefferson Parker and John Gray. Direction was assigned to Arthur Lubin, who made the recent mystery drama, "Yellowstone."

While the cast is rather lengthy, practically all the important action and narrative interpretation is handled by five players. James Dunn, never a top ranking star but one who has a definite following, is the newspaperman hero. His companion in the excitement is Andy Devine, here appearing as a sluggish-witted hillbilly. The girl in the case is Jean Rogers, one of Universal's promising juveniles, previously seen in several serials, a type of screen training that has zoomed many an ambitious youngster to fame. The villain in the case is John Eldredge, remembered for his work in "Oil for the Lamps of China" and "Dangerous." Rounding out the group of principals is Hobart Cavanaugh, a hard-boiled yet soft-hearted editor.

Others listed are J. Farrell MacDonald, Herbert Rawlinson, Clarence Muse, Jonathan Hale, Harry Hayden, Pat O'Malley and Etta McDaniels.

Three Smart Girls

Comedy

When an old fellow begins to feel that he's young again, funny things are apt to happen. More and funnier things seem likely when his three vivacious daughters, for the honor of the family, decide to take matters in their own hands and bust up his philandering relations with a gold-digging inamorata and her avaricious mother. Their plan temporarily goes awry, then succeeds even though they make a tool of a real nobleman rather than an imposter, to give the brazen golddigger something much more attractive than a flabby, gray-haired old codger to occupy her intentions. A gay, frothy story, being produced against pretentious backgrounds, played by an exceptionally well balanced cast, it has the earmarks of becoming desirable entertainment and salable material.

The picture serves as the screen debut of Deanna Durbin, 13-year-old singing marvel. It also will present Binnie Barners as the scheming fortune hunter, Alice Brady as her mother, Charles Winninger as the victim of the wiles of more than one woman, Ray Milland as the count who unwittingly but willingly becomes involved in the plot, Mischa Auer as the fake nobleman, and Nan Grey and Barbara Read as Miss Durbin's companions in mischief. John King is another younger player to be seen. The remainder of the cast, however, is composed of veteran performers, such as Hobart Cava-

RECORD PROFIT IS SEEN FOR ASSOCIATED BRITISH

MGM Registers Company for Making Films in England; Quota Report This Year

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

In the first stages of the negotiations between John Maxwell and the Ostrer brothers for transfer of the Ostrers' interests in Gaumont-British, it was officially stated that the half year's profits of Associated British Pictures, Mr. Maxwell's company, showed an increase of £150,000 ($750,000) over the previous year. Maintenance of this rate of increase during the second half of the year would imply that ABP profits in the 12 months would swell from £639,851 to approximately £940,000.

In informed quarters in the City (London's Wall Street) it is now being freely said that the second six months profits of the company are showing a larger ratio of increase than the first six, and that the annual profit to be announced by the company may even exceed £1,000,000 ($5,000,000).

The Stock Exchange price of 17s7½d quoted, as this is being written, for ABP ordinary shares, which have a nominal value of only 5s, supports this optimistic view. The £1 preference shares are also at a premium, at 22s 4½d, and the £100 debenture stock is valued at 104⅞.

There are already suggestions that ABP will continue its 12½ per cent dividend on the increased number of shares, with the addition of £450,000 to the total capital.

The bearing of these figures on the ABP-Ostrer deal is interesting. Paid to the Ostrers in cash apart from shares by the Maxwell interests was £325,000, for their B or non-control shares in Metropolis and Bradford, and it is understood this amount was found in ABP reserves. It represents the only money payment so far made in this deal, by which ABP appears to have secured, and to be already exercising, a control of G-B operations which is none the less effective because certain aspects of it, including the rights of Twentieth Century-Fox, have still to be taken into account.

Shareholders in ABP, appraising the new situation, are beginning to rank the ABP holding in G-B as an asset on which profits may be expected to accrue very soon. The details of the sweeping economies which have followed the deal, officially the responsibility of the board of directors but generally assumed to be a first indication of Maxwell de facto control, encourage these expectations.

Interested parties are taking the view that, even if a new preference or debenture issue is necessary, in completing the deal, the G-B shares will stand in the ABP books at a figure well below their earning capacity under the policy of greatly reduced expenditure already clearly foreshadowed.

Maxwell executives denied there was any intention to scrap the Gaumont-British American organization.

Indicative of the general belief that American interests were growing anxious about their British theatre outlet was a further story that MGM were seeking sites in all key cities; no confirmation was obtainable.

Another circuit story printed, and promptly denied, was that Lord Portal, C. M. Woolf and J. A. Rank, associates in General Film Distributors, were tied up with a 500-600 theatre scheme of the James Kay interests, now controlling five theatres in Essex, near London.

MAXWELL CONTROL DENIED BY OSTRER

Isidore Ostrer, president of Gaumont British, denied on his arrival in New York this week that John Maxwell of Associated British Pictures has or will have control of GB. Cables from London consistently have reported that the ABP executive is now exercising a controlling voice in GB affairs and that he has a five year option to buy the majority stock interest owned by the Ostrers.

Mr. Ostrer's statements are quoted in detail elsewhere in this issue.

MGM British Films

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer came into the week's production news by releasing formal notice of the registration of the company which is to handle MGM's British film activities. It stated no more than that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British Studios, Ltd., would have a capital of £25,000 and the right to practice production, distribution and the like.

Unofficially, it is generally understood that MGM will use the Amalgamated Studios and that the intention still holds to take stories out of American schedule and make them with American players and directors. All such MGM British pictures would definitely be for world release.

Quota Report This Year

It is generally understood that the Statutory Committee on the Films Act, popularly known as the Moyne Committee, has completed its draft report and that the final document will be signed, and probably printed, before the end of the year.

Questions in the House of Commons as to the independent exhibitors' position in regard to the supply of British films were answered this week by the Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, with the general intimation that the problem is being considered by the Moyne Committee.

There is a general understanding that revived Commons interest in the subject may partly be traced to friends of the "Dixey Scheme," which, under its official title of the Independent Exhibitors Distribution Company, seeks legalization of its "franchise," an agreement on the part of members to take product which, under the present law, ranks as a blind advance booking, and is therefore irregular.

Title Register

The proposed Register of Film Titles, planned by the Film Group of the FBI as a means of settling rival claims to the same title, is likely to be formally instituted on January 1st. Cooperation with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America is expected.

British National Is Organized to Produce in U.S.

British National of America, Ltd., a new American producing organization financed in part by British banking and motion picture interests, has been formed, with the certificate of incorporation being filed in Albany, N. Y.

Elmer Pearson, former vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., is vice-president in charge of distribution. Lord Ragnor, chairman of the board of British Colonial Trust, of London, is president of the new company. Harold Berg, American motion picture and legitimate theatre producer, recently returned from London, where he was associated with Universal, has been named general manager and vice-president in charge of production. Joseph R. Fliesler is secretary in charge of publicity and advertising.

Major national distribution is planned for the Class A pictures intended by the company, with a budget of more than $1,000,000. Negotiations are now under way for stories, talent and a technical staff. The home office of the new company is located in the RKO Building of Rockefeller Center. Preferred bookings in England are said to be assured the company's product through British National Pictures.

British National Pictures, headed by Lord Ragnor, was originally capitalized at more than $12,000,000. Its entry into the American field is said by the company to be on the basis of a "hands-off" policy with regard to production and distribution.

Columbia Salaries Total $2,000,000

Columbia Pictures Corporation paid $208,000 to Frank Capra, director, and $162,500 to Ronald Colman in the form of salaries during the fiscal year to June 27, the annual report of the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington showed this week. Harry Cohn, president, received $182,040 plus expenses and allowances, and Jack Cohn, vice-president, received $104,260. A total of 42 employes were paid $2,156,165.85, according to the report.

It was revealed that Harry Cohn is voting trustee for 70,591 common shares of company stock, owns 1,602 common shares, and holds series A purchase warrants for voting trust certificates of 23,986 common shares. Jack Cohn is voting trustee for 26,578 shares of common, owns 505 common shares and holds purchase warrants for 11,993 voting trust certificates.

The commission also announced that the Los Angeles Stock Exchange has withdrawn its application for unlisted trading in the no-par value common stock of the company and has substituted therefore an application for unlisted trading in the voting trust certificates as well as in common stock underlying the certificates.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Studio Turnover

Studio activity surged sharply upward in a preholiday week that witnessed 13 pictures finished as 15 were placed in production. The heightened activity is participated in by practically all product sources.

Paramount put the cameras to grinding on four productions. Three of the four have promise of making the big attraction grade. First of the group, "Swing High, Swing Low," stars Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray with Charles Butterworth, Jean Dixon, Dorothy Lamour and Cecil Cunningham. Mitchell Leisen is the director. "Souls at Sea," which Henry Hathaway directs, will present Gary Cooper, George Raft, Anthony Quinn, Henry Wilcoxon, Frances Dee, Helen Burgess, Robert Cummings, Porter Hall, Jameson Thomas and many others. In "Bulldog Drummond's Romance" Ray Milland, Heather Angel, Guy Standing, Reginald Denny, Potter Hall and E. E. Clive are the principals. James Hogan is directing. Last of the quota, "A Doctor's Diary," a B. P. Schulberg production, lists John Trent, Helen Burgess, George Bancroft, Ruth Coleman, Charles Waldron, Ray Hould, Sidney Blackmer, and Sue Carrol as the featured players. Charles Vidor is directing.

Two pictures started at Republic. The cast of "Join the Marines" includes Paul Kelly, Warren Hymer, Ray Corrigan and Purnell Pratt. Ralph Staub is the director. "Larceny on the Air" features Grace Bradley, Robert Livingston, Willard Robertson and Bryan Fougher. Irving Pichel is directing.

Warners also started two pictures. The cast of "Call It a Day" is composed of Ian Hunter, Olivia DeHaviland, Alice Brady, Roland Young, Frieda Inescort, Bonita Granville, Mary McGuire, Elsa Buchanan and Una O'Connor. Archie Mayo is directing. Warren Hull, Jean Muir and Beverly Roberts are the principals in "Her Husband's Secretary," which Frank McDonald directs.

The newly formed David Loew organization makes its debut with "When's Your Birthday?" for Radio release. Joe E. Brown is starred, supported by Marian Marsh, Fred Keating, Maude Eburne, Minor Watson, Margaret Hamilton and Suzanne Kaaren. Harry Beaumont is directing.

Major Pictures started "Happiness Ahead." With Robert Florey directing, the cast includes Warren William, Karen Morley, Christian Rub, Jackie Moran, Esther Dale and Greta Meyer.

"Avenging Angel" was started by Treasure Pictures. It will present Noel Madison, Lila Lee, Ethel Jackson, Douglas Walton, Harry Holman, Roy D'Arcy, Lee Shumway, Roger Williams, Snub Pollard, Alan Gavan and Sy Wills. Victor Halperin is directing.

Columbia's contribution to the new work is "Mule Skinner." Names in the cast are Charles Starrett, Rosalind Keith, Edward Keane, George Cheseboro, Ben Weldon, Al Bridges, Art Mix and Ed LeSaint. Folmer Blankstead makes his debut as a director with this production.

The nearest approach to a studio putting all its contract talent into one picture occurs in Hal Roach's "Pick a Star." Among those to be seen are Jack Haley, Laurel and Hardy, Mischa Auer, Patsy Kelly, Lyda Roberti, Rosina Lawrence, Felix Knight, Spencer Charters, Russell Hicks, Our Gang, Joyce Compton, Barbara Weeks and Benny Burt. Edward Sedgwick drew the directing assignment.

RADIO WILL PREVIEW FILM IN 14 CITIES

Departing radically from all previous methods of editing motion pictures, Samuel J. Briskin, vice-president in charge of production at Radio, this week launched a campaign to preview unedited prints of "The Plough and the Stars" in every section of the country before the picture is nationally released.

Mr. Briskin is arranging to put the picture on the screens of theatres in 14 key cities and the audiences will be asked to fill out cards expressing their reaction. The pictures will be shown without any previous advertising and only once in every town.

With William Gargan, Wendy Barrie, Binnie Barnes and Cesar Romero as the leads and H. Bruce Humberstone directing, Universal started "I Hate Horses."

The final picture on the newly started list, but not one of the least important, is "Michael Strogoff," Radio. It will feature Akim Tamiroff, Fay Bainter, Ed Brophy, Murray Kinnell, Frank M. Thomas, Doris Lloyd, Oscar Apfel, Dewey Robinson and Francis MacDonald. George Nichols, Jr., is directing.

Potentially big pictures crop up frequently in the list of completed productions. Among them is "Another Dawn," one of the three completed by Warners. The principals are Kay Francis, Errol Flynn, Ian Hunter, Will Stanton and Lal Chand Mehra. William Diertele directed. The second film, "Trial Horse," features Barton MacLane, June Travis and Wayne Morris. Reeves Eason directed. The third, "Lords of the Land," which Nick Grinde directed, will present Jean Muir, Gordon Oliver, Joseph King, Virginia Brissac, Howard Phillips and Addison Richards.

Paramount checked a pair of pictures off its active schedule. Both appear to be better than average attractions. "College Holiday" will present a line-up of names including Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Mary Boland, Martha Raye, Marsha Hunt, Eleanore Whitney, Leif Erickson, Johnny Downs, Louis DaPron, Ben Blue, Etienne Girardot, Richard Carle, Nora Cecil, Margaret Seddon, Nick Lukats, Kay Griffith, Gail Sheridan, Priscilla Lawson and Terry Ray. Frank Tuttle directed. "John Meade's Woman," a Schulberg production, features Edward Arnold, Francine Larrimore, Gail Patrick, John Trent, George Bancroft and Sidney Blackmer with Jonathan Hale, Stanley Andrews, Harry Hayden, Robert Strange, Aileen Pringle, Fern Emmett, Bert Roach, Charles Middleton and Erville Alderson. Richard Wallace directed.

First of the two completed by Republic is "Missing Men." The cast lists Lloyd Hughes, Eddie Nugent, Kay Hughes, William Newell, Theodore von Eltz, Christine Maple, Smiley Burnett, Edwin Maxwell and Carleton Young. John H. Auer directed. In "Riders of the Whistling Skull" Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune, Mary Russell, Roger Williams, Fern Emmett and Yakima Canutt will be seen. Mack Wright directed.

At Twentieth Century-Fox two productions finished. Undoubtedly the more important is "One in a Million," introductory feature for the noted Olympic figure skating champion, Sonja Henie. The support includes Adolphe Menjou, Jean Hersholt, Ned Sparks, Don Ameche, the Ritz Brothers, Arline Judge, Dixie Dunbar, Montagu Love, Borah Minnevitch, Lea Ray and Shirley Deane. Sidney Lanfield directed. Jane Withers is starred in "The Holy Terror" with Anthony Martin, Joe Lewis, Lea Ray, El Brendel and Jean Davis. James Tinling directed.

Universal, fourth company to complete two pictures, finished "Blonde Dynamite" and "Treve." The first will present Tala Birell, Cesar Romero, Walter Pidgeon, Walter Brennan, Warren Hymer, Jonathan Hale and June Brewster. Lewis R. Foster directed. The cast of "Treve," which was directed by Lew Collins, includes Noah Beery, Jr., Barbara Read, Samuel Hinds, Hobart Cavanaugh, Alma Kruger, Julian Rivero, Edmond Cobb and Chester Gan.

"Help Wanted, Female" finished at Columbia. Jean Arthur and George Brent are starred. Lionel Stander, Reginald Denny, Charles Halton, Dorothy Kent and Ruth Donnelly constitute the featured support. Alfred E. Green directed.

For United Artists release Wanger Productions completed "You Only Live Once." Sylvia Sidney and Henry Fonda are teamed in the leads with William Gargan, Jean Dixon, Chick Sale, Barton MacLane, John Wray, Ward Bond, Warren Hymer, Gwinn Williams and William Pawley in the cast. Fritz Lang directed.

Child Survey

A survey of juvenile attendance conducted by Cullen Espy, Fox West Coast Theatres division manager, is being cited as evidence in support of the conclusion that it is no longer necessary to produce pictures especially for junior audiences. On the contrary, according to the executive's interpretation, children are as grownup in their film tastes as a practical majority of adult theatregoers and a good deal quicker to reject films that fail, ultimately, at the box office.

Mr. Espy's survey shows that while Shirley Temple continues as the most consistent matinee draw, perhaps due in some measure to the number of pictures featuring her that were released during the past year, 1936 showed some unexpected trends. Second to the Temple picture in child popularity, according to Mr. Espy was "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Milky Way" third, "Mutiny on the Bounty" fourth, the Joe E. Brown pictures, fifth, with such films as "San Francisco," "The Country Doctor," the Charlie Chan series, "Broadway Melody," "Rhythm on the Range," "Ceiling Zero," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Poppy" and "Last of the Mohicans" ranking high up.

Thornton Sargeant, also an FWC division manager, has an interesting slant on children's reactions to films. Says he, "It is not the censors who demand that virtue be rewarded and vice punished. It's the kids. They want the heavy smashed until he's a pulp.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM AT THE STUDIO

naugh, Ernest Cossart, Lucile Watson and Nella Walker.

The story, an original screen play, is credited to Adele Comandini. It is being directed by Henry Koster, one of Hollywood's latest foreign importations. Though his work is unfamiliar to American audiences, he enjoys quite some prestige on the Continent, where he has made pictures for Ufa and other European companies.

John Meade's Woman

(Paramount)

Drama

Following his success in "Come and Get It," Edward Arnold again is cast in a rugged and powerful dramatic role. Once more he is a ruthless lumber magnate, a financial tycoon, who forces all who come in contact with him to bend their knees. Cruel, selfish and domineering, he not only ruthlessly destroys natural resources, but wrecks human hopes and aspirations as well. Sowing the seeds of a whirlwind, he reaps an inevitable reward, a tragedy which is solaced only by the trust and loyalty of a woman upon whom he played the worst joke that any woman could experience—marrying her to spite another woman.

The B. P. Schulberg production is based upon a story by John Bright and Robert Tasker who, individually, have been associated with such dramatic pictures as "Public Enemy" and "The Big House." Direction is in the hands of Richard Wallace, credited with the recent comedy, "Wedding Present."

Though Arnold, a man's actor whom women seemed to appreciate highly for his work in "Diamond Jim," "Crime without Passion" and "Come and Get It," is naturally the dominating figure, the supporting cast is not without merit. Francine Larrimore is presented as the guileless farm girl whom he married to spite Gail Patrick. Also important to the action are George Bancroft, recently in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and "Wedding Present," Sidney Blackmer, and John Trent, a newcomer in whom the producer has exceptional faith. There are also many other character and atmospheric players, the better known of whom are Jonathan Hale, Harry Hayden, Robert Strange, Aileen Pringle, Fern Emmett, Bert Roach, Charles Middleton and Erville Alderson.

Conflict

Drama

The story told in this production is adapted from one of Jack London's best known novels, "The Abysmal Brute." It is an action yarn, containing all the necessary ingredients for this type of entertainment. It is a clean-cut story, dramatically expounded, and is being photographed almost entirely out of doors. The locales are the mountains and forests of northern California and are typical of the lumber and mining camp locales that are the main scenes of action.

True to the London technique, the story is about rugged men living rugged lives. It deals mainly with two prize fighters. One is the champion; the other is a fakir who goes into towns ahead of the champ, gets himself a build-up and then double crosses his new friends by taking a dive. But the worm turns. Under the spell of romance, loyalty to a little boy and appreciation for the friendship of his rough lumber camp buddies, he meets and beats the champ in a barefist fight under London prize ring rules.

Adaptation of the story is credited to Charles Logue and Walter Weems, both of whom have been associated with many action drama pictures. Direction is by David Howard and the film is a Trem Carr production.

John Wayne will be seen in the role of the abysmal brute. Romantic contrast, which is small but important, will be handled by Jean Rogers. Ward Bond will be seen as the prototype of John L. Sullivan, the champ who goes around betting that he can beat any man in the house. Tommy Bupp and Eddie Borden also have principal roles. Others included are Frank Sheridan, Margaret Mann, Harry Wood, Bryant Washburn and Frank Hagney.

Let's Make a Million

(Paramount)

Comedy

The plot of this comedy revolves around one of the biggest news and economic events of the year, the payment of the veterans' bonus. It relates what one ex-doughboy did with his windfall, what he influenced his Legion buddies to do with theirs, how he and his comrades were taken for suckers by a pair of sharpshooting oil promoters, and how that queer streak of luck that takes care of drunks and fools enabled him to make a million.

It's the kind of story, prepared by comedy specialists and directed by Ray McCarey, that gets Edward Everett Horton into pecks of trouble as it moves through a series of hilarious situations before he gets enough finances to marry the girl of his dreams and be a hero with the gang who at first thought he had double-crossed them, but found that he had made them wealthy.

Horton will be aided and abetted in his amusement building experiences by quite a group of comedy players. Prominent among these are Margaret Sedden and Margaret McWade, who as the pixiliated sisters were so effective in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." Additionally there are J. M. Kerrigan, this time in a straight comedy role, which is in direct contrast to his recent appearances, Eddie Acuff, Porter Hall, Purnell Pratt and Irving Bacon. The girl in the case is Charlotte Wynters.

Topical interest, always a desirable quality in films, has been included in this to an unusual measure. As many a veteran blew his bonus, more often to the tune of tragedy than the comedy of this case, it looms as one of those little films that has potentialities of producing big results.

Warner Campaign Named Sears Drive

The "Sears Drive" was designated as the name for the 15-week sales campaign which the Warner sales forces will start December 20, it was decided at the mid-season sales meeting at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago this week. The drive will end on April 3.

Carl Leserman, assistant to Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, was named coordinator for the drive, the name of which was adopted unanimously over the objection of Mr. Sears. Albert Warner, vice-president, suggested the Sears designation and paid tribute to the sales executive.

Mr. Sears said that the company's sales are $4,000,000 above the corresponding period of last year.

Upon the return of the district sales managers to their respective offices they will hold individual meetings with branch managers and salesmen to acquaint them with the discussions that took place in Chicago.

GB Sales Force Promotions

In line with his policy of promotion within the ranks, George W. Weeks, Gaumont British general sales manager, this week named Joseph Loeffler, salesman, branch manager of the company's Cleveland office and Thomas Charack, salesman, branch manager at Omaha.

New Iowa House Planned

Smith and Boos are building a new theatre seating approximately 500 at Corydan, Iowa. Construction is nearly finished and the house is expected to open early in October.

Form Vaudeville Group

Boston vaudeville booking agents have formed a mutual association known as the Boston Booking Agents Association and local theatre men are interested in the new association in order to simplify booking.

RKO REORGANIZATION PLAN SETS CAPITALIZATION OF $33,000,000

$67,000,000 Corporation Ready to Emerge from Four Years of Receivership with $7,000,000 in Cash

Radio-Keith-Orpheum, $67,000,000 producing, distributing and exhibiting corporation, is now ready to emerge from four years of receivership, with $7,000,000 in cash and probably with the same management as at present, headed by Leo Spitz.

The company on Monday morning submitted to the federal courts in New York its long-awaited plan of reorganization. The step is the last to be undertaken by the motion picture business in effecting a complete readjustment of its capital, financial and corporate structures, as required following conditions brought about by the depression. Fox Film readjusted its capital setup following Sidney R. Kent's accession to the presidency. Paramount emerged from receivership last year. Universal underwent a reorganization with the entrance of the new Cowdin-Cochrane interests. Warner Bros. started writing-off some time ago.

RKO's plan, filed under Section 77B of the federal bankruptcy law and sponsored by the Floyd Odlum-Atlas Corporation-Lehman Brothers group, as the principal interests presently in the corporation, first will reach a public hearing before creditors on December 23rd, before United States District Court Judge William Bondy.

The various RKO and RKO Pathe production, distribution and export subsidiaries are to lose their identities, under the plan, in a merger into one new company, RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.;

Operation of the Music Hall and Center theatres is returned by the Rockefellers to RKO;

$33,000,000 capitalization is provided.

The new reorganization plan proposes an exchange of new securities for allowed creditors' claims on what appears to be virtually a dollar-for-dollar basis, the proposed new capitalization totaling some $33,000,000, as follows:

$18,000,000 of 5½ per cent sinking fund debentures, of which $12,718,500 will be outstanding.

$11,000,000 of 6 per cent cumulative convertible $100 par preferred, of which $6,000,000 will be outstanding.

4,000,000 shares of common stock, of which 2,163,148 shares will be outstanding.

The plan calls for the exchange of old securities and claims on the following basis:

	New Debentures	Preferred	Common
Old debentures.	$12,718,500		$ 254,370
Rockefeller Center.			500,000
Other claims		$6,000,000	120,000
Old common (2,577,554 shares)			1,288,778
Total	$12,718,500	$6,000,000	$2,163,148

The New York Times on Tuesday reported that the stock market had given a value of $4.50 a share to the new common shares of RKO, which, under the plan, would issue two new common shares for each old common share, and further reported that the exchange also had given a value of $114 (figuring them at the redemption price of 105 for the first five years) to the new 5½ per cent convertible debentures, issuable with two common shares for each principal amount of $100 plus $24.57 of arrears on the present six per cent debentures.

The complete text of the reorganization plan of Radio - Keith - Orpheum Corporation, submitted in federal court in New York last Monday, starts on page 70.

However, the $4.50 figure proved erroneous. On the basis of Tuesday's closing of $8.25 for the old RKO common, the new stock would be valued at $16.50. It was pointed out that market value is a fluctuating gauge.

Interest Reduction Achieved

In giving the $12,718,500 holders of the old 10-year six per cent gold debentures a like amount of the new 5½ per cent convertible debentures and 254,370 new common shares, the company achieves a reduction in interest from 6 to 5½ per cent.

The new debentures are convertible into new common stock at the rate of five shares for each $100 principal amount of debentures.

The new preferred stock is entitled to dividends at the rate of $6 per share annually out of surplus or net profits. The shares may be liquidated at $100 plus accumulated dividends.

Besides the largest unsecured creditor, Rockefeller Center, which, for its principal claims amounting to $9,150,628 is to receive 500,000 shares of new common stock, the other unsecured creditors for each $100 of claims are to receive three-quarters of a share of new preferred stock and one and one-half shares of new common stock.

The plan estimates that claims in this unsecured classification will not exceed $8,000,000 when finally determined.

Option warrants entitling the holders to purchase common stock at prices subsequently to be fixed may be available for issuance to executives and others, subject to the approval of directors.

Cash for Secured Gold Notes

RKO's secured gold notes presently outstanding in the amount of $750,000 and held by Bank of America National Association, will be paid off in cash which the plan proposes to raise by the sale of a sufficient amount of new common shares approximately $1,600,000 for this and other financing needs. Hearing on the RKO trustee's motion to pay off the Bank of America debt was postponed Monday until December 23rd by Federal Judge Bondy on the petition of Atlas Corporation, as the principal reorganization sponsor.

The part-paid RKO certificates, which represent a subscription to a "package" of old debentures and common stock, are entitled to receive such proportion of the new securities which subscribers would have been entitled to receive if their certificates had been fully paid as their payments made bear to their full subscriptions. Subscribers, however, may complete the full payments required under the "package" agreement, provided they do so within 20 days after confirmation of the plan. As of September 26 last, approximately $249,079 remained to be paid by subscribers to complete full payments on the debentures and stock included in the subscriptions.

Subsidiaries To Merge Into RKO Radio Pictures; Part Operation of Music Hall and Center Returns to RKO

The plan estimates that allowed claims affected by the plan will not aggregate more than $30,000,000 and states that the plan is not to be made operative in the event that claims, exclusive of the Rockefeller Center claim and others for contingent or indeterminate amounts, exceed $22,000,000. This is taken as evidence that the reorganizers estimate that the settlement of the $9,100,000 Rockefeller Center claim represents in amount approximately $6,000,000.

The Rockefeller Center claim, based on breach of the 20-year RKO leases on the Music Hall and Center theatres, plus certain alleged damages involving the costs of construction of the two theatres, is treated apart from other unsecured creditors' claims. The settlement provides for a new 12-year agreement with Rockfeller Center on the Music Hall and Center theatres, and office space in the RKO Building at reduced rentals and for the issuance to Rockefeller Center of 500,000 shares of new RKO common stock, no par value.

RKO Again To Participate

In return, the $9,150,000 Rockefeller Center claim is canceled and RKO again participates in the operation and profits of the two Radio City theatres. RKO is to have three representatives on a committee of seven which will have the operating direction of the theatres for the 12-year period. Rockefeller Center will name the other four.

The new rental rate for office space for RKO in the RKO building is $2 per square foot, representing a reduction from the original rate of $2.75 per square foot.

RKO will receive a $25,000 annual fee for consultant and advisory services in connection with operation of the two Rockefeller Center theatres and will participate in the earnings under certain conditions.

Rockefeller Center is to receive the first $700,000 of surplus earnings of the Music Hall theatre and three-quarters of the next $100,000, with RKO receiving the other quarter. The remaining surplus earnings are to be divided equally between the two. If surplus earnings of the Music Hall are less than $700,000 in any year, the deficiency is to be made up to Rockefeller Center out of any surplus earnings in excess of $60,000 of the nearby Center theatre for that year. The first $60,000 of annual surplus earnings of the Center go to the Rockefeller company and the next $100,000 is divided three-quarters to Rockefeller Center and one-quarter to RKO. Any remainder is divided equally, and, in the event the initial $60,000 surplus is not realized, the deficiency is to be made up out of any surplus in excess of $700,000 earned by the Music Hall. If the Center is operated on a motion picture or combination policy, however, RKO may take over the theatre in whole or in part, but if RKO does not do so earnings after the first $60,000 surplus are to be divided equally.

An interesting clause in the agreement provides that RKO is to receive all earnings of the two theatres in excess of $91,000 net for the year 1937 in the event that the average market price of the new RKO common equals or exceeds $18.30 a share for any 10-day period between the time of confirmation of the reorganization plan and Jan. 1, 1938.

RKO PLAN TO BE HEARD ON DEC. 23

RKO assumes no obligation in respect to the operating costs of the houses or their losses. The agreements may be terminated in the event of an RKO or RKO Radio Pictures bankruptcy or a receivership extending for more than 30 days, or in the event RKO earnings for three successive years are insufficient to pay the company's interest requirements on its outstanding obligations.

No leases are to be made by RKO on the Music Hall and Center under the company's reorganization plan. RKO's participation in the operation and earnings of the theatres is to be based upon a 12-year agreement which relieves RKO of all liability for operating costs and possible losses.

The plan states that the total amount of claims filed, exclusive of claims for indeterminate amounts is $55,121,179. Up to September 26, 1936, reductions and eliminations of claims totaled $22,440,179, thereby reducing claims filed to $32,681,000. Of this amount $9,150,628 (estimated) is represented by the aforementioned claim of Rockefeller Center, Inc., recommended for allowance by special master, contested by the trustee and not yet passed upon by the court. Of the remainder, $12,718,500 is represented by the 10-year 6% debentures and 6% gold notes. There also are $800,000 secured gold notes to be paid and not affected by the plan. The remainder represents the unsecured claims of about $10,000,000 from which a further reduction of about $2,000,000 is probable.

Provision is made in the plan for a sinking fund to gradually retire the new debentures by application of 10 per cent of the company's earnings annually. Debentures are callable within five years of their date at 105 and accrued interest. Starting in the fifth year, the premium will decline one per cent annually.

Earnings of RKO improved sharply this year, a balance sheet accompanying the plan shows. For the 39 weeks ended September 26 the company reported consolidated net income of $1,446,922 after all charges including the excess profits tax. For the full year 1935 net income, before subsidiary preferred dividends, was only $684,733, while in 1934 a deficit of $310,575 was sustained.

The 1936 39-week net is after payment of interest on the secured notes and old debentures and after normal taxes, but without provision for possible surplus tax on undistributed profits.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum and subsidiaries in a pro forma estimated balance sheet accompanying the plan, and as of Sept. 26, 1936 (after giving effect to consummation of reorganization plan), show current and working assets of $16,630,982 and current liabilities of $4,243,152. Cash (including $230,269 cash of the parent company the use of which is subject to certain restrictions) amounted to $7,358,276.

At Least Nine Directors

The new board of directors of RKO under the reorganization will consist of a minimum of nine members, who will be named later subject to the approval of the plan by the United States District Court.

The Atlas Corporation, sponsoring the plan, looms as the dominating factor on the board.

Atlas will receive an estimated 75,000 shares of common stock in connection with the exchange provided for holders of old RKO debentures, probably a like amount in exchange for its holdings of old common, and also will receive a large block for its services as reorganization manager. In addition, Atlas will underwrite a $1,600,000 sale of additional new common and undoubtedly will receive an appreciable number of option warrants. In addition, Atlas, with Lehman Brothers, holds an option to acquire the approximately $5,000,000 balance of RCA's holdings in RKO. Lehman Brothers participated with Atlas in the purchase of the first half of the RCA holdings in RKO, and in consequence is also an important factor in the new RKO. RCA's interest will be a vital one until the option on its holdings is exercised, should that be done.

LEGION OF DECENCY STARTED IN HOLLAND

by PH. DE SCHAAP

in Amsterdam

A Legion of Decency has been founded in Arnhem, Holland, by a Roman Catholic Board. Until now the Catholic Church had limited its action on the censoring of pictures to be released in Holland, but at its first meeting the Legion of Decency decided to undertake both a positive and a negative action. Negative action will be the encouraging of the Dutch Catholic public to follow up strictly the determinations of the Catholic Board of Censorship. Positive action will take the form of recommending films having the approval of the Catholic censors or special features. As the Catholic population of Holland is about 35 per cent, the foundation of this Legion of Decency may have an important bearing on the film trade. Plans have been made also for foundation of similar boards in other Dutch towns.

Rockefeller Center, as the recipient of 500,000 shares of the new common in the settlement of its RKO claim, will also be a factor on the board for the time being. Indications are, however, that this company's holdings will be liquidated at the first favorable market opportunity.

The RKO reorganization plan was filed by Hamilton C. Rickaby of the New York firm of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, attorneys for Atlas Corporation.

Approval by March 1 Seen

According to present indications the reorganization plan should not meet with any serious opposition and may have the court's approval by March 1. The agreement on the $9,100,000 Rockefeller Center claim was only reached last week, but it eliminated the most serious potential opposition to a plan. It is the dominant item in the unsecured creditors classification and went far toward obtaining the approval of that group for the plan. The secured creditors and stockholders, dominated by Atlas, Lehman Brothers and RCA interests, are all in accord. The situation leaves only sundry independent creditors' groups, representing minority interests in every instance, as the potential sources of opposition. Among these are the Orpheum Circuit preferred stockholders, who recently retained Isidor J. Kresel, prominent attorney, to represent their interests, a move which, to those close to the organization, possesses great significance in the event the views of the Orpheum shareholders are not ameliorated. Independent stockholders' committees and the independent unsecured creditors' committee of which the Karl Hoblitzelle and U. S. Bank of Denver interests are the moving factors, are also seen as possible minority opposition.

Provision is made in the plan for the exchange of the new RKO securities for the securities of any company with which RKO might be "merged or consolidated" at some future date.

As part of the plan seven subsidiaries will be merged into RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., principal subsidiary in the production and distribution branch, before the effective date of the confirmation of the plan. To simplify the corporate structure a merger would be effected whereby RKO Pathe Pictures, Inc., RKO Pathe Distributing Corporation, RKO Pathe Export Corporation, RKO Pathe Studios Corporation, Ltd., RKO Distributing Corporation, RKO Studios, merged into RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.

If the plan should be modified to provide for a merger of Radio Keith Orpheum Corporation into a new Delaware corporation, all provisions of the plan would apply to such new corporation which would assume all liabilities and own all assets of the old in consequence of the plan.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum debentures rose Monday one point to a year's high record of 102½, compared to a year's low of 63 The common stock traded at a day's high of 10 and ended at the day's low of 9, off ¾ point, with sales of 21,800 shares. The plan was issued during market hours Monday. On Tuesday RKO debentures gained 12½ points to close at 115. RKO common sold off three-quarters for a two-point loss in two days. On the new market estimates approximately $16 a share was the indicated speculative value of the new common.

Film Classification by Ontario Censor Scored

The announced intention of O. J. Silverthorne, chairman of the Ontario Board of Censors in Toronto, to publish lists of classified recommendations on approved features has brought a sharp reply from M. J. McGrath, secretary of the Toronto Council of the Legion of Decency, although Premier M. F. Hepburn had taken his censor chairman to task for his statement and repudiated his promise. Mr. Silverthorne intimated that Government classification of motion pictures was necessary to offset allegedly misleading decisions of the Legion, which, he said, were based on opinions in the United States which would not entirely apply in Ontario.

Warners Install RCA Sound in 34 Theatres

Warner Brothers, to date, have installed RCA High Fidelity equipment in 34 theatres since the first trial installation in the Philadelphia Stanley theatre some few months ago. Included in contracts just announced by Edwin M. Hartley, RCA Photophone sales head, are the Colonial in Atlantic City, the Stanley in Jersey City, the Liberty in New Kensington, Pa., and the Astor in Reading, Pa.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Amalgamated Future

Many stories continue to go the rounds about the future of the Amalgamated Studio at Elstree, now nearly completed. It has been asserted at various times that it would be the headquarters of MGM British production; that it would be absorbed or used by John Maxwell of Associated British Pictures, as a sequel to a scrapping of the G-B Shepherd's Bush studio when it came under ABP control; that its ownership already had changed hands by the withdrawal of S. H. Soskin, uncle of Paul Soskin, the producer, and financier of the original scheme conceived by Major Charles Bell.

Official comment on this last statement came this week from Major Bell himself, and was that Mr. S. H. Soskin remained "sole owner" of the Amalgamated studio. Refusing to identify the production companies which are to use the studio, Major Bell contented himself with saying that work would begin on the floor on January 3rd or 4th, and that, out of four floors to be immediately completed of the eight planned, three already had been let. Some of the space will be used by Soskin Productions, but the first film to go on the floor will not be a Soskin subject, he said.

The official opening of Amalgamated is likely to take place late in January.

The outstanding feature of the layout is a provision for its sub-division into self-contained units. Consisting, at the outset, of four large floors, each capable of being divided into two, it will offer immediately eight stages, with dressing rooms and such additional facilities as special rear-projection and trick photography stages, preview theatres also available for re-recording, and a system of Western Electric sound installation specially designed to give each unit its own self-contained recording facilities.

This sound equipment is based on a central recording building carrying the two permanently installed channels and capable also of taking any of the four portable channels, which also can be used independently on any stage. Amalgamated will be the ninth British licensee of Western Electric; the others are B&D (Pinewood), London Films (Denham), Interworld (Worton Hall), Warner-First National (Teddington), Garrett, Klement, British Movietone News and Paramount British News.

on One Floor

Evidence of the value of the new facilities now available to British producers is provided by two recent Pinewood settings for B&D's "A Man with Your Voice," with Sally Eilers and Ricardo Cortez. One reproduced a railway depot. The main entrance and station yard, with the platform from which an express is leaving, were all comfortably housed on one floor; later B&D used an interior of a cottage sitting room backing on the river, with a trap-door leading to the rushing water below.

Pinewood space also is being used for two Herbert Wilcox productions, "The Navy Eternal" and "Splinters in the Air."

For "Splinters," also in search of authentic atmosphere in a story which has Britain's growing air might as its background, a Wilcox unit has been filming maneuvers and stunt flying at the R. A. F. depot at Northolt. Cathcart Jones, air ace, has been supervising these scenes.

A segment of Denham Court, near the studios, is transformed into a touch of Hyde Park for this scene in "Triangle" with Miriam Hopkins and Sebastian Shaw, the principals of the London Film production. Walter Reisch, at the right, is directing.

La Rocque for Hagen

Julius Hagen, of Twickenham Film Productions, has signed Rod La Rocque for the star part in "She Got What She Wanted," already in production under Albert De Courville's direction at the J. H. Studios, Elstree. It will be La Rocque's first part in British films; he came here first on holiday, like many other American players since featured in our productions. Also added to the cast are Renee Gadd and Mary Cole. Current scenes, representing a girls' finishing school, have used two other Americans in Tucker McGuire and Dorothy Dare, as pupils. Constance Collier and Alistair Sim, a middle-aged spinster and her butler, have had other sequences.

"Widow's Island," Hagen-Franco London bi-lingual, has finished at Hammersmith, and "Silver Blaze," with chief racing backgrounds complete, is using an exterior set at Twickenham studio, with interiors of Baskerville Hall in preparation.

Saville's Second

Victor Saville has begun shooting at Denham on "Storm in a Teacup," his second for London Films. He was on the floor seven days after completing his first picture, "Dark Journey," but the preparation of the script and other preparatory work for "Storm in a Teacup" has taken very nearly seven months. The story is an adaptation by James Bridie of Bruno Franck's "Sturm in Wasserglass," and the script is by Ian Dalrymple and Donald Bull.

Scottish exteriors, already shot, are a feature of the film, which as a novelty introduces no less than 150 dogs of all shapes, sizes and breed or lack of it. Dogs have a dramatic as well as a background value in the film, for the original play was written as a protest against Germany's high dog tax and the story goes that Franck gave away most of his royalties to poor people who queued, with their dogs, outside his house.

New British Producers

Standard International Productions, a new company, goes onto the floor at Worton Hall immediately with "Make-Up," a circus drama to be directed by Alfred Zeisler. Nils Asther and June Clyde are the leads, and Judy Kelly and Kenneth Duncan also have been cast. Chapman's Circus has been hired for background and atmosphere.

Principals of the new unit, and co-producers of "Make-Up," are C. M. Origo and K. C. Alexander. The production manager is Michael Delamere and Eric Cross is chief cameraman.

Itemized

Jessie Matthews is convalescing and plans a return to work at G-B after a short holiday.

Ralph Spence will collaborate on dialogue for G-B's "Non-Stop New York," illustrating the activities of Atlantic Airways.

Harold French, dialogue director for Criterion, produced the stage play, "French without Tears," at the Criterion theatre, in two and a half weeks.

Ken Duncan, of "Transatlantic Rhythm," is playing at Pinewood for the Paramount-British production, "Cross My Heart."

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is likely to make a picture in Hollywood after completing "For Ever and For Ever" at Worton Hall, and a Hollywood player may take his place in the next Criterion.

ANTI-NAZI FILM BARRED SECOND TIME IN CHICAGO

And So Is Quintuplets' "Reunion"; $6,000,000 Given Away on Chance Games

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

The film "I was a Captive in Nazi Germany" has been previewed again before the censor board, and for the second time has been refused a permit. Those who passed the decision on the picture are reported to have said that it would incite ill feeling in the local German colony. Police officers on the "Red" squad are reported to have made this comment which led to the banning of the film.

Al Mannon is said to be planning to take the matter to court if necessary.

Political pressure eventually may be brought to bear; several groups here are most anxious to have the film shown here. It has been distributed in other territories without any curtailment by censor groups.

It is also reported that certain persons who passed on the matter are not regular members of the censor board and if the matter comes to court their right to pass opinion may be challenged. This report is unconfirmed, however.

With investigation bringing forth the estimate that more than $6,000,000 has been given away by theatres in Chicago in the last two years through chance games, local newspapers this week allotted considerable space to a decision by Judge John H. Lyle in municipal court Saturday that operators of the Englewood theatre could not be held responsible in a giveaway award case as the games were a lottery and thus were unlawful.

The situation was the filing of a claim in Judge Lyle's court, by Mrs. Catherine MacDonald, for $500 she claimed the Englewood theatre owed her. She said her name was called at a giveaway drawing and that she was present but didn't get the money. She was suing the 63rd Street Theatre Corporation, operators of the Englewood theatre.

Police Commissioner Allman said he would look into the matter.

An increase of 30 per cent in theatre checking and 38 per cent in research work, reflecting a rapid rise in theatre business, was reported by Harry Ross, president of Ross Federal Service, Inc., following a conference here last week with his midwest district managers. (Picture in Pictorial Section).

Mr. Ross said his company is preparing a new service directed at the outdoor advertising market.

Radio checking is the latest development in the Ross service, helping sponsors determine which hours of the day are best for various kinds of programs, what stations have the largest audiences on certain broadcasts, how many persons listen to their radios at certain hours.

More than 3,800 persons trained in checking and research work are used by Ross Federal in making surveys of various types.

The latest picture to get a "pink ticket," or adult permit, from the Chicago censor board is "Reunion," starring the Dionne Quintuplets. The reasons reported for this classification are that the picture in certain spots refers in some ways to obstetrics.

Local sentiment is that the board has shown an unusual attitude compared to that shown some of the recent releases. The Mae West picture, "Go West Young Man," aroused only mild comment among the censors, yet the Quintuplets' latest film is, they feel, something the youth of Chicago should not be allowed to witness. The possibility of the film getting a "white" ticket after certain cuts are made is thought likely.

Neil Agnew and Bob Gillham, Paramount executives, flew into Chicago for a day and made preparations with B & K and the Great States theatres for celebration of the Adolph Zukor Jubilee, which gets under way after January first. A luncheon was held at the Hotel Sherman.

Ben Eisenberg, recently a salesman for Grand National Pictures, is now associated with the United Artists exchange here and will cover the suburban territory. Eddie Safier, formerly in that spot, has been transferred to the Milwaukee office.

Imperial Pictures of Illinois has just taken over office space in the building at 831 South Wabash Ave., and will distribute in four states, Wisconsin, Missouri, Indiana and Illinois. Charles Miller will be in charge of the local office with Edward Brichetto and Harry Phillips handling downstate sales. The Indianapolis office is at 440 North Illinois Street and is now under the direction of Charles Tyler. Don Hammer will handle the Indiana state territory. At St. Louis, George Stern is in charge of the office at 3317 Olive street, with Jack O'Neill handling the Missouri state territory.

A midwest sales conference is scheduled here this coming week. Lou Berman, general sales manager, and E. J. Smith, western division sales manager, will attend.

Universal press representatives held a "sky preview" for "Air Hostess," in a TWA plane, last Friday. Local critics were taken skyward for the filming of the picture. Judith Barrett, leading woman in the film, helped entertain. From here the plane flew to Kansas City for another "preview."

Miss Swarthout arrived here from Hollywood where she just completed "Champagne Waltz" for Paramount. She made the picture in five languages for release in 22 different countries.

"Gold Diggers" Plane Ends Half of Tour

Having completed more than half of their good will air tour of the United States as exploitation for Warner's "Gold Diggers of 1937," the "Gold Diggers" troupe of girls and principals from the film have appeared to date in 13 of the 25 cities scheduled.

At the various airports, radio broadcasts, luncheons and theatre appearances governors, mayors, local celebrities and prominent civic officials have turned out to greet the troupe upon its many arrivals to date.

Leaving Los Angeles November 14th, the plane's first stop was El Paso, where they were welcomed by the Mayor and a delegation of high civic officials.

The next landing place was at Fort Worth, followed by visits to Dallas, Memphis, Milwaukee, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Washington, Camden, Philadelphia, Providence and Boston.

Hal Roach has signed Norman McLeod as a producer and director. Mr. McLeod's first assignment will be "Topper," written by Thorne Smith. Jeanne MacPherson is writing the screen play.

Acousticon Not Affected by Probe

Delistment of the stock of Dictograph Products Company by the New York Stock Exchange will have no bearing or effect on the manufacturing or merchandising operations of the Acousticon devices made by a subsidiary company and marketed to motion picture theatres as aids to patrons whose hearing is impaired, according to officers of the company.

Judge Julian W. Mack in New York had signed an order requiring the Securities and Exchange Commission to appear before him on November 19th, upon an application by Dictograph and others for an injunction restraining the SEC from having any further activities in connection with the stock of the company. The injunction was denied.

Dictograph charged in its affidavit that the SEC has "used its powers to persecute the company."

On October 2, the SEC applied to Judge Mack for a temporary injunction against A. M. Andrews and others in connection with their purchase of Dictograph stock. Although this application is pending undetermined before Judge Mack, the SEC was charged by Dictograph last week with having "harassed and terrified brokerage firms and banks that maintain accounts for customers who had purchased Dictograph stock by repeatedly sending its representatives to investigate as well as require firm members to appear before it."

Again, on Monday, Judge Mack heard Dictograph's cross-bill against the SEC for an injunction against the Commission from continuing its activities against the company. After hearing argument by John Davidson, for the Commission, and Stanley Osserman, counsel for Dictograph, Judge Mack dismissed the crossbill "for want of jurisdiction and for want of equity," holding that it was essentially a suit against the United States for which consent of the government had not been given.

Regardless, a registration statement preparatory to the sale of 10,000 shares of $2 par common stock was filed at Washington with the SEC by Dictograph, the proceeds to be used for additional work capital.

"Because of the fear inspired in brokerage firms, banks and stockholders by these (SEC) activities," Dictograph says, "a general attempt was made by all the parties (stockholders) to dispose of their (Dictograph) stock on the Curb Exchange." Then, in order to protect the stockholders from loss, the Curb Exchange temporarily suspended the Dictograph stock from trading.

The affidavit of Lawrence M. Ogden, treasurer of Dictograph, shows that sales for the first ten months of 1936 amounted to over $2,000,000 as compared with 1935 net sales for the same period amounting to $1,146,000, an increase of 77%. The sales for October show an increase of 102% over the same month in 1935. In 1935, Dictograph showed a net loss of $4,593, while for the first ten months of 1936, the company showed a profit of $108,238.

Bazett to Columbia

Sidney Bazett has been named financial director of Columbia Pictures Corporation. Mr. Bazett has resigned as vice-president of Associated American Distributors, Inc., and also as president and director of American Brokerage, Inc., to take the new post.

Leroy Brauer, formerly with the Universal domestic department, has been appointed manager of the company's office in Shanghai. He replaces Norman Westwood.

TREND OF ADMISSIONS CONTINUING UPWARD

Increases Reported from Five Cities; More New Pictures Breaking Attendance Records

The countrywide trend toward increased admission prices is continuing into the winter season. In the last week box office scales have been raised by theatre managers of circuit operators in five cities in widely separated parts of the country. In most cases the increases were reported as experiments upon the success of which will depend the decisions of other exhibitors in the territories.

Executives of the Wilby Kincey circuit in Alabama and Tennessee were studying the price situation, and increases may be ordered in several towns and cities where low admissions have prevailed. In Montgomery, Ala., the scale was advanced to 40 cents on Sundays.

Theatre Operators in Erie, Pa., decided to curtail cut-rate balcony prices which have prevailed for years and eliminate the 15-cent evening admission. The agreement was reached by both the independent exhibitors and the Warner managers. Houses operating under the new scale are the Warner, the Strand, and the newly opened Columbia, all Warner houses, and the Colonial and Palace.

The Fox Plaza in Kansas City raised its admission of 25 cents to 35 cents for "The Great Ziegfeld." With the appearance of triple bills in the city, little cessation in premium and money giveaways, and the almost 100 per cent adoption of the double bill policy, little hope was held by exhibitors there for a general admission increase this season.

Weekend Prices Raised

The Kentucky in Louisville, Ky., operated by Switow Brothers, increased Saturday and Sunday prices to 27 cents, including the state tax. The former rate for Saturday and Sunday matinees and evenings was 20 cents.

With the opening of "Come and Get It" at the Rivoli in New York the "early bird" admission was raised to 40 cents, a five-cent increase. Admission increases are expected to become general throughout the metropolitan area as soon as the current legal test of the city's right to apply the two per cent municipal sales tax to film rentals has been decided.

First attempts to raise prices in the Omaha territory were successful, according to E. R. Cummings, district manager for the Tri-States circuit. The recently reopened Paramount now is following a single feature, 55-cent top policy. Tri-States inaugurated five-cent increases in five subsequent run houses at Sioux City, Iowa, two months ago. Then came similar raises at Grand Island, Hastings and Fairbury in Nebraska.

More Box Office Records

The unusual number of box office records for attendance and gross broken by this season's product has been added to in the last few weeks by new releases. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Libeled Lady" beat the established Sunday record at Loew's State, Cleveland, by 1,700. All attendance records for the New York Paramount since its opening 10 years ago were broken in the first week of the run of "The Big Broadcast of 1937," 189,000 persons having seen the Paramount picture in the first seven days.

A publicity release from Twentieth Century-Fox announced that "Pigskin Parade" opened to record breaking attendance at the Poli theatre in New Haven in a special show before the Dartmouth-Yale football game. Warner Brothers' "The Charge of the Light Brigade" set new marks in five New England theatres: the Cameo, Bridgeport; Roger Sherman, New Haven; Capitol, Springfield; Warner, Worcester, and the Strand, Hartford. The picture passed "Anthony Adverse," previous record holder at the theatres.

Samuel Goldwyn's "Come and Get It" established a new box office record for the opening day at the United Artist theatre in San Francisco, the gross going above any first day figure since the house opened this year. The same producer's "Dodsworth" broke the all-time record for a week's showing at the United Artists theatre in Chicago.

"Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," Columbia's record breaker, was in its seventh month at the Blue Mouse in Portland, Ore.

AMPA Members Vote to Continue Organization

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York is making progress, finally, after 20 years, some 41 members voted at last week's meeting at the Hotel Edison when it was decided not to dissolve the organization.

Some 25 per cent of the total membership of the association was present at the meeting and it was decided to make a house-to-house canvass of members in good standing to collect some $770 in back dues, that committees, to be appointed, will determine future policy and procedure and that a complete new board of directors must be appointed to fill the vacancies caused by the resignation en bloc of the old board.

The Ampa has been inactive for some time because of the difference of opinion as to the exact nature and purpose of the organization.

Picketing Musicians Stage Protest Parade

Musicians and actors who are picketing 26 motion picture theatres in New York in a campaign to bring about the re-employment of musicians and actors in these theatres held an automobile parade last Saturday afternoon. The parade covered practically all of lower Broadway.

Salesmen Thanksgiving Dinner

The Motion Picture Salesmen, Inc., in New York was to hold a charity dinner and frolic at the Hotel Astor Wednesday evening. Entertainment was to be supplied by stars of the stage, screen and radio.

Lloyds of London

(20th Century-Fox)

Romantic Drama

In the manner that public and exhibitor interest accrued to the romance and drama of great men and women and stirring historical incident in such films as "Cardinal Richelieu" and "The House of Rothschild," there is evidence of grounds for a similar enthusiasm for "Lloyds of London." Here the colorful story of England's famous insurance institution is told. Along with it, a character drama that resolves itself into a love story is narrated, a story of devoted loyalty. The whole brings living fame to one boy, death and eternal glory to the other.

In the beginning Jonathan Blake (Freddie Bartholomew) and Horatio Nelson (Douglas Scott) swear eternal friendship. As a reward for conveying a bit of news that saves Lloyds a great deal of money, Blake is taken under the wing of Angerstein, authentic founder of the syndicate of brokers who guarantee shippers against loss at sea. Nelson has joined the British navy as cabin boy.

A generation passes and Blake (now Tyrone Power) is an important factor in Lloyds. Horatio (John Burton), who never has seen his boyhood chum since that fargone day, though he has communicated with him, is the famous Lord Nelson. Blake's principal contribution to the growth of Lloyds is the invention of a semaphore news transmitting system. With Napoleon ravaging Europe and Nelson's fleet the lone barrier between him and England, Blake rescues Lady Elizabeth and falls in love with her, not knowing she is married to Lord Stacy.

A sea disaster shakes Lloyds to its foundations. All the syndicates demand that insurance rates be increased or Nelson's fleet split to convoy merchantmen. Only Blake holds out for the old rates. The growing romance between Blake and Elizabeth is menaced by the activities of Stacy, who now knows of the affection his wife holds for Blake. With England on the verge of panic, Blake issues a report that Nelson has conquered the French fleet. His motivation for doing this was the memory of the boyhood pact and belief that nothing but disaster to all could come were Nelson's fleet divided. But vengeful Stacy sows distrust in the mind of Angerstein, Blake's mentor. Torn between loyalty to the boy and fear of what his action might precipitate, Angerstein is loath to denounce his protege. Stacy is on the point of doing so to the Lloyds' syndicates when he is informed that Elizabeth's money, which he hoped to get as a price of divorce, is tied up in Blake's enterprises. Then, at the crucial moment, comes news that Lord Nelson actually has triumphed, though at the price of his life, at the battle of Trafalgar. The only other glimpse that mentally tortured Blake ever has of anything mortal of his boyhood chum is when Lord Nelson's funeral procession passes beneath his window.

The romance and drama of men and women and institutions, "Lloyds of London" is entertainment of a desirable quality. Soundly prepared, the story mingles authentic fact with romantic fiction. It lifts Tyrone Power to a position where he must be considered in this company's future production plans. Aiming to be entertainment always, it is secondarily an educational feature.

Comedy

Essentially this is a comedy of character, depending on exceptional acting for its full expression. Additionally, there is very considerable humorous value in the plot idea and in the separate situations. The dialogue also plays its part in helping to make it a quite exceptionally diverting and original comedy attraction.

The selling angles are George Arliss, in a dual role, and the intrinsically amusing story of a cabinet minister's bohemian brother posing as his pompous twin and actually imposing on the gathering of ministers. Arliss never has acted with greater finesse, a more acute sense of character or more obvious enjoyment. You may say he is at his best without any fear of comebacks. Similarly, the entertainment values of the story, based on the Neil Grant play, "The Nelson Touch," will justify any ingenuity used in exploiting its originality.

Richard Duncaster, a traveler and an expert in the politics of the Near East, rescues Bill Howard, a young fellow-countryman who is being pursued for the murder of a ruling Emir Abdulla. Actually, the potentate has been slain by two powerful chiefs, Barak and Nahil, to whom he has refused the promise of a regency in the event of his death and the succession of his son, Prince Ibrahim, a boy who is at school in England. The fact that Howard discovers the body enables them to spread the legend that an Englishman is the murderer.

Duncaster smuggles Howard to England as his servant and, to save Ibrahim from the chiefs, who are coming to take him back to the East, appeals to his twin brother, Lord Duncaster, the foreign secretary. Duncaster, a pompous, self-satisfied politician, will not listen to him and handles so badly the negotiations with the sheiks, who are demanding compensation for the death of Abdulla, that an outbreak of war is imminent. After a public meeting at which Duncaster's bellicose policy is answered with rioting, Richard decides that the only way to preserve the peace is to put his brother out of the way of making mischief. He therefore kidnaps him, locking him in Howard's flat, while he himself takes his brother's place.

Although the imposture is detected by Lady Duncaster, she keeps silent, and everyone else accepts the false Duncaster without question. He is therefore able to conduct a conversation with the sheiks, at the foreign office, and to confront them with certain evidence suggesting their connection with the crime. Later, at the cabinet meeting, he reveals that the whole conversation was recorded by dictaphone and that, when they were left alone, the sheiks used words definitely admitting the murder.

Only the prime minister realizes the deception which has been practiced. The rest of the world acclaims Duncaster as a great statesman. Richard returns to the East, without Howard, who has found time to become engaged to Duncaster's secretary.

Trade shown at the Piccadilly theatre, London, the picture was warmly received and there was comment that Arliss had never done better in England. Story values were thought very good.—Bruce Allan.

The Mandarin Mystery

(Republic)

Mystery Comedy

The idea of this film was to provide mystery comedy entertainment with a dash of topical interest tossed in for good measure. None of the things the producers hoped for, or audiences or exhibitors, is delivered in a way that will excite anybody. The story is dull, made duller in the manner in which situations are so telegraphed that even the most obtuse patron should not find it necessary to resort to any mental gymnastics to anticipate them. As acting and direction fall to the same low estate, the comedy isn't funny and the mystery is not baffling.

The whole thing, such as it is, has to do with an unscrupulous lawyer trying to cheat a few girls, for whose estate he is the executor. He trades in valuable postage stamps, but instead of delivering the real thing, he substitutes counterfeits. Enters a girl carrying a much sought after Chinese stamp. Comes also a boy detective. Ensue a couple of murders and a lot of complicated carryings on, in which the amateur sleuth is more of a hindrance to the cops than he is an aid, even though he does uncover the killer and establish his motive.

Laden down by so much implausible stuff, the few good names in the cast get nowhere at all. The handicaps under which they labor are also handicaps to any kind of audience. In any field, the film's only possibility is to fill out a program.

The Plainsman

(Paramount-DeMille)

Outdoor Romantic Drama

Here's wild west to thrill, both class and mass. It's history backgrounded dramatic and romantic fiction, made of the stuff that stands 'em in line from the most pretentious deluxer all the way down to the most humble of subsequent runs. It's the old, old story, heroic white men in conflict with detestable, boastful but cringing villains and wildly savage Indians; a girl in love with a man who admires her but doesn't want, seemingly, to have much truck with her. It's a human story that pulsates to a martial beat.

Under Cecil B. DeMille's distinctive technique, with such characters as Wild Bill Hickok, Calamity Jane, Buffalo Bill, General Custer, and the Indian chiefs Yellow Hand and Painted Horse as principal characters, it's a stirring saga of how heroic valor, womanly courage and sacrifice and blood and iron added a vast new empire to U. S. territory. No DeMille picture could be without spectacle and in this one he introduces a new kind of spectacular production effect, a roaring charge of mounted Indians against the shattered survivors of the battle of Grand Island, the torturing of Hickok and Calamity Jane by the Indians, and the massacre of Custer's cavalry troop at Big Bend.

Against the background of real incident, if not always chronologically historically accurate, "The Plainsman" tells the fiction embellished story of Wild Bill and Calamity. It tells of the raging feud existing between Wild Bill, determined to bring a civilization to the new frontiers, and rapacious, gun running Lattimer. It tells of Wild Bill being declared an outlaw to sunder, for a time, the great friendship existing between him and Buffalo Bill and Wild Bill, who finally caught up with Lattimer to have his flashing guns remove that menace to the cause of progress, of a Wild Bill who died in Calamity Jane's arms when treacherous McCall's bullet laid him low, Jane giving him a final kiss that he never would be able to wipe off.

Played with spirit and intelligent understanding by principals and entire supporting cast, with class individual performances sticking out all over and directed in the same style, all the substantiating features—locales, photography and particularly the musical accompaniment—have a definite place in the general scheme. All of them have been applied by DeMille to produce quality thrill and action entertainment, the exploitation values of which are limited only by how intensely showmen want to work and how much money they have to spend.

Previewed in the Alexander Theatre, Glendale. One might have gathered from audience reaction that the patrons considered it a western that tops all other westerns. Comment of the paying customers heard outside the theatre was unmistakable that the attendance considered "The Plainsman" the equal of "Covered Wagon," "The Iron Horse" or "Cimarron."—G. M.

Career Woman

Comedy-Drama

Though comedy romance is the atmosphere of this picture, its meat is a dramatic comparison of how legal and courtroom ethics function in a big city where nobody cares very much and in an isolated southern mountain community where everyone is bigotedly interested. It is also a character study of two persons. One, the girl, is a fledgling Portia, who looks upon her profession as something sacred. The man is a tricky practitioner, given to theatricalism in his pleadings, one who knows all the loop holes and is a past master in the psychological art of playing upon the prejudices, emotions and character weaknesses of judges, juries, clients and witnesses.

The first part of the film is given over to a picturization of the meeting of Barry Conant, brilliant city attorney, and Carroll Aiken, neophyte barrister. Her initial admiration for his cleverness provokes a romantic attachment. This near-worship, however, turns to dislike when Carroll comes to believe that Conant has little respect for his oath as an officer of the court. Her disgust with his seemingly personal character and with his theatrical methods, which she considers those of a shyster, cause her to leave the city.

When she returns to her mountain home, circumstances and the forerunners of ensuing action assume a more dramatic shape. The story takes on the atmosphere of a recent widely publicized mountain murder trial. Charles Clay, who has objected to the association of his daughter, Gracie, with Everett Clark, is found dead. The rigidly moralistic but nevertheless prejudiced and bigoted hill billies condemn Gracie as the slayer of her father. When the case come to trial, Carroll becomes Gracie's counsellor. Unable to stem the tide of fanaticism, the cause of Carroll and Gracie is becoming a hopeless thing. But Conant, who never has forgotten Carroll, reads of her heroic battle in the papers. Just when things look blackest for Gracie and Carroll, Conant appears in court. Becoming an associate counsel, he shrewdly calls upon all his knowledge of legal trickery and the foibles of human nature to confound the girl's persecutors, win a verdict of not guilty and claim the reward that everyone expects is his.

In blending the two themes of the story there naturally are complications that at times are both difficult to understand and believe. However, in relation to the film as a whole, these shortcomings do not constitute any serious handicap to the idea's underlying interest. While the picture probably never will set any records, it's one that astute showmen can do much with in strengthening any but an exceptionally high class program.

The Jungle Princess

(Paramount)

Romantic Drama

Improbable and impossible as far as story content is concerned, this is built of the kind of entertainment and exploitation stuff that, properly understood and applied, sometimes becomes a surprise attraction. Reactions of a cross-section metropolitan audience which witnessed its preview at the Los Angeles Paramount theatre, pointed that possibility. The patrons, at first inclined to scoff, remained to applaud.

Fundamentally "The Jungle Princess" is a Tarzan story in which the sexes are reversed. Dorothy Lamour, more naively exotic than voluptuous, is the friend of all animals, a queen of the jungles, whose particular intimates are an ape and a tiger. Indication of how strangely the story proceeds is seen in the fact that the tiger is the object of audience sympathy. Feared by the natives as a witch, she finds her tiger has mauled Ray Milland and nurses him back to health. Her guileless, primitive mating instincts raise cain with Milland's civilized ethics, but the relation is so handled that only wholesome comedy results.

Following Milland out of the brush, she comes into dramatic and romantic conflict with Milland's fiancee, Molly Lamont. The reactions of Hugh Buckler and Lynne Overman to her presence in camp create further comedy. Tolerating the infatuation, but shrewishly planning to wreck it, Miss Lamont's plot is wrecked by a native uprising. Capturing and preparing to murder the party, the savages first kill the tiger, but Milland frees himself to shoot chief Mala. This act aroused the savages to fury, but the ape summons hordes of his kind to send the blacks flying in terror. In the finale, Miss Lamont, beaten at her own game of winning a man, surrenders Milland to the more resourceful woman, Miss Lamour.

Fantastic and imaginary as the whole thing is, it nevertheless is genuinely entertaining. It doesn't aspire to be anything else, and smart showmen undoubtedly will sell it as such. Concentrating on the fact of differently contrived amusement, it doesn't attempt to broadcast any message or preach a sermon. The sex situations are carefully and intelligently handled in writing, acting and direction to bring the film into a field where, when the jungle animals effects are considered, it has much to prove satisfactory for general, family and juvenile audiences.—*G. Charlie Chan At the Opera

Mystery

The axiom that age improves things is very well demonstrated here. Of the long Charlie Chann series, practically all of which have found a ready market with legions of theatre goers, this latest member stacks up as the best. It attains that status through a good story, good production detail and good acting by principals as well as supporting cast. It is desirable entertainment, the field for which is not limited strictly to the Chan followers. It holds much to engage the attention of rank and file audiences.

The general thematic and atmospheric idea follows the established Chan plan. Mystery, drama, romance, comedy, suspense and menace are incorporated, and there is one novel departure. The redoubtable solver of any kind of crime, Warner Oland, is brought face to face with the master of terror, Boris Karloff. Both handle their assignments with appreciable gusto.

Although a couple of weird killings occur in the story, which takes place against the presentation of the opera "Faust," Chan's job this time is the responsibility of stopping a more heinous murder. As the film unfolds, he meets his match in the maniacal Gravelle, who, impelled by a jealous fury, returns to the opera to wreak vengeance upon his unfaithful wife and her lover. As drama is tensely keyed, expertly inserted romantic complications serve completely to baffle witnesses, the while the situation is relieved by inclusion of carefully prepared legitimate love interest and comedy. The finale is a nerve-jangling thriller.

The entertainment quality being of high character, showmanship materials are of unusual caliber. With Oland as the hunter and Karloff as the quarry, possibilities for a unique attention exciting campaign are at hand.

Maritime Melodrama

Dimly realized and little understood activities of the Coast Guard, least celebrated of the nation's defense divisions, make up the major content of this melodrama, into which is woven, of course, a love story. Seal poaching is the theme in question, so far as the Coast Guard is concerned, although abduction and murder are among the matters dealt with in the story.

John Wayne and Nan Grey have the romantic leads, he as an officer of the Coast Guard and she as his actress sweetheart entertaining a party aboard a supposed pleasure yacht which masks the operations of a smuggler. Murder is done and the girl is held captive. Her sweetheart ultimately outwits her captors, sends, under duress, an apparently misleading radio message containing code words properly interpreted by his commanding officer, and the Coast Guard comes to the rescue.

Probably the Coast Guard angle is the outstanding one for exploitation purposes. There is much action, a substantial measure of menace, and the outcome is well cloaked until late in the picture.

Two Lazy Crows

(Columbia)

Good

A good color cartoon, this has to do with the two crows who loaf through the summer while the other woodland creatures, birds and animals, stock up for the winter. When the trees become bare and the snow begins to fall the two crows pretend they are ill and try to snatch a ride on the hospital plane going south. Failing in this ruse they beseech a squirrel to take them inside his warm home. The squirrel does, putting the two crows to work cracking nuts, but they go to sleep as soon as the squirrel closes his eyes. Mrs. Squirrel arrives on the scene and puts Mr. Squirrel and the two lazy crows out into the cold. Produced by Charles Mintz. Running time, 7 minutes.

Three Blind Mouseketeers

(United Artists)

Excellent

An excellent Silly Symphony cartoon, this has to do with the three blind mice who periodically make sorties into the lair of Captain Cat. Captain Cat, eager to catch the mice, prepares an almost impregnable fortress of traps but the "Mouseketeers" are blessed with longevity, it seems. While they are feasting on Captain Cat's cheese, a cork pops from a champagne bottle and awakens the cat, who tries his darndest to catch the mice, even to playing the old shell game. Just when he has one of them in a corner the other two open the remaining champagne bottles and the corks rain heavily on the cat, routing him. Runing time, 8 minutes.

Modern Home

Satisfactory

Here the Tim and Irene series improves its average for the course by reason of a better story idea and, perhaps, better dialogue humor. Irene's family has used Tim's money, this time, to build a model home which is to serve dually as residence and specimen unit in a homes-for-sale project. The trick devices with which it is equipped give rise to the principal complications, and ultimate dependence on the old familiar lunatic colony, posing as buyers, is not too pronounced a letdown as handled.—18½ minutes.

Popular Science, No. 2

(Paramount)

Science Short

Providing further items of interest in laboratory discovery and invention, this latest number of the Popular Science series displays the newest method of obtaining finger prints, a hair trimming comb certain to be a veritable blessing for milady's coiffure, the technique of reproducing on glass microscopic animal life, and in conclusion some interesting shots of work done to make modern air travel comfortable and safe. Color and vocal commentary add value to make this subject interesting and educational. Running time, 10 minutes.

Loony Balloonist

(Columbia)

Fair

Scrappy is working on his balloon preparatory to entering the air races. Oopy persists in bothering Scrappy and when Scrappy refuses to take him along, Oopy cuts the mooring line and the balloon soars into the air with Scrappy hanging by a rope. Scrappy manages to get aboard. After the elements play around with the balloon, using it for a billiard ball, and the planes in the air races shoot in and around it, the balloon lands and its occupants are acclaimed by the crowd. Running time, 7 minutes.

COMPLETE TEXT OF REORGANIZATION PLAN FOR RADIO-KEITH-ORPHEUM

In the District Court of the United States, for the Southern District of New York. In the matter of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, a Maryland corporation, Debtor. In Proceedings for the reorganization of a corporation.

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

History and Business:

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation (hereinafter referred to as the "Debtor"), incorporated in Maryland on October 25, 1928, is a holding company whose principal assets are securities of numerous corporations engaged directly or indirectly in the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures throughout the world, principally in the United States and Canada.

In the production and distribution branch of the business the principal subsidiary is RKO Radio Pictures, Inc. (formerly FBO Productions, Inc.) which in turn through its principal subsidiaries, RKO Studios, Inc. and RKO Distributing Corporation, produces motion pictures and distributes its own product, as well as the product of others, in the United States and Canada and certain other parts of the world.

In the exhibition branch of the business the principal subsidiary is Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, which controls two major theatre circuits, the B. F. Keith circuit and the Greater New York Vaudeville Theatre circuit. These circuits operate in the eastern part of the United States, principally in the metropolitan New York area, and are made up largely of theatres which had been built for vaudeville. After their acquisition by the Debtor, vaudeville was continued as an important part of their business.

Beginning in 1929, the Debtor embarked upon a program of rapid acquisition of theatre properties, including vaudeville houses, with the result that by the end of 1930 approximately 175 theatres were controlled and operated directly or indirectly by subsidiaries of the Debtor. Acquisitions were made at relatively high prices, and in some instances leases and funded obligations in connection with acquired properties were guaranteed by the Debtor. The extent of this expansion is indicated by the fact that there was a net acquisition of capital assets in the years 1929 and 1930 of approximately $33,000,000. For 1931 the net acquisition of capital assets amounted to approximately $5,000,000, consisting for the most part of the purchase from Pathe Exchange, Inc. of its production and distribution assets and business.

In 1931 the Debtor leased from Rockefeller Center, Inc. for a long term of years, two newly constructed theatres and also certain office space in Radio City, New York City. Actual possession, however, was not delivered until the latter part of 1932.

After 1929 public taste in entertainment veered sharply away from vaudeville, and the old-time vaudeville houses suffered greatly from this fact. Where a change to picture policy could be made promptly after this trend was realized, theatres were saved from severe losses, but many of these houses were not adaptable to a sudden shift to a picture policy and a substantial number could not be maintained.

ORPHEUM HOLDERS PLAN REORGANIZATION FIGHT

Preferred stockholders of the Orpheum Circuit have subscribed some $40,000 to finance litigation against RKO and KAO designed to set aside the 1933 transaction by which Orpheum assets were absorbed by Stadium Theatres for obligations amounting to approximately $3,000,000.

Whether or not the litigation can be brought is still problematical, however, because Marcus Heiman, Orpheum trustee, was directed some time ago by Referee Oscar Ehrhorn to bring similar action against RKO and KAO but he was prevented from doing so by the lack of funds.

The progress of the depression with its resultant impairment of property values, the losses incurred through virtual extinction of vaudeville, and the capital commitments of the Debtor arising from leases, guarantees of leases, and funded obligations, coupled with the inability of the Debtor to raise additional funds, resulted in a petition against the Debtor for the appointment of a receiver. On January 27, 1933, Irving Trust Company was appointed Receiver of the Debtor's estate by the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, and, effective July 1, 1934, it was appointed by order of the Court, dated June 28, 1934, as Trustee of the Debtor's estate under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act. First, as Receiver, and then, as Trustee, it has continued the business of the Debtor.

Substantially all the producing and distributing companies in which the Debtor had an interest prior to the appointment of the Receiver have continued operations, although Pathe Pictures, Inc. no longer produces pictures and its distributing organization has been merged with that of RKO Distributing Corporation.

A number of subsidiary companies operating theatres have required adjustments of their obligations, and many theatre operations have been discontinued entirely. The largest of such companies requiring such adjustments was Orpheum Circuit Inc. which was adjudicated bankrupt on January 27, 1933. The Orpheum circuit operates in the midwest and far west. A subsidiary of the Debtor is the largest creditor of that company which has pledged practically all of its assets to secure that indebtedness. The theatres which are now controlled and operated directly or indirectly by subsidiaries of the Debtor approximate 100 in number. In all phases of its business, the Debtor now has an interest in approximately 80 active subsidiary and affiliated companies, exclusive of those in bankruptcy or receivership.

The Debtor owns practically all of the capital stocks of its principal subsidiaries with the exception of the preferred stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation. That company has $6,430,400 (par value) of $7 Cumulative Preferred Stock outstanding, of which $2,176,100 is owned by the Debtor and $4,254,300 is in the hands of parties other than the Debtor, but the Debtor owns practically all of the common stock.

Claims Against the Debtor's Estate and Outstanding Stock of the Debtor:

The total amount of claims filed in the Proceedings for the Reorganization of the Debtor up to the date of the Plan, exclusive of claims for indeterminate amounts, is $55,121,179.74. The time for filing claims expired September 28, 1934, but several claims have been filed after that date by special leave of court and additional claims may hereafter be so filed. Up to September 26, 1936, claims have been eliminated or reductions effected by negotiations or litigation conducted by the Trustee, or otherwise, in an aggregate amount of $22,440,179.32. Deducting the amount of $22,440,179.32, the total claims are reduced to $32,681,000.42.

Of this amount $9,150,628.97 (estimated) is represented by certain claims of Rockefeller Center, Inc. recommended for allowance by the Special Master, contested by the Trustee and not yet passed upon by the Court, flowing from the termination of two leases, the first for the two theatres and the second for office space in buildings in Radio City (another contingent claim concerning the lease of office space was not allowed by the Special Master, who did not decide, however, whether some provision should be made in any plan of reorganization for such contingent claim). Upon completion of the prospective arrangements with Rockefeller Center, Inc. which, as provided in Article V of the Plan, it is proposed to carry out as part of the Plan, said claims for $9,150,628.97 (estimated), as well as said contingent claim of Rockefeller Center, Inc,. will be eliminated.

Of the balance of $23,530,371.45, $13,518,500.00 represents the principal amount of secured claims as follows:

Secured 6% Gold Notes of the Debtor (herein sometimes called "Secured Notes") issued under Collateral Note Indenture dated as of July 1, 1931, with Chemical Bank & Trust Company, as Trustee, (on which interest has been paid to November 1, 1936) outstanding as of September 26, 1936, in the principal amount of	$800,000.00[1]

NET EARNINGS OVER SEVEN YEARS

Ten Year 6% Gold Debentures of the Debtor ($11,600,000 principal amount outstanding) issued under Indenture dated as of December 1, 1931, under which Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company is successor trustee, and 6% Gold Notes of the Debtor ($1,118,500 principal amount outstanding) dated January 29, 1931, and payable serially up to January 1, 1936, issued under Indenture, dated January 29, 1931, under which City Bank Farmers Trust Company is successor trustee, both equally entitled to the security afforded by said Indenture, dated as of December 1, 1931, under which Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company, is successor trustee, (and both collectively being herein sometimes referred to as "Old Debentures") and of the aggregate principal amount outstanding of .... $12,718,500.00[2]

After deducting the principal amount of the above mentioned secured claims there remain general claims estimated at approximately $10,000,000, from which a further reduction of over $2,000,000 is probable through activities of the Trustee already in progress.

The foregoing amounts do not include contingent claims or claims for indeterminate amounts and any claims which may be filed hereafter in the Reorganization Proceedings by special leave of court. Of the general claims included in the above figure of $10,000,000, however, about 20 claims aggregating over $6,000,000 have not been admitted by the Trustee or finally allowed by the Court. The Trustee is negotiating, or before the confirmation of the Plan may negotiate or the Debtor and/or other interested parties may negotiate, for the elimination or reduction of one or more of these claims subject, in any such case, to the approval of the Court in the Reorganization Proceedings. It is expected that reductions will actually be effected either by negotiation, litigation or otherwise, so that the aggregate amount of all allowed claims affected by the Plan, at the time of its confirmation, (exclusive of claims asserted for contingent or indeterminate amounts and the claims of Rockefeller Center, Inc., dealt with under Article V of the Plan) will not exceed approximately $21,000,000 and the Plan provides that it shall not be carried out unless such aggregate amount shall be reduced to not more than $22,000,000. These amounts are exclusive of interest.[1]

RKO THEATRE PEAK REACHED IN 1930

RKO theatre expansion reached its peak in 1930 when 175 theatres were controlled and operated directly by its subsidiaries, the company's reorganization plan reveals. At present, RKO's theatre interests have been reduced to approximately 100 houses.

There are now issued and outstanding 2,577,554¾ shares of Common Stock (excluding 16,437 shares held in the treasury of the Debtor). This number of shares also includes shares represented by certificates still outstanding for Class A Stock of the Debtor which, by an amendment to the charter made on December 1, 1931, was reclassified into one-quarter of a share of Common Stock for each share of Class A Stock theretofore outstanding.

Also included in the above stated principal amount of Old Debentures outstanding and the number of outstanding shares of Common Stock are Old Debentures and shares of Common Stock represented by certificates issued by J. & W. Seligman & Co., as Depositary, under an agreement between the Debtor and J. & W. Seligman & Co., as Depositary, dated December 21, 1931. As of September 26, 1936, approximately $249,079.26 remained to be paid by subscribers to complete full payment of Old Debentures and Common Stock represented by the certificates which have been only partly paid.

Assets:

Attached hereto as Exhibit A is an estimated consolidated balance sheet of the Debtor and subsidiary companies prepared by the accounting department of the Debtor from its own books as of September 26, 1936, giving effect to estimated total of general claims (unsecured) and to the elimination of capital deficit, operating deficit and capital stock.

Because of the fact that a large number of theatres are operated together in groups or circuits thereby enhancing their going-concern value, and because these theatres serve as a substantial outlet for motion pictures manufactured and distributed by various of the Debtor's subsidiaries, the ordinary measure of real estate values cannot be applied exclusively in measuring the asset value of the theatre properties. It is believed, therefore, that an appraisal of the fixed assets would not be of practical value. Accordingly it should be understood that the assets as set forth in Exhibit A represent book values.

Earnings:

The consolidated net earnings of the Debtor and its subsidiary corporations after operating expenses, interest on the Secured Notes and taxes, as certified by Price, Waterhouse & Co., were as follows:

	Before Interest on Old Debentures	After Interest on Old Debentures
1929....	$1,669,564.00	$1,669,564.00
1930....	3,385,628.00	3,385,628.00
1931....	4,524,926.00[1]	4,582,926.00[1]
1932....	9,925,391.33[1] [2]	10,695,503.00[1] [2]
1933....	3,650,954.00[1]	4,384,064.00[1]
1934....	422,562.33	310,547.67[1]
1935....	1,447,842.96	684,732.96

The figures for the years 1934 and 1935 are after payment of certain administration expenses of the Trustee. The earnings results for the years 1931, 1932 and 1933 reflect not only the effects of the depression, but also of the change in public taste which outmoded vaudeville performances. Furthermore, it is important to bear in mind that substantial contributions to the losses in these years were made by various companies which are no longer a part of the Debtor's estate or business. As compared with the figure of $684,732.96 mentioned hereinabove as the consolidated net earnings for the whole of the year 1935, the consolidated net earnings for the first thirty-nine weeks of 1936 (to September 26th) as taken from the books of the Debtor (unaudited) were $1,446,922.34, after interest on Secured Notes and Old Debentures and after normal taxes, but without any provision for possible surplus tax on undistributed profits.

Cash Requirements:

There was held by the Trustee in the Reorganization Proceedings, or deposited with Chemical Bank & Trust Company available for payment on account of the Secured Notes, cash in the amount of $230,269.01 as of September 26, 1936. As of said date, according to the records of the accounting department of the Debtor, the cash of the Debtor and its subsidiaries amounted to $6,558,276.17. This latter sum is, however, widely distributed among numerous of the subsidiary companies, in many instances not fully available to the Debtor, and it seems advisable to retain the entire amount for the operating and capital requirements of the various companies.

The Plan contemplates the raising of a substantial amount of additional cash to the extent needed for (a) expenses of reorganization, (b) a reserve for working capital

[1] By various agreements the maturity of these Secured Notes has been extended and effective May 4, 1936, the interest rate thereon has been changed from 6% to 4% per annum. Under the extension agreements, as amended, $25,000 principal amount of Secured Notes become payable on the first day of each month to and including February 1, 1937, and $50,000 principal amount on the first day of each month from March 1, 1937, to May 1, 1938, inclusive, but the Debtor or the Trustee can pay "the whole or any part of any one or more of the instalments of principal of any one or more of the Secured Notes at such time or times and from time to time as it or they may see fit" prior to maturity. To date these instalments have been met and in addition certain prepayments have been made with the result that $800,000 principal amount of Secured Notes remained outstanding as of September 26, 1936, of which $725,000 principal amount remained outstanding as of the date of this Plan.

[2] Accrued and unpaid interest on said $12,718,500 principal amount of Old Debentures to December 31, 1936, will amount to approximately $3,124,700, which is approximately $24.57 on each $100 of such principal.

and (c) other corporate purposes of the Debtor, through the sale of Common Stock referred to in Article IX.

Importance of Early Reorganization:

In the face of the handicap of Receivership and Reorganization Proceedings, the consolidated net operating results have shown marked improvement during the past two years. It is believed that removal of the handicap of court proceedings, together with the coordination and control of all phases of the Debtor's business under a board of directors, which would come about upon an early reorganization, will increase the efficiency of operations and place the Debtor in a position to take full advantage of improvement in general business conditions.

This Plan has been discussed with various claimants, committees and others interested in the estate of the Debtor. The proponents believe that it offers fair and equitable treatment to all parties in interest and have received satisfactory informal assurance of support from substantial interests. Rockefeller Center, Inc. has stated that, in the event that the disposition made of the contingent and indeterminate claims hereinafter mentioned in Article VI is satisfactory to it, it will accept the provisions with reference to its claims against the Debtor and with reference to the arrangements with the Debtor (1) for office space in the RKO Building in Radio City and (2) for the operations of the Radio City Music Hall and the Center Theatre, outlined in Article V of the Plan.

The Plan will be consummated only in accordance with the provisions of Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act. The new securities provided for in the Plan will be issued only when the Plan has been confirmed by the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, in accordance with the provisions of said Section.

PLAN

I. Claims Against and Interests in the Debtor's Estate and Proposed Classification Thereof:

The total amount of the claims filed in the Proceedings for the Reorganization of the Debtor has been reduced as aforesaid to $32,681,000.42. A further reduction is expected through negotiation or other activities of the Trustee and other interested parties, so that the aggregate amount of all allowed claims affected by this Plan, at the time of its confirmation (exclusive of claims asserted for contingent and indeterminate amounts), will not exceed approximately $30,000,000, exclusive of interest.[1] Although up to the present time the Court has not made any classification of claims against and interests in the Debtor's estate, it is believed that the following classification of claims is proper, and for the purpose of this Plan is made:

NOT AFFECTED BY THE PLAN:

Secured 6% Gold Notes of the Debtor (herein sometimes called "Secured Notes") issued under Collateral Note Indenture dated as of July 1, 1931, with Chemical Bank & Trust Company, as Trustee, (on which interest has been paid to November 1, 1936) outstanding as of September 26, 1936, in the principal amount of .... $800,000.00[2]

AFFECTED BY THE PLAN:

Class A: Secured Claims.

Ten Year 6% Gold Debentures of the Debtor ($11,600,000 principal amount outstanding) issued under Indenture, dated as of December 1, 1931, under which Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company is successor trustee, and 6% Gold Notes of the Debtor ($1,118,500 principal amount outstanding) dated January 29, 1931, and payable serially up to January 1, 1936, issued under Indenture, dated January 29, 1931, under which City Bank Farmers Trust Company is successor trustee, both equally entitled to the security afforded by said Indenture, dated as of December 1, 1931, under which Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company is successor trustee, (and both collectively being herein sometimes referred to as "Old Debentures") and of the aggregate principal amount outstanding of .... $12,718,500.00[3]

Class B: General Unsecured Claims including

(1) Claims of Rockefeller Center, Inc. recommended for allowance by the Special Master, objected to by the Trustee and not yet passed upon by the Court, which (together with the contingent claim of Rockefeller Center, Inc. referred to in the Introductory Statement) are to be handled as provided in Article V of the Plan, estimated to aggregate (exclusive of the contingent or indeterminate claim) $9,150,628.97 and also

(2) Other general unsecured claims against the Debtor, estimated not to exceed when finally determined..... $8,000,000.00

It is expected that reductions or eliminations will actually be effected either by negotiation, litigation or otherwise, so that the aggregate amount of all allowed claims affected by the Plan, at the time of its confirmation, (exclusive of claims asserted for contingent or indeterminate amounts and the claims of Rockefeller Center, Inc., dealt with in Article V of this Plan) will not exceed approximately $21,000,000. This Plan shall not be carried out if such aggregate amount shall exceed $22,000,000. These amounts are exclusive of interest.[1]

Holders of Common Stock of the Debtor outstanding in the amount of 2,577,554¾ shares (exclusive of 16,437 shares held in the treasury of the Debtor) shall also be entitled to participate in the reorganization. This number of shares includes shares represented by certificates still outstanding for Class A Stock of the Debtor which, by an amendment to the charter made on December 1, 1931, was reclassified into one-quarter of a share of Common Stock for each share of Class A Stock theretofore outstanding. Also included in the above stated principal amount of Old Debentures outstanding and the number of outstanding shares of Common Stock are Old Debentures and shares of Common Stock represented by certificates issued by J. & W. Seligman & Co., as Depositary, under an agreement between the Debtor and J. & W. Seligman & Co., as Depositary, dated December 21, 1931. As of September 26, 1936, approximately $249,079.26 remained to be paid by subscribers to complete full payment of Old Debentures and Common Stock represented by the certificates which have been only partly paid.

II. Executory Contracts:

The Debtor will remain liable on such of its contracts which are executory in whole or in part, including executory leases, as shall have been affirmed or adopted by the Receiver or the Trustee prior to the date of confirmation of this Plan, and also on any executory contracts of the Receiver or the Trustee which, by their terms, do not terminate at the conclusion of the Receivership or Reorganization Proceedings. All other executory contracts of the Debtor shall be deemed to have been rejected and disaffirmed by this Plan.

III. Claims Not Affected by the Plan:

The Secured 6% Gold Notes issued under the Indenture, dated as of July 1, 1931, with Chemical Bank & Trust Company, as Trustee, are not affected by this Plan but will be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of New Common Stock provided for in Article IX.

The following other claims are not affected by the Plan and to the extent that such claims are not paid by the Trustee pursuant to order of the Court they are to be paid in cash by the Debtor upon the consummation of the Plan or are to continue as obligations of the Debtor.

Any claims of the United States of America and any claims for taxes of the States of Maryland or New York.

Obligations of the Receiver and of the Trustee.

Priority claims (estimated to be nominal in amount) to such extent as their right to priority may be determined in the Reorganization Proceedings.

IV. Old Debentures:

Holders of Old Debentures will receive for each $100 in principal amount of Old Debentures, upon surrender of such Old Debentures with all unpaid interest coupons attached thereto, $100 in principal amount of New Debentures and 2 shares of Common Stock of the Debtor.

V. Claims of Rockefeller Center, Inc.:

The claims of Rockefeller Center, Inc. are for damages flowing from the termination of two leases, the first for the Center Theatre and the Radio City Music Hall and the second for office space, all in buildings in Radio City, New York City. The theatre lease terminated, by its express terms, on the appointment of a permanent receiver for the Debtor. The claim is based on a covenant in the lease that, upon such termination, the Debtor would pay as liquidated damages for the landlord's loss of its investment in constructing and equipping the theatres, a sum equal to the unamortized cost of the theatres and equipment computed as provided in the lease. The Trustee objected, among other grounds, that this clause provided for a penalty and not for liquidated damages. The Special Master upheld the clause and recommended for allowance the claim for the unamortized cost of the two theatres and their equipment in a net amount, less certain credits, of $8,270,337.55. The lease for office space terminated, by its express terms, on the appointment of a permanent receiver for the Debtor. The first claim with reference to this lease is based on a covenant therein that the Debtor, upon such termination, would pay the landlord, as damages, a sum which, at the time of termination, would represent the difference, if any, between (a) the aggregate rental and (b) the aggregate rental value for the residue of the term. By an indenture supplemental to the original lease for office space, the Debtor surrendered over half the space originally leased but agreed to lease on December 1, 1937, at the same rate and upon the same terms as the original lease, an amount of space equal to one-half of the surrendered space not then leased to others. The second claim with reference to the lease of office space is for an amount which, on the date of the appointment of the permanent receiver, would represent the value to the landlord of said agreement in the supplemental indenture to lease on December 1, 1937, such one-half of the surrendered space then unoccupied. Over the objection of the Trustee the Special Master recommended for allowance the first claim for the difference between the aggregate cash rent less the aggregate rental value for the balance of the term, in the amount of $1,335,291.42, subject, however, to the deduction of a discount of 6% per annum on each instalment of rent reserved from February 17, 1933 (date of appointment of permanent receiver) to the day upon which it was required to be paid by the lease, the net amount thereof being estimated by the Trustee to be $880,291.42. The second claim was disallowed, without prejudice, however, to any application the claimant might make to the Court for equitable treatment in any plan of reorganization. The claims as recommended for allowance by the Special Master have been contested by the Trustee but have not yet been passed upon by the Court. The difficulty of the questions involved and the importance to the Debtor of making new arrangements for such office space as it may now or later need in the RKO Building, and also for securing an important interest in the operations of the two theatres, make settlement with Rockefeller Center, Inc. desirable. Accordingly upon the consummation of the Plan Rockefeller Center, Inc.

(a) Will surrender the claims recommended for allowance by the Special Master on the theatre lease and the lease of office space estimated to aggregate $9,150,628.97, and also surrender the contingent claim with reference to the one-half of the surrendered office space not leased to others on December 1, 1937.

(b) Will grant a lease to the Debtor of office space in the RKO Building of approximately the amount of space now occupied by the Debtor, for a term of approximately twelve years at a rental of $2.00 per square foot per annum, with the right to the Debtor to have any additional space on or below the eighteenth floor, it may require which may from time to time be available at the market price of such space current at the time of renting.

(c) Will enter into an agreement with the Debtor providing for the operation of Radio City Music Hall and Center Theatre for a term of approximately twelve years, under the direction of a committee of seven individuals, of whom four shall always be persons selected by Rockefeller Center, Inc., and three shall be persons selected by the Debtor. The agreement will provide among other things that

(aa) The Debtor shall receive an annual fee of $25,000, chargeable as an operating expense, for consultant and advisory services rendered in connection with the operation of such theatres;

(bb) After all operating expenses are paid, Rockefeller Center, Inc., shall receive the first $700,000 of surplus earnings of the Music Hall. Of the next $100,000 of surplus earnings, Rockefeller Center, Inc., shall receive three-quarters and the Debtor one-quarter. The remaining surplus earnings shall be divided equally between Rockefeller Center, Inc., and the Debtor. If after paying operating expenses of the Music Hall, the surplus earnings thereof shall be less than $700,000 in any year, the deficiency shall be made up to Rockefeller Center, Inc., out of any surplus earnings in excess of $60,000 of the Center Theatre for that year.

(cc) After paying operating expenses of the Center Theatre, Rockefeller Center, Inc., shall receive annually the first $60,000 of surplus earnings. Of the next $100,000 of surplus earnings, Rockefeller Center, Inc., shall receive three-quarters and the Debtor one-quarter. The remaining surplus earnings shall be divided equally between Rockefeller Center, Inc., and the Debtor. If after paying operating expenses of the Center Theatre, the surplus earnings thereof shall be less than $60,000 in any year, such deficiency, not exceeding $60,000, shall be made up to Rockefeller Center, Inc., out of any surplus earnings in excess of $700,000 of the Music Hall for that year.

(dd) If a picture policy or a combination picture and stage show policy shall be put in effect in respect to the Center Theatre, all surplus earnings of the Center Theatre in excess of $60,000 shall be divided equally between Rockefeller Center, Inc., and the Debtor; and if in connection with any such policy the operation of the Center Theatre shall be taken over in whole or in part by the Debtor, the Debtor shall receive additional compensation, while such policy is in effect, in excess of the compensation provided for in (aa), to be mutually agreed upon.

(ee) Anything in paragraphs (bb), (cc) or (dd) hereinabove to the contrary notwithstanding, the Debtor shall receive all surplus earnings of the Music Hall and the Center Theatre for the year 1937 in excess of $910,000 if at any time after confirmation of this Plan and before January 1, 1938 the average market price for any ten day period of the

ONE-HALF NEW SHARE FOR ONE OLD

Common Stock of the Debtor issued under the provisions of the Plan shall equal or exceed $18.30 per share.

(ff) Each year of the term shall be deemed a separate and independent accounting period.

(gg) Rockefeller Center, Inc., shall have the right to terminate the agreement (1) if a court of bankruptcy shall take jurisdiction over the property of the Debtor or of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., or if a receiver shall be appointed for all or substantially all of the property of the Debtor or of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., and such receiver shall not be discharged within thirty days after such appointment; or (2) if over any period of three successive calendar years the earnings of the Debtor, as defined in the agreement, for such period shall be insufficient to pay the interest obligations for the same period on the outstanding indebtedness of the Debtor.

(hh) If the existing contract between RKO Distributing Corporation and The Center Music Hall, Inc., dated May 7, 1934, which expires August 31, 1940, is not extended, (or a new contract made between the parties to said contract or their successors) all references to the name of the Debtor and its subsidiaries shall, at the option of either party, be removed from the Music Hall when said contract of May 7, 1934 expires.

(ii) The Debtor shall assume no obligation in respect to the expense of operating said theatres, or either of them, or to share in any possible losses which might result from such operation, or to make any payment whatsoever in respect to said theatres or the operation thereof, to Rockefeller Center, Inc.

The Debtor will issue to or upon the order of Rockefeller Center, Inc., 500,000 shares of Common Stock of the Debtor.

VI. Other Unsecured General Claims:

Holders of unsecured allowed claims (other than Rockefeller Center, Inc.) will receive for each $100 of the amount thereof, as finally established and allowed, three quarters of one share of Preferred Stock and one and one half shares of Common Stock of the Debtor.

All contingent or indeterminate claims asserted prior to the time of confirmation of this Plan, which the Court after hearing shall designate as entitled to be dealt with under the Plan, shall be disposed of as follows. Most of these claims inure to the benefit of landlords under leases made to subsidiaries of the Debtor or companies affiliated with the Debtor or such subsidiaries which were guaranteed by the Debtor. Subject to the approval of the Court the Debtor shall be entitled to adjust such contingent or indeterminate claims of landlords on a basis which shall permit only of allocation to them respectively of securities in a maximum amount not greater than that which they would respectively have been entitled to receive had they established a general claim in an amount not to exceed the rent, without acceleration, reserved by their respective leases for the three years (a) next succeeding the date of surrender of the leased premises or (b) in cases where there has been no surrender, next succeeding the first day of the calendar month in which this Plan is confirmed, provided, however, that such contingent or indeterminate claims with like approval and at the option of the Debtor may be settled for cash. Such of said contingent or indeterminate claims as are not based on leases guaranteed as aforesaid may be adjusted and settled on terms satisfactory to the Debtor subject to approval by the Court. No such adjustment or settlement shall be deemed adversely to affect any party who may theretofore have consented to the Plan.

RKO RECEIVERSHIP ASKED FOUR YEARS AGO

It is four years, less about two months, since RKO consented to a receivership in equity in the federal court for the southern district of New York. The company's application was filed on January 27, 1933.

VII. Common Stock:

Holders of Common Stock will receive for each share of such stock on surrender of the certificate therefor, one half of a share of New Common Stock of the Debtor.

The 2,577,554¾ shares of Common Stock of the Debtor now outstanding (exclusive of 16,437 shares held in the treasury of the Debtor) include shares represented by certificates still outstanding for Class A Stock of the Debtor which, by amendment to the charter made on December 1, 1931, was reclassified into one-quarter of a share of share of Common Stock for each share of Class A Stock theretofore outstanding.

VIII. Certificates Issued by J. & W. Seligman & Co. as Depositary:

Included in the above stated $12,718,500 principal amount of Old Debentures outstanding and in the above stated 2,577,554¾ shares of Common Stock outstanding, are Old Debentures and shares of Common Stock represented by certificates issued by J. & W. Seligman & Co., as Depositary, under an agreement between the Debtor and J. & W. Seligman & Co., as Depositary, dated December 21, 1931. As of September 26, 1936, approximately $249,079.26 remained to be paid by subscribers to complete full payment of Old Debentures and Common Stock represented by said certificates which have been only partly paid. Holders of such certificates which have been partly paid shall be entitled under this Plan to receive such proportion of the new securities which they would have been entitled to receive if their certificates had been fully paid as their payments made bear to their full subscriptions. The holder of any such certificate, however, may complete the full payments required by said agreement dated December 21, 1931 provided that such payment shall be made within twenty days after the confirmation of this Plan and, in such event, such holder shall be entitled to receive such new securities of the Debtor as will be issuable against the Old Debentures or Common Stock of the Debtor for which their certificates would be exchangeable. When and as J. & W. Seligman & Co., as Depositary, shall be advised by the Debtor from time to time that new securities of the Debtor have been issued pursuant to the Plan against any of such outstanding certificates, it shall deliver the Old Debentures and certificates for Common Stock of the Debtor represented by such certificates, to the Debtor for cancellation.

IX. Sale and Underwriting of Additional Shares of Common Stock of the Debtor:

To provide the Debtor with additional cash in the amount of $1,600,000 a sufficient number of shares of New Common Stock of the Debtor will be offered for sale, at a price per share which shall be subject to the approval of Atlas Corporation and the Court, (a) to the holders of unsecured allowed claims and (b) to the extent not taken by them to the holders of Common Stock of the Debtor. Such creditors and stockholders will be entitled to subscribe substantially in proportion to their respective allowed claims and holdings, but such right will be limited to a period not exceeding thirty days after the confirmation of this Plan. Atlas Corporation will agree for itself and others to underwrite the purchase of said shares upon terms to be proposed by it at the time of such underwriting which shall be subject to the approval of the Court.

X. New Capitalization of Debtor:

Upon final confirmation of this Plan all of the assets of the Debtor will become free and clear of any lien or encumbrance of the indenture securing the Old Debentures of the Debtor. The Secured Notes will be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of New Common Stock provided for in Article IX. After such payment the Debtor will have the following capitalization upon the consummation of the Plan:

Securities	Authorized	To be outstanding upon consummation of the Plan
5½% Sinking Fund Convertible Debentures, hereinafter described..	$18,000,000	$12,718,500
6% Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock, par value $100 per share	$11,000,000	$ 6,000,000[1]
Common Stock...	4,000,000 shares[2]	2,163,148 shares[3]

[1] As stated in Article I of this Plan, general unsecured claims, exclusive of that of Rockefeller Center, Inc., have been estimated not to exceed, when finally determined, $8,000,000. The amount of Preferred Stock of the Debtor shown above to be outstanding on consummation of the Plan is based on this estimate. To the extent that such claims as finally determined are less than or exceed this amount, the amount of Preferred Stock to be outstanding as shown above would be reduced or increased accordingly.

[2] Including shares reserved for conversion of New Debentures and Preferred Stock and for the exercise of Option Warrants.

[3] This does not include shares to be issued pursuant to Article IX or shares that may be allotted to Atlas Corporation.

DESCRIPTION OF NEW SECURITIES

not issued pursuant to the provisions of this Plan will be available for issue under the authority of the Board of Directors of the Debtor for its corporate purposes.

Attached hereto as Exhibit B is an estimated pro forma consolidated balance sheet[1] of the Debtor and subsidiary companies prepared by the accounting department of the Debtor from its own books as of September 26, 1936, giving effect to (1) the eliminations reflected in Exhibit A and (2) the application of this Plan.

Non-assignable Option Warrants may be issued entitling the holders thereof named therein to purchase within five years after the confirmation of this Plan shares of New Common Stock of the Debtor at prices to be therein stated. The aggregate amount of shares at any time purchasable under said outstanding Option Warrants shall not exceed ten per cent. of the number of shares at the time outstanding. Such Option Warrants may be issued by the Debtor to executives and employees of the Debtor and/or its subsidiaries as determined by its Board of Directors, provided, however, that such Option Warrants as may be issued before consummation of this Plan shall specify $10. as the price per share.

Atlas Corporation for its services rendered in connection with the Reorganization Proceedings and the Plan shall be entitled to receive such number of shares of the New Common Stock as the Court shall approve and shall be reimbursed in cash for its reasonable expenses.

For convenience (and upon the assumption that the general unsecured claims, other than that of Rockefeller Center, Inc., when finally determined, will aggregate approximately $8,000,000) the following table summarizing the proposed distribution of securities of the Debtor is set forth but shall not be deemed to control or modify the other provisions of this Plan:

	New Debentures	New Preferred Stock	New Common Stock
Old Debentures....	$12,718,500		254,370 shs.
Rockefeller Center Inc.			500,000 shs.
Other General Claims		$6,000,000[2]	120,000 shs.
Old Common Stock			1,288,778 shs.
	$12,718,500	$6,000,000[2]	2,163,148 shs.[3]

XI. Description of New Securities:

The Debtor will be authorized to issue 5½% Sinking Fund Convertible Debentures (herein called "New Debentures") in the aggregate principal amount of..................	$18,000,000
6% Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock (herein called "Preferred Stock") of the par value of $100 per share in the aggregate par value of	$11,000,000
Common Stock without nominal or par value or of such par value as may be determined by the Board of Directors of the Debtor........	4,000,000 shares

In order to provide for distribution if necessary of New Debentures in amounts less than authorized denominations scrip will be issued which may be combined with other scrip and exchanged for New Debentures in authorized denominations. No certificates for fractions of shares of stock will be issued but in lieu thereof scrip will be issued exchangeable in amounts aggregating full shares for certificates of stock. All such fractional scrip may be precluded from participation in dividends, interest or other distributions and will be issued in such form and on such terms and with such date or dates of expiration not later than December 31, 1941, as may be determined by the Board of Directors of the Debtor.

The New Debentures will mature ten years after the date thereof, which date shall be as of the first day of the calendar month succeeding that in which this Plan is confirmed, and will be issued under a trust indenture to be entered into by the Debtor with a bank or trust company doing business in the City of New York, as Trustee. Provision will be made therein for a sinking fund to effect the gradual retirement of the New Debentures by application each year of 10% of the net earnings of the Debtor available for that purpose, such net earnings to be after payment of interest on the New Debentures and to be defined in the trust indenture. The New Debentures will be redeemable in whole or in part at any time at the principal amount thereof and accrued interest to the date fixed for redemption plus a premium which during the first five years after the date of the New Debentures shall be 5% of the principal amount thereof, but which premium shall decrease to the extent of 1% of said principal on the fifth anniversary of the date of said New Debentures and 1% of said principal on each successive anniversary thereafter. The New Debentures will be convertible at the option of the holder at any time into New Common Stock at the rate of five shares of New Common Stock for each $100 in principal amount of New Debentures as such New Common Stock may be constituted at the time of conversion and whether or not the rights or interests represented by such shares are equivalent to the rights or interests represented by the shares of New Common Stock authorized or outstanding at the date of the issuance of the New Debentures surrendered for conversion or at any time prior to such conversion, and irrespective of any change which may have occurred prior to the conversion including (without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing) any change by way of payment of stock dividends, sale, exchange or other disposition of any class of stock of the Debtor, any change of authorized capital or reclassification thereof, the sale or lease by the Debtor of all or substantially all or any part of its property or any change whatsoever, provided, however, that if the shares of New Common Stock shall after consummation of the Plan be subdivided or consolidated into a greater or lesser number of shares of New Common Stock, or if, upon merger or consolidation, the shares of New Common Stock shall be exchanged for securities (including in such term stock of any class or classes) of the corporation resulting from such merger or consolidation, then the holders of New Debentures thereafter shall be entitled to convert such New Debentures into such number of new shares of New Common Stock of the Debtor or into such securities of the corporation resulting from such merger or consolidation, as were exchangeable for the number of shares of New Common Stock of the Debtor into which the holders of New Debentures would have been entitled to convert such New Debentures except for such action. Whenever in the foregoing sentence the Debtor is referred to it shall be deemed to include any corporation into which the Debtor may have been merged or consolidated. The trust indenture will contain such other terms and provisions not inconsistent with the provisions of this Plan as may be approved by the Board of Directors of the Debtor and the Court.

The designations, preferences, privileges and voting powers, and the restrictions or qualification thereof, of the New Preferred Stock and New Common Stock of the Debtor, will be more fully set forth in a proposed amendment to the certificate of incorporation of the Debtor, to be approved by the Court, but which shall not be inconsistent with the following substantial outline:

(a) The holders of the Preferred Stock shall be entitled in preference to the Common Stock

(1) To receive dividends when and as declared by the Board of Directors out of the surplus or net profits of the Debtor available for the payment thereof, at the rate of $6 per share per annum, and no more, payable quarterly on the first days of January, April, July and October in each year; and

(2) In the event of any liquidation, dissolution or winding up of the affairs of the Debtor, only to $100 per share plus the amount, if any, by which $6 per annum from the date after which dividends on said shares became cumulative to the date of such distribution exceeds the dividends actually paid thereon.

(b) Subject to the prior rights of the holders of the Preferred Stock, all distributions of dividends or capital assets shall be made to the holders of the Common Stock.

(c) The dividends on the Preferred Stock issued in consummating this Plan shall be cumulative from and after the first day of the calendar month succeeding that in which this Plan is confirmed.

(d) Every holder of record of Preferred Stock or Common Stock shall be entitled, at every meeting of the stockholders, to one vote for each share of any such stock standing in his name on the books of the Debtor, subject to the right of the Board of Directors to determine a record date or close the transfer books for the purpose of determining the stockholders entitled to vote at any particular meeting.

(e) The Preferred Stock may be called for redemption, in whole or in part, at any time after a date two years subsequent to the date of confirmation of this Plan at $100

[1] Said balance sheet is presented only for the purpose of the proposal of this Plan in the Reorganization Proceedings and shall not be binding upon the Board of Directors of the Debtor in setting up any balance sheet for the Debtor or otherwise.

CONVERSION OF PREFERRED STOCKS

per share, plus the amount, if any, by which $6 per annum from the date after which dividends, on said shares became cumulative to the date fixed for redemption exceeds the dividends actually paid thereon. If less than all of the shares of Preferred Stock are to be redeemed, the shares to be redeemed shall be selected by lot in such manner as the Board of Directors shall determine.

(f) Each share of Preferred Stock will be convertible at the option of the holder at any time into three and one-third shares of Common Stock as such Common Stock may be constituted at the time of conversion, whether or not the rights or interests represented by such shares are equivalent to the rights or interests represented by the shares of Common Stock authorized or outstanding at the date of issuance of the Preferred Stock surrendered for conversion or at any time prior to such conversion, and irrespective of any change which may have occurred prior to the conversion including (without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing) any change by way of payment of stock dividends, sale, exchange or other disposition of any class of stock of the Debtor, any change of authorized capital or reclassification, thereof, the sale or lease by the Debtor of all or substantially all or any part of its property or any change whatsoever, provided, however, that if the shares of Common Stock shall after consummation of this Plan be subdivided or consolidated into a greater or lesser number of shares of Common Stock, or if, upon merger or consolidation, the shares of Common Stock shall be exchanged for securities (including in such term stock of any class or classes) of the Debtor resulting from such merger or consolidation, then the holders of Preferred Stock thereafter shall be entitled to convert such Preferred Stock into such number of new shares of Common Stock of the Debtor or into such securities of the Debtor resulting from such merger or consolidation, as were exchangeable for the number of shares of Common Stock of the Debtor into which the holders of Preferred Stock would have been entitled to convert such Preferred Stock except for such action. Whenever in this clause (f) the Debtor is referred to it shall be deemed to include any corporation into which the Debtor may have been merged or consolidated.

(g) The Board of Directors of the Debtor may authorize the issuance of any stock or obligations of the Debtor for such consideration as to them shall seem proper, without offering such securities or any thereof to the stockholders or to the holders of any of the securities of the Debtor.

The certificate of incorporation, as amended will also provide, subject to the limitation stated in Article X, substantially as follows:

The Board of Directors shall have power at any time and from time to time (without any action by the stockholders of the corporation) to create and issue, whether or not in connection with the issue and sale of any shares of stock or other securities of the corporation, rights or options entitling the holders thereof to purchase from the corporation any shares of its capital stock of any class or classes, such rights or options to be evidenced by or in such instrument or instruments as shall be approved by the Board of Directors. The terms upon which, the time or times, which may be limited or unlimited, in duration, at or within which, and the price or prices at which any such shares may be purchased from the corporation upon the exercise of any such right or option, shall be such (to the extent permitted by law) as shall be fixed and stated in the resolution or resolutions adopted by the Board of Directors providing for the creation and issue of such rights or options, and, in every case, set forth or incorporated by reference in the instrument or instruments evidencing such rights or options.

RKO WILL SIMPLIFY CORPORATE STRUCTURE

Simplification of the corporate structure of RKO is to be undertaken in advance of the consummation of the company's reorganization, with present plans calling for the merging of seven production and distribution subsidiaries with RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., the principal subsidiary.

RKO Distributing Corporation is the largest company to be merged. Ned E. Depinet is president and indications are that he will become a vice-president of the parent company under the new arrangements. All of the RKO Pathe subsidiaries, acquired in 1931 through the purchase by RKO of Pathe assets for approximately $5,000,000, are also scheduled to go out of existence. These companies include RKO Pathe Pictures, Inc., RKO Pathe Distributing Corporation, RKO Pathe Export Corporation and RKO Pathe Studios Corporation, Ltd. Also to be merged are RKO Studios, Inc., and RKO Export Corporation.

XII. Management:

The Debtor, upon consummation of this Plan, will have a board of not less than nine directors. The first board will hold office for two years and will be persons approved by the Court.

XIII. Method of Acceptance of Plan:

The method by which creditors, stockholders and other parties in interest may evidence their acceptance of this Plan, and, after confirmation by the Court in the Reorganization Proceedings, may participate therein, will be as determined by the Court by order or orders entered in the Reorganization Proceedings, and notice thereof will be given to the creditors, stockholders and other parties in interest in accordance with Article XVI hereof or as required by such order or orders of the Court.

XIV. Consummation of Plan:

The form and terms of the amendment to the certificate of incorporation and by-laws of the Debtor, and any other documents used in connection with the reorganization, and the steps to be taken to carry out this Plan, shall, in all respects not expressly provided in the Plan, be determined by the Board of Directors of the Debtor subject to the approval of the Court.

Instead of the Debtor retaining its property and issuing the new securities contemplated by this Plan, the Debtor may be merged in or consolidated with a new corporation to be organized under the laws of Delaware, which new corporation by virtue of such merger or consolidation will become vested with the property and assets of the Debtor. Such new corporation shall assume all of the obligations upon which and to such extent as the Debtor would have remained liable under the provisions of this Plan and will have provisions in its certificate of incorporation and by-laws substantially similar to those which the Debtor would have had in the event of amendment of its certificate of incorporation as herein provided, and which new corporation will issue, in exchange for the securities of the Debtor, securities similar to those contemplated by this Plan to be issued by the Debtor in the event of the retention by the Debtor of its property after consummation of the Plan. The provisions of this Plan applicable to the Debtor after confirmation thereof shall apply to such new corporation.

The new securities may be delivered in the first instance in temporary form, exchangeable for definitive securities when prepared.

For the purpose of simplifying the corporate structure of the Debtor and its subsidiaries, and as an integral step in the consummation of this Plan, a merger will be effected whereby RKO Pathe Pictures, Inc., RKO Pathe Distributing Corporation, RKO Pathe Export Corporation, RKO Pathe Studios Corporation, Ltd., RKO Distributing Corporation, RKO Studios, Inc., and RKO Export Corporation will be merged into RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., the principal subsidiary of the Debtor in the production and distribution branch of its business. It is contemplated that this merger may become effective prior to the date of the confirmation of this Plan.

This Plan will be consummated only in accordance with the provisions of Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act. The new securities provided for in this Plan will be issued only when the Plan has been confirmed by the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York in accordance with the provisions of said Section.

XV. Reorganization Expenses:

All expenses of reorganization and all costs of administration and other allowances made by the Court shall be paid in cash by the Trustee or the Debtor, except as herein otherwise provided, subject to the provisions of Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, such expenses, costs, and allowances shall include reasonable compensation for the services rendered and reimbursement for

Briefs Ordered On Playdate Law

Three United States district court judges, Florence E. Allen, Robert R. Nevin and Mell G. Underwood, presided at the hearing of briefs and arguments at Columbus, Ohio, on Friday in the case of RKO Distributing Corporation vs. John W. Bricker, state attorney general, and Donald J. Hoskins, prosecuting attorney of Franklin County, representing the State of Ohio, seeking to determine the constitutionality of the law prohibiting preferred playing time or designated play dates. The court ordered briefs prepared.

Myers Aids Defense

The act, passed by the Ohio Legislature March 20, 1935, "making it unlawful for any person to enter into a contract, directly or indirectly, to sell, rent, lease, license, lend, distribute or barter a motion picture film for public exhibition within the state upon the condition imposed by the seller, vendor, renter, lessor, licensor or distributor of such motion picture film, that public exhibition thereof shall begin, occur or take place on a certain or specified day or days of the week," was declared unconstitutional by Attorney General Bricker, in consequence of which Gov. Martin L. Davey refused to sign the bill. It automatically became a law without his signature 90 days after passage, as provided in the Ohio statutes. The suit by RKO Distributing Corporation followed. By agreement between counsel the law has not been enforced, pending final determination of the case.

Paxton and Seasongood, Cincinnati attorneys, represent the complainant, while Rocker and Schwartz, Cleveland, have the defendants' case. Abram F. Myers is associate counsel for the defendants. Attorney General Bricker is disqualified from participating on account of his decision on the original act.

Call Law Discriminatory

At the hearing, complainant's counsel argued that the law was discriminatory, that there was no valid reason for its existence, and that it tended to help the exhibitor at the expense of the distributor. They pointed out that distributor was owner of the copyright film, therefore, the law was an interference with the Federal copyright law. Moreover, contracts were an Interstate Commerce procedure, and as such were under the Federal, and not the state regulation.

They contended that no moral issue was involved, citing claim of defendants that enforced playing time compelled the exhibitor to show sex and other objectionable pictures on Sundays when the audiences were composed of at least 50 per cent children. They argued that the exhibitor was privileged to increase his Sunday prices for children to be comparable to the adult scale. The question as to the moral content of a picture was determined by the Ohio board of censors, they pointed out, and if the exhibitor was not satisfied with the censor's ruling on any particular picture, he was privileged to have the board review the picture again, but in case the board refused, the exhibitor had recourse to the courts. The playdate law delegates the exhibitor to be the guardian of the public's morals, thus interfering with the duties of the regularly constituted censor board. Any claim of monopolistic tendencies, as set forth by defendants, is a Federal issue, and not within the jurisdiction of the state, the complainant's counsel said.

Called "Sunday Legislation"

Mr. Myers, who made the main argument for defendants, said the law was essentially Sunday legislation; that the exhibitor, who had opportunity to study the preferences of his particular community at close range, was assuredly in better position to determine the type of picture to be shown on that day, and therefore entitled to specify the nature of the picture, rather than being compelled to run the objectionable pictures designated by the distributor under the preferred playing time setup. Myers argued that under the preferred playing time arrangement, the distributor becomes the public's agent, while the exhibitor is merely his tool, and the exhibitor should not be compelled to show undesirable pictures on Sunday over the protest of church and other groups. Facts and figures were presented to prove that certain neighborhood and suburban exhibitors have suffered loss of adult patronage on Sunday, and that the patronage on other days was greatly impaired, if not altogether lost because the exhibitor was compelled to show an objectionable picture on Sunday despite protests of certain adult groups.

Briefs of defendants have been filed. The Court ordered complainant to take despositions and file them with the Court by Jan. 31, and file the briefs within 15 days thereafter.

David Palfreyman listened in on the case, but took no part in any of it.

In originally declaring the act unconstitutional, Attorney General Bricker ruled: "It would interfere with the rights and property of copyright owners under the Federal laws and would be an unwarranted interference with the rights of private contract of the owners of the film."

Newspaper Space Campaign Planned

A campaign on the part of exhibitors and distributors to seek the cooperation of newspaper publishers in obtaining more space for motion picture publicity on the amusement pages of the daily press is being urged by Benjamin H. Serkowich, director of advertising and publicity for the Capitol theatre, New York. It is Mr. Serkowich's belief that radio and cabaret news is getting a major portion of the newspaper space, particularly in Chicago and New York, and that legitimate motion picture news, of interest to a far greater number of persons, is being crowded out as a consequence.

In an interview published in Retailing, national department store trade publication, Mr. Serkowich urged the cooperation of department store advertising executives in petitioning newspaper publishers for more space on the ground that matinee attendance at large downtown motion picture houses, is very closely tied up with department store patronage. Matrons and young women, comprising the majority of the department store trade, are also the chief afternoon patrons of the theatres, and usually on the same afternoon, he said.

No definite campaign plans have been completed as yet but advertising and exploitation directors of the distributing companies are reported to be interested.

Pallos Seeking Talent And Writers for London

Etienne Pallos, general sales manager of London Films, arrived in New York Monday on his way to Hollywood where he will endeavor to sign writers, directors and players for Alexander Korda's future productions. He will remain in New York until the next board meeting of United Artists in Hollywood, scheduled for the near future.

New RKO Plan Goes to Court

the actual and necessary expenses incurred in connection with the Reorganization Proceedings and the prior receivership proceedings and the preparation and consummation of the Plan by officers, parties in interest, and the committees and other representatives of creditors or stockholders, and the attorneys or agents of any of the foregoing and of the Debtor, as shall be determined or approved by the Court in the Reorganization Proceedings. All amounts to be paid by the Trustee or the Debtor under the Plan for services or expenses incident to the reorganization shall be subject to the approval of the Court.

XVI. Notices Under the Plan:

Unless otherwise provided in Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act or in any order or orders of the Court, whenever notice shall be required or permitted to be given under or pursuant to the Plan, such notice shall be given by publishing a copy of such notice once in each week for two successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, and also (1) in case of notices to the holders of Old Debentures, general claims, and to stockholders, who shall have accepted the Plan, by mailing such notice postage prepaid to the addresses of such parties set forth in the acceptances signed by them; and (2) in case of notices to the holders of Old Debentures and general claims and to stockholders, who shall not have accepted the Plan, by mailing such notice postage prepaid to such parties whose names and addresses appear on the books of the Debtor or of the Trustee.

XVII. Statements Contained in the Plan:

The statements, opinions, computations, assumptions, estimates, conclusions, etc., contained in the Introductory Statement, the Plan, and the Exhibits to the Plan (1) are based upon or formulated from information requested from the Trustee and made available by its consent, are submitted without warranty by the Debtor or by the creditors proposing the Plan and are not made by or joined in by the Trustee or by any committee or by any other parties; (2) are made solely for the purpose of assisting the Court (after hearing) in the Reorganization Proceedings, and creditors, stockholders and other parties in interest, in making a determination as to the fairness of the Plan; and (3) are not intended for the use or information of prospective purchasers of any securities referred to in the Plan whether now existing or proposed to be issued, or for any purpose other than the purpose stated in (2); and no one is authorized to make any statement regarding the Plan, whether with reference to any securities referred to therein or otherwise, which is not set forth herein.

The Plan describes in general outline the character of the new securities which it is proposed the Debtor will issue, and the method of effecting the reorganization, the precise terms and conditions of which are necessarily to be determined in accordance with the powers granted by the Plan, and under the supervision of the Court, to fit the facts and circumstances as they may exist from time to time during the reorganization.

RECORD BREAKER

EIGHTEEN months ago Eastman Super X Film was introduced as a special film for a special purpose. Today it stands as the world's leading all-purpose negative. Selznick Plans Twelve Features

An "open bid" for leadership among the independent motion picture producers is contained in a statement issued by John Hay Whitney, chairman of the board of directors of Selznick International, announcing the 1937 program of the company, which is headed by David O. Selznick. The announcement followed the decision made recently in Hollywood to produce 10 or 12 major pictures for 1937.

Mr. Whitney said:

"In a series of meetings we have held last week, we decided upon a large scale refinancing and expansion of Selznick International Pictures, Inc., involving a program of between 10 and 12 pictures yearly, four to six of these to be in Technicolor.

"All our product will continue to be released through United Artists and it is our hope to take the commanding position in the independent field, and to be the first independent company operating on a large scale to concentrate solely on high quality pictures. We have no intention of adding to the industry's burden of cheap product, and each subject undertaken will be made with a sincere effort to maintain a distinguished record."

Columbia Opens Sales Meetings

The Columbia Pictures sales force on the west coast gathered in San Francisco for the opening of the first of a series of sales meetings under Abe Montague, general sales manager. The two-day meeting was presided over by Jack Cohn. Among those present were Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager; Jerome Safron, western division manager and branch managers, office managers, bookers and salesmen from Denver, Los Angeles, Portland, Salt Lake City, Seattle and San Francisco.

The second meeting will be held in New Orleans about December 1, Mr. Cohn announced as he told the gathering "We are going to lay in your lap this year a minimum of 15 great hits, of which six are now in production.

"Among these are: 'Interlude,' which is the working title of the Grace Moore picture; 'Los Horizon,' featuring Ronald Colman and directed by Frank Capra, and 'Life of Chopin,' now being cast."

Mr. Cohn said the New Orleans meeting would be followed by one in Chicago and one in New York.

Goldstein Will Act As Republic Liaison

The institution of a liaison arrangement between the production forces in Hollywood and the home office distribution activity in New York for Republic Pictures will take effect with the arrival in Hollywood this week of E. H. Goldstein, vice-president of the company.

It is expected that Mr. Goldstein will make periodic visits between New York and Hollywood.

General Pictures Starts Sale of Local Franchises

Mack D. Weinberger, general sales manager of General Pictures, has sold a five-year franchise for New York to Melvin Hirsch, of Syndicate Exchanges. Mr. Hirsch will retain his interest in Syndicate and handle General's pictures independently of this company.

The deal is for six pictures for the present season, and 26 features and eight color outdoor musicals for the following year.

Although a number of franchises will be granted, General Pictures is planning to establish a number of its own exchanges.

Sonotone Corporation this week voted a quarterly dividend of 15 cents a share on the common stock, payable on January 2, 1937.

Grand National Signs Producers

Edward L. Alperson, president of Grand National Films, Inc., Monday announced that Victor Schertzinger, in a unit with Zion Meyer, had been signed to produce a series of six pictures for Grand National, and that Richard A. Rowland will also produce eight productions, four of which will be made this season.

Mr. Schertzinger will produce three musicals for which he will write the music and also direct. The composer-director will also score the three dramatic features to be made by Mr. Meyer. He may also direct one of these.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 46

Bluebook School Question No. 46 was: (A) Describe a simple, easily applied process for testing projection lenses for flatness of field. (B) What is a collector lens? A converging lens? A meniscus lens? (C) Can a projection lens be made to project a sharp picture at any distance?

The following made acceptable answers: S. Evans and C. Rau; D. H. Danielson; B. De Vietti; J. R. Prater; C. Oldham; W. H. Edmonds; R A. Hooker; G. E. Doe; A. L. Cooper; L. Cimikoski; T. F. The following answers to Section A are presented for your examination. G. E. Doe says: "The term flatness of field signifies ability of a lens to give sharp focus at all points upon a screen. This is, I believe, not wholly possible under theatre conditions, since we are told that a lens will produce the best possible focus—termed critical focus, I believe at only one distance. [Correct.—F. H. R.] But a well corrected lens will nevertheless give acceptably sharp focus through a considerable distance—critically sharp at only one point, but what I think 'Dad' would call 'acceptably sharp.' He uses that term some and I believe means not absolutely perfect, but near enough for practical purposes. [Correct again.—F. H. R.]

"To test a lens for flatness of field, I would stretch white cloth upon a light frame approximately two or three feet square (as suggested on page 120 of the Bluebook of Projection) using the larger size if the screen image be very large. Then, selecting a film that has good photography of suitable character, I would focus it just as sharply as possible at the screen center and very carefully examine the whole image at a distance varying with the size of the screen image—about 25 feet for a small one. If the definition is as sharp at sides, top, bottom and corners as at center, then the lens is okeydoke. But if when sharp at center, it is more or less out at corners (I assume straight projection; if there be projection angle, that must be considered and made allowance for and only the sides at vertical height of screen considered), I would, without disturbing the sharp center focus, locate the small screen at one corner (or one side, if there be angle) and, being very careful to keep the surface square with the light rays at that point, advance it slowly toward the lens until the definition on it was equal in sharpness to that at the screen center, whereupon the distance from small screen to the point in the image it represents, would be an exact measurement of the lack of flatness of field for that lens when projecting a picture of that size."

My compliments, Brother Doe. Out of all the mass of answers there were but three that caught the effect of projection angle, those of Doe, H. Edwards and C. and S. E. Gay. However, that is not charged against you as a fault (though it perhaps really is), for the point is not brought out in the Bluebook.

(B) J. R. Prater says, "A collector lens is the rear lens of a two-lens condenser. It is next to the light source, therefore collects the light. A converging lens is the front lens of a two-lens condenser. It receives light from the collector lens and converges it to form the spot at the aperture. Either the prismatic lens or the mirror, when used separately, act as both collector and converger, though in some lamps a mirror is used as a collector only, sending the light forward to a single, thin lens in a parallel beam, the said lens acting as a converger.

"I am a bit puzzled by the Bluebook definition of a meniscus lens. I am wondering if this definition was not intended as describing a negative rather than a meniscus lens. The Fifth Edition of the Bluebook, as well as the dictionary, makes no mention of a meniscus lens having either one flat and one concave or two concave surfaces. As I understand the matter, a meniscus lens is one having one flat and one concave surface. If the edges of a lens be thicker than its center, then it will send forward a diverging beam. If the reverse be true, then a converging beam will result."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 51

Several times I have been asked this question: What do you regard as the best procedure to pursue if the film catches fire at the projector aperture? Tell us what you would do.

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

Proof that few of us know it all. My Webster defines meniscus, as applying to optics, as follows "a lens concave on one side and convex on the other; a lens thicker in the middle than elsewhere." What we understand as meniscus in motion picture work is a lens thinner in the middle than at the sides; a lens that will send forward a diverging light beam.

Leo Cimikoski says, "Any projection lens will project a sharp picture at any feasible distance, but will only project a sharp picture of given dimensions at one fixed distance. If projection distance be added, the image dimensions will be increased and, disregarding increased coarseness due to increased magnification, by increasing the working distance of a lens, correspondingly equal sharpness will be attained, correspondingly not meaning equally, of course.

One reply said, "The equivalent focus and the working distance of a lens are increased as either one or the other is increased." Now it is apparent this man was merely mixed on terms. To change the E.F. of a lens, the lens itself must be altered. What this man probably meant to say was that when the working distance is changed, the projection distance must also be changed in order to secure sharp focus; therefore the projected image will be larger.

20TH-FOX WIDENS ITS OUTLET IN AUSTRALIA

Company Is Handling Gratis Distribution in Commonwealth of Film Made Within Country

by CLIFF HOLT

in Melbourne

Purchase by Twentieth Century-Fox (Australasia, Ltd.), Stanley S. Crick and Charles E. Munro of a substantial interest in the circuit controlled by Amalgamated Theatres, Ltd., in New Zealand, puts a new complexion on the marketing of films in the Dominion. Similar to its arrangement in Australia with Hoyts Theatres, Ltd., in which it owns a 51 per cent share-holding, Twentieth Century-Fox will now have a guaranteed and unquestionably a "preferential" outlet in the 65 theatres which have either been owned or controlled by Amalgamated. This makes a total of nearly 140 theatres in the two Dominions in which the Corporation's product presumably comes first.

Walter J. Hutchinson, foreign manager of Twentieth-Century Fox, who is making a survey of theatre business in this country, said the arrangement provided that there would be no foreign domination majority and that control would remain in the hands of British subjects.

M. J. Moodabe will continue to occupy the position of general manager and chairman of directors of Amalgamated. J. P. Moodabe and Mr. Munro will be joint managing directors and Mr. Crick will be on the board.

When reports were first circulated that Amalgamated was prepared to discuss a "consolidation of interests," it was generally thought that an association with Hoyts was the most likely possibility. It is known that Hoyts considered the proposition, and decided to go no further with it; and except indirectly through the fact that Mr. Munro, who is managing director of Hoyts, and Mr. Crick, who is chairman of directors, have personal holdings and supposedly will act as Fox nominees, Hoyts has no other actual connection with the new setup.

If the Amalgamated deal proves to be as successful as the Hoyts purchase in 1930, Twentieth Century-Fox will occupy a position on the Australian and New Zealand markets that even now seems practically unassailable.

Williamson Wins Decision

Already delayed some weeks, the release of "Rose Marie" in the Commonwealth has been held up indefinitely by the decision handed down in the practice court by the chief justice, Sir Frederick Mann, who has found that the rights granted to J. C. Williamson, Ltd., to produce the musical play, "Rose Marie," include rights to prevent exhibition and distribution of a talking picture version of the play.

The question was before the court preliminary to the trial of an action brought by J. C. Williamson, Ltd., to restrain Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from producing and distributing the talking picture, "Rose Marie," and claiming damages.

J. C. Williamson, Ltd., claimed exclusive ownership of production rights in the Commonwealth, New Zealand and South Africa, except as a silent motion picture. Defendants contended that J. C. Williamson's rights did not include production by talking picture.

The judge said that in 1924, when J. C. Williamson, Ltd., obtained its rights, there were two classes of performances, those which people went to hear, and those which they went to see. The word "Picture" in the phrase "motion picture film" conveyed the essential nature of the performance. An audible production of the words of the play was something generically different, and not included in the rights reserved for J. C. Williamson, Ltd., it was said.

It is understood that upon receiving a copy of the judgment, MGM will consider further action in the matter.

Doyle Describes Plan

That he had satisfactorily carried out negotiations for the refinancing of Greater Union Theatres, Ltd., was the highlight of the speech delivered by the managing director, Stuart F. Doyle, at the annual meeting of Amalgamated Pictures, Ltd. The plan was now under consideration, he said, and if the board considered it practicable, it would be brought before shareholders.

Publication of the balance sheet showed that Greater Union Theatres' profits to June 30 last were £15,895 ($79,475). A loss was made by the distribution business chiefly because of the expense incurred in the launching of new British product, but theatre results had been maintained.

Handling Film Gratis

One of the most significant developments in the brief but turbulent career of the Australian producing business is the gesture by Twentieth Century-Fox to handle free of cost the physical distribution in the commonwealth of the locally-made film, "The Flying Doctor." It is estimated by Sir Hugh Denison, chairman of the directors of the producing company, National Productions, Ltd., that Fox's gesture will save his organization in the vicinity of £12,000. In a public acknowledgment of Fox's generosity he said that "this astonishing gesture on the part of an American picture corporation certainly shows beyond any possible doubt where Twentieth Century-Fox stands in support of the Australian producing industry."

"The Flying Doctor" was made by National Productions, Ltd., in association with Gaumont-British, with Charles Farrell as star, Miles Mander as director, a Gaumont-British scenarist, and Gaumont-British technicians and cameramen.

Suburban Tokyo Theatre-Minded

by H. TOMINAGA

in Tokyo

Shibuya, the newly-risen show-town of Tokyo, covering a wide area surrounding the neighborhood of the Shibuya electric railway station and Dogenzaka, a fashionable quarter, now is going to be another amusement hub of the Capital comparable with Marunouchi, Shinjuku and Asakusa.

In keeping with the appearance of modernized large shops in the street having Dogenzaka as its center, the finely citified Shibuya is on its way to become a glamorous show center where until a few years ago there were only half a dozen of second and subsequent-run theatres.

When Toyoko Eiga Gekijo, a magnificent four-story film theatre under management of Takarazuka interests made its appearance at the suburban part of the city, Shochiku began flinging down the gauntlet against Takarazuka by planning to build in the same quarter a big cinema that stands right up with the Toyoko theatre.

Thus, Shibuya now will see the two de luxe cinemas standing out in bold relief against other houses of lesser category. At the same time some thirty theatres in Shibuya Ward are reported organizing a Shibuya Showmen's League to attain systematic control over the pictures to be distributed, to prevent disputes that would arise from individual efforts to monopolize outstanding pictures, and to give exhibitors equal opportunity to service the steadily growing patronage.

The time is now ripe for such a showmen's league, with the opening of these two big theatres under the auspices of Dogenzaka Cinema, Shuraku-za, Shibuya Cinema, Shibuya Gekijo and Shibuya Nikkatsu, which are striving to make the big Shibuya amusement center so impressive as to surpass other established show towns, such as Marunouchi, Shinjuku and Asakusa.

The movement toward the suburban areas is a logical one with the rapid increase of Tokyo's population. Such districts as Shibuya, Shinjuka and Koto are natural fashionable resorts and show towns. Probably a few years suburban Tokyo will have a greater number of deluxe cinemas than the urban districts.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN MANHATTAN: Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea—Good mystery-comedy drama. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 29-31.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—This was the first picture of our new theatre which we have just completed. A great many of you no doubt have read articles in this section regarding foreign pictures playing at the Owl Theatre in Grand Rapids. Well, we have another theatre just outside Grand Rapids, playing the very best of pictures. We are making an effort to play only the highest and cleanest pictures. We hope that you will follow us from week to week. This picture went over very well indeed, as this town has a great many church people and we have to be careful what we play. Deeds was just what they wanted, as we had no trouble in filling the house. Of course, this was the opening picture. 12 reels; good print. Running time, 118 minutes. Played November 10-11.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur, Lionel Stander—The best picture we have shown thus far this season. Many of the boys stopped and told me how much they enjoyed it, which is rather unusual, our audience being much more prompt to voice disapproval than approval of films. Our new warden attended the show and was pleased to hear the continuous roar of laughter from the men, and he added no little bit of his own to the swell! The courtroom scene when they are trying to "bug" ("declare insane" to you) Cooper was perfect entertainment for our audience, and Lionel Stander deserves a big hand for his work in the film. Thank you, Mr. Capra, and thanks, Columbia! Running time, 118 minutes. Played November 7.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

TRAPPED BY TELEVISION: Mary Astor, Lyle Talbot—Agreeably surprised with this. Would rate it better than average program show. Good story and enough comedy relief to make it all around entertainment.—L. V. Bergtold, Kasson Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

UNKNOWN RANGER, THE: Robert Allen, Martha Tibbetts, Hal Talioferro—Bob Allen seems at home in this type picture and if he is given as good pictures in the future as this one is he should be a favorite. Hal Talioferro should have special mention. His little skit as a singing cowboy made a hit. It was all too short. It is hoped that he is seen and heard often. Running time, 58 minutes. Played November 6-7.—N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

UNKNOWN RANGER, THE: Robert Allen, Martha Tibbetts—First time to play Bob Allen and was surprised at business. Business good. Seems that Allen can be quite a favorite. especially with the kiddies and colored patronage. Am looking forward to another one like this. Played October 17.—C. J. Hubley, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Tallulah, La. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

CAPTAIN BLOOD: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Guy Kibbee, Robert Barrat, Frank McGlynn—This one came to us reputed to be as good as "Mutiny on the Bounty." We were not disappointed. Plenty of action made it go over big here. This was the first time we saw Errol Flynn, but it certainly will not be the last. Olivia de Havilland advances one more notch toward the rating of Hollywood's most beautiful actress. talented and most refreshing. All the character parts are well played, with special mention of Guy Kibbee and Frank McGlynn. Running time, 111 minutes. Played November 11.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Rockefeller Center, New York

CASE OF THE VELVET CLAWS, THE: Warren William, Claire Dodd—The biggest mystery to this particular case is where they got the title. We found absolutely no connection of title and story. Such as it is the picture is entertaining, but had no drawing power. Played November 13-14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—An interesting picturization of the drama behind commercial aviation. Here it's the China Clipper that serves as the background for a more or less routine Warner air plot. Played October 30-31.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—A corking good comedy. Hilarious sequences. Played October 23-24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Gaumont British

EAST MEETS WEST: George Arliss, Lucie Mannheim—Owing to much adverse criticism we were not eager to play this picture. We were happily surprised. It seemed to please everyone and it is splendid entertainment with a cast all to be desired. Where Arliss is liked give your patrons a treat. Play it. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 9-10.—N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

Liberty

BORN TO GAMBLE: H. B. Warner, Onslow Stevens, Maxine Doyle—Very good picture. Little different from the regular run of pictures, but no business. Recording very poor and very much spotted. Had to be adjusting volume at all times to get the proper reproduction with the screening. Running time, eight reels. Played November 6-7.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BONNIE SCOTLAND: Laurel and Hardy—Drew well and pleased well, although some of the Scotch crowd were disappointed, having been misled by the title. Played October 20-22.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

DEVIL DOLL, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan—This was double billed with "Oh, Susanna." Business on this program was excellent. "The Devil's Doll" is quite a picture and should be credited with part of the draw.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore—Those who saw it thought it a very fine picture. Weather was bad but even then it seems that we should have done more business on a picture like this. Running time, 105 minutes. Played November 8-9.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore—An excellent picture well cast with some important players. Very small house, though, on second night. Played November 15-16.—L. A, Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer—Our patrons expressed disappointment in this. They seemed to be expecting a Ziegfeld Follies show. Overlong running time made it seem all the more drawn out, so that the lapses between the really excellent musical numbers overshadowed the livelier moments in their estimation. Played November 1-3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE: Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck—Many walkouts and complaints on this one. Story material pretty well worn out. Played November 6-7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NIGHT AT THE OPERA, A: Marx Brothers—A score or more of writeups picked at random from this department indicated that this one would be a typical Marx (not Karl) production, pleasing their own particular "fans" and boring those who consider the boys "silly." (That's euphonious at that!) We were not surprised, therefore, to get a similiar reaction here. The general criticism was that someone made a big mistake in winding up the nuttiest of pictures with a grand opera sequence. It was like tacking a reel of Ethel Barrymore onto a Laurel and Hardy comedy. People who like Marx humor just don't go for "Il Travatore," etc. Hope that the boys don't use a scene from "Macbeth" to climax "A Day at the Races!" Running time, 96 minutes. Played November 14.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

PICCADILLY JIM: Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans, Eric Blore—The best Montgomery picture in some time. Eric Blore made a hit also. He is well liked. Played November 8-9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WIFE VS. SECRETARY: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy—We did about average business on this, but did not click like Robert Taylor.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

BAR 20 RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—A good western but too short. Should be double featured or it takes too many shorts to fill in the program. These Cassidy pictures are all good for small towns. Running time, seven reels. Played November 4.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MILLIONS IN THE AIR: John Howard, Wendy Barrie—A swell show, good enough for any night including Sunday. It's funny and entertaining but no business. Can't see why they don't come to see a program like this. Maybe it was the opposition of the Legion Dance and Floor Show. We know it was. Running time, eight reels. Played November 11.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball. S. D. Small town patronage.

MOON'S OUR HOME, THE: Margaret Sullavan, Henry Fonda—Expected more from this. I believe Sullavan over-acted her part. Her peculiarities came too close together and were tiresome before the show was over. The trailer brought in a good house the first night, but almost nothing the next evening. Had a few favorable comments. however, and no decided kicks.—L. V. Bergtold, Kasson Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

MY AMERICAN WIFE: Francis Lederer. Ann Sothern—The first 1936-37 picture from Paramount for me and if this is a fair average we are going to get a grand lineup from that exchange. Although not particularly strong B. O. it is outstanding entertainment. The kind that will please all classes. Here is one exhibitors should really step on as they have exceptional merchandise to offer when this goes on their screens.—L. V. Bergtold, Kasson Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE, THE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda, Fred MacMurray—This small town natural took old man zero for a ride. I adopted the policy of holding off a number of the best pictures for the bad weather season and the returns on this picture certainly gave the November overdraft a jolt. Wish we could have one as strong for each month. Played November 8-10.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

WIFE VS. SECRETARY: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Jean Harlow—Pleased all who saw it. Gable don't click at my box office like some of the other stars. Played October 2-3.—Elmer Hughes, Elward Theatre, Mesquite, Nev. General patronage.

YOURS FOR THE ASKING: George Raft, Dolores Costello Barrymore—Raft in satisfactory role, but Costello very much miscast. The three comedians saved the story. Had no drawing power. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 4-5.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Republic

GIRL FROM MANDALAY, THE: Kay Linaker, Conrad Nagel—A good average melodrama for the average house that does not cater to highbrows. There is heart interest and genuine thrills, good continuity. I was much impressed with the work of Kay Linaker, who has an appealing personality that stands out. With a proper story and good direction, this girl should go places. This was double billed with "To Mary—With Love" and held the attention of the audience nicely.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

OH, SUSANNA!: Gene Autry, Ann Rutherford, Smiley Burnette—This is the first of the new season's Gene Autry pictures. While the plot is the routine Western plot, it is the trimmings in the form of the special musical numbers and the comedy of Smiley Burnette that puts this above the average Western. Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette make a fine team. This was double billed with "The Devil Doll." Business on this program was excellent. I credit Gene Autry picture with the major part of the draw, although "The Devil Doll is quite a picture and should be credited with part of the draw.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RKO Radio

BRIDE WALKS OUT, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond—Excellent players make the most of a jolly plot and the customers were well pleased with their evening's entertainment. Played November 11-12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BUNKER BEAN: Owen Davis, Jr., Louise Latimer—Amusing light comedy fare that must be supported to get the customers in. Played October 30-31.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DANIEL BOONE: George O'Brien, Heather Angel—Satisfacory show of the pioneer type. I made the mistake of playing too close to "The Last of the Mohicians." Did not draw anywhere near what I expected, probably for that reason.—L. V. Bergtold, Kasson Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

MARY OF SCOTLAND: Katharine Hepburn, Fredric March—A well produced picture of the type that never means much to us. We still can't get our people interested in royalty for entertainment. But for spots where they do like this sort of thing no doubt this will prove valuable merchandise. Played October 18-19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

M'LISS: Anne Shirley, John Beal—A good picture. Anne Shirley appealing and John Beal fine opposite her. Played October 28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

M'LISS: Anne Shirley, John Beal—An excellent picture, very natural and human. Anne Shirley did good work. A very entertaining show. Good for any small town or country. Played November 14.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Quite satisfactory for this team. The songs as orchestrated and sung in the picture sound much better than when others play them. The orchestra always seems to be outdoing itself on these Astaire-Rogers musicals, and this time is no exception. Played October 25-26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

POSITION WANTED
MANAGER — Contemplating change. I use black ink only—references excellent—booking—exploitation — general theatre management—TOPS. If you need a real MANAGER to start about December 10th, address

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

WALKING ON AIR: Gene Raymond, Ann Sothern—Strange as it seems, playing this as we did next after "The Great Ziegfeld," it caused many to remark they liked it better than that big special. And it is a very enjoyable piece of screen fun at that. Played November 4-5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WALKING ON AIR: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Good picture. Acting fine. Satisfactory all the way through. A story of high society, but attractive for any kind of patronage. Played October 31.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

AMBASSADOR BILL (Re-issue): Will Rogers—Played against local night football. Will still pull better than average, but not S. R. O. Fair "biz" for both nights. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 12-13.—C. J. Hubley, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Tallulah, La. Small town and rural patronage.

AMBASSADOR BILL (Re-issue): Will Rogers—They still flock to see Will Rogers. He has always been a sure bet here at the box office. Sorry he didn't live to make more pictures. Above average business. Played November 4-5.—Elmer Hughes, Elward Theatre, Mesquite, Nev. Small town patronage.

BORDER PATROLMAN, THE: George O'Brien, Polly Ann Young—Probably a little better than the average Western. Very good for small town and country theatres. Drew fair attendance. Played November 7.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

CAPTAIN JANUARY: Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbee, Slim Summerville—Shirley is still strong. She is well liked everywhere she is played. One can not go wrong with this little star. Nine reels, good print. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 13-14.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE RACE TRACK: Warner Oland, Helen Wood—I always do better than average on Chan series. Oland's cunning way of solving crimes usually clicks. Although rain, my patrons came out to see him. Business fair. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 3-4.—C. J. Hubley, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Tullulah, La. Small town and rural patronage.

CRIME OF DR. FORBES, THE: Gloria Stuart, Robert Kent, Henry Armetta—A good half of a double bill. A little too mild to stand alone. Good performances by little known cast. Armetta fine as usual. Played October 23-24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FIRST BABY, THE: Shirley Deane, Johnny Downs—Swell little program picture which pleased young and old alike. It is one of those likable stories with so much down-to-earth humanness in it that you cannot help liking it. Running time, 74 minutes. Played November 6-7.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GIRLS' DORMITORY: Simone Simon, Herbert Marshall, Ruth Chatterton—The new personality that Fox seems to expect a lot from. She has a winsome way with her that is attractive. The picture did not amount to much and the fact remains that there was no furore over Miss Simone as far as we could ascertain. No comment at all about her and that for a new star is unusual. So far as box office with her is concerned, that is in the future.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GIRLS' DORMITORY: Simone Simon, Herbert Marshall, Ruth Chatterton—Was scared of this one, but it turned out to be to my mind a most interesting picture and have heard many favorable comments. I question its power for rural patronage, but it should do well in the larger centers. Herbert Marshall's acting was superb and Simone has great possibilities. Business only fair. Thanks Jello for Jack Benny's timely broadcast. Played November 10-12.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

HUMAN CARGO: Claire Trevor, Brian Donlevy—Good entertainment that wouldn't pull them in at all. Poorest Saturday business for several months.—L. V. Bergtold, Kasson Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

MESSAGE TO GARCIA, A: Wallace Beery, John Boles, Barbara Stanwyck—Beery will always draw them in regardless of picture. But this picture was one of Beery's best. John Boles deserves a hand also in this one. Played this one against heavy competition and still came out on top. Don't miss a safe bet. Grab this one. Business above average. Played November 6-7.—Elmer Hughes, Elward Theatre, Mesquite, Nev. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Robert Taylor, Loretta Young—Exceptionally fine picture that didn't draw anywhere near average business. A nearby "walkathon" is partly responsible for business being off on almost everything this fall. I would call this one of the best all-around productions of 1936.—L. V. Bergtold, Kasson Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—Excellent picture to above average business. Played October 27-29.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—An excellent picture that drew well and was well received. Acting was fine and the whole result most entertaining. Played October 24.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou, Patsy Kelly—One of the best musicals of the year. Alice Faye as usual well liked. Menjou only sore spot. Patsy Kelly swell. Business fair. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 1-2.—C. J. Hubley, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Tallulah, La. Small town and rural patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou, Ritz Brothers—Musical sequences are fine. Comedy is good and story—well there just ain't much! Too bad, for otherwise this might have been a wow. Alice Faye very lovely and does much towards holding it up. Ritz Brothers funny if you like the type. Played October 21-22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou, Gregory Ratoff, Ritz Brothers—With Gregory Ratoff yelling in very broken English and the rest of the cast shouting at top speed and acting too foolish to be funny, it is very hard to know what it is all about. Just one big noise. The famed Ritz Brothers were not bad in some of their dance numbers but when they tried to be Marxian they were a pain in the neck. Some of the yokels liked the picture, but the townspeople said the opposite. I agree with them. Business poorest in eight months. Played October 30-31.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

STAR FOR A NIGHT: Jane Darwell, Claire Trevor, Arline Judge—The old trite story of the lady making good on the stage, this time for her mother. Arline Judge and Jane Darwell saved the picture from mediocrity.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TO MARY—WITH LOVE: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy—A very bad case of excessive footage to arrive at the climax. Too long drawn out, was the comment, and too slow paced. The two stars did what they could with their roles. No criticism there, but it dragged in the middle.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TO MARY—WITH LOVE: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy—If you can get your patrons to sit through the first four reels they may get some measure of enjoyment out of the last few. We had more walkouts than on any picture ever played here. Nevertheless we did above average business, which we attribute to the drawing power of the leading players. Played October 13-15.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

TO MARY—WITH LOVE: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy, Ian Hunter—Rather long drawn out with some beautiful parts, especially at the end when the devoted friend tries to reunite the estranged couple when the wife is seeking a divorce. One long, mushy love scene. Well, it is pretty hard to keep part of the audience from snickering and making kissing noises. The film would be improved for general audiences if most of that scene was eliminated. The best performance in this is to be credited to Ian Hunter, who plays the part of the devoted friend. Business on this below average for us.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

WHITE FANG: Michael Whalen, Jean Muir, Lightning the Dog—A splendid picture but too many dark scenes at the beginning of the feature. Jack London's stories always are good and this is no exception. Should please any kind of audience. Running time, eight reels. Played November 8.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

United Artists

AMATEUR GENTLEMAN, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Elissa Landi—The usual flop at the box office as we expect on all English made pictures. Very slow tempo kills it in our house and the period setting didn't help any. Played November 10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GAY DESPERADO, THE: Nino Martini, Ida Lupino—A good audience picture. Good comedy. Good singing. Just a little too much chatter in it. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 8-10.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Henry Wilcoxon, Bruce Cabot, Heather Angel—A generally excellent picture of its type. Unfortunately it had little appeal for our ladies and they were conspicuous by their absence. Naturally, then, business was under average. Played November 13-14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Henry Wilcoxon, Bruce Cabot, Heather Angel—Very fine production and well liked. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 5-7.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

Universal

FOR THE SERVICE: Buck Jones, Beth Marion—Unless Jones gets better story material and direction his westerns are going to rank below a good many of the other series now available. I haven't been really satisfied with a single Jones on the 1935-36 lineup. This is worse than average.—L. V. Bergtold, Kasson Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

GIRL ON THE FRONT PAGE, THE: Edmund Lowe, Gloria Stuart—Good comedy. Running time, 71 minutes. Played November 5-7.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

PAROLE: Henry Hunter, Ann Preston—Very interesting story concerning easy parole. Did about average business on Bargain Nights. Would rate it a good program picture.—L. V. Bergtold, Kasson Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

PAROLE: Henry Hunter, Ann Preston—A good action play. One of the better ones except for a rather sloppily sentimental ending that appeared to be more fiction than fact. Played October 27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SEA SPOILERS: John Wayne, Nan Gray—Entertaining picture in the program class. I played this brand new but didn't think the recording was up to par. Lots of laughs and plenty of thrills, so makes a very satisfactory Friday-Saturday program.—L. V. Bergtold, Kasson Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

SUTTER'S GOLD: Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes, Lee Tracy—In spite of several adverse reports on this, I say this is an exceptionally fine picture, one no exhibitor will have to hide out on. The critics panned this, partly because the story is somewhat disconnected. I did not find it seriously that way. We are getting too many historical pictures lately, but this came before most of the others, so can't complain to Universal.—L. B. Bergtold, Kasson Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

BIG NOISE, THE: Guy Kibbee, Warren Hull—This is another version of a George Arliss picture, either "The Millionaire" or "The Working Man," where the president of a big concern goes away for his health and becomes the partner in a small business with a man who falls in love with his daughter. This is given a new twist. Guy Kibbee does full justice to the part of the millionaire. This kind of a story, if properly done, always pleases middle class audiences. This was doubled with "Public Enemy's Wife" and made a very pleasing program which drew above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GIVE ME YOUR HEART: Kay Francis, George Brent, Roland Young—We found this picture hard to sell. Of its type it is very good and inasmuch as it deals with a seduction that is not offensive you know just how skillfully it was directed. You have to hand it to Kay Francis for her work in this type of picaure, and were we glad to see Roland Young again with his skillful touches of comedy. For me I think Kay is the tops in a role that she can sink her teeth into and she certainyly did in this picture. Again I want to acclaim the director and the cast. They were the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HOT MONEY: Ross Alexander, Beverly Roberts—Somewhat screwy story, but Alexander's personality got it across to fair results. No box office strength. Played October 20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JAILBREAK: Craig Reynolds, Jnne Travis—Average melodrama.—L. I. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PUBLIC ENEMY'S WIFE: Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay—An above the average G Men type of picture that holds its interest from start to end. This was doubled with "The Big Noise" and made a very pleasing program. Business on this was above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

DISPUTED DECISIONS: New World of Sport Series—Most interesting. Only objection is that it isn't long enough, and that's one place there can be no dispute! The Broker's Tip, Head Play Derby finish, the famous "Medwick" fruit shower at Detroit, the Army-Notre football game, etc., in slow motion shots which are sure to reawaken the respective disputes. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

GLEE WORMS: Color Rhapsodies—As good a color cartoon as one can ask for.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HUNTER'S PARADISE: New World of Sport Series—Good action short showing various wild animal hunts.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LOONEY BALLOONISTS: Scrappy Cartoons—A good black and white cartoon and average.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MOVIE MANIACS: Three Stooges—A very good comedy in the manner of these Three Stooges. Kept the house in gales of laughter.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TOURING THE SPORT WORLD: New World of Sport Series—Distributor sent us this one as a last minute substitute for "Football Flashes" and it scored a touchdown, kicked the try-for-a-point and pleased every man in the crowd! Can't complain when they do that, can be? This is a good addition for any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WHOOPS, I'M AN INDIAN: Broadway Comedies—Three Stooges sure click and bring the house down.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Educational

COLLEGE CAPERS: Song and Comedy Hits—A dandy singing comedy short with the Cabin Kids. These little colored kids certainly do make hits here. Running time, 12 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

FOOTBALL: Paul Terry-Toons—Very good and just fine for this time of the year, as there is so much about football. Running time, six minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

Paramount

GREEDY HUMPTY DUMPTY: Color Classics—Another good story of the Colored Classic Series. Running time, seven minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MOANS AND GROANS: Paul Terry-Toons—Very funny and liked by all. These are really very good cartoons as they seem to have a story with them. Running time, six minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

PEACEFUL RELATIONS: Tim and Irene—The most laughable two-reeler we had for some time. The house is in an uproar all the way through. Good, all we can say. Give us more of this kind of laugh getters. Thanks, Tim and Irene. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

RODEO DAYS: Song and Comedy Hits—A good song story. As title implies, it's a western setting.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SEEING NELLIE HOME: Song and Comedy Hits—Song Hit story liked by the entire audience. Very well done, wonderful singing. It will go over big in a small town. Running time, 12 minutes.—Albert Refferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

EARLY BIRD AND THE WORM, THE: Harman-Ising—Very good color.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NEW SHOES: Tabloid Musicals—Just another novelty musical reel.—Will get by.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NO PLACE LIKE ROME: Musical Comedies—Not on a par with Metro's other shorts. A shot or two from Ben Hur. No one in particular in the cast. Singing mediocre. Just a musical.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PIRATE PARTY ON CATALINA ISLS: Musical Comedies—When better two-reel shorts are made they'll have to outdo this one. Where are you going to get a more beautiful background than the Wrigley Island, more devasting (I like that!) femininity or better color—figurative and literal—than this one has? Excellent! Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

PUP'S PICNIC: Harman-Ising—Hilarious funny cartoon. Fast action throughout.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TWO LITTLE PUPS: Harman-Ising—Here is one of the grandest little colored cartoons we ever used. The cartoonist who did this certainly must have known dogs, their moods and oddities. It was swell. Running time, eight minutes.—Hay & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ACCENT ON GIRLS: Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears—A great musical, all right, but Paramount must have had this hidden some place inasmuch as the recording sounded like we used to have them when the talkies started very bad. Running time, one reel. —Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

BETTY BOOP AND THE LITTLE KING: Betty Boop Cartoons—An excellent Betty Boop.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BRIDGE AHOY!: Popeye the Sailor—Good cartoon—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HAPPY YOU AND MERRY ME: Betty Boop Cartoons—A very fine Betty Boop. These reels are improving.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HAWAIIAN BIRDS: Color Classics—A very fine colored cartoon. Color and depth of photography excellent.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MUSIC IN THE MORGAN MANNER: Headliners—An excellent band act.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NEVER KICK A WOMAN: Popeye the Sailor—One of the best Popeyes and that is saying something.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NOT NOW: Betty Boop Cartoons—Just a fair cartoon. Good filler on any program. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

RAH, RAH FOOTBALL: Headliners—A dandy short. College tunes played and sung the way you like to hear them. Running time, 11 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

WE DID IT: Betty Boop Cartoons—A very good cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHAT NO SPINACH?: Popeye the Sailor—Average Popeye. Short on running time.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N H. General patronage.

YANKEE DOODLE RHAPSODY: Ferde Grofe and His Orchestra—A good orchestral number. Suitable for patriotic booking, although not necessarily out of place for any other time.—L. I. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RKO Radio

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 2: Not especially liked. Subjects run too long. Running time, 21 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 3: This one is free of political propaganda, at least, but we had several walkouts.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 3: The story of the President and the White House. Had particularly the same thing in Pathe News.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NEVER CATCH THE RABBIT: Sports with Bill Corum Series—Dog racing provides the motive for this okay sports reel.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H: General patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

FILMING THE FEMININE HEADLINERS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—A pretty good number from this popular series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FILMING THE FEMININE HEADLINERS: Adventures with the Newsreel Cameraman—Very good ladies' short subject.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FOX MOVIETONE NEWS, NO. 8: Newsreels are still being made but none like Fox with Lowell Thomas. Our new theatre in Coopersville enjoys it. Running time, 12 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

NIGHT LIFE OF EUROPE: Adventure with the Newsreel Cameraman—This one-reeler brings to the American screen all the gaiety of living in all of the European countries, and, oh boy, do they live. O. K. Full of music and Follies girls. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

NIGHT LIFE OF EUROPE: Adventure with the Newsreel Cameraman—An average piece of entertainment. Some fair dancing picked up out of European night clubs by the newsreel cameraman.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WEST INDIES CRUISE: Magic Carpet Series—Okay travelogue.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

ALASKA SWEEPSTAKES: Oswald Cartoons—Average cartoon antics.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DOCTOR OSWALD: Oswald Cartoons—A good cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PLAYING FOR FUN: Mentone Musical Comedies—Okay subject in this series. Vaudeville acts good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

COLLEGE DADS: Leon Janney—The much older Leon Janney we now see in this good short sings and dances agreeably. He should be cast more often. L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HARRY RESER AND HIS ESKIMOS: Melody Masters—A very excellent band act.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

I'D LOVE TO TAKE ORDERS FROM YOU: Merrie Melodies—A very neat color cartoon that will please.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JACK DENNY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A bad print spoiled a fairly good short for us. The number "Flowers for Madame" was the highlight, while the dancing team was just the opposite. Perhaps we have been spoiled by Astaire, Rogers, Powell, et al. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SONG OF THE NATION, THE: Broadway Brevities—A good color short of a serious nature. The story of the writing of the "Star Spangled Banner." Book with a comedy feature for best results.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

GOING WEST ON PARADE: Bud and Ben—Very good three-reel Western. Plenty of action and comedy. Running time, three reels—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

25 Pictures Provided For President's Cruise

Twenty-five pictures from eight companies were available for President Franklin D. Roosevelt when he sailed on the Indianapolis bound for Buenos Aires. The pictures were shipped directly by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in New York, to the Brooklyn Navy Yard where they were stored for the Chief Executive's use.

The pictures and the companies distributing them are as follows:

Columbia: "Theodora Goes Wild," "Meet Nero Wolfe" and "Legion of Terror."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer: "Mad Holiday," "Tarzan Escapes" and "Our Relations."

Paramount: "Poppy," "Rhythm on the Range" and "Yours for the Asking."

RKO: "Woman Rebels," "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford" and "Follow the Fleet."

Twentieth Century-Fox: "King of the Royal Mounted," "Pigskin Parade," "Under Your Spell," "Wild Brian Kent" and "Can This Be Dixie?"

United Artists: "Dodsworth," "Come and Get It" and "The Garden of Allah."

Universal: "Luckiest Girl in the World," "Flying Hostess" and "Love Letters of a Star."

Warner: "Three Men on a Horse," "Charge of the Light Brigade" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Blackwell Will Distribute

Homer L. Blackwell, head of the Independent Poster Exchange in Kansas City, has formed Independent Productions Company there to handle independent product in western Missouri and Kansas. Mr. Blackwell's poster office is now located in the old Paramount Building.

Lloyd Plans Two a Year

Harold Lloyd will make two comedies annually for Paramount, instead of one as originally provided, the comedian revealed this week. His first picture will start in a month. The second, recently purchased, will be "Walls of Jericho."

Aalberg Named to Council

John O. Aalberg has been appointed to represent RKO-Radio Studios on Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Science Research Council in place of Carl Dreher, who recently resigned as RKO sound director.

Mexicans Protest Censorship Plan

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Mexico's new picture censorship plan has hit a snag in the form of protests from the industry, the native as well as the foreign branch, to President Lazaro Cardenas. The protestors ask that the chief executive act promptly to straighten out a curious situation that has developed since the appointment of the first national board. The situation is that of a double censorship, by the Mexico city government, and by the national board, which the industry claims causes trouble and expense. Officials say they do not object to censorship but they ask the president to order that it be exclusively in the hands of one or the other board. Both boards collect fees.

The industry assured the President that it favors the spirit of the national board—to afford a single censorship for all Mexico.

Mexico's first co-operative society of movie workers, which was long in organization, has begun functioning in Mexico City. It is the Co-operative Society of Mexican Motion Picture Workers For Film Production and Exploitation. Its headquarters are at Avenida Isabel la Catolica, No. 7, Mexico City. The society is receiving government assistance through the ministry of national economy and is arranging to produce several pictures in the near future.

Production costs of pictures made in Mexico by Mexicans has risen with the elevation of the quality of the films. Five or six years ago, a feature could be made for about $18,500. Now, the cost is from $28,000 to $30,000. Producers say they have found that it is more profitable to put more money into production for better stories, players, directors, sound and photography.

Representation of organized labor on the national censorship board, on the ground that all movie workers, from directors and players to assistant cameramen, are unionized, is asked of the ministry of the interior by the Confederation of Mexican Workers and Peasants, the country's strongest work organization. The Confederation further argues that as the movies are largely supported by the proletariat, representation in censoring is imperative.

Foreign picture distributors and Mexican producers who fail to present their pictures for review by the national censors will be fined and otherwise penalized, warns the ministry of the interior.

Mexican directors have organized a guild with headquarters at Avenida Juarez, No. 40, Mexico City, where all members of the American movie industry visiting the Mexican capital are welcome. The president of the guild is Fernando de Fuentes who made "Alla en el Rancho Grande" ("There on the Big Ranch"). The English name of this picture has been made "Way Down on the Rancho Grande." It is being fitted with English titles for distribution in the United States.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

JUST ONE MORE MONTH

Only December remains in the Quigley Awards competitions for the year of 1936.

And then there will be just a matter of weeks before the Judging Committee for the Grand Awards determines the theatremen to be rewarded with the thrilling United Airlines Hollywood sky trip, to be feted there by the top names of the industry. It is an honor to attract showmen everywhere, and how well they know it.

To those already voted the monthly plaques that makes them eligible for the Grand Awards, we extend every good wish, and to those who have not yet qualified, an earnest invitation to try again before the December race is run.

THE ONE THING IN COMMON

Your Round Table is the department of and for the manager, and that means theatremen in all classifications, first, second or last runs, de luxe, neighborhood, big city, small town, neighborhood or what have you. Whatever a member has to say, whatever his contribution may be, his efforts are welcomed to these pages regardless of his situation. There are no classifications nor divisions. An assistant's report is studied as carefully as the division manager's.

All of which is set down in answer to the signed letter from a member in a last-run, who classifies himself as a "forgotten manager struggling for the skim milk of the business." He feels that subsequents have little in common with ace houses.

We cannot agree.

While the obstacles in the way of totally effective advertising and exploitation campaigns in the last-runs cannot be casually pushed aside, there is no reason to believe that a showman is handicapped essentially because he does not have a first-run background to make his efforts stand out.

Talent is where you find it and in showbusiness best expressed by the man who through his determination and ingenuity can, despite his handicaps, keep the folks lined up at the box office in profitable numbers. That's the one thing in common all theatremen have to deal with, and the ways and means employed by the first-runs are often adaptable to the subsequents (and vice versa), as affirmed by the countless campaigns built upon by theatremen in all classifications from ideas published in the Round Table pages.

"It's not where you are; it's what you do" is as true today as when it was first uttered. The manager who can turn the skim milk of theatre patronage into box office cream need never fear oblivion.

"P. T." SURE WOULD

To the venerable graybeards who plaintively voice the query, "What's become of the old-time, big-time sockeroo ballyhoo?" one answer might be made and that is, a fat chunk of the old-time bally, all polished and smartened by the Charlie Einfeld forces, can be found these days zooming around the country dressed up as that Warner Bros. "Gold Diggers of 1937" air stunt. What the boys in the field are doing to welcome the Hollywood contingent and, of course, to build up the advance of the picture is expressed nicely, for instance, by the mighty exploitation shells touched off by Howard Waugh and Bill Hendricks in Memphis, the story of which is carried on a following page.

The "Gold Diggers" air journey is not so much a triumphal advertising tour for the picture as it is a triumph for soundly conceived and smartly executed ballyhoo. Even P. T. Barnum would hail it.

RECOGNIZING ACCOMPLISHMENT

To George Nealans, recently stepped up from assistant manager of the Alabama Theatre, in Birmingham, to become general manager of the Waters Theatre Co., in that district—

And to Douglas George, formerly manager of the Parker Theatre, in Darby, Pa., promoted to publicity director for 45 out-of-town Warner houses in the Philadelphia zone, a rising vote of hearty congratulations.

Among other accomplishments, Nealans has gained wide fame for his Mickey Mouse Club activities and George has scored sufficiently in his previous situation to well merit the attention of the Warner executives.

In the case of the above Round Tablers, as in many others advanced to bigger jobs, it is comforting to know their records of fine showmanship in the field have been so fittingly recognized.

More power to them.

From the pre-holiday and Yuletide campaigns reported by members and set down on following pages, it looks very much like a "warm" December and a very "black" Christmas.

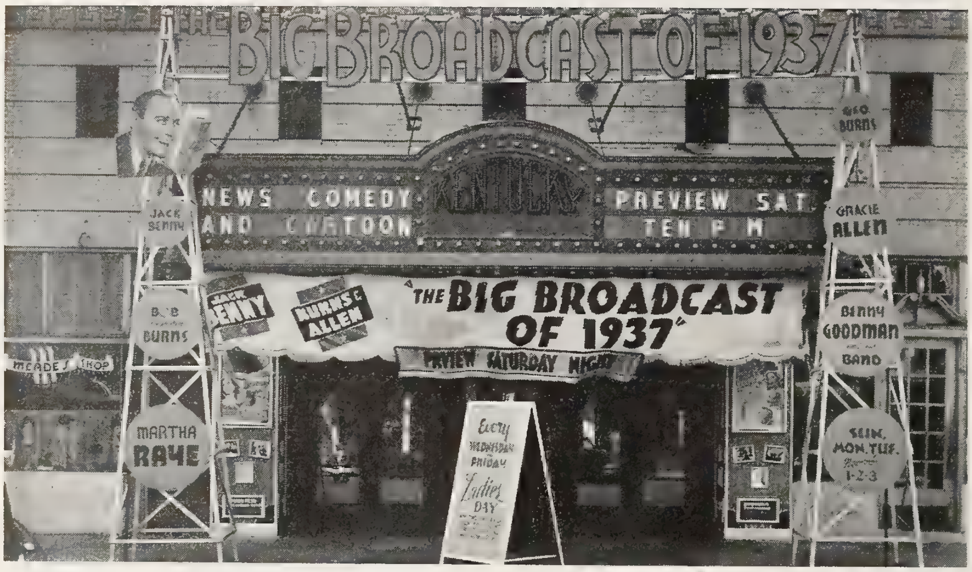
20-Foot Radio Towers Erected By Howard on "Big Broadcast"



Most unusual was Hal Howard's front on "Big Broadcast" at the Kentucky, Henderson, Ky., the standout being two 20-foot towers built of one-by-two's and placed out on the curb. Across the title and attached to both towers were many varicolored lights which supplied illumination at night, and floodlight from across the street focused more attention. For further effect the strings of lights were hooked to the regular sign flasher. Smaller towers painted aluminum were used in the same manner for inner lobby display.

Street Broadcast Sells "Pigskin Parade" for Grady

Through tieup with local druggist, Hal Grady, Palace Theatre, Lubbock, Texas, for "Pigskin Parade" planted a street broadcast made from front of store, whereby announcer stopped people asking them various questions pertaining to football. To those correctly answering, guest tickets were allotted.

Avalanche-Journal also planted ten questions in their classified section, with tickets going to those submitting correct answers to either paper office or theatre. Winners' names were later published in paper together with answers.

For his lobby decoration week ahead, Hal used large cutout football with cast, playdates and picture copy (see photo). Ten footballs carrying title and playdates were kicked into stands at local game with announcement made over p.a. system that all catching them and presenting them at stand would receive tickets to show. Grady reports plenty of fun and excitement with everybody trying to grab for footballs.

Entire staff wore football uniforms with helmets and breast bands, giant passes to college coaches were delivered by Western Union boys through main streets, and coaches and all players were introduced from stage opening night.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Radio Plays Big Part In "Desperado" Date

Taking full advantage of the mixed population in San Antonio, Jack Chalman and Wm. O'Donnell of the Aztec Theatre used both Spanish and English to stage a thorough campaign for "The Gay Desperado." Starting six days in advance, the picture was plugged several times each day over both the local radio stations and the national hookups. A number of programs featuring Mexican music tied in closely with "Desperado" and gave full credits with play dates.

In addition to several Mexican youths in costume distributing special heralds in concentrated areas, the management used the Interstate Circuit ballyhoo truck covered with Spanish and English copy on either side to visit every school and auditorium in the city. The leading hotels placed tinted 40 x 60's in their lobbies and the restaurants featured special window cards.

Taking a two-year-old chimpanzee and a nine-foot boa constrictor on a personally conducted tour of the nation's theatres and movie critics is the latest space-grabbing program of Billy Ferguson's MGM exploitation department.

Captain Volney Phifer, who formerly supervised country-wide tours of Leo the Lion and Mary the Rhino, is now garnering more public attention and more space in the nation's prints. This time he and his wife have Tarzana, young chimp who played a leading simian role in "Tarzan Escapes," on tour, and along with Tarzana is a most unusual traveling mate, Reptana. Reptana is the nine-foot boat constrictor who is Johnny Weissmuller's particular pal.

Capt. Phifer is taking Tarzana and Reptana to the desks of movie critics and newspaper people throughout the country. He has also devoted a lot of time to entertainment of children in hospitals and institutions. So far as possible his trip is tied up with the local presentations of "Tarzan Escapes."

Some of the boys are startled at having a nine-foot boa suddenly tossed on their desks. Some of them say they never spotted anything like that in their office, even on New Year's Eve. And they all admit they're getting a great kick out of the visit.

In some cities the "interview" with the two jungle stars has appeared on the same page with the critics' review of the new Tarzan picture. Arthur Spaeth of the Cleveland News ran it in the same column as his review of the film, directly preceding it.

So far, Capt. Phifer has visited Harrisburg, Reading, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Rochester, Syracuse, Baltimore, Washington, Boston, New Haven, Hartford, Springfield, Waterbury, Meriden and New York City, where the captain and his two animal charges appeared as guest stars of the Radio Movie Club, station WHN, New York. He will leave for Chicago territory November 23rd and will then go on to Detroit and the Middle West.

Memphis Mayor Heads Welcome To 'Gold Diggers'

Campaign arranged by zone manager Howard Waugh and Bill Hendricks in connection with the personal appearance in Memphis of Warner Brother's "Flying Gold Diggers", who are visiting 24 leading cities via plane, included one of the greatest advance newspaper publicity campaign ever put on locally. Several southern-born "Gold Diggers" among the air troupe accounted for columns of newspaper breaks. Forty-plane air show, including a group of parachute jumpers featured the airport celebration in connection with the arrival and aided in drawing thousands to the airport.

Girls were greeted on arrival by Acting Mayor Davis and committee of several hundred civic club members wearing "welcome" banners. Other novelties included broadcasts of proceedings with hotel band playing hit tunes from picture. Bouquets were presented to the starlets by the fliers and motion pictures taken of the entire program.

Girls Greeted at City Hall

Parade of bannered cars and band proceeded to the City Hall for official reception and thence to Rotary Club lunch where the girls were presented with gold pick instead of usual key to the city and American Airlines presented commissions as "Admirals of the Flagship Fleet" to all the girls. One of the publicity stunts was one of the girls with a bale of cotton.

Department stores all cooperated with elaborate window displays, largest store devoting prominent window to model of ship in which the girls were making the trip. In the evening, girls arrived at theatre in bannered cars and were escorted by R.O.T.C. band and 200 motorcycles. Ascending spotlighted platform in front of theatre, girls were introduced over mike, program broadcast over W.H.B.Q. and amplified for the crowds on street to listen to the doings. The party was greeted as giant welcome banner unfurled, with spotlights and flares illuminating the entire scene.

Following the performance a "Gold Diggers Ball," held at the Hotel Peabody where the girls were again introduced wound up the affair after which Howard and Bill called it a day—and what a day.

Oklahoma City Football Players Do Their Stuff on "Pigskin Parade"

As was to be expected, many football tieins have been made by Round Tablers on "Pigskin Parade" and among these is the successful parade put on by Manager James Burge, Capitol, Oklahoma City, illustrated here and reported by George Henger, City Manager, Standard Theatres. Burge promoted himself a 100-piece band to tell the folks about his date and, in addition, had the local players in uniform follow the band and stop a bit of traffic by putting on their formations and passes in the downtown streets.

Merchants Send Patrons To Football Games

As the University of Indiana is in the same city, Arthur Clark, Indiana Theatre, Bloomington, for "The Great Ziegfeld" contacted local merchants for a tieup with the theatre on a series of co-op contests to send a weekly winner to the out-of-town Indiana football games and give tickets to the home games.

Details were worked out on the following eight-week contest: Theatre and merchants collectively inaugurate the series of contests with a double truck in both local paper and university daily, thereafter a full-page weekly. "Trip slips" or "rooter slips," depending on whether the game is away or at home, issued by the participating merchants each week. Slips are issued on the basis of one slip for each dollar's worth of merchandise purchased and are deposited in box inside lobby or theatre. Thus necessitating purchase of ticket in order to deposit slip.

At the end of each week, slips are tabulated and holder of the largest amount of slips is announced the winner. Participating merchants benefit with increased sales, paper gets increased advertising and theatre the publicity. Participating merchants run underlines in their weekly ads that they are the only stores giving the "trip slips" which are tied in with the title and also give theatre weekly window displays tying in with trips and the picture. Both the local and University papers publicized the weekly winners with story and picture.

Temple Fashion Show Staged by De Grazia

Out in Bisbee, Ariz., Ted De Grazia at the Lyric Theatre to exploit his "Dimples" engagement, secured cooperation of leading department store featuring the Temple dresses to put on a fashion show on stage. Ten little girls were chosen by the audience applause to act as models in the revue and accompanying photo shows the kiddies displaying the various models against background of displays.

As each model appeared on stage, a verse of poetry, describing the garment, was read by Mrs. DeGrazia, and Ted says to his knowledge this stunt hasn't been pulled before and passes it along as a swell good-will builder.

Safety Exhibit in Lobby Sells "Death" for Lee

Over in Brooklyn, Doc Joe Lee at the Brooklyn Strand for "And Sudden Death," contacted police department for a safety exhibit in his lobby (see photo) with reactometer and rookies on hand to show patrons how the device worked.

Special screening was held for Judge Sabbatino, who sits in Brooklyn Homicide Court, after which he agreed to give brief talk in court on safety and calling attention to the picture. First reckless driver case brought to him was sentenced to see the film and reporters and photographers in court gave the stunt a break.

Police captain was allotted 15 minutes on Station WBBC and used as his theme the picture and display in lobby and safety signs with playdates were tacked around city by police.

Shellman Plays Host On Friday the 13th

On a recent Friday the 13th, Myron Shellman, Raymond Theatre, Pasadena, Cal., threw discretion or superstition to the winds and announced through a herald that on that day every 13th adult that stepped up to the box-office to purchase a ticket would be admitted free.

Heralds which were printed on orange stock carried cut of a horseshoe and copy exploding the theory that Friday the 13th was an unlucky day.

Marquee Radio Tower Publicizes "Broadcast"

Accompanying photo shows the radio tower erected atop the Garden Theatre, Greenfield, Mass, by Claude Fredericks, to sell "The Big Broadcast of 1937." Claude had green lights on flashes stretching back and forth between the towers, which at night gave an unusual effect and drew plenty of attention. The towers were also lighted at night and they were so placed that they could be seen from the entire residential section surrounding the theatre.

Hallowe'en Party Held By McBride in Syracuse

A unique and novel Hallowe'en Party was given to patrons of Loew's theatre in Syracuse on Hallowe'en by Eddie McBride. Theatre decorated with corn stalks, lighted pumpkins, witches, owls, black cats and the usual Hallowe'en atmosphere. In the outer lobby of the theatre cider and doughnuts were given away by an attractive young girl dressed in a clown outfit.

Upon entering theatre each patron was handed a noise maker, thus being assured of a real old-fashioned good time. At midnight festivities started on the stage, which, too, was dressed with corn stalks, pumpkins, ghosts, witches, cats, etc. The party started off with a community songfest with organ accompaniment. Next on the program was an apple and doughnut contest. These articles were hanging on a string attached to batton on stage and patrons were invited to come up on the stage and participate.

Following this a cracker contest was conducted and enjoyed by the entire audience—next was the old apple ducking contest. The theatre had procured glass tubes which was placed on the stage. The audience could thus see the heads of the participants when ducking for the apples, causing huge enjoyment to them. As the climax, a berry pie eating contest, with a great number of contestants, was conducted. Cash prizes awarded to winners in each contest.

"Gay Desperado" in Store Helps Brown Sell Date

Bill Brown, RKO Albee, Providence, L. I., effected a tieup with leading furniture store and arranged to have a man dressed as "The Gay Desperado" appear in the store at various intervals on a stated day. To those touching him on the shoulder with a copy of the store ad containing the announcement of the stunt, guest tickets were awarded.

Accompanying photo shows fleet of cars with banners offering "ride in finest car in Providence to see best picture"; cars toured streets for three days. Two-sheet card made up from reviews of the picture which appeared in the New York papers was placed in lobby in advance, leading bands were furnished with orchestrations of hit tunes and radio station was supplied with records for transcription programs.

Scrap Book Contest Used By McKoy on Temple Date

Through tieup with the News-Argus, Jim McKoy, city manager, Paramount, Goldsboro, N. C., for "Poor Little Rich Girl" conducted a Shirley Temple scrap book contest, paper giving theatre a daily two-column cut of the starlet and story. Merchants plugged Temple merchandise, coming through with co-op ad and distributed autographed photos.

Leading department store announced that at 9 A. M. opening morning they would give away 500 imprinted balloons, kids massed in front of store and papers came through with stories and photos.

Mayor Greets Relatives Of "Adverse" Starlet

Some extra publicity was garnered by Oscar Nyberg, State Theatre, Spokane, Wash., for "Anthony Adverse" by inviting grandparents of the boy Anthony in picture, Spokane's own Scotty Beckett, to attend opening; accompanying photo shows Mayor Burch greeting the folks. Stories were run in papers together with pictures.

At local track, one of the horses was named "Anthony Adverse" and photo of usherette presenting winning jockey with tickets to show was also planted in papers. Dress worn by Anita Louise was responsible for ad by department store plus art break in the Chronicle; in addition, store had the dress modeled at their big fashion promenade and book tieup was arranged with leading circulating libraries, who distributed bookmarks.

Dunking Contest Put On By Melincoff for Hallowe'en

For his Hallowe'en celebration at the Warner Theatre, Lawrence, Mass., John Melincoff, aided by John Silverwatch, staged a "dunking contest" on stage for his kids with local market donating the doughnuts for the party. Prizes were awarded and merchant's ad included plug on the contest.

For "Dream" a sponsoring committee was formed with leading localities and they in turn mailed letters to selected list recommending the picture.

"Swing Time" Display at Exposition

Swinging Around With "Swing Time"

Out in Cleveland the team of Ed Miller, manager, and Mort Goodman, publicist at Warner's Hipp, tied in with the Great Lakes Exposition handwriting analysis booth and offered a picture of Astaire or Rogers with each analysis (see photo). Banner giving message about free photos was placed on front of concession stand.

Some nice publicity was also gleaned by tying in with Fred Astaire's personal appearance on the Packard Radio Hour, new Packard was on display in lobby with salesman in attendance during entire run of picture and contest was planted in Cleveland News with tickets going to those identifying Astaire-Rogers dances from past pictures.

In Morrilton, Ark.

Raleigh Sharrock at the Palace ran teaser ads in the Morrilton Democrat with lines spotted throughout paper reading "It Will Soon be Swing Time." Window cards were planted in stores throughout city, ad sheets in surrounding towns and Packard entry card blanks were distributed.

Over in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Louie Fishkin at the Commodore Theatre promoted local men's haberdasher for window display of evening clothes, center of display carrying large outout of the star with playdates. Ice cream parlor featured a "Swing Time" drink, photos of the stars were paid for and distributed by merchant whose ad was on reverse side and music store devoted window to display of "swing instruments," sheet music of hits from picture and cutout of Rogers.

Ending in Wilkinsburg, Pa.

With Dick Brown at the Rowland staging a Packard parade opening day with agency paying cost of banners, gas and furnishing the drivers. Cooperating merchant paid for cost and distribution of "Swingtime" tabloids, menus, paper bags and napkins bore picture imprint, local shoe shop devoted a window to tap and ballroom shoes.

Borrensen's "Tiger" Heralds

For his "Bengal Tiger" date at the Strand in Minot, N. D., H. F. Borrensen distributed gaily colored heralds carrying names and positions of players on local football teams, lower part of which were devoted to picture plug and playdates. Week ahead of opening "H. F." also mailed out government postcards which he singed around edges, copy reading, "Red hot news," etc.

Lumber Wagon Bally Used for "Come and Get It"

Harold Evans of Loew's State, St. Louis, used a big lumber wagon piled high with giant logs sniped with banners as a ballyhoo for "Come and Get It." The stunt stopped traffic in the main intersections, attracting plenty of attention everywhere it went.

Evans turned out 5,000 special heralds playing up the "Father Versus Son for a Woman" angle. These were distributed to women leaving work in the downtown business sections and he also had theatre employees send cards to friends commenting on the picture.

Hal also planted several features including the "Do You Remember?" series, a special article on Reeves Espy stressing Espy's large acquaintance in St. Louis, and a story on Frank Shields' well-known tennis ability on the sports pages.

Three-Language Herald Sells "Crespi" in Tel-Aviv

"The Crime of Dr. Crespi" was introduced to patrons of the Migdalor Cinema in Tel-Aviv, Palestine, with a striking six-sheet mounted over the marquee and augmented by a series of three-sheets posted on billboards throughout the city.

Unique heralds carried the following captions in Hebrew, German and English: "Blow your breath on this red spot. If the spot turns blue—see a doctor! If the spot remains red . . . See Eric von Stroheim in "The Crime of Dr. Crespi."

Strong Boston Campaign For Mirrophonic Installation

Premiered vigorously in the Hollywood manner was the campaign that introduced the installation of the new Mirrophonic sound system at the Boston Metropolitan sponsored by Manager Taylor and Gene Fox working with Bert Sanford and Lon Hacking of Erpi. Drive opened with a press breakfast and was followed during the afternoon with a bannered plane flying over the city during the visit of the dirigible Hindenburg.

For two days the decorated Erpi sound truck was spotted at downtown corners playing music through the portable Mirrophonic installations. Truck was also used at the theatre during evenings tied into a broadcast over WAAB wherein patrons leaving the theatre were asked to give their opinions of the new sound. Battery of sun arc lamps (see photo) were spotted on theatre front for the opening.

MANAGERS REPORT YULETIDE IDEAS

Checking and Mail Services Included by Harry Brown, Jr.

In the lobby of Shea's Paramount, Newport, R. I., Harry Brown, Jr., is set two weeks ahead to put up a replica of a regulation mail box in charge of Santa Claus. Paper and pencils are provided for children so they can write letters direct to Santa Claus with lists of presents they desire. The signed letters are then sent to parents with a personal letter from the theatre. Brown reports this as a natural and forwards accompanying photo to show how it was done by him in Newark some time ago.

At the same time, a free checking service is to be inaugurated for convenience of patrons and where shopping bundles may be left while they are seeing the show. This is being strongly publicized in ads, lobby and trailers. Attractive holiday greeting cards with coming attractions are to be forwarded to all names on mailing list.

Presents to be given away at Brown's children's club will be displayed at foot of large tree and special engagement of Kiddie Revue from Station WJAR in Providence is also set with local youngsters featured on the program. Gala juvenile stage festival in charge of popular dancing teacher will be put on for three days ahead of Christmas.

Drachman's $1,000 Gold Rush Set for Week Before Xmas

Pre-holiday program already set by Roy Drachman, at the Fox, Tucson, is now in operation with the next big event, a style and beauty show, slated for Dec. 11. This is put on with department store and beauty shop, show combining displays of newest hair dress and women's fashions.

On Dec. 17 Drachman starts his second annual Gold Rush, a giveaway of $1,000, split into six prizes. Eight hundred of this was promoted from merchants who give numbered tickets with purchases for the prize drawing. Tieup is made with merchants only on one street, one of the most important, with stores paying for their share of tickets and space in double-truck coop pages. Last year the stunt drew a crowd of over 10,000, with the Governor and Congresswoman Isabella Greenway on stage to draw the winning numbers.

On Dec. 18 a Packard car giveaway is set for the benefit of the local baseball team, and on Dec. 23 the theatre is putting up a new Chevrolet with six merchants in to underwrite the cost. On Dec. 24 Drachman is in charge of the Christmas civic party in which Tucson plays Santa to the poor children. A 30-foot tree is set in front of the house, the entire block roped off, band to make music, high school choir to sing carols, ministers of different denominations to offer benediction, city officials on platform and boy scouts on hand to usher and direct traffic.

Fruit, candy, etc., is given the children from a fund obtained by sale of newspapers on the streets by members of the Big Brothers Club, an organization that functions, but once each year—at this time. All lunch clubs compete to see which can raise the most money with the theatre offering a cup to the winner. The adults dress like kids, sell papers from a nickel to a dollar (and no change) with the paper putting out a special Big Brother Edition on the tieup.

RUSSIAN THISTLEWEED BECOMES XMAS TREE

Operating out in western Kansas last year, R. M. Thomason found that the summer dust storms had dried and burnt up everything so that no evergreens could be found for his usual Christmas tree. Not one bit stymied, "R. M." dug up a large Russian thistleweed, had it whitewashed, sprinkled silver glitter upon it and placed the plant in his lobby, labeled "A Kansas Christmas Tree".

Louie Charninsky Reports Lucky Number Toy Stunt

To start on Thanksgiving, Louie Charninsky has planned a lobby display at the Capitol, in Dallas, where many worthwhile toys promoted from local department store will be shown and given to children holding the lucky numbers, drawing to be held at the theatre the Saturday before. In return, Louie is printing numbered coupons with name of store and date of giveaway. Each child attending the Capitol between the two holidays will be given coupons also offered at the store with purchases.

Prize toys are set under large tree suitably decorated, with baby spots and blue slides added for further atmosphere. Louie also has his Santa Claus to work the lobby and distribute candy. Toy shows for underprivileged children are also in order and Charninsky is using the National Screen trailer carrying holiday greetings.

Many Yule Activities Set At Cleveland Loew Houses

From Milt Harris, Cleveland Loew Theatres head publicist, is reported a long list of tieins that promise to repeat last year's success, the most unusual probably being the selection of eight singers from the nationally known Acepella Choir to visit with a Town Crier, leading restaurants and hotel dining rooms. The group of four boys and four girls sings carols and after which the Crier opens scroll and in Colonial fashion announces screen attractions at the State.

Parties for the youngsters are much in evidence. Arranged by Col. Harry E. Long, division manager, tiein has been made with local branch of the I. J. Fox fur company to cooperate on orphans' party, the fur company supplying each youngster with candy and toy plus transportation to and from.

Newspaper tieups feature a "Bury the Tree" stunt with the Cleveland Press at Loew's State and Stillman wherein readers are invited to bring toys, clothing and nonperishable foods to be placed around tree until it is almost covered. Same idea is put on at the Loew's Park on the East Side and the Granada on the West Side with neighborhood papers. To build interest in pre-Christmas activities put on by all three local papers such as prize fights, wrestling matches and mammoth Yuletide show at Public Hall, Loew's cooperates in every way possible in exchange for credits to the organization.

Christmas decorations are lavish in all the Loew houses. In the State lobby, department store is decorating tree with trimmings and toys and there will also be a Santa distributing candy promoted from local factory in exchange for credits. Plans are now in work for John Newkirk's ninth annual Community Christmas Tree at Loew's Granada where tiein with the Lakewood Post and fire department makes possible reconditioning of toys for distribution to the needy. Loewmen Jack Lykes, Arnold Gates and Everett Steinbuch are all taking prominent parts in putting over these various Yuletide activities.

Thomason Offers Xmas Box In Lobby Guessing Contest

At the Uptown, in Sedalia, Mo., Manager R. M. Thomason has a complete schedule arranged that covers toy matinees, baskets of food for needy families, free package wrapping and mailing service plus checking, local talent dancing school revue and kid matinees. For a guessing contest with a different twist, Thomason has promoted a large box wrapped in holiday ribbons to be given the patron guessing its contents. Merchant's name will be the only clue and after the first box has been won, similar further boxes will be offered from other stores in a similar manner. Ballots will be made available in the lobby and winners presented with their prizes from the stage. Booklets with institutional copy and attractions for the coming season are also contemplated as is tiein with local organizations for benefits, a percentage to go to the local good will fund.

MANY TIE-INS SET FOR CHRISTMAS

Theatre - Newspaper Toy Shows Featured in Various Spots

The always reliable theatre-newspaper toy matinee is again to be featured and among the situations the annual Warner Bros.' Washington Star-Post party is high on the list. Arranged by Frank La Falce, zone ad head, the matinees are put on in all Warner Theatres in the Capitol the Saturday preceding Christmas and children admitted for a new toy or any given article of wearing apparel. Contributions are turned over to the Council of Social Agencies which works with the Community Chest in the distribution to needy children.

Trailers are run at all the circuit houses and newspaper gives the event a lot of strong buildup. First matinee staged in 1931 brought over 9,000 toys, which total was doubled the following year. The next two years topped these figures with 1935 marking a new high of 53,000 toys. Warner theatres participating include the Ambassador, Apollo, Avalon, Avenue Grand, Colony, Earle, Home, Metropolitan, Penn, Savoy Tivoli, Uptown and York. Tremendous amount of good will has been built up for both the newspaper and theatres on this, reports La Falce.

Another Round Tabler who has had excellent newspaper cooperation on the same tiein is Matt Saunders, at the Loew-Poli, in Bridgeport, Conn. Special morning show is arranged for the usual toy admission which must be in good condition. Those that need a bit of fixing are repaired by members of the fire and police departments. Actual show includes repeats on some of the older features and shorts contributed by exchanges and local talent that appeals to the children. Paper goes strong for the tiein with page one stories and photos. Expense to the theatre is nil, says Matt.

In addition to other activities, George Tyson, at the Harris-Alvin, Pittsburgh, is setting free kid shows for December 24th to which all children are invited. Orphan parties are also arranged, and throughout Christmas Week Santa Claus will be in the lobby with a present for every child attending. On three Saturdays preceding the holiday, two Speed-O-Bykes are to be given away.

Rosenfield Inaugurates Benefit Shows To Bolster Pre-Holiday Weeks

Right now, Joe Rosenfield, at the Modjeska, in Milwaukee, is all set for a number of benefits put on with local organizations which are solicited for this purpose. The extra business for the pre-Christmas lull helps to hold up grosses and results are reported as very encouraging.

For Christmas Week, Rosenfield has tied in with local dancing school to stage a juvenile revue, the stunt similar to last year's successful party. Youngsters bring their families and the revue helps build matinees. On Saturday before Christmas Joe is holding a party where Santa himself will distribute presents promoted from merchants. Party will include community singing, kid amateur show and various contests. Tiein with paper on a free show for the local Goodfellow movement is also set.

Seasonal lobby display is given lots of attention as Joe says he finds patrons impressed by the decorations and like the warmth and glow they impart. Lobby tiein was last year's best stunt, department store furnishing display of animated toys which was built up so big that people actually came to the theatre to see the display. Rosenfield recommends this highly where there is sufficient lobby space.

SHOWMEN NOT SINGING PRE-HOLIDAY BLUES

If the activities already set by Round Tablers in various sectors and reported on these pages are any criterion, exploitation to beat the usual pre-Christmas lull and to build up those Yuletide grosses this year promises to set a new high. Set forth here and on a following page are outlines of what some of the members already have in work and ready to start to make December a standout month. More of the same will be run as further reports arrive.

Boys' Choir Sings At Midnite Show

George Baker, Electric Theatre, Kansas City, Kan., has arranged to have boys' church choir broadcast Christmas carols from stage. This is to be an annual event with 100 voices singing carols and hymns beginning at 11:15. George reports the stunt attracted national publicity last year. Mr. Richard Dabney, director of the Boys' Choir has cooperated each year.

Baker is also planning to put on what he terms "Their Majesties' Jubilee," a kiddie show with a king and queen of joy, each country sending entertainers as ambassadors of joy. The setting is in the form of a plantation for the homecoming of young folk that have been away to school. Unit is done with cooperation of local dancing school.

Exton's Grab Bag Party Holiday Lobby Display

Exton Sells Free Kid Show To Motor Company Officials

To be repeated again this year by Bill Exton, Kenosha-Gateway Theatres, in Kenosha, Wis., is a free show for children of all employees at the Nash Motors Company plant in that city, the auto officials paying a sum equal to a good day's gross for the party. Two morning performances are held on Saturday before Christmas, with tickets obtainable only at the plant. Show is composed of shorts and special professional kid acts Bill obtains from Chicago.

Also slated by Exton for a repeat is his Grab Bag Party held on one night during the week before. Some $500 of gifts are promoted from stores in exchange for credits with minimum value of each gift not less than $25. Articles are displayed in lobby two weeks ahead (see photo).

For the yearly toy fund, Exton is also staging his annual local talent show including the city's most prominents and sponsored by local daily for much publicity. Last year the show was put on Tuesday and Wednesday the week before Christmas to sellout business with receipts split.

Exton has also arranged his annual free show to all youngsters in the city as a goodwill offering with the performance made up of some repeat feature, cartoon shorts and kid talent. Show last year was tied in with merchant who furnished bag of candy for each child and further contributed a full-page ad, copy written by Exton exclusively for the coming theatre attractions. This show was put on in addition to the usual canned goods matinee.

Smith Plans Elaborate Campaign On "Stowaway" for Christmas

Having booked in the latest Shirley Temple feature for the holidays, W. Clyde Smith, Malco Hot Springs, city manager, is planning a smart drive to tie this in to his Yuletide celebrations. Newspapers are set to run photos of Santa Claus delivering print of the picture to Smith in lobby of the Paramount Theatre and another shot of the entire personnel is arranged showing the staff smilingly greeting the announcement of the booking.

Stores carrying Temple items will cooperate in ads and windows and a contest will be put on to select six little Hot Springs girls who resemble Shirley to act as hostesses at the theatre on the opening day. Girls will wear the latest Temple frocks. Smith is right in line with his annual tiein with all civic clubs to put on the special show for the underprivileged with Santa, toys and similar angles in effect, all contributions to be placed around the tree in lobby until given away at the special show on Christmas morning by Santa from the stage. Usual toy show is also arranged.

Outside decorations will be topped with live holly, cedar and mistletoe with huge reindeer drawing lighted sled on marquee. Included in the billing are posters of all sizes plugging the Christmas show and carrying holiday greetings from the theatre.

Licking the Annual Pre-Christmas Slump

How Tri-States Theatres Have Turned "Red" Into "Black"

by JOSEPH KINSKY

District Manager, Tri-States Theatres

One of the proudest achievements of our circuit during the last two years is the way in which we have licked what we thought were the "unbeatable" pre-Christmas and Lenten slumps. As a result of our activity, originally inspired by our general manager, G. Ralph Branton, these "worst weeks of show business" have been turned in to big profit weeks for our houses—and we are not so much concerned about business in the so-called bad weeks as we are with many of the supposed "big" weeks.

While what we write about here is typical of the activity in all three districts of Tri-States, we can, of course, tell only what we plan here in our district—and since it is such a short time until Christmas we thought that right now would be the time to let our fellow exhibitors know what we are doing to lick the Pre-Christmas slump.

While this district is comprised of the cities of Cedar Rapids, Waterloo, and Davenport in Iowa, and Rock Island and Moline, in Illinois, we'll concern ourselves in this article only with our activities in Davenport, Moline and Rock Island, the three adjoining cities where five of our houses are located, as what we are doing in these towns is typical of the activity in our other towns.

First, let us explain that our Davenport, Rock Island and Moline theatres are affiliated with the Quad-City Theatre Managers' Association, an organization of 16 theatres, both circuit and independent, located in these three cities and also in East Moline, Illinois, united for the common good of the entire group.

Elaborate Giveaways Planned

Last year this group of theatres sponsored two mass giveaways—one on December 4th of nearly a $1,000 worth of household appliances, and one on December 18th of a Ford V8. The grosses piled up on these two giveaways more than made up for any loss of business due to Christmas shopping. These giveaways, plus other activities that brought in extra revenue, gave our circuit's theatres record weeks—and we believe we are safe in saying that the independent houses enjoyed similar success.

This year we are going in for giveaways on a more elaborate scale. We have already promoted, for the association, three new 1937 Ford V8 sedans to be given away on December 17th, 21st and 22nd—one each night. These giveaway nights—combined with our regular Bank Nights on December 16th and 23rd—assure all of our theatres of what will probably be the peak grosses of the entire year—with the result that we are not concerned whatsoever about any slump in business previous to Christmas.

Lest exhibitors may think that our theatres here in a quad-cities are "giveaway crazy," we should like to remind everyone that one of the main purposes of the Quad-City Theatre Managers' Association is not to promote excessive giveaways—but to eliminate them. To this end, we have concentrated on a weekly Bank Night conducted on a cooperative basis in all 16 theatres the same night—and that is the only giveaway of any kind in any of the affiliated theatres. There are no "dish nights," "country store nights," etc.

However, we do step out during occasional periods when we feel our grosses are threatened. For example, on election night, November 4th, a night when our grosses sink to almost the level of Christmas Eve, we gave away a new 1937 $1,050 Buick sedan. Grosses in many of the houses on election night were as much as four times average—and there wasn't a theatre that didn't at least double its average business. This in spite of the fact that many of the managers believed that election night was unbeatable in cities like these.

Operating Expenses Cut

Now—speaking only for our own Tri-States houses—we will further attempt to bolster our pre-Christmas profits by cutting our operating expenses to a minimum. From the middle of October until Christmas our managers keep their eyes open for ways and means of cutting expenses for the week before Christmas—especially advertising. Several of the houses in past years have succeeded in slashing their advertising expenses in this week by as much as 50 per cent, and one house last year spent nothing for advertising. In spite of these slashed advertising expenditures most of the boys come up with campaigns that outdo some of the weeks when they request special budgets. This is usually because they have promoted space from the newspapers that will take care of their advertising for the week in great shape.

Another thing that we did last year—and will do this year—is open our Christmas picture on Christmas Eve instead of on Christmas Day. This gives us a new picture, and quite a little extra business, by luring many that would ordinarily stay at home out to see the opening of a new attraction. While our business is far from good on Christmas Eve—it is about double what we ordinarily would have if we didn't open with the new picture.

Several of our managers have been successful in past years in running one or two special kids' shows on the Saturday before Christmas and one other day before holiday. However, this year we may abandon these special performances since Christmas falls on Friday—a rather bad spot for us to instill any advance interest in special shows.

This pretty well covers our pre-Christmas activities in this district—and all we can say is that if other exhibitors get across this rough spot as well as we expect to—it will really be a Merry Christmas for all.

More Christmas Slants and Stunts

Conner's Holiday Lobby Decoration

Conner Builds Toy Shop For Lobby Display

Accompanying photo showing Christmas lobby display used last year and constructed by Marlowe Conner, Grove Theatre, Chicago, Ill., is being hauled out of the moth balls this Christmas.

House was built entirely of compoboard and bracing lumber. Only cost was the lumber, as it was designed and built by Marlowe with the aid of a couple of ushers and his assistant. Toys were promoted and given away at the Christmas party.

Manufacturers' Christmas Parties Will Be Repeated by Martin

With the plants of many famed national advertisers in South Bend, Ind., Guy Martin is going to town on a number of manufacturers' parties where the plants take over the Colfax Theatre and give special shows for employees and their children free of charge. Theatre receives flat rental, furnishes program, house staff, etc., and company contributes toys, candies, etc. Similar hookup is also set for the Palace, in South Bend, the house rented to Sears-Roebuck for a party in conjunction with bicycle club.

Giveaways will be featured at both theatres. Car cost promoted from 12 stores will be offered two days ahead with patrons registering all day for the drawing and a telephone hookup arranged for both houses so patrons in both spots can follow proceedings. Radio, refrigerator, fur coat giveaways are also set.

Another ticket-selling idea is a hookup with such organizations as Elks, Eagles, Woodmen, etc., with two tickets offered each member selling a punch-board. Proceeds of the punch-board sale go to the local fund for the needy and theatre receives full price for all tickets offered on the board as prizes. Martin says that last year the Elks put out over 1,000 boards in South Bend alone.

FACTORY PARTIES AGAIN POPULAR

in these pages, on the last half of the week before Christmas, at nine each evening is to put on an elaborate holiday Follies including the city's best kid talent. This always is a top stunt and goes over big with parents with much support from the two local papers. The latter tie in also on annual parties at the Colfax and Palace, Martin alternating with each one every year. Big box is on display in lobby for contributions for the needy and the papers of course build this angle strongly.

To the important business men of the city Martin directs letters suggesting theatre tickets as gifts for employees and to encourage early shopping, merchants are contacted to buy tickets to be given for purchases over a certain figure. Checking service is also emphasized and much thought is given to proper decorations. For this, tiein is made with large nursery for holly-wreaths and other greenery, for Martin feels that lobbies are more attractive with live decorations than the usual crepe paper and tinsel. Giant trees, toy displays and Santa distributing candy are also arranged.

Keeping expenses at an absolute minimum during the pre-holiday weeks is a "must," says Martin, and this is practiced religiously in his theatres.

More Factory Parties And Toy Matinees

Among others reporting their Christmas activities are Sid Holland, city manager, Elco Theatres, Elkhart, Ind., Glen Nelson, Harris Theatre, Finlay, Ohio, Fred Reeths, Sheboygan Theatre, Sheboygan, Wis., and Russell Hardwict, Lyceum, Clovis, N. M.

Sid is planning various parties for the week, one of which he terms a "poultry party" with cooperating dealer supplying a few dozen turkeys, geese, ducks and chickens. Theatre advertises the party on screen and wherever else possible gives the dealer his advertising break, coupons are distributed both by the merchant and with each ticket at the boxoffice.

Factory parties are also being arranged, an average price of 10 cents per head being made to plant heads for shows to the employees and employees' families. Sid is figuring on about five parties the week before Christmas. Another slant to bring them in is electric range or refrigerator giveaway to be promoted in exchange for theatre advertising and displayed in lobby. The toy and food matinees, free kid shows, checking services will also be part of his campaign.

In Findlay, Ohio, at the Harris, Glenn Nelson has the assistance of local firemen to repair toys contributed at his annual show. Last year over two truck loads were taken down to the fire house and after repairing were placed on display there. Nelson is also working on the yearly show for underprivileged children sponsored by local Kiwanis Club, is arranging checking service and is now readying for a giveaway to be underwritten by merchants.

Fred Reeths has already given away a lot of turkeys and radios, all of which were promoted from local merchants and for the week before Christmas is offering refrigerators, washing machine and diamond ring in the same manner. A kiddie show sold to one of the department stores with Santa Claus on hand is also in the work.

> ### "WE OFTEN WONDER," SAYS DICK WRIGHT
> ". . . Why some managers are content to book inferior attractions the week before Christmas, fully realizing that they'll turn the week into a loss. Word soon gets around that their show is a pretty poor one. Handing the public any sort of a show seems pretty futile. Does it take courage or is it just plain good business to give them a picture that packs a wallop the week before Christmas? The writer is of the opinion that it's darned good business. . . . A good picture properly handled, will always bring them in. . ."

In New Mexico, Russ Hardwick at the Lyceum is also planning to call on local Boy Scouts in addition to firemen to help repair toys for needy children. Canned goods matinee will be held with contributions given to Salvation Army for distribution on Christmas Day and entire lobby and foyer will be dressed up with all the trimmings.

"Why I Believe In Santa" Is Grove's Contest for Yule

Santa Claus is going to receive all the lists of Christmas presents wanted by the children in Rock Island, Ill., according to the stunt planned by Herb Grove, at the Fort Theatre, in conjunction with the Rock Island Argus. It starts with a letter-writing contest for children on why they believe in Santa and involves cash and ticket prizes. Then the paper will equip a plane and party to fly North to locate the home of Santa Claus with Grove taking pictures of the takeoff from the local airport. Radio station will contact the plane in flight and the finale of the stunt is for the plane to return with Santy, present him in the Public Square and at the theatre.

CHRISTMAS SETTING. For atmospheric Christmas Organlogue at the Fox, Atlanta, last year, E. E. Whitaker transformed orchestra pit and organ. Snow scene was projected by effects machine.

Then the climax as far as the theatre is concerned will be the showing of the pictures with other subjects, features and shorts, at a special show with the paper and radio station getting behind the tiein and practically guaranteeing Grove a full house at regular prices.

To build up the grosses on Christmas Eve, Grove is planning to run the regular show until six o'clock and then at eight present a premiere of the next day's attraction and feels with the picture booked in, it will go a long way to overcome the usual bad business on this evening. A gift idea is regular tickets made up in Christmas greeting form which has had some previous success.

In addition to the usual merchant toy tieups, holiday decorations, Grove is participating in the giveaways detailed by Joe Kinsky in his article in this section.

Loewmen Taking Part In Civic Celebrations

In one mail, come reports from Loewmen Lou Brown, Les Pollock and Francis Deering with outlines of what they are planning. In Baltimore, Lou Brown has completed arrangements for a charity party with the Evening Sun which, starting on Dec. 1, will break daily stories on the event until the day of the party on Dec. 20 at Loew's Century and Valencia. The Junior League is to have charge of the ticket distribution and the Junior Association of Commerce will be in charge of the purchasing of candy, cookies, etc., and will also supervise distribution of gift packages in lobby. The local transit company has agreed to carry the children gratis. Santa and the tree will be on hand and large containers placed to gather contributions for the needy.

In Rochester, Les Pollock has a Christmas Party in mind for Donald Duck, on Dec. 26, with eight or nine cartoons in which Donald has appeared. There are to be also a lot of surprises and prizes such as Donald Duck dolls autographed by Walt Disney from Hollywood for a lucky stunt, radio tiein for special children's community sing with slides on screen, organist, song leader, to be broadcast over WHEC and plugged by the station. Color contest is also set.

Punch and Judy show now being put on in Boston by H. M. "Addie" Addison, division manager, is to be repeated in Rochester and Pollock's yearly good-will tieup, an orphans' party will be put on during Christmas Week. The papers get behind it and transportation is arranged by the city officials.

Down in Houston, Texas, at Loew's, Francis Deering is presenting his second annual Kiddie Revue for the benefit of the needy, to be put on three times daily the week before Christmas. This is a real big-time party with scenery from New York aud supervised by a well-known unit producer. During the course of the show the chorus will work the audience to take up a free-will collection for the fund.

The showing is sponsored by the Houston Press, which goes heavily for stories and photos weeks ahead and aside from the good-will created, Francis reports that last year the revue boosted receipts over the same period the year before some 25 per cent with a better showing expected this December.

A twelve-day tieup with the Toledo Blade has been effected by Wally Caldwell, Loew's Valentine, Toledo, for the Elk's Poor Relief with wearing apparel collected by the theatre. Wally put this same stunt over last year and says the stunt nets the theatre a two-column story with art daily.

Another gag used by Caldwell last year was two six-foot boys dressed like Santa Claus with Laurel and Hardy 36-inch papier mache heads parading through crowds daily advertising current short.

White Christmas Trees Featured by Holden

Outstanding decoration in the lobby of the Capitol, Atlanta, is to be a white Christmas tree, reports Earle Holden, an annual stunt started three years ago and a different twist to the usual holiday decoration. Holden takes a regular green tree, has it sprayed with white calcimine and put up after the paint dries. Red and green balls with plenty of silver icicles are used with all colors spotted. For proper effect, says Earle, care must be taken in the spraying to cover every inch of the tree.

Dancing school Yuletide prologue with 40 children from four to 15 is set for week ahead at each performance and the sale of book tickets for gifts is also being plugged.

At the Fox Midwest theatres in Fred C. Souttar's district, much activity is arranged to stimulate business. Autos have been promoted to be drawn for on night of Dec. 24th, and patrons who attend any performance during the week ahead of the drawing and fill out attendance card are to be eligible for the prize. Shirley Temple dolls, radios and similar gifts are also to be used and matinees for the underprivileged children are also in order.

The Associated Civic Clubs of Clearwater, Fla., will handle this year's Empty Stocking Fund benefit this year with Del Padgett, at the Capitol Theatre, thus eliminating the previous numerous local talent shows put on in other years to raise money for the needy. In addition to concentrating all these activities, the show will also insure the theatre a capacity house. With the Lions' Club, Del is arranging a free kid matinee for Christmas morning, when toys and candy are to be distributed.

For his December drive at the State, Watertown, S. D., Mike Guttman is setting a deal whereby patrons will be given specially made up Christmas tickets to the theatre with every five dollar sale and to those paying up bank accounts. Mike is also offering a checking service for patrons. Some layout is used for groceries and cosmetic stores.

With the copy set up in form of a Christmas tree, Ed Selette's laundry card idea will be used by him again this year at the Albany, Albany, N. Y. Top part of the card is for the theatre copy with cut of Santa below and laundry name and address at the bottom.

From Frank La Falce, Warner Theatre Washington zone ad head, comes a further report on special cartoon shows to be put on in the Washington and out-of-town houses. At this writing, Pop Eye, Betty Boop, Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony shows are set, these to be labeled "All-Star Cartoon Shows" and to run approximately 90 minutes. Already tried in a few spots, La Falce reports this outgrossing any previous cartoon show they have ever put on.

Krendel Makes Strong Drive On Theatre Tickets for Gifts

Special hard tickets packaged in attractive Christmas envelopes are being pushed as appropriate holiday gifts in a strong drive by Dan Krendel, at the Tivoli, Toronto, with local stationery stores encouraged to put them on display and sell them on a percentage. Blocks of these are also being disposed of by merchants to give away with purchases over a certain figure. Each member of the staff has been allotted a certain number with prize for the one selling his quota first. Staff also receives the regular commission. Special trailers suggesting that the cutouts in the lobby and display of the tickets and other means are used to plug this angle and Krendel expects handsome returns.

During the week when the schools were closed last year, Dan put on special morning shows. Few days ahead of school closing every prominent school was circularized with die-cut colored Santa heralds, copy plugging the shows and prizes to be given. On arriving at the theatre children dropped coupons with their names in a box at the door and about half-way through the show of special shorts, winning names were flashed on the screen and the lucky youngsters presented with their gifts. Krendel reports the morning shows adding considerably to the week's grosses.

Best Decorated Home Contest Worked by Limerick and Paper

In cooperation with the Times-Review, his daily paper, George Limerick, skipper of the Yale and Palace Theatres, in Cleburne, Texas, is featuring a Best Christmas Decorated Home contest in which householders will be invited to participate in three classifications, two-story homes, apartment houses and duplexes, one-story homes and cottages. Prizes to be given in each division are: silver loving cup, first, and offered by the local in each division are, first, a silver loving cup by the chamber of commerce plus a 90-day pass to the Yale Theatre; second, a 60-day pass, and third, a 30-day pass. Paper is now running daily page one entry blanks and follow-up stories with winners to be selected on Dec. 22 and announced in a special Christmas edition on Christmas Eve. The contest insures Limerick front page publicity every day during the shopping season.

Celebrated by the entire city on Dec. 12 is Santa Day, sponsored by all local business men. On that day Santa, suitably costumed, will be on view and introduced officially in a mammoth parade, in which the theatre will be represented with a fancy float advertising current and coming attractions, copy further extending the season's greetings to the community.

Santa will also be used as a bally by Limerick, with the Old Gent parading the streets with back-banners week ahead reading: "Come See Me at the Yale and Palace" and the day before: "I'm Staying Over in Cleburne Tonight to See the Big Xmas Preview at the Yale." As Christmas Eve is an occasion locally for high jinks by the younger set, George is putting on a special preview that night starting at 11:15.

Limerick's annual decoration of the inside and front of the Yale Theatre has become an ace attention-attractor for the house and this year the interior will be hung with red and green Japanese rope from which glitter icicles are to be suspended. Lobby will have an elaborate setpiece with illuminated and decorated trees on each side. Front will feature a 25-foot shadow box carrying season's greetings and around the marquee there will be 200 pounds of Louisiana smilax, a green holiday foliage very popular in those parts. Varicolored lights will be planted thickly among the smilax.

"Blaze of Glory Week" Scheduled by Davis

In Canada, the day after Christmas is Boxing Day, a legal holiday, and all business places close on Thursday night before and open on the following Monday morning. So as to take advantage of the school recess during this time and to build up the slump after the holiday celebration, Walt Davis, at the Capitol, Regina, Saskatchewan, has scheduled a "Blaze of Glory Week" which is to follow up his usual Christmas campaign.

The "week" is to start on Dec. 28th, with a "Dad's Night," which allows fathers to bring their wives and children as guests on one ticket, a sort of family night idea which Davis finds profitable on off days. The following morning a "Popeye" show is on tap and on Dec. 31 morning a Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck party is arranged with stage show and local kid talent. Gifts and a wiener roast are included. Another highlight is a big amateur stage show for New Year's Eve.

The usual pre-Christmas decorations are also in line, including blocks of ice on the sidewalks with trees stuck therein. Extra screen attraction sponsored by several of the more prominent stores is a locally-made reel of the holiday activities to be shown at the theatre.

QUIGLEY OCTOBER AWARD "FIRSTS" CREATE BOXOFFICE EXPLOITATIONS

Showmen Voted Certificates of First Mention Obtain Wide Coverage on Entries; Papers and Merchants Cooperate

Smart Promotions Arranged by Dan Krendel, C. R. Young and Dick Warner; Winners Listed from Three Countries

All in all, Dan Krendel listed over 50 different things done on his second-run holdover date for "Godfrey" at the Tivoli, Toronto, managing to get himself a lot of smart promotional publicity where it did the most good. For instance, his cooperative advertising tieins included more than half the entire space used by top clothing store, the tieup copy reading: "Two Things You Should See," referring to the picture and a showing at the store of new styles. Illustrated by a cut of Powell, the ad was made more important with the offer that guest tickets would be given the first 10 people presenting the ads at the store. For a millinery store, cuts of the women stars were used as types to illustrate the types of hats advertised, copy advising readers to see the picture and decide their own type. Florist used cut of Powell, "saying it with flowers."

First-Time Broadcast Planted

Radio promotions were topped with a 15-minute broadcast on an important radio program, "Tea Time Topics," the period given over to doormen's and ushers' experiences at the Tivoli, winding up with a strong plug for the picture. First time this spot has ever been crashed by a local theatre, says Krendel. Date was also given generous mention for two consecutive days on another popular studio program and on leading period sponsored by chain grocer, it was announced that numbered copies of the chain's news sheets would be distributed and those holding sheets containing the 50 numbers posted in the theatre lobby would be given guest tickets. As the grocers print 75,000 of these dodgers regularly for house-to-house circulation, the tiein was held highly, especially since the advertiser paid for everything.

Distributors of the "Monopoly" game were tied in for window cards showing Powell and Alice Brady playing the game between scenes and a contest was tied in to the showing wherein entry blanks containing the same cut were made up with Powell referring to the similarity of the game and the picture, prizes given for those sending in the best answers given by Alice Brady. Space was left below for the answers with name and address of entrant to be left at the theatre.

Street Stunt Attracts

Many ace windows were obtained by cards using the tiein shots of the principals plugging the various merchandise with the same idea carried out in heralds and similar advertising. Full windows with star and scene enlargements were prominent. Featured street stunt for the benefit of over-the-shoulder peepers was put on by providing every member of the house staff with a press book heavily lettered on covers with title and theatre playdates, for use on street cars. When the book was held up in reading position (see photo) curiosity did the rest.

Krendel's "Godfrey" Street Book Stunt

For the holdover advertising, in addition to many of the ideas listed here, Krendel made up special illustrated cards with "don't say we didn't warn you" copy and these were placed in all cars within a half-mile of local stadium during important football game. Straight newspaper advertising was supplemented by free publicity in nine suburban papers, displays running 250 lines with cut of principals.

Limerick and Coloring Contests Feature Young's "Things" Campaign

Topping in all over 600 inches of free publicity in the Glasgow papers, the campaign put over by C. R. Young, general manager, on "Things to Come" at the Paramount, in the Scotch metropolis corralled a lot of attention through two contests sponsored by two leading dailies in conjunction with the theatre. The first, aimed for the adults, was a last line limerick idea with a number of main prizes promoted from neighborhood merchants and theatre tickets for runners-up, plus copies of the Wells book. Paper broke front page and ran continuous daily publicity crediting theatre and attraction for two full weeks, each story including four lines of the limerick contest with prizes given for the best last line. Prizes were shown in the lobby and the competition stimulated by posters, trailers, etc. For further buildup, the paper published three special contents bills on the contest which are posters carried by newsboys to advertise headline news. Presentation of prizes was made by popular local woman star, photo carried by cooperating paper and total number of entries was reported to be nearly 9,000.

One of Young's Window Tieups

Coloring Contests for Children

The coloring contest for children also offered main prizes, these including model tanks and aeroplanes copied from those in the picture. Many consolation awards were also made. Special contents bill and heralds printed by the paper, placed in copies of the theatre program, brought added attention.

Preview for all local clergymen was widely publicized with various of those attending using the theme of the picture for sermons advertised in church bulletins and newspaper copy. Top windows with styles in the mode of the picture proved attractive, among these a furniture display bringing newspaper comment which also had to do with similar displays. Stores cooperating took special ads for further buildup. Newspaper, poster and general lobby campaign was in keeping with the rest of Young's effective drive on the date.

Warner's House Staff Constructs Elaborate Front for "Ziegfeld"

Since the house does not employ a regular artist, the front constructed for "Ziegfeld" at the Bison, Shawnee, Okla. (see photo), by Manager Dick Warner and members of his staff was of a high standard and received the attention it richly deserved. All but the lettering layout of the lettering and the stars was done by the personnel. Entire front of plywood was covered with brilliant orange pebble cloth bordered with black moulding, and everything on the front was three-dimensional.

Letterheads and stars were constructed by cutting two faces and separating them with six-inch pieces of blind stop, edges covered with strips of old window cards. Letters were covered with Tex-tone which while still wet was imbedded with pieces of broken mirror. Star names were painted black and

Crabill Reports Jamestown Warner District Activities

At this writing, plans are about set in Jamestown for a new car giveaway at the Palace and Winter Garden on Christmas Eve and the same idea is to be carried out for the three Warner houses in Elmira, reports zone chief Ralph Crabill. Merchants Units are sold to pay for the automobile. In the smaller towns of the district where the new car cannot be handled, good used car will be offered. Merchants' Pay Off Club, now in its fortieth week at the Babcock, Wellsville, is being developed for the Elmira houses. Washing machine, radio jewelry, bicycle, turkey and similar giveaways are set in other of the district houses.

County Corn Husking contest is arranged for at all theatres tying in with the newspaper and newsreel publicity on the national contest recently held in Iowa. Christmas co-op pages, tap ads and heralds are being promoted in all situations. Clothing and canned goods matinees are also in line and several of the houses are planning Christmas stage parties and revues, one-act plays presented by local drama clubs, etc.

Participating in these activities are the following managers and towns in the Crabill district: Walter League, Palace and Winter Garden, Jamestown; Doc Westfall, Haven and State, Olean; Dalton Burgett, Capitol, Dunkirk; Henry Phillips, Family and Lafayette, Batavia; Lew Carroll, Majestic, Hornell; Ralph Booth, Babcock and Temple, Wellsville; Alexis Beckerich, Keeney, Elmira; William Leggiero, Regent, Elmira; Wallace Folkine, Strand, Elmira, and Allen B. Newhall, Diana, Medina.

Sobler Ties Department Store To Theatre Toy Style Show

Set for the morning of Dec. 5th is a toy style show at the Spreckles Theatre, arranged by Al Sobler, managing director, and top department store. Elaborate display of toys will be shown in the lobby and on the mezzanine floor with Santa on hand to do the honors. Special screen show of "Robinson Crusoe," in three reels and cartoon shorts will be offered and store will sell tickets at five cents to children and 15 cents to adults accompanying the youngsters. The theatre will receive the regular price of 10 cents to the children and 25 cents for adults, store making up the difference and plugging the event heavily in all house and newspaper advertising.

Special shows have been arranged for every morning of the week with Employees Clubs of large industrial companies and various Navy units, these organizations buying the house for a flat rate in exchange for showing of suitable feature and shorts. Last year the big money-getter for Sobler was a giveaway of a new car and this year the stunt is to be repeated on the evening of Dec. 22nd. Car is promoted from local cleaners' and dyers' stores with tickets for the drawing distributed by them with each purchase. Full page spreads are to be taken by the sponsors and each cooperating shop will display identification cards.

Paper Announces Santa Arrival On Theatre Roof via Plane

Tiein last year with local paper by Frank Newman, in Oakland, Cal., had Santa arriving via plane on the roof of the Grand Lake Theatre, top stunt being three-column reproduction of wire from the Old Gent to the paper announcing his landing. Paper followed with story that Santa was to tour the town via auto, parade of cooperating cars meeting in front of the theatre. Stunt was part of the local merchant-newspaper plan to stimulate holiday business.

Among other Fox West Coast activities reported by Dean Hyskell was a stocking stunt by Dave Fred wherein youngsters were asked to bring stockings with their names imprinted to be filled with gifts. In Phoenix, Ariz., Will Osborne tied in with Sears to put on a Toyland Circus, store furnishing trailer and supplying all the gifts. Will also put on a Santa coloring contest, the store printing the head in weekly house magazine and awarding the prizes.

At Loew's State, Los Angeles, Spyros Cardas inaugurated a new checking service with a strong plug via trailer and ads. Theatre furnished large bags and when patrons arrived with more than one article to check, they were all placed in the larger container. On each package was placed colored Christmas sticker with greetings copy and theatre cut. The new service was highly appreciated, says Cardas, with the theatre checking more parcels than ever before, which meant a lot of extra admissions from the Christmas shopping crowds.

Ohio Warnerites Busy With Pre-Christmas Plans

Managers in Dick Wright's Warner Ohio zone are already breaking publicity for their seasonal tieups and promotions.

Frank Harpster, Ohio Theatre, Mansfield, planted stories as early as Nov. 19th for his Christmas Charity Show given a month later. His theatre, the American Legion, and the Mansfield News Journal call themselves the "Three Muster Cheers." Annually they put on a campaign to raise funds for baskets to be distributed to the needy. Groundwork has been set for a program that will provide Christmas baskets for some 600 families. Climax of the campaign is special midnight show given on Dec. 19th. Daily front page stories tie in the theatre.

Bill Dworski, Madison Theatre and Wayne Williams at the Majestic, also in Mansfield, have completed arrangements for annual "Food Matinees" tying in with the "Muster Cheers" program. Dworski is concentrating on benefit ticket sales during the month in order to stimulate his grosses.

Harvey Cocks, at the Strand, Akron, has booked a Christmas eve preview of "Gold Diggers of 1937." Taking advantage of the tremendous amount of publicity given to the Gold Diggers Plane on its visit to Cleveland, Harvey arranged with the Akron Chamber of Commerce for a bannered plane, carrying ten passengers, to fly from Akron to the Cleveland airport to welcome the Gold Diggers. Aboard the plane were newspaper representatives, airport officials, and Hizzonner the Mayor.

Warner Effects Delivery Tiein For "Ziegfeld"

sprinkled with diamond dust. Various other effective combinations were used for the rest of the decorations with a color wheel placed in center of marquee to enhance the effect together with 1,400 watt cluster lights on both ends.

Highly colorful, too, was a float constructed on a cotton seed trailer entirely enclosed, the display built in three steps topped by giant star cutouts with title and star copy. Treatment similar to the front was given the lettering and bases covered with corrugated board salvaged from old mattress covers and painted red. Corrugated board pasted with shippers' glue to form a three-inch thickness was cutout for the lettering, painted black with white faces and sprinkled with diamond dust.

Promotion of farm light plant allowed Warner to build shadow box on bannered truck that drew trailer. Spots were placed on rear of truck to light up float and effect of the unusual lighting was very favorable. Shadow boxes on both sides of stage and title shadow box measuring 22 feet long across floor of stage were also effective to the extent, says Warner, that patrons applauded when they were lighted between shows.

Lands Smash Ads

Top newspaper tiein was hookup with special truck express service operated by Oklahoma City paper to deliver copies of the daily in the territory and also used by merchants. Warner arranged for the shipment of empty can of film from Dallas by air to Oklahoma City, where it was met by one of the newspaper trucks and brought to Shawnee in record time. Idea was worked out to publicize efficiency of the truck service, further emphasized by smash ads taken by the truck operators in the Shawnee papers and illustrated by photo of the can being delivered from the plane to the auto express. Truck was met at city limits by float and private cars and escorted to theatre with spot from marquee trained on parade as it came down the main street.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Salina, Kansas

Dear Herald:

We are headed south with the ducks, but they will probably get there before we do, for we are going to call on the boys in Oklahoma. We left home in a cold wave, and a little snow, and have been driving in it clear down here to Salina, but it has cleared off and it now looks like we would have some fair weather.

We are in receipt of a letter from A. L. Pittenger of the Cato Show Print Company of Cato, New York, which we are passing on to the Herald for such action as seems fit. We wish to thank Mr. Pittenger for this letter and the many nice things he said, and especially for his saying, "All the boys here at the plant get a great kick out of your Colyum. Keep it up."

We are surprised to learn that the boys clear back in New York have ever seen this Colyum, much less wasting time to read it. However, we send our kindest regards to the Cato boys and thank Mr. Pittenger. We hope that when the season is open on bass the boys will catch all the law will allow 'em. That's about the best we can wish for anybody.

We stayed overnight in York, Neb., and went to the Sun theatre and called on Carl Rose, who manages the Sun and York theatres for the A. H. Blank Amusement Company. We have called on Carl several times before, once at Kearney, twice at Hastings and twice at York, and this time he showed us no more violence than he usually did, and that wasn't much. The fact is we doubt very much if Carl ever shows any violence to anybody. We've got him rated as 100 per cent up one side and down the other.

In our Colyum last week we addressed a letter to "Gertie" and since we have wondered if our very good friend Gertrude Merriam of the Herald staff had thought it in any way had reference to her, so we hasten to assure her that it did not, that our "Gertie" is purely imaginary.

When we are driving through a country we already have covered and called on the exhibitors we find it pretty difficult to fill this Colyum with very much besides bull. This is evidenced by a lot of theatre boys when they say to us, "Say, are you the guy who writes that bull for the Motion Picture Herald"? Doggone these doggone theatre boys, anyhow; they don't seem to care very much what they say to us.

At Minnesota, Kan., we stopped to call on our old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Musgrave, who operate the Ritz theatre. Ever since we called on them before we have had the itch to get back there and call on them again; they treated us so lovely, and they treated us fine this time. Mr. Musgrave wanted us to renew his subscription to the Herald because he said he didn't want to miss a copy. We are going to do it; it's one of the pleasant things we have to do during the closed season on ducks. Thanks, Mr. and Mrs. Musgrave; both the Herald and ourself wish you the best of everything.

We ought to get over to Lincoln and Plainwell, Kan., and call on our very good friends, Ray and Mayme Musselman of Lincoln and Mr. and Mrs. George Moore of Plainwell, but we can't do it this time; they are too far out of the way, but we wish them good luck, anyhow.

After we have seen the boys in Oklahoma and northern Texas for four or five or six weeks, we presume that a letter from you boys would reach us at Alamo, Texas, down in the Rio Grande valley, where we expect to stay until it warms up in Nebraska, that is, if Bob Smith of Mission and "Shine" Mason of McAllen can persuade the sheriff to let us remain, but if they can't we can come back up to San Marcos and visit that golf hound, Zimmerman, for a while.

A fellow told us in the lobby of the hotel that he went down in the basement to get a shine and found the shine artist asleep in his chair, and that a colored porter came down and slipped up and hit him over the head with a broom, and after the artist woke up and rubbed his eyes he said, "Say, Niggah, some of these times Ize gwyn to hit yo so hard that yo shirttail will fly up yo back like a window shade." Leave it to these "Niggahs" to hit 'em hard.

Some philosopher once said, "When you haven't anything to say, keep still." And that's pretty good advice, and we are going to act on it. But in closing we wish to call your attention again to the importance of having the Herald to help you in your business, for, as we have often said, It Covers the Field Like An April Shower.

THE FUTURE VOGUE IN AMUSEMENT NOW

JEFFERSON
AND HIS
"GAGS and GALS" in

"AMUSE YOURSELF"

The critics said of "Jeff" Machamer's first "Gags and Gals" Musical Comedy: "charming" . . . "gorgeous" . . . "refreshing" . . . "different" . . . "clever" . . . "novelty" . . . "delightful". Now here is his second, "AMUSE YOURSELF", with twice as many beautiful models, twice as many funny gags, twice as much pep and laughter and amusement. It sets the future vogue for short comedy musicals, but the leaders in comedy amusement bring it to you NOW.

SHOOTIN' HIGH

EVERY now and then, more likely than not because one Mr. Whitney is interested in a certain process and periodically does something about it, we have a wave of discussion about color on the screen. There seems generally, and that goes for the last twenty years, more color in print, than on the screen. Everybody seems to be a bit more concerned, if any at all, about color than the customers.

The last all-color picture which produced anything akin to an audience sensation was the Kinemacolor recording, a documentary film if you please, of the Durbar at Delhi, made by Charles Urban and brought into circulation about 1910. The organized industry of that day, which was the Motion Picture Patents Company, looked over the Durbar, took Mr. Urban to a very wet and prolonged dinner at the Republican Club in New York, and made complete arrangements for color to get nowhere in the United States. Mr. Urban took to alleged independent arrangements for distribution with the result that mostly his pictures were run upside down with the color filters reversed. It seems that neither the exhibitor nor his public was entirely prepared for the color revolution—which is yet to arrive.

Currently the color discussion which is occupying so much space in the daily press is centered about or takes pretext from the decidedly competent "Garden of Allah" which Mr. David Selznick has brought forth in color treatment, just as likely because of a connection between his corporation and Mr. Whitney as because of any really basic and uncontrollable Selznick admiration for color on the screen.

When one adds up all of the comment and reaction it seems to be said that color did not get in the way of the story—and that is progress, if one is to accept the critic's measure of the color productions which have gone before.

IT is clear enough that there is no proper reason for any fundamental hostility to color in the screen industry today, but color will have to do something new for itself to kindle a movement.

Casually looking back over the color efforts that began with the documentary "Durbar" and coming down to date by way of "The Glorious Adventure," "The Toll of the Sea" and all that has been offered since, it appears that a choice of vehicle may have had something to do with the course of development, or non-development. Because color is costly the almost inevitable address has been at the top of the market, in the selection of dramatic material, in merchandising, and all other approaches. Yet it just chances to be true that there is important probability that if color is to add at all to the emotional impact of the picture on the customer it will be in the primitive material of the lower audience brackets.

Words and action have implied color, implied at least for eyes that see with some erudition and experience. It would seem probable that the dumber and less imaginative the audience the more color might do for it.

CASTING about for possible parallel experiences in the arts, it is to be recalled that color came to the newspaper press, addressing itself expressly at mass consumption in the late Mr. Joseph Pulitzer's New York World in the comic entitled "The Yellow Kid," certainly humble in its pretensions, and yet the beginning of the wave of color which today is surging over the literature of the masses—today much more pretentiously, but not more eruditely.

It is possible that today's screen color efforts are shooting a bit high. The exquisite is not commonly popular.

Now the "Garden of Allah," for instance, takes most of its real dramatic intensity out of the spiritual concerns and soul ordeals of a man. There is, to be sure, some question, some very considerable question, as to whether or not it is picture material at all, but if it is, it is also clear enough that it pertains to a realm of human reaction so abstract that neither red, hot and blue, nor any other prismatic recording has anything to do with it.

The fact is that if the story is exciting enough nobody cares what color the hero's shirt is. And if it is not that exciting it is not exciting enough to be a motion picture.

Color to arrive must be put into the story, not painted on top.

RE-EDUCATION

ANY day's headlines, now, lend support to the contention of Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor of New York University, in his observation the other day that the "instruments of re-education," naming the press, radio and screen, must be kept free. "No formal education," remarks Dr. Chase, "in a world like that of today, can possibly last its owner through life. If then we are to be educated by current events, we must be able to keep open the channels to find what things are really going on." And that, in some ridiculous way, reminds us that there is a lot of attention in the current press to a Harvard graduate's recent magazine article finding that most of his classmates of twenty-five years ago do not read and can not write.

This Week

Recording Agreement Near

The new recording license agreements of Electrical Research Products, Inc., with the major producing organizations have been drawn up and may be signed by the first of the year, it was reported in New York this week. Only two points of difference are delaying the fixing of the signatures to the documents and with the return of Whitford Drake, Erpi vice-president, from his visit to California Monday, negotiations are expected to be brought to a hasty conclusion.

The two points holding up the contracts are discussed in the story on page 41.

WPA Project Cut

Official word came this week from the WPA of an expected drastic reduction in the federal theatre project, which has been taking some 425,000 potential customers away from film theatres every week—a potential loss of $2,420,000 to motion picture box offices.

Extent of the competition presented by the WPA theatre project to established film and theatrical business is described on page 15.

Denial Confirmed

Confirmation of Isidore Ostrer's statement that John Maxwell of Associated British Pictures does not hold a five year option to purchase the 5,100 "A" shares of Metropolis and Bradford Trust owned by the Ostrer brothers, was made this week by Maurice Ostrer on his arrival in New York. Mr. Ostrer explained that if 20th Century-Fox sells its 4,900 shares he and his brothers would be forced to sell their's to Mr. Maxwell.

The Gaumont British tangle is partly unraveled on page 50.

Italian Accord

Leaders of the motion picture industry in Italy are pleased with the accord reached by Ambassador William Phillips and the Government on restrictions governing importation of American films, according to a story cabled from Rome.

The liberalized regulations and the background of the dispute between the American film companies and the Italian Government are explained on page 34.

Sales Sessions

Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and Universal Pictures have decided on mid-seasonal sales conventions, following similar meetings held by Columbia, MGM and Warners.

The aims and accomplishments of the distributors' sales conferences are set forth on page 54.

Lichtman Replies

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, through Al Lichtman, assistant to President Nicholas M. Schenck, went before the annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio in Columbus this week and defended the company's sales policies against the attacks of independent exhibitors. Taxation problems also were discussed by legislative and state leaders.

Highlights of the convention speeches are found on page 26.

Criticism Barred

Adolf Hitler to "the profound awe" and "burning gratitude" of German artists in every field, has "reached his protecting hands over Germany's artistic life." According to decree of Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Reich minister of propaganda and public enlightenment, there will be no more critics of motion pictures, drama, literature, or any work of art. The critics will be supplanted by "reporters," and critiques of whatever kind will be succeeded by "descriptions" and "appreciations." If any former critic feels that the hand of Der Fuehrer is too heavy he can go and write a book for himself, Dr. Goebbels points out.

The decree, Dr. Goebbels' comments and some interesting figures on the German film industry are in the story on page 38.

Tribute to Hutchinson

The Hon. J. A. Lyons, prime minister of Australia, was host to Walter J. Hutchinson, general foreign manager of Twentieth Century-Fox on his visit to the federal capital at Canberra. Stanley S. Crick, the company's managing director for Australia, and Charles E. Munro, managing director of Hoyts, shared in the tribute. Newspapers called the function a further cementing of friendship between the two nations, and a deserved honor to three men who had done much for development of the industry in Australia.

Further details on page 73.

De Mille Asks Truce

Cecil B. De Mille, looking both ways at the screen versus radio controversy from his position as producer-director for Paramount and master of ceremonies of the Lux Theatre of the Air, asked this week for a permanent truce between the two media of entertainment. Pointing out the advantages of cooperation to both parties he pleaded for a continuance of the steps toward peace which were marked last week by appointment of a producers' committee to arbitrate disputes over star broadcasts.

The producer's views and other news of the "feud" are on page 18.

Boettiger Resigns

John Boettiger, assistant to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of Americ, Inc., for the past two years, last week tendered his resignation to accept the position of publisher of William Randolph Hearst's Post-Intelligencer in Seattle, Washington. Mrs. Boettiger, the former Anna Roosevelt Dall, is also reported joining the newspaper as editor of the women's page.

The story is on page 54.

New Maxwell Company

John Maxwell, head of Associated British Pictures, has announced plans for flotation of a new company, Associated British Properties, Ltd., with a capital of £1,000,000. He will issue £2,000,000 of 4½% per cent first mortgage debentures. The company will operate 30 freehold and 24 leasehold theatres in England which Mr. Maxwell is acquiring from Associated Cinema Properties, Ltd.

More Pictures

Jesse Lasky this week told a nationwide radio audience that the general business improvement is resulting in an increase of 300 feature pictures over last year's total of 525, and will cost some $150,000,000, bringing reemployment to thousands.

Cancellation Problem

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, through its president, Ed Kuykendall, this week asked Universal Pictures whether the 10 per cent cancellation clause applied when the company's product was divided between two exhibitors. Universal's grant of the concession is in line with the trade practice program of the exhibitor organization. The distributor replied that the privilege will be allowed to exhibitors who "split" the program as well as to those who take all of it.

For details, see story on page 44.

RKO Petition

Ernest W. Stirn of Milwaukee attacked the legality of RKO's outstanding common stock in a petition presented Wednesday to the U. S. District Court in New York. Mr. Stirn is a holder of 1,234 shares of old RKO Class A stock and the petition, which appears to be directed at the treatment accorded the old Class A stock by the Atlas Corporation plan of reorganization for RKO, was referred to Federal Judge William Bondy for hearing on December 23rd concurrently with the scheduled hearing on the reorganization plan.

Mr. Stirn's petition asks leave to bring suit in Baltimore against the Maryland State Tax Commission, RKO and others, to test the legality of the amendment to RKO's certificate of incorporation which was adopted in the company's refinancing plan of 1931, under which Class A shares were exchanged for new RKO common on a 4-for-1 basis. Mr. Stirn asserts that he refused to exchange his Class A shares for the new common and declares in the petition that "several hundred thousand shares" of the old Class A are still outstanding.

59 Stories Bought

Competition among the motion picture producers during the month of November resulted in 59 vehicles, taken from studio writers, publications and the legitimate theatre, being purchased by 15 producers. This is a slightly lower total than during the months of October and September, when 70 and 74 stories were bought by Hollywood.

Stories purchased are listed on page 23.

47 Shakespeare Films

Motion picture critics are all wrong in their observations about the present cycle of Shakespearean films being an important precedent as a cycle. The WPA Federal Writers' Project, in New York, researching for material for their motion picture bibliography, find that "As You Like It," the newest, is the 47th Shakespearean film to be produced. Greater cycles existed as early as the 1900's.

The WPA's report on William Shakespeare appears on page 76.

Four Dividends

As Pathe Film Corporation, General Theatres Equipment, Radio Corporation of America and Westinghouse Electric revealed the declaration of dividends this week, the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Washington said that grosses on Broadway were climbing and that the admission taxes for October were the highest for the year.

See page 56.

British Theatre Deal

Cinema Ground Rents and Properties, Ltd., theatre owning company, has been registered in London with a capitalization of £5,000,000 ($25,000,000). Simmonds and Simmonds, the new company's solicitors, refuse to divulge the names of the principals of the organization.

Reports that the large capitalization will be used immediately in a large theatre deal connect it with either C. M. Woolf, or Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which has long been planning a theatre development in England, or the Odeon Circuit, which has an arrangement with United Artists.

Goldwyn Replies

Samuel Goldwyn takes pen in hand to answer the familiar question: "What's the matter with the movies?", and placing the blame for faults on motion picture audiences. "Hollywood can exist only by the rule of audience acceptance and audience rejection—the public is getting what it is asking for," Mr. Goldwyn concludes.

Hays Feted

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by leading representatives of the British film industry in London at the conclusion of his European vacation. Having visited Rome, Paris and London, Mr. Hays is now on board the Normandie en route to New York and scheduled to arrive on Monday.

The story is on page 23.

Chicago Double Bills

Now that Balaban and Katz has started double featuring in its "B" and "C" week theatres in the Chicago area, other circuits are following suit. Latest to adopt the plan is Essaness. Warner Brothers, however, prefers giving away automobiles to adding the film rental costs involved in double billing to stimulate patronage.

Other Chicago news on page 72.

Talent Quest

Sharply divided are Hollywood studios in opinion as to whether new screen personalities may be most successfully developed in talent schools operated for the purpose or by swift promotion of young players through progressively important roles in standard product.

A brief notation of results obtained by both methods is published on page 35.

Wounded Cameraman

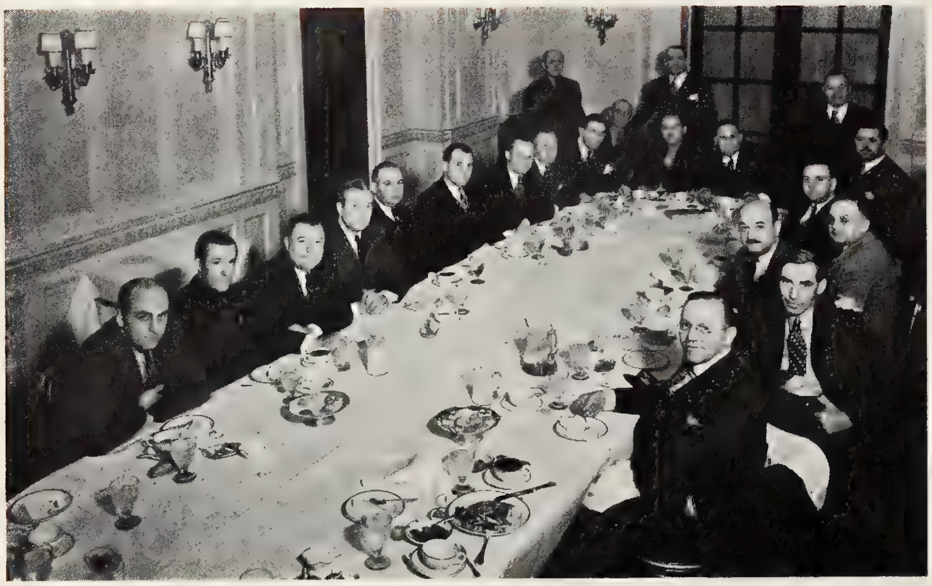
Arthur Menken, Paramount newsreel war correspondent, returned to Broadway this week, the first American newsreel casualty on the Civil War front in Spain.

Mr. Menken describes the cameraman's job on the battlelines, on page 36.

New South Wales Quota

Notice was forwarded to six major distributing organizations in Sydney on Wednesday by the New South Wales Government, requesting them to show cause why they have not complied with the quota law. Indicating that the Government is determined to bring about production in Sydney is an official definition of the word "acquire" which appears in the quota law but never has been defined clearly. It is now explained that the word means production on obtaining possession of motion pictures produced in Australia for quota purposes. It is reported that the entire domestic industry plans to register its protest in a petition.

This Week in Pictures



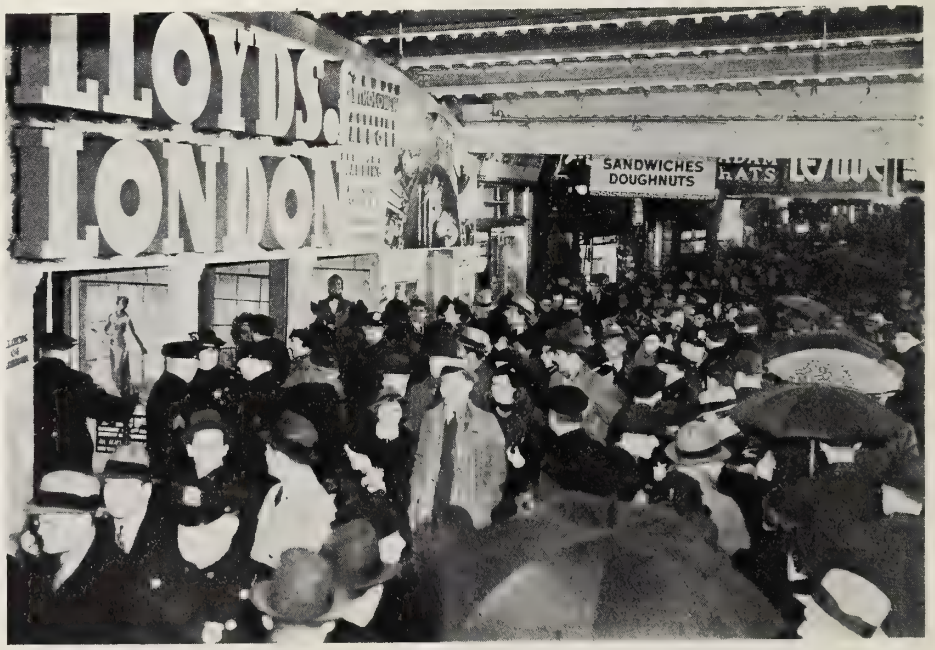
PLAN DRIVE. Paramount and M. & P. Theatres executives meeting in Boston to map Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee campaign in New England. Seated: W. H. Erbb, J. J. Unger, Marty Mullin, N. F. Agnew, C. Standing: M. Murphy, Al Kane, Jake Lourie.

ON VACATIONS. The camera bagged two stars with a single shot in recording the arrival in New York of Francis Lederer and Margo. His next is Columbia's "Chopin." She recently completed "Lost Horizons" for Columbia.

HER DAY. Birthday felicitations for an unsung colleague—Hollis Barnes, hairdresser—confectionately expressed (below) by members of RKO Radio's "Night Waitress" company. At right, Lew Landers, director. Center, Gordon Jones and Margot Grahame, leads.

SIGNED. Victor Schertzinger, veteran director engaged by Grand National as a producer. He is one of several producers recently signed by GN.

BROADWAY PREMIERE. (Below) Scene typical of a New York first-night, despite the rain, as 20th Century-Fox opened "Lloyds of London" at the Astor theatre. The production stars Madeleine Carroll and Freddie Bartholemew.



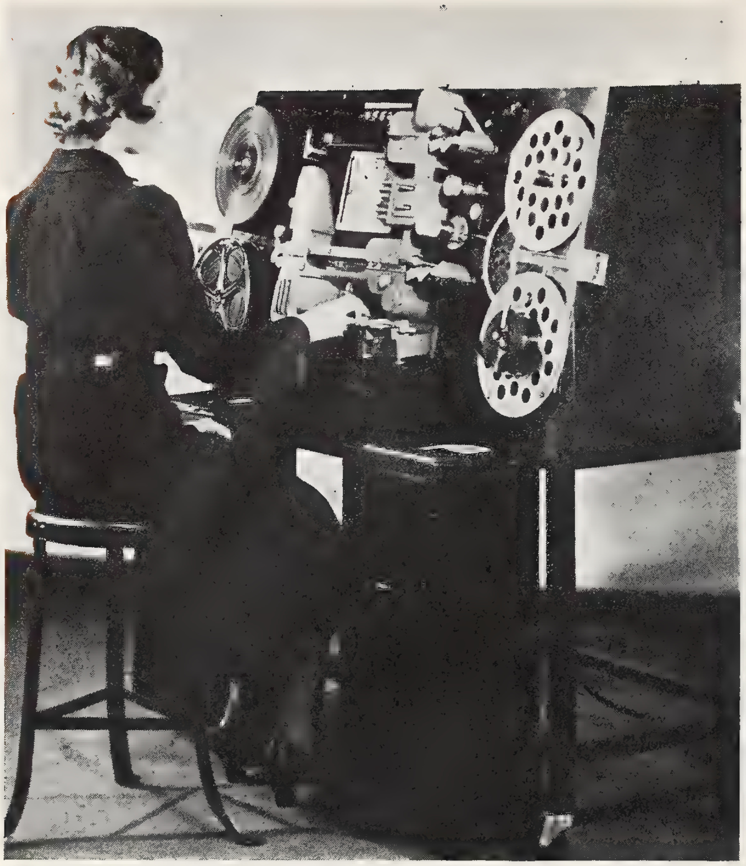
VACATION OVER. (Below) Herbert Marshall saluting New York's spires from the Normandie, returning from a month's rest in his native England. He resumes work at RKO Radio with "Behold the Bridegroom," co-starred with Barbara Stanwyck.

DISTRIBUTION ARRANGED. Stars and executives who figured in deal completed by Arthur A. Lee of GB, and Herbert Wilcox, British producer, by which GB will release Wilcox pictures in America. Shown are Tullio Carminati, Mr. Lee, Anna Neagle, George W. Weeks, GB sales head; Mr. Wilcox, and A. P. Waxman, GB advertising director.

NAMED PRODUCER. Richard A. Rowland, who has signed with Grand National to make eight features, four of them for the current GN program.

PREMIERE 8,000 FEET UP. (Below) The TWA transport plane on which Universal gave "Flying Hostess" its first performance. Judith Barrett, the star, is shown at the projector with Betty Steffens, TWA hostess.

HERE FOR CONFERENCES. Stephen Pallos, general manager of London Films, arriving in New York (with his wife, the actress, Esther Kiss), for talks with United Artists officials in both the East and Hollywood.



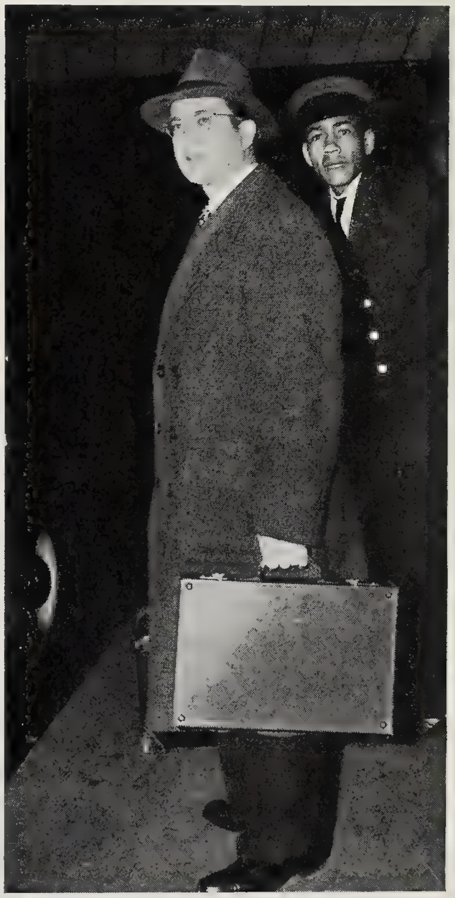
AID FOR CUTTERS. Operator at the new Akeley-Leventhal film editor developed by Akeley Camera, Inc. It has an optical intermittent and gives an image 6x8 inches.

KEYED UP. Gala welcome from Jersey City and Newark officials for Warners' flying "Gold Diggers of 1937" on their arrival at Newark airport on transcontinental plane tour.

ON HOME TOWN MISSION. Cleveland's Eleanore Whitney, now a Paramount featured player, conferring over coffee with Harry Goldstein, Paramount district manager, on her recent visit to the Ohio metropolis to inaugurate the Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee drive there.

RHYTHM GAL (Left) Strictly modern. Toothsomely named Sugar—Sugar Geise. Petite ex-Chicagoan who figures fetchingly in MGM's new musical, "Born to Dance," wherein she demonstrates that she was.

ON EASTERN VISIT. S. J. Briskin (right), vice president of RKO Radio in charge of production, as he arrived the other day in New York, having come from the studio for one of his periodical conferences with home office executives.



CHICAGO STORES FIGHT $6,000,000 CHANCE GAMES

Police Action Threatened After Exhibitors Say They Will Retain Policy; Mayor Kelly Indicates Refusal to Act

Handouts to Patrons Now $100,000 a Week; Nationwide Awards Are Estimated at Over Hundred Million Dollars

American business men have taken up the fight against chance games and cash awards as practised at motion picture theatres. In Chicago, the Better Business Bureau has brought the fight out into the open, notifying exhibitors that unless these schemes are abandoned forthwith, demands will be made upon authorities to prosecute all participants for violation of the lottery laws. Warnings of jail sentences were sounded.

The exhibitors, meeting Tuesday with the Business Bureau, gave notice that they have no intention of abandoning the practice, and so police action is expected to be forced not only by the merchants of the Bureau, but by clergymen throughout Chicago.

Exhibitors in Chicago alone are giving away $6,000,000 a year through the chance games and awards, in excess of $100,000 a week, it was disclosed in an investigation by the Chicago Tribune. On that basis, the annual bill of exhibitors for such giveaways might approach $100,000,000, Chicago representing only five and one-half per cent of the American exhibition market.

Distributors have been complaining that enormous sums are being lost to the organized motion picture industry, running a stream of gold into channels which have no other interest in the business than that of promoting cash award systems, giveaway schemes and such, for which they either charge the exhibitor a royalty for a "franchise" or collect a percentage of the receipts on any increased business. These costs are in addition to the reputed $100,000,000 annual bill to exhibitors for awards to the public for spending elsewhere.

The basic complaint of the merchants is that they lose millions annually in sales of china and silver, pots, pans and foodstuffs, automobiles, refrigerators and whatnot which the exhibitors give away to patrons.

The merchants in other localities have threatened exhibitors that continuance of the giveaway practice would force them to cancel their widespread cooperation with theatres in exploitation tieups on pictures.

The first blow in the Chicago situation was struck last Saturday morning when the Better Business Bureau ordered Kenneth Barnard, its general manager, to declare "war" on exhibitors employing any of the cash awards systems.

Mr. Barnard addressed a rather strong warning both to Allied Theatres of Illinois and to the Exhibitors Association of Chicago, as follows:

Developments in Chance Games

While the Chicago Better Business Bureau and Chicago clergymen were laying the groundwork for what threatens to be the most forceful attack on chance games to date, there were other important developments.

Cash awards "and all of its modified systems" were declared by a Chicago court to be "lottery pure and simple, and a violation of the law."

Illinois attorney general ruled that "Bank Nights" and such are not only illegal but might subject participants to $2,000 fine or two years in jail.

A cash award in Denver reached $6,200.

Some 68 per cent of Kansas City theatres had chance games.

Drawings were spreading in Connecticut.

Iowa state court ruled that Screeno was not a lottery.

Independent owners in New York were extending cash award practice.

Alabama courts were about to settle the fate of the plan there.

Oklahoma City owners were sued for allegedly infringing on "Bank Night."

Mississippi was expecting a "sweeping" investigation.

Pittsfield, Mass., barred chance games.

Milwaukee was preparing control by municipal legislation.

A newspaper publisher in Redwood City, Cal., threatened grand jury action against city officials unless they stopped cash awards at theatres.

Northwest owners were preparing to fight the "Bank Night" copyright owners on any infringement suits.

"Bank Night" insurance for patrons who lose awards because of nonattendance was rejected by the State of Nebraska.

"The attention of your association and its members is invited to the Act of the Illinois Legislature of March 27, 1874, Paragraphs 180 to 185 inclusive.

"Please be advised that this organization is receiving complaints in ever-increasing numbers, not only against 'Bank nights' themselves, but against the manner in which they are advertised and conducted.

"In the opinion of the Bureau's counsel, these schemes are in clear violation of the statute above mentioned. In connection with said statute, you will please note that it unlawful not only to set up a lottery and sell tickets for the same, but even to advertise one. A second offense is punishable not only by the fine prescribed in the act, but, in addition, by a jail term not exceeding one year.

"It is respectfully submitted and noted that none of the present advertising copy, having to do with 'bank nights,' would be permitted in the United States mails, under well known postal regulations. Moreover, any actual use of the mails for lottery purposes, without the knowledge of the Government, is declared unlawful by federal statute, with heavy penalties prescribed for violations thereof.

"Under Section No. 316 of the Federal Communications Act, it is unlawful to broadcast lottery advertising.

"In addition to what the Bureau considers obvious violations of the state law, prohibiting the conduct and advertising of lotteries, the following matters, which have been uncovered in Bureau investigations, are, the Bureau believes, of great interest to the public:

"1. Involved 'registration' systems, with additional requirements for 'attendance coupons,' have been characteristic of these schemes from the start.

"2. So far the plan strayed from its avowed original purpose that children, working people and others may now purchase a theatre ticket and register without the formality of being in attendance at the performance where the drawing is supposedly to be made, or, indeed, attending any performance at all. In the Bureau's opinion, this reduces the scheme, if it was ever anything more, to the plain level of public gambling.

"3. Large awards, such as '$1,600 Banks,' are advertised but not always given. They are often split into small and large sums, on a plan approved by the management, but unknown to patrons, of awarding only one large amount, such as $1,000, if a claimant appears for it. The balance of the total award is then arbitrarily postponed.

"4. In a recent suit to recover an award claimed to have been duly won, the defense, according to newspaper reports, set up the argument that the plaintiff had no case, because the scheme might be illegal. In other words, the defense allegedly used the illegality of its own scheme as an excuse to break faith with the public.

"5. Automobiles, instead of money, are now being advertised (but not in the mails), as a similar gambling lure.

"6. The effect of 'bank nights,' or schemes of similar nature, has been to invite and promote the existence of other schemes, disconnected with theatres, also in violation of the statute above named."

"Curiously enough, many theatre owners are said to be anxious to drop the entire plan, but are obliged to participate against their better judgment, and solely in self-defense.

"The situation has become so acute that the Bureau takes these means of requesting, from your association, an expression of your intentions as to the future.

"Unless assurances are received that these schemes are to be abandoned forthwith, it is the Bureau's intention to lay the facts promptly before his Honor, Edward J. Kelly, Mayor of Chicago (and who issues theatre licences), Police Commissioner Allman, and Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes, for appropriate action."

STORES PROTECT CHANCE GAMES

The Bureau's Mr. Barnard met on Tuesday afternoon with Aaron Saperstein, representing Allied, and Morris Leonard, representing the Independent Exhibitors' Association. Mr. Barnard emerged from the meeting with the statement that the theatremen had claimed their association members were not violating any laws and that they planned to continue the games.

Directing the attention of the civic and police authorities to the situation, Mr. Barnard announced receipt of a letter from the Chicago Ministers' Association enclosing a formal resolution endorsing the stand of the Business Bureau.

Warns of Jail Sentences

At the same time the Bureau received word that state's attorney general Otto Kerner had ruled on Tuesday that "Bank Nights" and the like in theatres are not only illegal but might subject the participants to a maximum sentence of a $2,000 fine or two years in jail should anyone prosecute on charges of conspiracy to commit a crime.

Attorney General Kerner declared, "I think all schemes like 'Bank Nights' and the gifts of automobiles are lotteries regardless of their names or the forms under which they appear."

Thus far both the Chicago police and the state's attorney have refused to act, saying the matter was one for the attorney general. But now, with the pressure from ministers and the Better Business Bureau, it is felt in Chicago that either the Police Department or the Mayor's office will go into action.

A local ordinance states that the mayor can revoke theatre permits if lotteries are being run in theatres.

Self-Preservation Is Plea

Dozens of small Chicago theatre owners, as elsewhere, have been active in trying to halt the practice, claiming they were forced into it for self-preservation. However, Balaban and Katz, dominant circuit, and the other large Chicago circuits, insisted they were not violating any law.

On Wednesday it was learned that if any action takes place in Chicago it will be against all forms of giveaways, cash and otherwise.

"Bank Nights" in Chicago said they knew "nothing about the situation," but their legal staff stood ready to protect its interests. The Oriental theatre, Chicago, on Tuesday night proceeded with its announced award of $3,000 in cash.

The magnitude of theatre prize drawings as a business activity drew the attention late last week of the Chicago Tribune, which learned that "nearly $6,000,000 has been given away in prizes at the 250 motion picture houses here which conduct such enterprises." The Tribune said it based its information on data supplied by theatre executives.

The newspaper said officials in Chicago had received complaints from persons who charged that the drawings encouraged gambling and so were "a social menace."

CHICAGO MAYOR HINTS REFUSAL TO BAR GAME

Mayor Kelly, of Chicago, said on Wednesday that he probably would not take steps to prohibit chance games. He added that he "did not intend to make Chicago another Philadelphia."

The mayor declared that he was not certain that prize drawings were wrong but that it was evident the public wanted them.

The Tribune estimated that "the theatres here which conduct prize drawings pay out an average of $80 a week to the winners. Theatre men declined to estimate just what the drawings had done for attendance, but they observed that only 50 of the city's 300 theatres did not have prize nights, and they asserted that on drawing days and nights receipts often equaled the total for the other six days of the week.

"The demand for participation (by the public) in the drawings is so great," the Tribune discovered, "that some theatres open at seven a.m. on drawing days, to permit early workers to register. At one theatre, with 1,400 seats, 12,000 people were registered on a single day when a large drawing was offered.

"Theatre men," the Tribune continued, "concede the small prizes of $50 or $100, do not greatly increase attendance. The jump in crowds comes after the prize has increased week by week to more sizeable amounts. Recently, at one theatre, a single prize of $2,750 was offered."

Anti-Bank Night Ruling

The Chicago Better Business Bureau's action was taken subsequent to a strong anti-bank night ruling made a few days previously by Chicago's Magistrate Judge John H. Lyle, in municipal court, who declared that "bank night and all of its modified systems is lottery pure and simple, and is a violation of the law." Mrs. Catherine MacDonald had sued the owners of the Sixty-third Street theatre, in Englewood, a Chicago suburb, for $500 which she claimed was due her in a chance game cash award.

The court held that the theatre could not be made to pay because a suit against something illegal had no standing in court.

Police Commissioner Allman declared after the MacDonald case that he was going to investigate the chance games, but no further action was recorded.

The socalled "bank night" plan which brought a lottery ruling was not the copyright bank night plan for which Affiliated Enterprises of Denver is licensee, Harry Smythe, Chicago representative, said this week. Mr. Smythe's company claimed that more than 200 theatres in the Chicago area and 100 more in other parts of Illinois were using their systems.

Launching Plan at Omaha

At Omaha, with all five first-run theatres and all 23 suburban houses cooperating, weekly Bank Night will be launched generally this month. The initial prize will be $1,000. Affiliated Enterprises is said to oppose the cooperative system.

At Denver this week "Lucky Seven" theatres were offering $3,000 as prize money. The Harry Huffman circuit was offering $900 weekly besides the usual automobile and trip to Chicago at the theatres' expense. The Civic Theatre Circuit last week gave away $2,200 to bring the week's total of prize money to $6,100.

Kansas City reported 25 subsequent runs, or 68 per cent, giving away some form of premium.

From New Haven, the effort to recapture juvenile patronage with giveaways was spreading over Connecticut.

The Iowa district court ruled that Screeno was not a lottery. Last week, Paul Powers who operates the Rex in Glenwood, was arrested and acquitted.

In Greater New York the interest in chance games seemed to be increasing again. The Century Circuit, neighborhood chain,, closed with Affiliated Enterprises to put Bank Night in five more of its theatres. Affiliated recently settled a litigation with Harry Brandt.

The courts of Alabama soon will settle the legality of chance games. C. B. Grimes, manager of the Tuscaloosa theatre operating a "jack pot," was indicted after an opinion by Judge Henry B. Foster, who said that he thought the plan was a lottery.

In Oklahoma City, Affiliated Enterprises brought suit in United States district court against Standard Theatres, asking an injunction and $10,000 damages on a charge that Standard's Bank Deposit Award Night plan was an infringement.

At Denver, managers of four of the "Lucky Seven" theatres were haled before Police Judge Phillip B. Gilliam on charges of running a gambling game in connection with their Bank Night.

In Jackson, Miss., a sweeping grand jury investigation of Bank Night was foreshadowed in the charge to the new Hinds County grand jury by Circuit Judge Julian Alexandria.

Despite the ruling of the Massachusetts supreme court in the summer that Bank Night was not a lottery, City Solicitor Charles R. Alberti of Pittsfield prohibited the practice.

In Milwaukee regulation of Screeno, Bank Night and other chance games will be attempted by the city through an ordinance which Assistant City Attorney Carl F. Zeidler is drafting. The ordinance would provide an annual license fee of $100 to be paid by operators.

Indictment May Be Asked

Unless the Redwood City, Cal., city council immediately stops Bank Night, Screeno, Ten-o-Win and similar games in local theatres, indictment of city officials and theatre managers will be asked of the San Mateo County grand jury, J. C. Chastain said this week. Mr. Chastain is publisher of the Redwood City Weekly Standard and has long campaigned against slot machines and similar devices. The Ten-o-Win Amusement Company of San Francisco is suing Blumenfeld Theatres, operators of the Del Paso, Sacramento, and owners of rival games, claiming patent infringements.

Northwest Allied Theatres sent out a letter asking its members to subscribe to a fund to defend "bank night," according to Stanley Kane, executive secretary. Basis for the Allied claim is that Affiliated Enterprises, through its attorney, Sam Halpern, is threatening to prosecute users of the scheme who do not pay royalties.

The director of state insurance in Nebraska turned down a proposal submitted to him by P. W. Downs, of Omaha, which would have permitted the creation of a company to insure persons who are not present at Bank Night drawings when their names are called.

Uphold "Ecstasy" Ruling

The court of appeals at Albany has affirmed a decision of the appellate division in refusing to punish Joan of Arc Pictures, Inc., and Sherman S. Krellberg for contempt of court in connection with the showing of a film using the word "Ecstasy."

WPA STAGE PROJECT, PLAYING TO 425,000 WEEKLY, OFFICIALLY CUT

Riots Follow Confirmation of Reduction of Scope of Theatricals Sponsored by Government; 1,200 Plays in 250 Towns

Fifty Players a Week Being Returned to Private Industry; Project Called Hunting Ground for Film Talent

Official confirmation by Lieutenant-Colonel Brehon B. Somerville, Works Progress Administrator in New York, of a deep reduction in the ranks of WPA theatre projects was answered this week by angry delegations of workers who filed "a stack of protests that filled an entire waste basket," coming from actors, musicians and similar independent and organized groups affected.

Administrator Somerville's order quickly brought violent reactions in New York when, on Tuesday, affected workers stormed various WPA headquarters in protest. Groups of artists besieged the art project offices and for three hours engaged in hand-to-hand battles with 80 policemen. Twelve protestors were injured and one policeman, as the crowds formed a "human chain" in their refusal to leave the offices until their dismissals were rescinded. Scores were arrested, and dozens treated by doctors.

Dismissed workers of the Writers' Project in New York called a "strike" in New Jersey, while New York's second battle came when 500 workers of the Theatre Project forced their way into the offices and started a melee.

This is the first tangible indication of an ebbing of the flow of United States Government competition with motion picture exhibitors and with the established legitimate stage.

There also arrived this week evidence of the widespread extent to which the WPA's theatre projects have been competing until now with private business. The March of Time, in dissecting the WPA stage venture, estimated that 425,000 persons attend the federal shows every week, a yearly audience of approximately 22,100,000 persons, whose WPA theatre attendance, exhibitors claim, mean a potential loss to their film houses of some $2,420,000, based on the average film admission charge of 20 cents per person.

The Federal Theatre Project to date has put on 1,200 plays throughout the country, using 152 individual producing units, including 50 traveling "road" companies, and playing in 250 towns.

The national project has a total of 9,523 actors on its rolls, each receiving $23.86 weekly, representing a salary total of $227,218 per week. In addition, there are 1,500 supporting cast members on the payrolls, 1,477 supervisors, stage directors, scenic designers, managers and costumers, paid as follows: Directors, $120 to $175 a month, depending on their status; stage hands, electricians and musicians, $23.86 weekly.

The Federal Theatres Project had been working with a $6,700,000 allotment up to June, 1936, from the general WPA appropriation from Congress. And from July, 1936, has been using a $7,000,000 allotment. The original $6,700,000 was part of the $27,000,000 allotted to the four art projects of the WPA: theatre, art, music, writing.

EINSTEIN INVENTOR OF CAMERA DEVICE

Dr. Albert Einstein, proponent of the relatively theory, has been revealed as collaborator on a simple, practical invention to enable any amateur to use a camera successfully without knowing how to time an exposure. The scientist worked with Dr. Gustav Bucky, known for the development of the curative uses of the X-ray. The device uses a photoelectric cell attached to the camera lens.

As the camera is focused the action of the cell automatically moves a screen of varying intensity in front of the lens, thus admitting the proper amount of light.

50 Players a Week

The theatre project is returning on an average of 50 players to private stage employment every week, and March of Time finds that in Hollywood, "powerful film producers, like Adolph Zukor, offer the Federal Theatre friendly advice and encouragement," because, in the project, "they see good hunting grounds for new actors, promising dramatists."

Regardless, there has been no case made public where any WPA actor, dramatist or technician has received employment, or been "reclaimed" by Hollywood.

And now comes the order to curtail the project, thus lessening the competition to the established motion picture, which began last year when the WPA first made its appearance in the form of free out-of-door portable shows, then evolving into indoor "oldtime" minstrel shows, gradually taking on new form as touring road shows to 1,500 Civilian Conservation camps, Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, marionette shows for youngsters, Negro touring units of "Macbeth," and, finally, to Broadway, where the climax was reached, in October, with the staging of Sinclair Lewis's propaganda play, "It Can't Happen Here," in English and Yiddish, with simultaneous openings in 20 other cities. The latest development, of course, is the WPA radio show, broadcast every Wednesday night over a National Broadcasting Company network that will eventually send the units into motion picture and any other theatres which will book them.

1,923 in New York Alone

Some 1,923 workers and actors on the four art projects will be discharged in New York alone, Colonel Somerville now announces, with the greatest cut hitting the theatre project, where New York's roster of 5,548 persons will be reduced on January 1st to 4,556.

According to Colonel Somerville, the persons who will be let go will be "unessential non-relief workers," and the least useful of the personnel, even if they are on relief.

Members of a committee representing the 21 unions and organizations whose members are employed in the projects are chargig that the actors and other workers involved "have been double-crossed" by the WPA. Protesting are actors, theatre supervisors, musicians and the like, represented as follows: Morris Watson, for the Federal Theater Project Supervisors' Council; David Freed, Local 802, American Federation of Musicians; Morris Levine, secretary of Local 453 of the WPA Teachers' Union; David Rosenberg, of the American Writers' Union, and Oscar Fuss, secretary to the City Projects Council.

See Legal Fight Over Town's Theatre Ordinance

A legal contest is expected as a result of the adoption last week by the Dover, N. J., Township Committee of an ordinance said to be designed to prevent operations of a proposed theatre there by Walter Reade. The operation of the house is blocked by the ordinance, however, which prohibits theatres within specified distances of schools, churches and hospitals.

Moser-Terry Ruling Reserved

Justice Raymond E. Aldrich in White Plains Tuesday reserved decision on a motion of Frank H. Moser for examination of Earl W. Hammons before trial in Mr. Moser's suit for $500,000 against Paul H. Terry, president, and William M. Weiss, secretary, of TerryToons, Inc., and Mr. Hammons, as head of Educational Pictures. The plaintiff charges he was misled into a sale of his half interest in TerryToons.

Legion Founder Visits Studios

Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati, founder of The Legion of Decency, accompanied by 14 other dignitaries of the Catholic Church, arrived in Hollywood Tuesday to attend the enthronization ceremonies of Archbishop-elect John J. Cantwell. The Cincinnati prelate will visit the studios while in California.

Union Officers Installed

The new officers of the Empire Union, motion picture operators' organization in New York, were installed Tuesday night at the Irving Plaza. They include: A. I. Kindler, president; Benjamin S. Greenstein, vice-president; William Sanparsiero, recording secretary; Louis David, treasurer: William Greenspan, financial secretary; Frank Asch, business agent; Pete Elarde, sergeant-at-arms.

DE MILLE URGES A LASTING PEACE IN EXHIBITORS' "FEUD" WITH RADIO

Insists That Business Done by a Picture After a Star Broadcast More Than Makes Up Loss Incurred on That Night

An appeal to extend and make permanent the gesture toward peace between the screen and the radio as expressed in the appointment of a producers' committee to arbitrate in specific cases, was made this week by Cecil B. De Mille, who enjoys the dual role of producer-director for Paramount and master of ceremonies for the Lux Theatre of the Air. The socalled "feud" was started a year ago by exhibitors who charge that film stars' air appearances are unfair to box offices.

Mr. De Mille's weekly radio hour features broadcasts by stars under contract to his own and other motion picture companies and was one of the first of a number of similar programs which have aroused widespread and organized protests from exhibitors who claim that the broadcasts constitute unfair competition.

The producer made his appeal for a permanent peace on his arrival in New York this week from New Orleans, where he had attended a preview of Paramount's "The Plainsman." Last week it was announced that the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America had taken initial steps to settle the feud by appointing a committee to protect the popularity of screen stars by regulating their radio appearances. Radio network officials have agreed to cooperate with the committee.

Mr. De Mille disagreed with the arguments, offered by almost every exhibitor organization in the country in the last year, that film stars are injuring the industry by radio appearances, and that it is unfair competition to give potential theatre audiences, free of charge over the radio, the stars whose films the theatre owners rent at high cost.

Insists Radio Aids Films

"I don't see any reason for a fight," the producer said. "I think the advertising that the stars and pictures get over the radio is worth a great deal to the stars and to the companies with whom they have contracts.

"Twenty to twenty-five million people get to know a star intimately. It's a sort of social personal appearance in the home. The business done by a picture after the star does a broadcast more than makes up for any business lost on the night of the broadcast. The motion picture theatres are doing the best business in years. If the radio did any harm business would be worse."

It was Mr. De Mille's opinion that radio had contributed a substantial number of stars to motion pictures and that they had brought patrons to the box office through their radio reputations. "I haven't heard any complaints from the exhibitors on that," he remarked.

SCREEN DECLARED ANTI-WAR WEAPON

Motion pictures are a potent instrument against war and their influence will prevent the war makers of Europe and Asia from consummating any plans they may have, Cecil B. DeMille told an interviewer in New York.

"You can't see a picture with a German or Japanese or Italian or French child in it and then think of a foreign nation as being essentially different in its broad, human aspects," he said. "It is a question whether it is the people or the politicians who make war. The screen brings friendship to people and they don't want war. Our influence is more powerful than political leaders realize. What the screen has done and is doing will defeat those political leaders, those war makers, who would foster hatred."

While on the subject of talent the producer expressed the belief that both motion pictures and the radio will have to create talent sources. He suggested extension of the little theatre movement, which, he said, is showing increasing signs of strength in colleges, and revival of the old stock companies.

"There is plenty of room in Hollywood for talent," he added. "Hollywood isn't crowded nearly as much as its requirements need. We've got to have the little theatre movement to bring people out where they can be seen. If they show talent, they won't have trouble landing. You can't kill the goose that laid the golden egg. The stock company was the goose and it laid a lot of golden eggs."

Radio's Value

Suggests Extension of the Little Theatre Movement As the Golden Goose of Both the Screen and Radio Thespians

The first problem considered by the committee established by the MPPDA was a new broadcast idea, put forward by two commercial sponsors, for the signing of an entire roster of star players, to be negotiated between the commercial sponsors and the studios. The Ford Motor Company was reported to have been dickering with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for exclusive broadcast rights to radio appearances of all stars under contract to MGM. A similar but more all-inclusive proposal, made by General Mills, was for an agreement with all Hollywood producers for all important stars. Both had contemplated taking microphones into the heart of production and every nook and corner of the studios for glimpses of the stars at work.

Conferences among the sponsors, radio officials and the new producers' committee brought out the fact that legal difficulties, engendered by the protective provisos and stipulations of players' contracts, were insurmountable and the projects were dropped. The committee will be called to arbitrate in any similar situations in the future, according to the plan of its establishment.

The large producing companies, realizing more and more the value of radio exploitation of pictures and of some sort of regulation of their stars' appearances on the air, are planning ways and means of retaining the best features of the screen-radio combination while answering the objections of exhibitors who complain that indiscriminate broadcasts by stars hurt business generally and in some cases compete with showings of pictures made by the same stars. A proposal, reported under consideration by MGM, is to use the broadcast directly for its own purposes rather than have the stars appear on commercial programs.

Variations of the plan include the selling of the programs to the highest commercial bidder, at the same time retaining control of the program. The manifold provisions of player contracts now in force are believed to place difficulties in the way of the proposal but it is reported that these contracts are now being analyzed, with a view to ironing out conflicting clauses and attaching riders which will permit MGM to use its own stars for radio. A special radio department may be set up.

RKO's Net May Climb As High as $2,250,000

RKO's consolidated net earnings for 1936 will pass the $2,000,000 mark and may approximately reach $2,250,000, if the seasonal December recession is no greater than usual, it was indicated at the New York offices this week. The net for the first two months of the current, and final, quarter is estimated at $600,000.

RKO's net for the entire year of 1935 amounted to $684,732. Net for the first three-quarters of 1936 was $1,446,922. The anticipated $800,000 net for the final quarter would give the company earnings of approximately $2,250,000 for the year.

Roxy Plan Delay Seen

Another delay in the filing of a reorganization plan for the Roxy Theatre Corporation in New York by the bondholders' protective committee is seen. The filing, tentatively set for December 4, will be delayed until December 20, according to Howard S. Cullman, trustee, who late last week filed a petition for $20,000 interim allowance for services. Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey reserved decision.

"Reunion" Ban Lifted

The Chicago censor board has reversed itself on "Reunion," Twentieth Century-Fox picture featuring the Dionne Quintuplets, and will permit the showing of the picture.

The producer made his ap permanent peace on his arrival York this week from New Orlean he had attended a preview of Para "The Plainsman." Last week it w nounced that the Motion Picture ducers and Distributors of America taken initial steps to settle the feud appointing a committee to protect th popularity of screen stars by regulating their radio appearances. Radio network officials have agreed to cooperate with the committee.

Mr. De Mille disagreed with the arguments, offered by almost every exhibitor organization in the country in the last year, that film stars are injuring the industry by radio appearances, and that it is unfair competition to give potential theatre audiences, free of charge over the radio, the stars whose films the theatre owners rent at high cost.

15 PRODUCERS BUY 59 BOOKS AND PLAYS FOR IMMEDIATE PRODUCTION

Sterling Pictures, Formed by W. Ray Johnston, Purchases Ten Manuscripts; Paramount and Radio Next in Totals

The competition among Hollywood's producers to acquire the best story material from the fields of publishing and the legitimate theatre centered in November on some 59 purchases. During October, September and August, 70, 74 and 73 stories were bought respectively. With the slight drop last month, it is indicated that most of the studios now have the schedules nearly complete to meet 1936-37 commitments.

Sterling Pictures, recently formed by W. Ray Johnston, former head of Monogram and Republic, led the list of producers who added new manuscripts to their production lists in November, with a total of 10. Paramount and Radio followed with eight each, and Warner and Principal Pictures were next with three less.

A breakdown of the purchases, according to the number of each company, is as follows: Sterling, nine originals and one book; Paramount, five original stories, two books and one play; Radio, six originals, one book and one play; Warners, two originals, two books and one play; Principal, five novels; Twentieth Century-Fox, three originals and one play; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, one original story and three plays; First National, one original and two books; Columbia, two originals and one book; Selznick International, two originals and one play; Mervyn LeRoy, one original and one book; Television Pictures, one original story; Walter Wanger, one book; Chesterfield, one original story and Universal, one original story.

Leading the producers in story purchase activity this month is W. Ray Johnston, former president of Monogram Pictures and later of Republic, and recent organizer of Sterling Pictures. Mr. Johnston is now in New York, following various trips to different parts of the country, drawing together the final details of organization of his new unit, and expects soon to announce his complete production schedule, aimed at the independent market, which will go into work to meet release dates during the 1937-38 season.

Options on Burroughs Novels

Another feature of this month's purchases was that Principal Pictures, of which Sol Lesser is head, acquired the options on all of Edgar Rice Burroughs' "Tarzan" series of novels. Mr. Lesser will release the pictures through Twentieth Century-Fox and reports from Hollywood indicate that he will endeavor to "borrow" Johnny Weissmuller from MGM for at least one of the series.

The Broadway legitimate theatre hits of several season's past, "Skidding" and "Spring Dance," were bought by MGM, and Paramount will film the Viennese musical comedy, "Marie of the Circus." David O. Selznick announced the purchase of the rights to "Variety," which Paramount made in 1926 with Emil Jannings as the star. The sound version of the picture will star Edward Arnold and will be released, as other Selznick pictures, through United Artists.

Mervyn LeRoy has now launched his independent production venture and with the acquisition of the best-selling novel, "Death in the Deep South," has two of his three features for release this year through Warner channels. "The King and the Chorus Girl," his first, is in production and it will introduce Fernand Gravet, French star under personal contract to Mr. LeRoy, to the American audiences. Mr. LeRoy is also planning one more picture with him for release later in the season.

The complete list of purchases made by the production companies during the month of November, with all available cast and production credits, is as follows:

Angle Shooter, unpublished story by Adela Rogers St. John to be published shortly in Cosmopolitan, bought by First National. The story revolves around a newspaper woman and will probably feature Joan Blondell.

Bulldog Drummond Meets A Lady, bought by Paramount to star Ray Milland and Sir Guy Standing, who will have the role of the inspector.

Jesse Lasky Predicts an Increase of 300 Features in Hollywood Production

Indicating a surprising extension of production schedules since the original preseasonal estimates last summer, Jesse L. Lasky, pioneer producer, declared this week that Hollywood expects an increase of 300 or more feature pictures over the 525 features produced there in 1935-36.

Mr. Lasky made his prediction in a nationwide radio network hookup, last Friday afternoon, from the combined "Red" and "Blue" systems of the National Broadcasting Company. The occasion was a microphone tour of leading American industries in key cities from coast to coast. It was conducted by NBC, as a "Forward Industry" movement, to show the extent of the present upward trend in business. The conclusion was that already the nation's general business payroll is up $130,000,000 for the coming year. That, of course, is good news to motion picture box offices which quickly reflect any improvement in American industry.

Describing the manner in which the motion picture industry is checkmated by general business reverses, Mr. Lasky told the listening public, "The weekly theatre attendance in the United States is a barometer not only for the film industry, but for all industries. In 1930 110,000,000 persons attended the motion picture theatre weekly. In 1933, this figure had dropped to 60,000,000. In 1935, it rose to 80,000,000 and is still rising."

"Here in Hollywood," Mr. Lasky added, "this rise is reflected in studio activities. Not since 1930 have the sound stages of the film companies been such a beehive of activity. This year we anticipate an increase of 300 or more features. That calls for an expenditure of $150,000,000 and means the reemployment of electricians, carpenters, engineers—in fact, skilled workmen in more than 250 different industries, arts and crafts, involved in the making of a single motion picture. Indeed, the motion picture industry is moving forward."

20th-Fox Will Present $500,000 as Bonuses

Twentieth Century-Fox will distribute $500,000 in Christmas bonus money, it was announced officially by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, and Sidney R. Kent, president, in Hollywood Tuesday. The bonus will apply to employees in the lower salary brackets and the distribution forces throughout the world. Although individual amounts have not been decided upon as yet, the move is expected to set a precedent which other studios in good financial shape will follow.

The full bonus will be paid to those in the company employ for one year, with partial sums for those affiliated only six months.

Kurtzman Heads Newspaper

Charles Kurtzman is president of the St. Louis Show World, eight-page weekly tabloid fan newspaper which is distributed in the Fanchon and Marco theatres in that city. The circulation is estimated at 25,000 weekly.

A Statement to the Trade

Hollywood, Calif.

On my periodic visit to our studio, I have seen a number of new pictures. While I have made it a rule to be sparing in personal endorsements of pictures, I feel you should know that "Banjo On My Knee" is one of the truly great productions of the season.

No picture has ever before told the real story of the singing, dancing, brawling, foot-loose and happy Mississippi River folk. This tells about them with a power that spells bigness.

The story has all the dramatic force of "Tobacco Road" and the mellowness of "Steamboat Round the Bend", with a quality of its own that makes "Banjo On My Knee" refreshing and different. Added to that are the songs and dances which faithfully reflect the fascinating lives of the river people.

Darryl F. Zanuck and everybody else connected in any way with "Banjo On My Knee" can be proud of an exceptional job.

I most strongly urge exhibitors who play this picture to handle "Banjo On My Knee" with the enthusiasm it so richly warrants.

OWNERS HEAR LICHTMAN DEFEND MGM POLICIES

Increased Production Cost Out Of Proportion to Income Rise, Ohioans Are Told

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer defended its sales policies and procedure against the attacks of independent exhibitors this week at the annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in session Tuesday and Wednesday at the Deshler-Wallick hotel in Columbus. Al Lichtman, assistant to President Nicholas M. Schenck of Metro, told the delegates that "MGM will be no party to the infliction of an injustice on any exhibitor."

Mr. Lichtman's address was the highlight of the meeting, attended by 100 exhibitors, who heard their problem discussed by leaders in the industry and by civic officials including a Congressman and executives of the state government.

The distribution executive quoted figures to prove that the tremendous increase in production cost the last two years is out of proportion to the increased income from domestic business. Only the foreign outlet, he said, made it possible to exist. He added that production losses were compensated by the profits of Loew's theatres. He defended the high salaries paid to executives on the ground that their business is a creative one for which no precedent exists.

MGM's policy, Mr. Lichtman explained, is that the cost of every MGM picture must be justified at the box office. He said branch managers had been instructed to sell all pictures for what they are worth at the box office in order that every exhibitor might be a satisfied customer.

Referring to the 10-point program of trade practice, advanced by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Mr. Lichtman said that MGM will publish its official decision late this month.

The attendance at Tuesday's opening session represented 100 theatres, and comprised branch managers from all exchanges.

Favors 50 Cent Exemption

Arthur C. Lamneck, Congressman from the 12th District and a member of the House ways and means committee, addressed the gathering Tuesday and advocated the raising of the theatre tax exemption to 50 cents on the presumption that the increased attendance would result in larger income tax returns.

C. S. Dargusch, vice-chairman of the Ohio Tax Commission, warned the delegates that, with the repeal of the sales tax on food in Ohio and the consequent need for further taxation, an effort was certain to be made in the coming legislature for reenactment of the old 10 per cent admission tax. He advised that theatre owners get ready for a fight.

Myers Addresses Convention

Others who spoke at the afternoon session Tuesday included Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors. A. O. Eberhart, former Governor of Minnesota and special assistant to the Federal Housing Administrator, delivered a brief address, as did Pete Harrison, publisher of Harrison's Reports, and Roy Reichelderfer, supervisor of film censorship in Ohio.

Peter J. Wood delivered a report as secretary of the exhibitor organization, and W. A. (Al) Steffes spoke on the Allied defense fund. H. M. Richey of Detroit utilized Mr. Lichtman's reference to the Loew theatre profits to fortify his plea for elimination of the producer from the exhibition field on the ground that the competition is unfair.

Tuesday's business was concluded with a banquet at which the speakers were John A. Connors, toastmaster; Governor Martin L. Davey of Ohio; William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM; Lieutenant Governor Harold G. Mosier of Ohio, and Herbert S. Duffy, attorney general-elect.

A "date strike" in retaliation for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's allegedly "unfair" sales procedure was unanimously approved Monday by the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners in Philadelphia and the board of managers was authorized to decide the details and the starting date.

St. Louis Convention

The 15th annual meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois will be held in the Hotel Coronado in St. Louis on December 11. Fred Wehrenberg, president of the organization, will be in charge.

Oklahomans To Hear Lightman

M. A. Lightman, head of Malco Theatres in Memphis, has accepted the invitation to speak before the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Oklahoma at its convention in Oklahoma City December 14-15.

Chase Bank Sells 20th-Fox Shares

Sale by the Chase National Bank of New York in October of 14,433 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common stock and 28,866 shares of $1.50 cumulative preferred stock under escrow agreement was disclosed this week by the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington in its semi-monthly report of security transactions and holdings. At the close of the month the bank still held 353,192 shares of common and 706,384 shares of the preferred.

This was the second large volume of stock reported as sold by the bank, its report for September showing the sale of 13,806 shares of common and 27,612 shares of preferred.

The commission also announced receipt of a report for September from William Goetz, Beverly Hills, showing the sale of 10,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common and holdings at the end of the month of 204,643 shares and 55,284 shares of preferred.

Film Employment, Salaries Increased

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

The Census Bureau in Washington reports substantial employment increases in the motion picture industry's production field during 1935. The total of salaries and wages paid was in excess of $100,000,000.

Making public a summary of its census of film production for 1935, the bureau reported 129 establishments as compared with 92 in 1933 and 142 in 1929. The total number employed today is given as 27,417 as against 19,037 in 1933 and 19,602 in 1929. Of the total persons engaged in the industry, salaried employes number 12,500 compared with 8,260 in 1933 and 8,818 in 1929.

Total salaries and wages paid last year amounted to $101,754,426. The figure two years earlier was $71,343,941, while for 1929 it was $85,027,612. Classifying these totals, $77,068,021 last year went for salaries and the remainder for wages. This compares with $52,948,452 for salaries in 1933 and $60,167,520 in 1929.

Contract work let out by the studios in 1935 totalled $5,144,976. In 1933 it was $4,027,665 and in 1929, $11,311,716. The cost of studio supplies in 1935 was $29,541,118; in 1933, $26,153,298; in 1929, $38,441,025. The total cost of production last year was $188,469,660 against $119,342,866 in 1933 and $184,102,419 in 1929.

The bureau's canvass showed that 75 establishments were located in the Los Angeles area against 39 in 1933 and 52 in 1929. Of these figures, 51 were located in the city of Los Angeles compared with 28 in 1933 and 45 in 1929.

The bureau also found 24 establishments in New York, the same as in 1933, but six less than in 1929. Eight are located in Illinois, the same as in the two previous census years, and four in Missouri, the same as in 1929. Production establishments also were located in Colorado, Georgia, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas and Washington.

Analysis of production for the year showed that the total cost of negative film was $137,842,815 against $82,279,869 for 1933 and $128,496,710 for 1929. A total of 1,094 theatrical films, costing $129,836,134, were produced last year, against 1,059, costing $77,535,515, in 1933, and 1,204, costing $118,716,041, in 1929. News and advertising films produced cost $5,001,321, against $4,576,421 in 1933, and $6,152,286 for the former and $3,377,292 for the latter in 1929. Educational films cost $369,796, as compared with $167,933 in 1933 and $251,091 in 1929. Other films last year cost $2,635,564, with no comparable figure given for the two previous periods. The cost of unfinished production was $22,848,608 against $14,581,457 for 1933 and $17,983,060 for 1929.

Under laboratory costs the bureau listed the cost of positive films as $6,316,630 for 1935 as compared with $7,624,761 for 1933 and $10,646,094 for 1929. Receipts for work done for others was listed as $15,089,496, against $11,835,057 for 1933 and $21,104,878 for 1929. The value of other work done was $1,818,139, against $1,520,021 in 1933 and $1,643,395 in 1929, and receipts

Kuyendall Is Expected to Advance Convention Plans

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, is expected to advance plans for the national exhibitor organization's annual mid-winter meeting following his arrival in New York this Friday. Present indications are that the convention will be held at Miami in February, although the place and date are subject to a vote of the organization's directors.

THE BEST PLAY OF THE YEAR

WINTERSET

MILLIONS OF FANS, IN SCORES OF CITIES, TOLD BY LOCAL NEWSPAPERS THAT, IN THIS AMAZING YEAR OF GREAT PRODUCTIONS, RKO RADIO COMES FORTH WITH THE OUTSTANDING DRAMA OF THEM ALL!

BOSTON TRAVELER . . . "A truly remarkable film. When the picture was over, two new screen stars had been born."

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR . . . "A truly impressive picture. It recreates grippingly a mood of the American scene comparable in its dramatic realism to what 'The Informer' evolved out of the Irish scene."

CINCINNATI ENQUIRER . . . "One of the most sustained efforts of the Coast to create enduring film drama. Anderson's form is melodramatic and is chock filled with action. . . The production given by Pandro Berman, the direction by Alfred Santell, and the performances by Burgess Meredith, Margo, Eduardo Ciannelli, Edward Ellis and Paul Guilfoyle, are remarkable in the tenseness of situation created."

BOSTON POST . . . "One of the finer films of the new season. Today Burgess Meredith is conceded to be the brightest young star in the American theatre and acclaimed as the season's screen discovery."

PROVIDENCE JOURNAL . . . "With thoughts directed to thanks in general, this department would like to reserve a special and very considerable portion of gratitude for all those who, with so much beauty and skill and understanding. 'Winterset' is true cause for thanksgiving among moviegoers."

WASHINGTON SUNDAY STAR . . . "The acting is absolutely flawless; as flawless, indeed, as that which moved so many to proclaim the flesh-and-blood stage presentation as the most powerful dramatic achievement in many years. 'Winterset' appears destined to be the film of 1936."

OPENING THIS WEEK..

RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL

AND PLAYING KEY SPOTS THROUGHOUT THE NATION

TORONTO GLOBE & MAIL . . . " 'Winterset' is a great picture, superbly presented and acted. I recommend it as one of the finer efforts of the motion picture industry."

DETROIT SUNDAY TIMES . . . "Hollywood has turned out another film which will command the admiration of the most discriminating, at the same time retaining those qualities of melodramatic excitement which will give it wide appeal among the general mass of screen patrons."

DAYTON JOURNAL . . . "It has been a long time since I have witnessed so gripping a recital of events. One of the high-ranking pictures of the season. A picture that really merits the word 'important'."

HARTFORD DAILY TIMES . . . "Critics were unanimous in acclaiming the film as great as the stage play, and general approval was accorded the happy ending which Hollywood has given it."

LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL . . . "It is intensely dramatic, which is more than can be said for the majority of pictures! Highly exciting and of the type that made me want to know what was going to happen next."

PITTSBURGH PRESS . . . "For sheer dramatic power, suspense, and STORY VALUE, it far excels the 'popular' screen successes. It's a great production, a GRAND MOVIE, spellbinding in plot, elemental in action, and melodrama in its purest and best sense. 'Winterset' is a great motion picture."

PROVIDENCE NEWS TRIBUNE . . . "Hollywood has scored another artistic accomplishment. No praise is too great for the work of the entire cast."

COLUMBUS CITIZEN . . . "Worth lusty cheers, tossing of hats, bonfires and dances in the street. Not since 'The Informer' have I experienced the emotional jolt I received from 'Winterset'. Here is the answer to those discriminating moviegoers who honestly condemn the customary tinsel tripe and ask for something better."

COLUMBUS DISPATCH . . . "The film is one to be seen by all and sundry who have the advancement of the screen at heart or whose desire is merely for exciting entertainment."

WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS . . . "RKO has fashioned an unusual and impressive motion picture from 'Winterset', Maxwell Anderson's poetic melodrama of life and death among the cobblestones of New York's East Side. It is an unforgettable movie."

LIBERTY MAGAZINE . . . "Maxwell Anderson's prize-winning drama will leave you limp and breathless. It has a tremendous sustained power and a curious beauty — and it is superbly acted. You will never see a more gripping drama, or one that yields less to convention. Three of the original stage cast contribute power to the picture. Our compliments to Director Alfred Santell, too, for his taut, expert direction."

PITTSBURGH SUN TELEGRAPH . . . " 'Winterset' is one of the truly great photoplays of film history."

TOLEDO NEWS BEE . . . " 'Winterset' may prove to be the most powerful motion picture of the season. It has been superbly directed. You must see it. You'll need to know about it to participate in the arguments it is certain to incite."

BALTIMORE SUN . . . "A piece of writing too fine for even Hollywood to overlook. A splendid, faithful document. One of the finest serious presentations that has ever been offered. It is strong fare, but by a public satiated with boy-meet-girl fairy tales, it should be acclaimed."

BOSTON HERALD . . . "Burgess Meredith gives so fine and sensitive a performance in the role he created on the stage that his screen future seems assured without question. As for Margo, well, it is hard to imagine where she has been keeping herself all these months and why it has taken her so long to win recognition."

CINCINNATI POST . . . " 'Winterset' is probably the most distinguished product to issue from Hollywood in the past twelve months. It is the finest achievement of the RKO studios since 'The Informer'."

CLEVELAND PRESS . . . "An intense dramatic photoplay, magnificently photographed and superbly acted. 'Winterset' should be a tremendous success in the movie houses. The theme is gripping, the dialog is masterful, the settings are splendidly realistic and the performances are excellent. Put 'Winterset' down as one of the year's better pictures and let nothing keep you away from it."

EDUCATORS CLASH ON FILM CONTROL

Elevation of Public Taste, Not Censorship, Will Improve Product, Berkeley Group Told

Sharply diverging views of the motion picture's functions and "cultural prospects" were voiced last week by educators addressing cultural groups of San Francisco and Oakland.

Education, not censorship or "control," will be the deciding factor in raising the standards of motion pictures, said Boyd B. Rakestraw, assistant director of the University of California Extension Division, speaking before the Berkeley Motion Picture Research Council.

In contrast to Mr. Rakestraw's viewpoint, Dr. Claude A. Shull, dean of San Francisco Junior College and a member of the board of the Council, told members of the Parents and Teachers Association of San Francisco's Frederick Burke School that the motion picture public should agitate for some type of "eventual control of films culturally dangerous to children."

Dr. Shull commended the Pettengill anti-block booking bill, which the Council is actively endorsing, because, he declared, "although it was industrial rather than social or educational, it paved the way for some kind of socially-conscious control" of the motion picture.

Notes Educational Force

The school system of the nation, Dr. Shull told the teachers and parents, demanded high qualifications and long training from those whose responsibility it was to train the juvenile mind.

Motion pictures he declared to be as great an educational force as more conventional schoolroom methods, "although masked as entertainment; but in motion pictures there is no control, and no standard of qualifications or specifications except those of a commercial, industrial profit nature.

"Without reflecting in any sense on the adult standard of the motion pictures, any thinking person will agree that there are films which are 'too rich' for the immature mind, just as there are great books and plays which are 'too rich' for the immature mind. Films of horror, psychological terror, gangster menace, and the glorification of sex and crime are bad for children, although they may offer no harm to an educated, balanced mind."

Juvenile Matinees Urged

The better minds in the industry, he said, are becoming conscious of the need of special matinees for juvenile audiences. Great advances have been made in recent film material, Dr. Shull added.

A three-point program advocated by Dr. Shull included:

1. Assumption by the parent of "strict responsibility for whatever motion pictures your child sees." Use of Bulletins of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of Legion of Decency approved lists, and wide reading of newspaper and magazine reviews were recommended as guides.

2. Acquainting of exhibitors with the type of product preferred by the women, especially for such groups as the PTA units. Managers, particularly in the smaller communities, would welcome such suggestions, he said.

3. "Reasonable agitation for some type of eventual control of films dangerous to children," similar to the system by which schools control the type of instruction given children of different age and mental groups.

Mr. Rakestraw, however, offered an entirely different interpretation of the motion picture and education situation when he spoke before the Motion Picture Research Council in the college town of Berkeley, home of the University of California.

"Educational pictures," he declared, "constitute the beginning of a sound foundation upon which the individual student may build high standards of judgment of both entertainment and education.

"As students, witnessing recommended films in their schools, develop a sense of motion picture appreciation they will gradually come to influence the public taste and the public demand, so that Hollywood and other movie-producing centers will of necessity turn out a better product from every point of view.

"Ultimately, the standards of the motion picture will be raised by the raising of the general level of public taste."

Increased activity is planned by the Council after the first of the year, starting in all probability after the state legislature convenes January 9. Plans have already been made for several money-raising activities, including an ambitious project by the Oakland council to sponsor a benefit performance of the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe at the Oakland Municipal Auditorium on February 3.

Canadian Tax Complaint

The first and only complaint against the new music tax rates of Canada by the newly constituted copyright appeal board to be made thus far was filed this week by the London, Ont., Railway Commission, which operates various places of amusement at Port Stanley, Ont. The complaint charges that the rates, which are the same as those prescribed the Canadian Performing Rights Society, an affiliate of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, are "excessive."

Mortgage Appeal Is Permitted

Federal Judge Knox in New York has allowed the Philadelphia Company for Guaranteeing Mortgages to take an appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals from a decision of the federal courts allowing a claim against Fox Theatres for only $48,134, instead of $389,436 asked. The suit arose out of the breaking of the lease of the Fox theatre in Philadelphia when Fox Theatres went bankrupt. The federal court refused to allow future damages, as asked by the plaintiff.

Florida Exhibitor May Change Action

Counsel for George S. Fuller, Florida exhibitor who is suing major distributors and two Saenger theatre executives, is expected to change the original action to one for damages under the anti-trust laws.

Federal Judge Wayne Borah upheld the contention of the defense at a hearing last week that injunctive relief and damages could not both be sought in an equity case. If the petition is not amended the case will be dismissed but Mr. Fuller has the right to return to court for a damage suit.

Commission to Resume ATT Hearings Soon

Public hearings on the general phases of the Federal Communications Commission's investigation of American Telephone and Telegraph Company will be resumed in Washington early next month, Chairman Walker of the FCC telephone division said this week.

At the same time it was learned that the telephone investigation will probably not be completed before July 1, 1937, and that an additional appropriation will be needed, as existing funds will not last that long. An effort will also be made to retain permanently a part of the investigation staff to perform routine duties of the commission in the future.

Turkey Starts Drive To Uplift Screen

A new act by the Parliament in Ankara, Turkey, provides that every motion picture theatre in the country hereafter must show at the beginning of each program an educational or technical film to run at least eight minutes.

No Ban on Film Posters

The recent order with respect to the display of posters in Colombia affects only the city of Bogota, where posters are not permitted in places not especially allocated for their use, it was pointed out in New York by Jaime Puig Arosemena, South American distributor. The decree was not of the national government of Colombia, and further does not prohibit the display of posters in English, or in any other foreign language, when they refer to such transitory matter as films.

Hasson Forms Own Producing Company

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Straight from the isolated Kuskokwim River country buried deep in Alaska's winter comes the news, via Associated Press, that "civilization" has reached those parts, at last. The motion picture has finally penetrated, clear through from Hollywood to the back-country town of Bethel.

An Eskimo boy paraded the mile-long two-plank sidewalk of Bethel's "Main Street," ringing a cowbell and turning himself proudly so all could read the legend emblazoned on his sandwich board:

MOVING PICTURES TODAY
Admission One Fish

Then Bethel's 20 whites and 200 Eskimos knew civilization had reached them.

The Northern Commercial Company's trading post manager at Bethel arranged it last August, when the last boats of the season brought enough talking pictures to run until navigation reopens next June on a twice-a-week basis.

The admission charge of one fish leaves it optional with the Eskimo movie patrons whether they pay one smoked salmon or one smoked whitefish, full size.

The smoked fish, staple diet of sledge dogs, later is sold by the trader to dog drivers for cash.

There will be no giveaways, chance games, double bills or hand-painted soup ladles. Either you pay your fish, or you don't get in.

Will our Broadway and Hollywood motion picture press agents please step forward for today's lesson in praise-agentry. We will use the following publicity blast from the Sangeet Film Company, Bombay, on its new musical, "Call of the Soul," as the inspiration:

> "Here is a sublime message for you Conservatives and Radicals. Why not rejoice more? Count up your Golden Mercies. Count up your opportunities to Do Good. Count up your exceedingly great and precious Promises. Count up your joys of heirship to an incorruptible inheritance, and then March on the Road Heavenward singing Sangeet Film Company's most revolutionary-musical episodes from 'Call of the Soul.' Will society, seemingly alive, though dead in fact, rise up to the situation and save the precious lives and souls of our innocent millions?"

We wonder. And so does The Era, theatrical weekly in London, which first published the document.

Asleep-in-the-Deep Department:

J. A. Tanney's company on New York's Broadway is called "Service-on-Sound" and its business is to repair and service equipment in motion picture theatres.

Several days ago, Mr. Tanney received a long distance telephone call from an excited would-be customer who wanted him to send a man all the way out to Manhasset Bay to repair his motor boat. Tanney tried to explain that he is in the theatre equipment business, but the caller would have none of that, grew highly indignant and accused him of false advertising, even threatening to take it up with the Better Business Bureau.

He wanted to know what was the big idea of advertising "Service-on-Sound" when the company had no intention of giving servicing on the waters of Long Island Sound.

America's huge armies of double-bill marquee oddity watchers are in revolt over Terry Ramsaye's editorial tirade, published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week against the game. We are at their mercy. They are literally flooding us with marquee monstrosities, and J. A. Tanney (Sales-on-Sound Corporation), even suggests that we run a contest in retaliation, or at least a marquee-monstrosity column in this department.

Grenade Wilson, manager of the Fox West Coast Theatres Corporation's State theatre, at Watsonville, California, says that he gets "a kick" out of marquee oddities, and he "simply can't resist the temptation to pass on a couple of rare ones" which have graced his marquee recently:

GIVE HER A RING
BELOW THE DEADLINE

HOT MONEY
YOURS FOR THE ASKING
Big Ten Jackpot

Charley Raviotta, of the California theatre, at Sacramento, California, airmails a list of marquee readings long enough to choke a cow. Here's one:

LADY BE CAREFUL
SITTING ON THE MOON

Jerry Waller, managing the Elroy theatre, at Elroy, Wisconsin, engaged a photographer to take shots of two of his marquee advertisements, and forwarded prints to prove that he was not fabricating them. They read:

BANK NITE—$60
COUNTERFEIT

SO THEY WERE MARRIED
EARLY TO BED

Even our HERALD correspondents in the field have taken up the idea, E. H. Mayer, in Columbus, Ohio, and F. K. Haskell, of Portland, Oregon, reporting, respectively, on the marquees of the Utopia theatre and the Irvington theatre, in their cities, as follows:

FARMER TAKES A WIFE
EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT

THE BRIDE COMES HOME
EARLY TO BED

Harold Bernstein, of the Plaza theatre, at Norwood, Ohio, admits it is trivia, but, nevertheless, thinks we might be interested in the following billing which he advertised:

PETTICOAT FEVER
HOT MONEY

Mr. Mayer, in Columbus, Ohio, came back a second time, reporting on this occasion on the Bexley theatre's marquee which announced:

AND SO THEY WERE MARRIED
HIS SECOND WIFE

Walter Winchell, Broadway peepholer, piped this one on the marquee of Loew's State theatre at Longacre Square:

BEN BERNIE
THE DEVIL IS A SISSY

While the aforementioned Mr. Tanney, of the Sales-on-Sound Corporation, submits this merciless truth, picked from the marquee of the Times theatre, near Times Square, New York:

STAR FOR A NIGHT
WALKING ON AIR

EDITOR'S NOTE:—One word from me seems to be enough.—T. R.

Harrison Carroll, pursuing his profession of writing about Hollywood for King Features Syndicate, arrived on a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio set the other morning, and proceeded to watch the filming of a scene for "Sinner Takes All." Theodore Von Eltz was playing a corpse.

Bruce Cabot and Stanley Ridges batter down a door and find Von Eltz sprawled on a bed. They pick up a poison bottle from the floor and deduce it was a suicide. Then they call the police.

The scene was interrupted at this juncture and Mr. Carroll became engaged in conversation with Mr. Von Eltz. Carroll noticed that Von Eltz's shirt was open and that he was wearing his undershirt wrong side out, back part to front, showing a printed label.

With a broad sweep that indicated the extent of his pride for the powers of great observation, Mr. Harrison Carroll turned to Mr. Theodore Von Eltz, and, in a tone that could be heard the full length of the Metro studio stage, informed the actor that he had his shirt on hind part front.

Von Eltz laughed loudly, and long. So did the rest of the company.

"No," he told the reporter, "that's a clue for the picture. The cops discover it and realize I didn't commit suicide but was murdered."

After this, Harrison Carroll admits he will stick to columning, and never give anybody any advice in any studio.

The newsreels might hurry to Wichita, Kansas, to take a shot of—we said of—one Woody Hockaday, preacher, who flits around in a red suit, carrying two sacks of feathers which he sprinkles on people, saying he is thus working for world peace.

Maybe his idea is to get enough followers to keep the diplomats and statesmen in Europe so busy that they won't have time to get mad at each other.

S. Charles Einfeld, generalissimo of all the publicity and advertising that Warners survey, has been mighty proud of his campaign on "The Charge of the Light Brigade." Especially pleasing to Mr. Einfeld, as a unique advertising twist, was his "Brigade" ad which took the form of an impressive eight-page trade paper insert, copy on the first page teasing the reader with the bare, but bold caption: "THE CHARGE IS ON!"

Out to exhibitors went this announcement, and back to the Herald came this letter from Harry Huffman, head of General Theatres, in Colorado:

> "Please, may I call attention to page 19 in your MOTION PICTURE HERALD, the advertisement of Warner Brothers' 'Charge of the Light Brigade.' In bold letters it reads, 'THE CHARGE IS ON'—and how—50 per cent! What a charge, and how they boast about it."

FILM CIRCLES IN ITALY PLEASED WITH ACCORD

Increased Withdrawal of Revenue Allowed American Companies; Imports Unrestricted

by VITTORIO MALPASSUTI
in Rome

Motion picture companies of American ownership will be permitted to withdraw approximately 50 per cent of their Italian revenue under the agreement resulting from the understanding reached by Ambassador William Phillips and Will H. Hays with Italian Government officials. Earlier restrictions which not only limited the withdrawals but regulated the uses to which the balance remaining here might be put and required the importation of a fixed number of pictures every year, have been entirely removed. Distribution executives in Italy are pleased with the accord.

With the first governmental restriction of currency exports the more important American branches in Italy had cut greatly the number of pictures imported, preferring this to the alternative of producing in Italy or using the greater revenue from a larger number of imports to purchase merchandise for re-exporting to America.

Now it is hoped in Italian film circles here that the agreement recently concluded will be of mutual service. It is pointed out that the Italian market is of growing importance, as evidenced by the progressive increases in general business done here. On the other hand, the reactions of the American companies to the restrictions placed for the purpose of building up Italy's own industry were understandable.

High Regard for U. S. Films

Italians have taken every opportunity to express the high regard they have for American cinematography and their earnest desire to maintain with Hollywood the most cordial commercial relations while instituting contacts in the field of production. The news that Walter Wanger is coming next spring to produce a color film, "Arabian Nights," starring Sylvia Sidney, and that he may be followed by Warner Brothers, has been received in Italy with the greatest satisfaction.

For more than 10 years the American film industry enjoyed an exceptional position on the Italian market, thanks particularly to its perfect commercial organization. The foremost companies with branches or representatives in Italy—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, Fox, Warner Bros., United Artists—distributed a yearly average of 176 films. That meant approximately 60 per cent of the total number of films shown in Italy, with a profit of between 38 and 40 million lire per annum. In the 1934-35 season the income from American films increased notably, to reach the figure of between 45 and 50 million lire.

But at the beginning of 1935, as a result of the preparations for the Ethiopian enterprise, the Italian Government made strict provisions for protection of the lira, prohibiting exportation of capital from the country. The number of films that the American undertakings could import into Italy was reduced while the exportation of money was restricted. The market, despite the war, increased its strength, so that in approximately one year and a half the capital of the foremost American cinematograph companies accumulated in the banks amounted to a notable figure: about 75 million lire.

After the Ethiopian campaign and with the resumption, after the lifting of sanctions, of commercial relations with all countries, it was decided also to regulate the cinematographic problem. It was arranged that companies might purchase Italian merchandise or shares so as to use up these frozen credits, buying on the Italian market such goods as would find a most ready sale in America. Some companies purchased Italian films, consignments of marble, musical instruments; others purchased shares. In any event, after a few months the total amount of frozen credits was materially reduced.

Credits Reduced

Today American cinematograph concerns have in Italy a total outstanding of old credits amounting to 15 million lire, a relatively modest sum which could be liquidated within the next few months by means of commercial credits.

The European situation during the last few years has undergone a marked change. In Italy alone, each year sees the production of about thirty films which enjoy the preference of the public, and many others are produced in France, England, Austria, and above all, in Germany. Thus is raised the question of advisability of prejudicing a market in process of continual development and which is becoming one of the most important in Europe.

In fact, the Italian market in 1934 showed a turnover of 414 million lire taken in the various cinemas, and in 1935, despite the sanctions, the war, and the fact that the average price of tickets had fallen from 2.07 to 1.95 lire, such takings amounted to 437 million lire. Takings during the last few months lead to the expectation that in 1936-37 the turnover will be even larger. Furthermore, in numerous provincial towns, cinemas are to be installed in accordance with the wishes of the director general of cinematography, so that it may be foreseen that within the next three years the turnover of the market will rise to 600 million lire.

Greek Theatre Construction

One of the largest and most modernly equipped motion picture theatres in Greece and the Near East, construction of which was begun 19 months ago, is nearing completion in Athens. The theatre will seat 2,000, and it is estimated the cost will approximate $1,000,000.

Foreword for "General" Lifts Ban in China

A 40 day stay of the order issued by the Nanking Government barring Paramount from doing business in China has been granted as a result of the addition to "The General Died at Dawn" of an explanatory foreword satisfactory to the Chinese officials which will be included in all prints of the picture distributed in the Far East. The order banning Paramount was issued after the Nanking Government's request that "The General Died at Dawn" and "Klondike Annie" be withdrawn from world circulation was not complied with. The United States State Department intervened on behalf of the film company with the result that the explanatory foreword was added and the stay granted for further discussion of the Chinese Government's objection to the two films.

Clark Heads Variety Club

The Variety Club of Columbus, Ohio, last week elected M. R. (Duke) Clark, manager of the Paramount, president; George M. Trautman, president of American Baseball Association, vice-president; Harry Schrieber, RKO city manager, second vice-president; P. J. Wood, secretary, who is also secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, and Jacob Luft of the Grand Theatre, treasurer. The six directors also chosen are J. Real Neth, president of Neth Theatres, Inc.; William C. Pullin, Sr., Linden theatre; Max Stearn, Southern Theatres, Inc.; Albert Redman, of the Columbus Dispatch; Leo Haenlein, Olentangy Park, and William S. Cunningham of the Columbus Citizen.

Paramount Holds Raft

The dispute which arose last week between George Raft and Paramount, during which it was reported that the contract of the actor had been cancelled by mutual consent, has finally been settled satisfactorily to both parties and Mr. Raft's contract has been reinstated. The difficulties, which originated several months ago and resulted in the actor's suspension, were ironed out between William LeBaron and the star.

Projectionists Pick Watkins

Claude Watkins of Albany this week was elected president of the New York State Association of Motion Picture Projectionists, the election taking place during the convention at Utica. Other officers chosen were Melvin Denny, Syracuse; W. W. Byrne, New York, and Fred Boekhout, Rochester, vice-presidents, and Harry Brooks, Troy, secretary-treasurer.

Edwin Arthur Made Booker

Edwin Arthur has been appointed booker for Fanchon and Marco's six first run theatres in St. Louis, Harry C. Arthur announced in New York Tuesday upon his return from a midwestern tour. No date has been set for the taking over of operation of the St. Louis Amusement Company by F. and M., Mr. Arthur said.

New West Virginia Houses

The Consolidated Coal Company has opened theatres in Acosta, Jenners, Ida May, Gray and Carolina, all towns in West Virginia. The company maintains headquarters at Fairmont and has appointed Fred A. Kraft as manager of the houses.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

New Faces

The always pressing need for new screen personalities has been aggravated in recent years by an increasing unwillingness on the part of first line stars to appear in more than three or four pictures annually. Decline of the stage as a recruiting ground has not been compensated for entirely by the advent of radio, from which relatively few stars of major rank have been drafted. These circumstances account for recently reported concentration of effort by principal producers to develop stellar timber.

Such effort has taken two directions. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount and Republic are among the studios favoring the talent school system of propagating marquee material and the result of energy expended along this line is beginning to make itself manifest in pictures now coming to the screen. Radio and Universal prefer the older method, for which various advantages are argued, of advancing young players rapidly through progressively important roles in current product.

Proponents of the talent school plan point to Robert Taylor, graduate of the MGM academy, and Frances Farmer, Paramount, as examples of what may be expected from such a source. On the other hand, Radio has entrusted important roles to Lucille Ball, Owen Davis, Jr., Gordon Jones and Anita Colby, while Universal has promoted Deanna Durbin and Doris Nolan to prominent parts, although both are practically unknown.

Less important than the means, of course, is the end, and confident is the word for producers' attitude toward the problem.

"THE PLAINSMAN" ON TEST TOUR

Cecil B. DeMille is to preview his Paramount picture, "The Plainsman," in twelve key cities before placing his okay on the final print.

Samuel Briskin's similar plans for "The Plough and the Stars," RKO-Radio, have been noted previously in this space.

Both projects are, in a measure, in acknowledgment of a spreading belief that cinema audiences in Los Angeles, suburbs and nearby cities, grown overly screenwise during long employment for guinea-pig purposes, no longer typify the general public in entertainment demand and response.

A more or less widespread application of the policy, particularly to big or unusual productions, is expected to follow upon these precedents.

Production Index

Thanksgiving week tabulations show studio activity in a slight gain, with ten films starting as nine were completed. Warner Brothers and Twentieth Century-Fox dominated the new work with four and three respectively among the new pictures placed before the lenses. Columbia checked in three of the completed films.

Prominent in the list of Warner starters is "The King and the Chorus Girl." In addition to introducing the company's newest foreign import, Fernand Gravet, the film features Joan Blondell, Edward Everett Horton, Alan Mowbray, Louis Alberni, Mary Nash, Jane Wyman and Torben Meyer. Mervyn LeRoy is both producer and director. The second film presents Pat O'Brien, Henry Fonda and Stuart Erwin in "Slim," supported by Margaret Lindsay, J. Farrell MacDonald, John Litel, James Robins, Carlyle Moore, Jr., Henry Otho and Dick Wessell. Ray Enright is directing. In "Love Begins" Tom Brown, Mary McGuire, Hugh Herbert and Teddy Hart will be seen. Louis King is the director. "Cherokee Strip," which Noel Smith directs, will present Dick Foran, Jane Bryan, Tommy Buff, Craig Reynolds, David Carlisle and Helen Balkis.

At Twentieth Century-Fox, "Nancy Steele Is Missing" looms as the most important film. Victor McLaglen is starred, with John Harrington, June Lang, Walter Connolly, Arthur Hohl, Robert Kent, DeWitt Jennings and Paul McVey. Otto Preminger is directing. The cast of "Death in Paradise Canyon" includes Betty Furness, J. Edward Bromberg, Gavin Muir, John Payne, Julius Tannen, Alan Dinehart, Paul McVey, Andrew Tombes and Gloria Ray. Norman Foster is directing. "Love Is News," another important production, teams Loretta Young, Tyrone Power and Don Ameche in the leads, with Jane Darwell, Gavin Muir, Walter Catlett, Slim Summerville, Stepin Fetchit, Shirley Deane, Paul McVey, Dudley Digges and Frank Conroy also included. Tay Garnett is directing.

"The Last of Mrs. Cheney" was started at MGM. With Richard Boleslawski directing, the principal players are Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery, William Powell, Frank Morgan, Nigel Bruce and Jessie Ralph.

Radio started "Once Over Lightly." The cast includes Guinn Williams, Lucille Ball, Frank M. Thomas, George Irving, Harry Jans, Mary Gordon, Guy Kibbee, Una Merkel and Allen Jenkins. Christy Cabanne is directing.

Last of the new work is "Battle of Greed," Crescent, being directed by Howard Higgins. Tom Keane is starred. The supporting cast lists Gwynne Shipman, Jimmy Butler, James Busch, Robert Fisk, William Worthington, Ray Bennett, Henry Roquemore, Carl Stockdale, Oscar Gahn, Bud Buster, Bobby Callahan and Lloyd Ingram.

Two or three films, which by reason of players presented or quality of story content or production effects promise to make the big feature grade, are noted in the list of completed pictures.

"Great Guy," Grand National, marks the first appearance of James Cagney since his legal skirmish with Warners. Mr. Cagney is supported by Mae Clarke, Ed McNamara, Robert Gleckler, James Burke, Henry Kolker, Edward Gargan, Edward Brophy, Wallis Clark and Matty Fain. John G. Blystone directed.

Two of Columbia's three are romances, the other a western. In "Women of Glamour," Virginia Bruce, Melvyn Douglas, Leona Maricle, Reginald Denny, Pert Kelton and Miki Morita will be seen. Gordon Wiles directed. "Women in Distress" presents May Robson, Dean Jagger, Irene Hervey, Erville Alderson, Douglas Dumbrille, Arthur Loft, and John Gallaudet. Lynn Shores directed. "Mule Skinner" teams Charles Starrett and Rosalind Keight, with Edward Keane, George Chesebro, Ben Weldon, Al Bridges, Art Mix and Ed Le Saint. Folmer Blangstead directed.

Sol Lesser finished "Secret Valley" for Twentieth Century-Fox. The cast includes Richard Arlen, Virginia Grey, Jack Mulhall, Sid Saylor, Willie Fung, Norman Willis and Maude Allen. Howard Bretherton directed.

"Round Up Time in Texas" was finished by Republic. It features Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Maxine Doyle, Earle Hodgins, Charles Whitaker, Leroy Mason and Dick Wessell. Joseph Kane directed.

Featuring Rochelle Hudson and Michael Whelan in the leads, Twentieth Century-Fox completed "Peach Edition." Support is composed of Virginia Field, Thomas Beck, Alan Dinehart, George Hassell and Douglas Fowley. Allan Dwan directed.

Radio's participation in the completed program is represented by "Coast Patrol." Victor McLaglen, Preston Foster, Donald Woods and Ida Lupino are the principals, who will be seen with Helen Flint, Pierre Watkins, Alan Curtis and William Corson. Ben Stoloff directed.

The last picture is "Ready, Willing and Able," Warner. It will present Ross Alexander, Ruby Keeler, Louise Fazenda, Winifred Shaw, Carol Hughes, Lee Dixon, Allen Jenkins, Addison Richards, Jane Wyman, Hugh O'Connell, E. E. Clive, Lillian Kemble-Cooper, Adrian Rosely and Shaw and Lee. Ray Enright directed.

Hollywood Week

Five hundred members of the motion picture industry will attend the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences banquet in Hollywood this week for Adolph Zukor, Paramount president, who is celebrating his Silver Jubilee. Joseph Schenck, Louis B. Mayer, Jesse L. Lasky and Frank Lloyd are to be the speakers, with Darryl F. Zanuck as chairman and George Jessel as master of ceremonies.

Llewellyn Miller of the Hollywood office of QUIGLEY PUBLICATIONS has resigned to accept the post of editor of Screen Play, one of the Fawcett Publications. Miss Miller was drama editor of the Los Angeles Daily Record for several years.

FRED ASTAIRE's first solo vehicle for RKO-Radio was announced as "Damsel in Distress."

NED ROGAN, collector of internal revenue, filed $75,000 worth of liens against Hollywood players for 1935 income taxes.

HET MANHEIM was named publicity director of Republic with JACK HARDY as assistant.

CHESTER LYONS, veteran cameraman, dropped dead of a heart attack on the set of "Death in Paradise Canyon," which he was filming for Twentieth Century-Fox.

Newsreel Casualty Home From Troubles in Spain

Forcible Ejection, Rather Than Wounds, Sends Menken Back

Arthur Menken, Paramount newsreel war correspondent, the American newsreels' first casualty on the Spanish civil war front, returned to the comparatively safer precincts of Broadway this week. His return, however, was precipitated less by the two wounds he received on the battle fields than by a forcible ejection by the military forces for taking prohibited photographic shots.

The Cunard White Star liner Queen Mary docked on Monday, with Mr. Menken, 1,060 other passengers and a mixed cargo of rumors and reports of war, but principally Mr. Menken's observations on the trials and tribulations of a newsreel cameraman at the front. The newsreeler's "headaches" in Spain were attributed to running the risks of attempting to beat both the Spanish military censorship and the military's watchfulness over film shipments. Difficult, too, was the completion of necessary arrangements for money exchange, communication and transportation.

Met at Quarantine in New York Bay by his parents, socially prominent in New York, Mr. Menken was able to show them a new "lucky-piece" in the nature of a fragment of anti-aircraft shell which had drilled cleanly through his left thigh. Earlier in the campaign he had been injured by a cave-in of stones and masonry at the Alcazar after the rebel capture of Toledo. Mr. Menken still is recuperating from the leg wound, suffered near San Martin six weeks ago. The previous injury had occurred when, while attached to General Franco's forces, he entered the Alcazar with the rebels who relieved the long-beleaguered garrison.

Mr. Menken arrived in Spain August 12th, after covering the Italian-Ethiopian conflict, and announced to the Spanish military his intention of photographing the war from the rebel side. He said he received a mysterious telephone call from a woman at his hotel, and, following her instructions, went to St. Jean de Luz in France. There he received credentials and instructions on behalf of the rebels, and was told to report at Badajoz in southwestern Spain. In Badajoz he met Rebel General Franco.

"I got to know him very well," Mr. Menken said. "I took pictures of the battle of Talavera, and during it we were bombed, shelled, attacked by an armored car and I was even shot at by an aerial observer."

For the first few weeks after the outbreak of the war, Mr. Menken said, the American and other newsreel camera staffs encountered little trouble, except with the censors, because chartered airplanes were used by them in transporting their films, money and supplies. Later on, however, the photographer explained, the risk involved in flying private planes became too great and this special service had to be dropped.

Automobiles then were employed with special couriers who frequently had to drive 12 to 15 miles around the fighting areas to a small frontier town in the Pyrenees, from where the newsreel shots were smuggled out and thence shipped by rail to Paris, from where they were routed to exhibitors in the United States. This frontier courier also picked up additional raw stock, supplies, mail and funds, through a representative hidden in Arneguy, and returned with them to the cameramen in the war zone.

Cites Censorship Problem

Censorship was the worst problem, Mr. Menken said—and still is. Civilian censors were named to accompany the cameramen, a special censor being assigned to each camera. He ordered what scenes the cameraman could or could not take. Forbidden scenes included pictures of all foreign military equipment employed by the rebels, executions and "horror" scenes. Mr. Menken said that he sat by tearing his hair while the censor's hat rested over the end of his telescopic lens during the bombardment of Madrid.

At the capture of Toledo, however, he was able to obtain pictures of the rescue of the 1,200 defenders of the Alcazar. Mr. Menken also obtained air views of the burning of Irun and other battle highlights.

He said that while Spaniards on both sides of the conflict "have practically no regard for life or death," he saw nothing that could be termed "an atrocity."

"Of course," he hurriedly added, "they are very free about executing the enemy when captured. I saw five old ladies lying dead beside the road. They had been shot by a firing squad."

As for the War—

He bears no resentment against the rebel leaders, however.

"General Franco is swell," he said. "He is quiet-spoken, unassuming and has great strength of character. He is a natural born leader. There's no bombast about him, and he gets people's sympathy right off the bat."

"The war," he continued, "is by no means near an end. From this morning's papers, it looks bad for Franco, but I think that ultimately he will win. Even if he takes Madrid, that will be just a flash in the pan. The Reds will continue shelling where Franco leaves off, and there will not be much left of Madrid."

Most of the rebel aviators are Germans and Italians, he said.

"You can walk into a hotel in a rebel town and see forty German pilots sitting around drinking beer," he declared. "In another place you'll see crowds of Italian pilots. The Loyalists now have very fast, powerful planes. The bombers look like our Douglas bombers, and their fighting planes look like our Curtiss pursuit ships, but they are all supposed to be Russian. The Red flyers are a chicken-salad lot—French, English and dissatisfied Germans, among others."

Higher Rentals Seen in Germany

A substantial increase in film rentals in Germany will be made effective beginning next season in an attempt to make up the loss of the past year to German producers and distributors of 13,000,000 marks, according to reports from Berlin. The figures on the loss were the result of a detailed survey directed by the government.

It is said that the loss was mainly because of the increase in production costs from approximately 370,000 marks per picture to 400,000 marks, and to the increase in star salaries.

Rentals, at present running about 35 per cent of theatre grosses, are expected to be raised to 45 per cent, on the basis of the contention that exhibitors have profited to the extent of 15,000,000 marks from the attendance increase.

Minneapolis New Theatre Ordinance Appears Again

The second attempt within a month to restrict the number of motion picture theatres in the city of Minneapolis through municipal ordinance was before the City Council this week, this time disguised as a traffic safety measure. The first attempt was defeated when the city attorney's office ruled the proposed ordinance invalid. The new measure is ostensibly directed at improvement of traffic regulations about theatres, but it likewise proposes to limit the number of theatres.

Giannini's Columbia Shares

Dr. A. H. Giannini, president of United Artists, was among the holders of more than 10 per cent of Columbia stock, as of August 17th, it is shown in the company's report filed recently with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Dr. Giannini, Harry Cohn and Jack Cohn held 287,454 shares of common stock.

Spyros Skouras on Coast

Spyros Skouras left New York for California by plane Monday to confer with Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, and National Theatres executives there. He will be away from New York about 10 days for the conferences, which are said to be in connection with the acquisition of a number of Harry Huffman's theatres in Denver.

Poem

'Twas the month before Xmas
And all through the industry not a creature was stirring Except Leo the M-G-M Lion who was gifting exhibitors with "Born To Dance" and
"Love On The Run" "Tarzan Escapes" and "Libeled Lady" and lots of other nice things to make Everybody forget Christmas Shopping
And go to theatres playing

NAZIS SILENCE CRITICS; SUBSTITUTE 'REPORTERS'

Writers' Sole Duty Will Be to Give "Descriptions" Under Decree Issued by Goebbels

All criticism in newspapers, magazines and other publications of motion pictures, drama, literature, paintings, sculpture or other works of art is prohibited in Germany by decree of Dr. Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda and public enlightenment. The ruling applies primarily to published criticism but official indication is that it applies also to comments on the radio or on the platform.

After issuing the decree which sets forth strict regulations as to what qualifications critics must have in the future and what they may write, Dr. Goebbels said that there will be dramatic, literary and art "reporters" instead of "critics," and criticism will be replaced by "reports, which shall not be an appraisal but rather a description as well as an appreciation." Writers are neither to praise nor to blame. They are not to express any opinions. Their sole duty is to give a "description" of the work with which they are dealing.

The announcement was made at the annual festival sitting of the Reich Cultural Chamber and is considered the result of a long quarrel between the National Socialist regime and the film, dramatic and art critics, the last of the German journalists who occasionally expressed opinions contrary to those of responsible Nazi officials.

"These conceited know-it-all gentlemen," Dr. Goebbels said, " . . . through their everlasting quarreling constitute an off-chorus in our cultural and artistic life. . . .

"Role of Art Observation"

"We employed every means to bring the critics to their sole and proper role of art observation, giving them with it the possibility of continued existence. All these efforts have failed. It sometimes looked as though all the scolds who could no longer exercise their faculties in other fields centered on the arts.

"We had to call a halt. I therefore found it necessary in the decree announced today to forbid all criticism and replace it with art observation or description. That does not mean the limitation of free expression of opinion.

"We have often experienced in Berlin the spectacle of 22 and 23-year-old boys taking 40 or 50-year-old artists to task without being able to show a sign of technical knowledge. They will now learn to describe art work. That is also difficult and must be learned. If a critic feels himself capable of more than that, we are looking for capacities in many artistic fields and he is welcome to undertake positive work."

Hints as to the type of art the regime prefers were scattered throughout the speech. The minister said:

Any "report" written under the new regulations must be signed by the full name of the author, who is to be at least 30 years old, is to have "a fully satisfactory education" in the field of literature or art in question, and is to be equipped with a special permit to work as "reporter" in his field. Dr. Goebbels also explained that for the most part only persons who had accomplished something "creative" in their respective fields will be in a position to obtain the special permits required.

EDITORIAL BRANDS CRITIC BAN "INSANE"

Classifying the German decree prohibiting criticism of motion pictures, drama or any work of art as "one of those incredible attacks of Naziism upon the intellect which leave scant room for comment, the New York Herald Tribune in an editorial this week said in part:

"If a ten-year-old German child uttered the precious nonsense which fell from the lips of Dr. Goebbels in announcing the ban, his parents would fear for his sanity. The solemn stupidity of such an order defies rational discussion. Coming from the rulers of a nation which has been particularly rich in critical writing, the edict is as great an insult to the German mind of the past as of the present."

The minister devoted much of his address at the Chamber sitting to a discussion of the details of Germany's "triumphant cultural progress" during the last year. Referring to the motion picture industry particularly he said:

"German films . . . passed last year their greatest test, the production of genuine masterpieces."

Evidence that these "masterpieces" appealed in any great measure to the German public, or to any public, is lacking. A notice which appeared in the German press and never was denied said that the German film industry lost last year some 9,000,000 marks.

High Costs Hamper Industry

This report of financial difficulties besetting the German industry is confirmed by a dispatch to the United States Department of Commerce from the American attache in Berlin. During the last three years, the report says, production costs of motion pictures in Germany have increased from 70 to 80 per cent against an increase of only 30 to 40 per cent in domestic receipts and a decline in export profits.

That this position has not become more critical is due primarily to the fact that the German film industry has not been able to accomplish its announced production program, it is said. Production has been, in fact, at an unexpectedly low level. For the 1934-35 season it was announced that 175 films would be produced but out of these 60 could not be completed. For the 1935-36 season 155 films were announced, of which more than 30 were not completed.

New York Library Holds Exhibition on British Theatre

The New York Public Library has opened in its main exhibition room a special display, entitled "The English Theatre, 1660-1860," with material assembled from the institution's extensive collection of theatre playbills, manuscripts and old prints.

The exhibition is essentially a selection of playbills, illustrated with prints, occasional texts or other appropriate material and accompanied by descriptive or explanatory notes. The material is arranged chronologically to present a survey of the London theatre for 200 years and to point out the significant events in English theatrical history of that period. It was arranged by George Freedley and Stanley R. Pillsbury under the direction of Charles F. McCombs.

One of the aims of the exhibition, according to officials of the library, is to bring the library's theatre collection to public attention. The institution has long been interested in the theatre and the acquisition in recent years, principally by gift, of playbills, photographs, clippings and other more or less fugitive material relating to the stage, resulted in 1931 in the formation of a theatre section.

In 1932 an extensive collection of playbills, prints and other material covering the history of the British theatre, assembled by Hiram Stead of London, was acquired. The present exhibition has been drawn chiefly from this collection.

Charities Get Rodgers Fund

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has split among four charitable funds. the $2,500 check given him at the recent testimonial dinner. The Film Daily Relief Fund, the Motion Picture Charity Fund and the Motion Picture Salesmen's Charity Fund received $200 each, and $1,900 was sent to the Hospital for Joint Diseases to endow a bed in the name of the late Felix F. Feist.

Edward J. Grubel Passes

Edward J. Grubel, 66, the first circuit operator in the Kansas City area, was found dead in the bathroom of the home of A. F. Baker, his general manager, in Kansas City last weekend. Details Given of Universal's Trade Practice Program

An inquiry as to whether or not Universal Pictures' 10 per cent cancellation will apply to situations where the company's pictures are divided between two or more exhibitors and each takes all of the films thus offered him was addressed to the distributor by Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. The distributor replied that the privilege applied to exhibitors who "split" the product just as much as to those contracting for all of it.

Universal's grant of a 10 per cent cancellation in line with concessions made to exhibitors under the MPTOA 10-point trade practice program stipulated that the exhibitor had to purchase Universal's entire list of pictures in order to qualify for the cancellation privilege. Mr. Kuykendall's letter pointed out that a distributor's product frequently is divided between two exhibitors and asked whether such exhibitors, who take all the product offered them, although it may be less than the distributor's complete list, were eligible for the 10 per cent cancellation.

The cancellation policy defined by Twentieth Century-Fox last week in replying to the MPTOA specified that it would apply to exhibitors who took all the product "offered" them by the distributor as well as to exhibitors who bought the company's complete domestic list.

Trade practice statements in reply to the MPTOA program are expected this week from Paramount and RKO.

Simultaneous Openings Given "Lloyds of London"

"Lloyds of London" had simultaneous openings on Thanksgiving Eve at the Astor in New York and the Carthy Circle in Hollywood. Among those who witnessed the New York premiere of the film were: Senator Robert Wagner, Herbert Bayard Swope, Randolph Churchill, Max D. Steuer, Nicholas M. Schenck, J. Robert Rubin, Charles Moskowitz, Leo Spitz, W. G. Van Schmus, Lee Shubert, W. C. Michel, John D. Clark, Joe Moskowitz, Felix C. Jenkins and Spyros Skouras.

Studio Expansion Started

Construction work began this week at the RKO-Pathe Studios in Culver City on the 20-room building to exclusively house the General Pictures production unit. Completion of the building will mean that three producers, David Selznick, David Loew and General Pictures are housed in their own quarters while Sol Lesser and George Hirliman will divide the space in the old Ince administration building.

Germans Studying Pictures

For the first time this year, many German universities are including in their courses of instruction matters pertaining to motion pictures, the Department of Commerce in Washington reports. Films are discussed in lectures, on current affairs.

ERPI AND STUDIOS NEAR RECORDING AGREEMENT

Companies Reported Seeking Lower Minimum Guarantee and Credit on New Equipment

The new recording license agreements of Electrical Research Products, Inc., with the large producing companies will be closed by the end of the year, and if the current discussions continue in their peaceful vein, the agreement should be reached within the next 10 days, Whitford Drake, executive vice-president of Erpi, said Monday on his return to New York from a month's visit to California.

Only two points in the lengthy new agreements are said to be holding up the conclusion of negotiations. The large companies are reported to have asked Electrical Research Products to lower its present $100,000 minimum guarantee requirement and to allow a credit of at least 25 per cent on the amount above the reduced guarantee towards payment for new equipment that might be purchased.

Electrical Research, on the other hand, has offered the producing organizations a credit allowance of 25 per cent above the $100,000 minimum royalty towards payment for new equipment, but the producing companies say that this does not give them much opportunity to pay for the equipment by means of the allowance. As an alternative, they have suggested that Erpi increase the 25 per cent allowance above $100,000.

The new agreements have been in the hands of legal representatives for at least a month. The attorneys first ironed out the phrasing of the various clauses when the objections to the minimum allowance was raised. It is this point, chiefly, that has delayed the final signing of the contracts, along with the absence of Mr. Drake from New York.

Upon his return Monday, Mr. Drake refused to comment on his trip, other than to say he made the journey to familiarize himself with conditions in Hollywood's studios and to confer with his own company officers in that territory.

It is reported that Mr. Drake plunged into the settlement of the new contracts as soon as he reached Manhattan.

Code Seals Given To 1658 Features

Operating under the provisions of the Production Code Administration, the Hollywood branch of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America previewed and placed seals of approval on 134 features and 50 shorts during the two-month period from September 19th to November 21st. The report shows that reissued product will continue to occupy a prominent place on exhibitors' programs, 50 of the total number of features viewed during the two months being of this type.

Since the numerical code seal system was first placed in operation on the coast under the supervision of Joseph I. Breen, the number of pictures from major and independent studios to receive final qualifying certificates totals 1,658 features and 944 shorts. The series began on July 15, 1934.

Expect New Drive For Probe of FCC

Renewed agitation in Congress for an investigation of the conduct of the Federal Communications Commission is expected to develop when the legislative body reconvenes in January, it is said in reports from Washington. Requests by many Congressmen for a probe of the Commission have been based on three chief complaints. One group charges that the Commission has wasted time and money in its investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, without any results. A second faction will continue the fight initiated last spring to have the licenses of a number of radio stations revoked because of the broadcasting, on a Mexican program, of a song claimed to be obscene. Another group is assailing the Commission for failing to provide what are considered adequate facilities for educational broadcasting.

Court Allows Stipulation

United States District Judge George H. Moore in St. Louis has authorized and directed Edmond Loeln, former City Collector, and James T. Blair, former Missouri Supreme Court Justice, as trustees for the Theatre Realty Company, owners of the Fox Theatre property, to enter into a stipulation with Milton C. Weisman, receiver for the Fox Theatre Corporation in New York, under which the trustees will be allowed $773,300 on their claim for $1,074,028 for rent of the Fox theatre.

RKO Takes Wing Picture

Ward Wing, Ltd., headed by Ward Wing, has completed arrangements with RKO for the distribution of "Tea Leaves in the Wind," which Mr. Wing will produce in India. A native cast will be supported by English and American players. Negotiations are under way to star Richard Dix in the picture.

Banjo on My Knee

Romance, Comedy, Melodrama

Here's a show for audiences and showmen. The most noticeable feature about it, and the angle that gives it unusual commercial import, is that it is a very different brand of entertainment. Story ingredients are tried and true entertainment elements—romance, comedy, melodrama, music, dancing, excitement and suspense concerning uniquely interesting persons in interestingly different places. Formula stuff, it has been put together in an altogether non-formula way. While comedy in characterizations, theme and situations dominates, the other factors have been expertly blended to produce well rounded entertainment for almost any kind of theatre.

The story told is attention engaging; the odd things that happen while it is being told, the gusty, humorous, personal and situation incident, however, is the quality that makes the film. Essentially the motivation is action packed comedy romance of Mississippi River shantyboat folk. The locales are the river and picturesque New Orleans; the time is comparatively modern.

Ernie Holley, river boat boy, marries Pearl, land girl. The union is a happy occasion for Pop Newt, bizarre one-man band, but a staggering disappointment to Leota, a voluptuous river girl. When Ernie flees the scene because he thinks he has killed Slade, who kissed the bride over his objections, Pearl is heartbroken, Leota vengefully triumphant, but old Newt's chagrin becomes rage when Slade turns up safe and sound. As Ernie roams the world, city slicker photograph seller, Warfield Scott, becomes amorously inclined towards Pearl, painting a pretty picture of life for her in New Orleans as his assistant. Sore because Ernie fails to return and infuriated by Leota, Pearl goes to New Orleans. But she's a smarter girl than Warfield bargained for. He gets successive wallopings at the hands of a mysteriously returning Ernie and old Newt. Pearl gets a dishwashing job.

Convinced that Ernie has run out on her, Pearl becomes interested in cafe singer Chick Bean, and when Newt, befriended by hostess Ruby, turns up with his weird musical contraption, he, Pearl and Chick become a ragingly popular floor show attraction, along with Buddy, singing and dancing river lout. But Warfield and Ernie have not faded from the picture. Ernie has come back to plead with Pearl to let him go to the West Indies, and when she puts the clamps on that plan, he walks out, this time, as he says, for good. Yet when he catches Warfield innocently passing money to Pearl, he goes into action. Staging a one-man riot, he lands in jail, and he is rescued by Leota.

Back on the river, he and Leota are about to be married according to queer river folk custom when Pearl arrives on the scene. Another hectic brawl ensues. Leota cuts the shanty boat drift at the height of a storm, with Pearl, Ennie and Newt aboard. Determined that the explosive couple shall not get away from him this time, Newt nails the two in a cabin, allows them to fight themselves to exhaustion, and when that's accomplished, he settles down with his musical contraption to play a toast to the grandchild, who he hopes soon will come along to perpetuate his family name and traditions.

Well acted, produced and directed to make entertainment for class and mass, the film has an exploitation quality that should be welcomed by exhibitors who like to get out and sell their attractions. There are pretty good names to deal with and one of them, Walter Brennan, who just about steals the show, is almost certain to come in for plenty of favorable comment.

Previewed in the Village theatre, Westwood. The exhibition delighted the audience.

Three Men on a Horse

(Warner Brothers)

Racing Comedy

So infrequently in the past decade has the motion picture showman been given opportunity to exploit a picture made from a record-breaking stage play (because there have been so few record-breaking stage plays) that such a one as "Three Men on a Horse" may come as a box office problem picture, the problem being not what to do in its behalf but what not to overlook doing. The production suggests more kinds of advertising promotion, more means and methods of exploitation, than are called for by a half dozen attractions that come up for treatment in the normal course of events. Even more infrequently does the exhibitor find himself in a position to "shoot the works" in complete confidence that whatever good he may say about the picture is less than has beeen said about the play and that the picture is, in extraordinary degree, the exact thing that the play was. All of which circumstances would appear to add up to equal a sort of showman's holiday (by which is emphatically not meant layoff) covering the period immediately prior to and during the run of this film.

As to public sectors presumably susceptible of becoming interested in seeing the picture, there is a wide and attractive choice and no reason for skipping any. Biggest, probably, is the great body of plain folk who like to laugh out loud at genuinely funny comedy. Narrowing this down a little, there is the great body of strangely assorted human beings who play the races, a segment of the population uncounted but demonstrably legion, and for these there never was an equally satisfying entertainment. There are, too, those other multitudes who have heard of the play and want to see it to discover for themselves what made it tick so long on Broadway, and there are, finally, those to whom the names of players in the cast mean all that they should, players, incidentally, who are at their best in this better than customary vehicle.

Regarding the story, all that need or should be told is that a writer of sentimental verses for postcards is discovered by gamblers to possess the knack of picking the winning horses in any given number of races without error and is practically incorporated, without his leave, by these same, whereupon hangs an uproariously funny yarn which ought not to be divulged in further detail save by the film or play.

Conflict

(Universal-Trem Carr)

Comedy Romance

With unusual emphasis placed on comedy, and romance occupying a pleasing function, while not ignoring that he-man dramatic quality expected in transition of a Jack London story to the screen, "Conflict," based on "The Abysmal Brute," is soundly produced, acted and directed and provides exciting entertainment. Additionally the film carries a thread of human interest not common to thrill attractions.

Substantially, "Conflict," localed in the rugged western country where men are men, is a romantic and dramatic prize fight story of the gay nineties. It moves speedily; action and dialogue are well balanced, production settings are of above average quality, and the producer wisely has elected to work in considerable comedy, so that the film is a deft combination of those elements ordinarily appealing to the masses.

In the story John Wayne is the stooge of world's champion fisticuffer Ward Bond and his manager Frank Sheridan. Wayne's job is to drop into lumber camps and mining towns, win the confidence of the inhabitants as to his fistic ability, lay the ground for a betting coup and take a dive when he gets into the ring with Bond. Beating up a lumber camp bully, saving little Tommy Bupp from drowning, meeting and falling in love with Miss Rogers and becoming the idol of the lumber jacks, a regeneration works within Wayne. With Eddie Bordon, under orders of Sheridan, on the spot to see that Wayne minds his P's and Q's, Bond invades the camp intent on a financial cleanup in a fake fight. With the usual suspense building technique, in which Wayne's safety is menaced, the fight goes on. It's a wild brawl that ignores all rules, but Wayne finally kayoes Bond to merit the esteem of his lumberjack pals, the affection of Miss Rogers and the worship of Tommy Bupp.

Janosik

(French Motion Picture Corp.)

Historical Drama

In real life, Janosik was an eighteenth century Czechoslovakian peasant, whom legend has made something of a Robin Hood. On the screen, with exteriors made in Czechoslovakia, the character as played by Palo Bielik becomes a personable blond young man, possessed of a fine singing voice, a pair of nimble dancing feet and the one-time acrobatic prowess of our own Douglas Fairbanks. The entire production is of uniform and high excellence, and the superimposed English titles make the story understandingly flowing for American audiences.

The beginnings of the story are mainly atmospheric. In a grim series of shots a small village and its people are pictured as unfortunate victims of an oppressing feudal system which forces them to labor as menial serfs for their cruel and greedy overlords. It is into such a scene as this that Janosik returns home. Greeted with the news that his old father, broken in grief over the death of his wife, has been dragged off to prison for failing to do his daily stint of servitude, the son rushes to the rescue but too late to save the old man's life.

The harrowing sight of the tortured body forces Janosik to vow bloody vengeance on the tyrant murderers and in a stirring chorus of song he voices his spirit of rebellion to the attentive ear of the neighboring countryside.

Janosik becomes the scourge of the rich, burning and plundering their property, and the champion of the poor, succoring and leading the oppressed and impoverished peasantry to a new freedom and equality.

The landed gentry place a substantial reward upon the brigand's head. How Janosik is finally trapped by a trick that causes the death of his sweetheart and how he gayly in song and dance meets his own end on the gallows serve to bring the story to a dramatic and inspiring conclusion.

Though the picture can be given that ominous classification of being a "costume drama," the exhibitor need not fear for entertainment value.

The acting generally is of a robust and surehanded nature. Bielik is given splendid support by the comely Zlata Hajdukova, and by Filip Davidik, a youngster who gives a performance unusual for one so young in years. The direction is intelligent and lively. The technical side of the production can shape up to the most exacting professional standards. The sets are solid and substantial. The costumes render a rich and picturesque background. Especially noteworthy is the photography. Most of the story has been shot among the natural settings of the wild and rugged beauty of mountain country. Native music and folk dancing lend a welcome and colorful note.

Previewed privately in projection room.

Il Grande Apello

(The Great Call)

(United Artists S. A. I., Italy)

Drama

Giovanni Bertani, a renegade living in Gibuti, smuggling arms to the enemy, finds after 18 years his son, who is with the Italian Army in Abyssinia. Through the heroic conduct of the young man he sees how false his past was and makes amends, fighting against the enemy and dying for his country.

This film is very spectacular. The war scenes especially are extremely realistic. They were made with the collaboration of the Italian Army, which loaned to the producer 2,000 men, guns and planes.

It is a propaganda film, but very well done, never lacking interest, particularly for the public which wants a vivid idea of the Ethiopian war.

Pilotto, the leading man, has given a strong interpretation which places him on a level with the best screen actors.

The photography very good.

The Bold Caballero

(Republic)

Romantic Drama

This is Spanish days in California and romantic action drama done in Magnacolor. While occasionally dramatically effective, color application does not mark any great improvement. Motivation does not provide any new interest.

The leading player, Robert Livingston, is presented in a dual role. In one character he is a romantic outlaw idolized by the peons and Indians whom he seeks to deliver from the rapacity of an ever increasing flow of white invaders. In the second, he is a dashing firebrand lieutenant of Heather Angel, who has assumed the gubernatorial prerogatives of her murdered father. In love with her, it is his job to fight off the gringos, run down the romantic outlaw and put the skids under an unscrupulous commandante, Sig Rumann, who is playing both ends against the middle.

As the wellknown formula for this type of picture is followed, adequately in some instances and not so effectively in others, the pair eventually become the victims of the wily commandante. But the Indians and peons haven't forgotten. Just as Livingston is about to be hanged and Miss Angel forced into a loveless marriage with the commandante, they rebel. Effecting the escape, Livingston puts a fatal end to the commandante and it's love, kisses and rejoicing all around.

Previewed in the Forum Theatre, Los Angeles, to an audience which wasn't noticeably impressed by the theme, work of players, quality of direction or color treatment, but did get quite a kick out of the thrilling action.—G. M.

Everybody Dance

Farce-comedy

The values here are chiefly British Cicely Courtneidge and American Ernest Truex with the addition that the U. S. song team, Gordon and Revel, have written three special numbers. There is story appeal in the basic idea of a night club queen taking up the role of lady farmer in order to conceal her real occupation from a niece and nephew, wards from America.

The plot turns on the fact that a wealthy grandfather in New York, pilloried by the press for leaving the children penniless, sends his son, their uncle, to bring them back. Revelation of the double life of the lady farmer threatens to lead to her being declared unfit to have the children, but the tables are turned when the daughter of the local magistrate reveals that the night club lady once saved her from an unpleasant adventure in London. Night club queen and American uncle marry and the party celebrates at the club.

The story is the selling angle, and offers the best opportunity of making the most of an unambitious but mildly amusing item.

At a night trade show it had quite a friendly reception, the finish compensating for obvious drag in the opening.—BRUCE ALLAN, London.

White Hunter

Jungle Drama

The white hunter of the title, played by Warner Baxter, is an exiled Englishman into whose custody, as captain of an African hunting expedition, are placed the persons and, by inference, the lives of a British munitions magnate and his wife responsible for his exile, members of a party including the magnate's daughter and her aunt and uncle. What is done about this situation is done in a jungle setting, and plentiful use is made of animal stuff, some of it staged and some of it stock stuff of more or less familiar source, and effort is made to contrast the sophisticated emotional struggle involving these individuals with the elemental struggle of man against animal and an inhospitable nature.

Emphasis is placed upon the animal phase of the content, the personal drama being dealt with in short sequences widely separated, and it should be noted that there is but one killing and that one in defense of life. On the contrary, dialogue refers to the camera as the preferable implement of jungle conquest and there is considerable discussion of humane game laws. Nevertheless, there is opportunity to speak in advertising of an elephant hunt, a tiger's devotion to her young, zebras, giraffes and other jungle life in natural state, which may be the picture's most salable box office factor aside from the names in the cast.

The plot places Michael Varek, his wife, Helen, and daughter, Toni, in charge of Clark Rutledge, whom Varek and his wife have wronged, on a hunting expedition in the jungle. Helen Varek attempts to renew an old romance with Rutledge but he falls in love with Toni and declines to exercise his advantage for purposes of revenge. Rutledge saves Toni's life a couple of times, whereupon her father returns to England to clear Rutledge's name and Toni remains to become his wife.

Smart Blonde

Although this is the start of a new series, the romantic and dramatic crime mystery story related is merely another version of the newspaper girl-police officer theme. Following the routine formula, a few bits of novelty have been injected. In it the elements common to such types of film have been compounded in the expected manner. Nevertheless, and mainly because of the quality work of the two leading players, Glenda Farrell and Barton MacLane, the film does possess a definite interest to those who go for the suspense laden, danger menaced, thrill drama.

A sensational murder starts the picture. Torchy Blane, clever reporter, and Steve McBride, hard-boiled detective, battling, ribbing and kidding each other all the way, pool their talents and go to the mat with a liberal assortment of public enemies and their underworld allies. Quickly establishing a possible motive and concentrating suspicion upon that, they shortly encounter complications involving many persons and bringing them into much personal danger. Though it is evident, as it was to the preview audience, that he and his ally are proceeding on the wrong track, McBride is quite certain that Cannon possesses the information that will enable him to crack the case. Cannon is mysteriously murdered, and then, by a process of elimination, the sleuthing pair finally tab the culprits.

Comedy in which the two leads continually participate contrasts the motivating mystery drama, and one song number is rung in for Winifred Shaw to effect the proper night club atmosphere.

The Yellow Cruise

(French M.P.)

Exploration Record

This is the camera record of an expedition sponsored by Andre Citroen, French motor manufacturer, covering the 20,000 miles from Beirut, Syria, across Afghanistan, the Himalaya Mountains, the Gobi Desert and through Asia to Peiping, together with return by another and equally interesting and difficult course, the whole coinciding roughly with the route taken by Marco Polo and documenting by means of motion pictures the places and peoples of his reports. Many of these are new to the screen, unreported by newsreel or travelogue, and all are fascinating, fresh, some thrilling. The documentation offered under the title is culled from more than 50,000 feet of film made in the course of the exploration, and explanatory narration in English is competently informative and entertaining.

The scaling of the Himalyas by motor caravan is a spectacle of varied interest. There is no attempt to dramatize artificially the events that mark the progress of the party. These include sandstorms, subzero weather on the roof of the world, landslides obliterating dim trails, capture and temporary imprisonment of one division of the expedition by Chinese troops engaged in civil warfare, finally the death by pneumonia of Georges-Marie Haardt, the explorer in command of the enterprise. Out of the normal incidents of the trail and the natural obstacles encountered is derived more drama than might have been achieved by introduction of a fictitious story element.

Photography is for the most part excellent, although climatic handicaps account for occasional defects which add their own touch of drama to the whole. Much of the film was photographed without sound, the microphone having been used, evidently, only to catch especially interesting native singing, conversation and ceremony. The music score provided is colorful and the narrator does not intrude needlessly.

Reviewed at the 55th Street Playhouse, New York, where a mature audience accorded the film interested attention and highly favorable comment.—W. R. W.

Ride 'Em Cowboy

Western

Deviating from the general theme of westerns this production builds to an automobile race. The picture is a minor effort, as entertainment values for westerns are reckoned, lacking in thrills and story content. What it does possess is a comedy situation that, while failing to sustain continued interest, is at times amusing.

Emphasis on the star's name, Buck Jones, and the automobile race, would appear to be its best selling points. Supporting Jones are George Cooper, William Lawrence, Luana Walters and Donald Kirke. The romantic angle is handled by Jones and Miss Walters.

Jones is a cowboy on a ranch adjacent to the town of Blair. On the first of each month the ranch hands ride into Blair with their pay, and after each visit the town is in need of repair. Jones causes enough trouble on one of these visits to warrant retaliation. The townsfolk run him out of town on a freight train.

On the train Jones meets Cooper, who is masquerading as an automobile mechanic. Cooper, who is delivering a racing car to J. P. McGowan in a nearby town, convinces Jones that he would make an excellent driver. Jones learns how to drive the hard way and is picked to drive the racer for McGowan in the annual race. Kirke, Jones' opponent, tries various methods of preventing the cowboy from starting, but Jones arrives at the last minute, and wins.

Comedy

This short subject has Walter Catlett in a talkative comedy that defeats its own purpose by being too loquacious. Absentmindedly Catlett makes two engagements for the same evening. Since the engagements are with his boss and his fiancee, Catlett dreads offending either. Catlett's manservant, Clarence Muse, a past master of the art of lying, phones Eleanor Knox, Catlett's fiancee, to explain that Catlett has been injured in an accident. Miss Knox comes to Catlett's apartment, sends for a doctor and Catlett has to pretend he is ill. When the situation becomes too involved, Catlett confesses. The boss phones, Miss Knox answers, and when she declares that Catlett has been in an accident the boss says he will be right up. Running time, 18 minutes.

A special short feature running approximately a half hour, this is a historical record of Daniel Defoe's life of Robinson Crusoe without frills or thrills, made especially for children. Photographed upon the actual island that Defoe chose, in the Caribbean Sea, the subject is pictorially excellent and should please the juvenile trade. The subject is introduced by Uncle Don, of radio fame, who interprets the story by flashback. Running time, 32 minutes.

LIFE LAVISHLY LAUDS LAUGHTON

MOVIE OF THE WEEK: Rembrandt

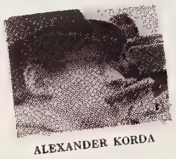
Laughton and Korda



ALEXANDER KORDA

THIS time Charles Laughton pulls in his lower lip, grows a moustache, remoulds his face into the unmistakable features of the painter Rembrandt. The film was made in England Actor Laughton seems not to like American producers because they hurry too much and because they want his wife, Elsa Lanchester, to play horror roles. At the London Films studio, tea is served at 4 and Mrs. Laughton is allowed to play Rembrandt's mistress. Rembrandt was directed by Alexander Korda, who smoked hundreds of $1.85 cigars during production. In spirit and in most details it is true to the painter's life.

Rembrandt Harmens van Rijn lived from 1606 to 1669. Born in Leyden, the son of a prosperous miller, he went to Amsterdam to paint, made a brilliant reputation by the time he was 25. His beautiful wife Saskia bore him four children, of whom all but one, Titus, died in infancy In 1642 Saskia, too, died and with her death the Korda film opens. As the foremost portrait painter of Amsterdam, Rembrandt had been commissioned for 16 florins ($640) to paint Captain Cocq's fashionable company of musketeers. His painting placed a few of the musketeers in strange high-light, the rest in shadow so deep that the canvas was long known as "The Night-Watch." The musketeers were furious.

For the next decade Rembrandt's painting grew steadily better, his finances steadily worse. Only his shrewd, shrewish housekeeper, Geertje Dirx, staved off his bankruptcy But Rembrandt fell in love with a pretty kitchen maid named Hendrikje Stoffels, who bore him a child. He did not marry the girl, possibly, as the picture has it, because of a legal mixup over Titus' inheritance. Hendrikje was put on trial and excommunicated. For several years Rembrandt and his Hendrikje lived together, bankrupt but happy. Then Hendrikje died. For 15 years more, lonely old Rembrandt went on painting, ever excelling his own work

Paintings by Rembrandt

Self-portrait (Metropolitan Museum, New York) is what Rembrandt, at 54, saw and painted when he looked into the mirror in 1660. He produced more self-portraits than any other great painter. Other self-portraits in the U. S. belong to the Frick Collection (the artist at 52), Andrew Mellon (55), Boston's Gardner Museum (23), J. Pierpont Morgan (51), Joseph Widener (44). No show-off, Rembrandt painted himself when he wanted to try a new technique when he bought a new suit when he was too poor to hire models

THE period of Rembrandt's big earnings lasted twelve years, from 1630 to 1642 he painted the portrait at the right of his sister Liesbeth (Robert Treat Paine II tion, Boston), he was just entering the fat years. When he painted the Toilet of B After the Bath (Metropolitan Museum, below), the fat commissions had ceased brandt was spending his way to eventual bankruptcy.

In 1734, almost a century after it was painted, the Toilet of Bathsheba was sold heirs of Rembrandt's burgomaster for 863 florins ($107). In 1780 in Paris it brought eleven years later only $25). From France it traveled to England ($1087), to ($1581 and lodged at length in the collection of a Dutch nobleman where it for 78 years. Then Sir Joseph Duveen bought it in 1913 for about $200,000 and possibly twice that amount to Benjamin Altman of New York who bequeathed Metropolitan.

There are probably 700 authentic Rembrandts in existence. Dr. W. R. Val director of the Detroit Institute of Arts, vouches for 170 Rembrandts in the U. S., their total value at $30,000,000. Double that figure and you have a conservative the value of all the world's Rembrandts. This makes Rembrandt canvases Empire State Buildings with the Queen Mary thrown in for good measure.

Highest price ever publicly announced for a Rembrandt was $487,000 paid by Widener for The Mill in 1911. But art experts believe Andrew Mellon paid $750,000 for a Rembrandt Self-Portrait. If the six paintings here reproduced were at auction they would probably bring not less than $1,500,000.

Maxwell Position In GB Explained By Maurice Ostrer

Maurice Ostrer, arriving in New York this week, substantiated the statement made by his brother last week that John Maxwell of Associated British Pictures, does not hold a five year option on the 5,100 "A" shares of Metropolis and Bradford Trust held by the Ostrer brothers. Mr. Ostrer partly cleared up the confusion caused by denials of his brother's statement which were issued in London when he said, "In the event that Mr. Maxwell is successful in purchasing the 4,900 "A" shares owned by 20th Century-Fox, then he has an option to buy our stock."

Mr. Ostrer amplified this with the statement that if 20th Century-Fox sells its shares he and his brothers would be forced to sell theirs to Mr. Maxwell. He denied that he came here to participate in his brother Isidore's discussion with Joseph Schenck and Sidney R. Kent of 20th Century-Fox but then intimated that he may attend the conferences in Hollywood.

After repeated questioning by reporters the managing director of Gaumont British said that there may be a possibility of reviving the original deal planned by Isidore Ostrer, Joseph and Nicholas Schenck under which ownership and control of GB was to be divided between the Ostrers, 20th Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Negotiations with Mr. Maxwell in London followed announcement of this agreement last summer but in spite of developments there the Schenck brothers have insisted that they had entered a legal agreement.

Mr. Ostrer denied, however, that he will participate in any negotiations his brother may be conducting. He said that he is here on a talent hunt and that he plans to remain three weeks. Accompanied by Arthur Lee, vice-president of GB, Mr. Ostrer left later in the week for the coast.

$700,000 Theatres' Value

An "upset" or minimum price of $700,000 has been fixed by court order on the Masque, Majestic and Royale-Golden, all legitimate theatres in the Times Square district of New York. The theatres will be offered for sale on November 23, as a result of an action by the Continental Bank and Trust Company, as trustee, against the Theatre Zone Realty Company to satisfy a mortgage of $1,997,621 with interest.

New Theatre Corporation

Commonwealth Carrollton Theatre Corporation has been formed in Kansas City, Mo., and has purchased the Johnson theatre at Carrollton from Ethel Johnson. C. L. McVey is president of the new corporation, C. A. Schultz vice-president and O. K. Mason secretary-treasurer.

Selznick Holds Wright

David O. Selznick has renewed the contract of William H. Wright, production assistant. Mr. Wright has been connected with Selznick-International since its organization.

National Decency Legion Reviews Nine New Pictures

Of nine new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were approved for general patronage and three were cited as unobjectionable for adults. The new pictures and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Born to Dance," "Lawless Land," "Mandarin Mystery," "Pennies from Heaven," "West of Nevada," "White Hunter." Class A2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Das Lockende Ziel" (German), "Smart Blonde," "Weekend Millionaire."

Beginning on December 10th the form of the weekly release of the National Legion of Decency will be slightly altered. The so-celled "Special Estimate" will be omitted. The weekly issue will henceforth list new pictures according to the A-1, A-2, B or C classifications, name the company producing each picture, and in the cases of B or C pictures, state the reason why they are so classified.

'Goldigger' Plane Homeward Bound

Warner Brothers' troupe of "Flying Golddiggers," which is touring the country in a TWA transport plane as an exploitation stunt for the forthcoming "Gold Diggers of 1937," left New York this weekend on their return series of hops to California, completing more than half their trip.

The plane left Los Angeles two weeks ago and went down through Texas and Tennessee, stopping in practically every key city in the South and Midwest, ending with a visit to the company sales convention in Chicago.

The visitors reached New York Friday morning and were met by newspaper reporters at the airport, from where they were taken to New York and the Warwick Hotel. The newspaper reporters and other guests, as well as home office officials, joined the girls at luncheon and later some continued on with them to see "White Horse Inn" and various Manhattan night clubs. On Sunday Harry M. Warner, president of Warners, was host at his home in Mt. Vernon.

On Monday the plane took off for Albany where the girls were met by Mayor John Boyd Thatcher and Tax Commissioner Mark Graves, representing Governor Herbert Lehman. Five separate radio broadcasts over NBC and CBS were made by the visitors. The day's festivities ended with a "Gold Diggers" ball at the DeWitt Clinton Hotel.

On Tuesday morning, the troupe landed at Syracuse on the 17th stop of the tour. The Syracuse University football team and band met the ship as it landed and paraded through the town to the Onondaga Hotel for luncheon, interviews and a broadcast over WFBL. After a personal appearance at RKO's Schine theatre, the girls took off again and landed at Buffalo Wednesday morning.

They were greeted at the airport by Buffalo Kiwanis officers and representatives from the mayor's office. Interviews were held during the afternoon and a personal appearance was made at the Great Lakes theatre, followed by a ball at the Hotel Statler.

Sterling Pictures Production Budget Set at $2,300,000

A production budget of $2,300,000 has been set by W. Ray Johnston, president, and Scott R. Dunlap, who this week was appointed vice-president of the newly formed Sterling Pictures Corporation. This amount will provide for the production of 26 features and eight westerns. The serial end of the program still remains to be decided upon, as Mr. Johnston and Mr. Dunlap plan to make two special serials on the initial year's program.

Mr. Dunlap, who is to be in charge of production, will start his editorial and writing staff functioning January 1, assembling a group of about 10 writers to prepare scripts for the stories already acquired by the company.

According to production plans being organized, five unit supervisors will be employed, four of whom will assume responsibility for production of the 26 features and one will be in charge of the western unit. No outside producers are contemplated under the Sterling setup.

Mr. Dunlap has been a director for Fox, Warners and Columbia and for the past seven years has been a partner in the agency of Frank and Dunlap. He will retire from the agency post January 1.

Monogram stockholders will meet in New York or Chicago December 18 to decide whether Sterling Pictures will merge with the company or absorb it entirely. Mr. Johnston is president of both companies.

MGM Campaign Bulletins

The first of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new bi-weekly cooperative campaign service letters was distributed over the weekend to exhibitor accounts. The new service is designed to present in brief form picture-selling ideas for exhibitors who prefer them to lengthy promotional campaign reports.

Leishman to Schine Circuit

E. D. Leishman, formerly head of Radio Pictures, Ltd., in England, has joined the Schine theatre circuit and is now at the company's headquarters in Gloversville, N. Y. Later he will be given a definite assignment in the field.

Clark Oklahoma Branch Head

Charles Clark, for the past four years salesman for Twentieth Century-Fox in New Orleans, has been appointed branch manager of the company's exchange in Oklahoma City by John D. Clark, general sales manager.

"WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH THE MOVIES?"

Samuel Goldwyn, Answering a Familiar Question, Says Audiences Govern Hollywood

Samuel Goldwyn arrives at the eve of his 26th anniversary in motion pictures, and the 23rd anniversary of the release, in December, 1913, of his first production, "The Squaw Man," with some very definite conclusions in answer to the familiar question: "What's wrong with the movies?" Mr. Goldwyn, writing from Hollywood, for the New York Times, observes:

1. Over-production in motion pictures is one of the greatest problems.

2. Hollywood can exist only by the rule of audience acceptance and audience rejection—the public is getting what it is asking for.

3. No producer can honestly say that he knows what the public wants.

4. The majority of individuals do not want the true unpleasantries of life depicted in their motion pictures.

5. The intelligent man or woman in an audience today is not willing to sit through a double bill; 50 per cent of the double bill theatres will go single-bill within a year.

6. Organized censorship is a "bugaboo" in Hollywood today. There might be no censorship worries in Hollywood were it not for the fact that "certain producers of low integrity found that the shocking qualities of rudeness made money."

7. If producers of more expensive and better films depended upon their receipts from the United States they would be bankrupt.

"The main thing that I have found to be wrong with the motion picture business," writes Mr. Goldwyn, addressing his observations to the public, "is the fact that there are good pictures and bad pictures, just as there are good brands of canned corn and bad brands. Only in the case of canned goods the public soon stops buying the inferior product and helps the meritorious product to gain a foothold; while in motion pictures the audiences shout against films and tell each other 'what is wrong with the movies'—and continue to patronize bad films. And as long as the public does that, they can't tell me what is 'wrong with the movies.' Because if they do, I'll always come right back and ask: 'What is wrong with the audiences?'

Problems Manifold

"Audiences rarely consider the problems that enter into picturemaking," Mr. Goldwyn continued. "Censorship, for instance, is a word that makes most producers curl up in dismay.

"Censors, however, have taught the ordinary run of film producers what I have preached since the beginning of the present cinema industry—namely, that the motion picture is a family business," he added. "We can get our money back, at a profit, only when the film appeals to the entire family. The producer cannot be as bold as he might like. What may amuse the adult may be injurious to the child. We must keep to a common denominator of good taste and decency.

"There might be no censorship worries in Hollywood today," Mr. Goldwyn charges, "were it not for the fact that certain producers of low itegrity found that the shocking qualities of rudeness made money. Not satisfied with 'getting away with something,' they began to reach further and further for the obscene until finally some one had to act. And that's how censors were born. The industry needed regulation. It brought it upon itself. Hollywood has no one to blame but itself. An amusement built upon obscenity cannot succeed.

CHINESE UNIVERSITY PLANS FILM SCHOOL

China is to have its first school of cinematography, dedicated, among other things, to the graduation of screen idols through academic guidance and professorial training. To be incorporated under the social education division of the Great China University, Shanghai, the department will give courses in directing scenario writing, staging, acting and photography.

Dr. S. C. Tai, dean of the University's School of Education, will direct the department. He has completed arrangements with the leading studios in Shanghai whereby collegians will be apprenticed to directors, technicians, actors and actresses for personal guidance.

Many Must Be Pleased

"Yet," Mr. Goldwyn explained, "the sincere producer has the problem of not making all his films for the mind of a child. Occasionally a Shirley Temple or a Jackie Coogan may appear whose pictures appeal to adults and children alike. But, as a rule, the producer has the difficult task of trying to tell a human true story that will be acceptable as entertainment for an 11-year-old-girl, a 40-year-old matron, a 60-year-old grandmother. New York York audiences of sophistication, farmers on Saturday night in an Iowa town, an audience in London and a small theatre clientele in British South Africa—no wonder we cannot completely satisfy each of these many audiences!

"Why not make films for each of these groups instead of trying to reach a common denominator? I am asked this very often. The answer is a film like 'The Informer.' Here was a beautiful adult motion picture that cost considerable money to produce. The critics raved about it. But it hadn't the appeal to all audiences. We must make the best pictures we can—and yet make them for the largest audience we can in order to justify our business existence. That is no easy task.

"And we have not only American audiences to satisfy," continued the producer. "Foreign countries have suddenly realized a great propaganda value in the films and resent the danger of the world's becoming completely Americanized through the Hollywood motion picture. It isn't to Italy's liking to see the beautiful Venetian girls sporting Jean Harlow platinum bobs. Nor is it pleasant for them to see American films representing their nationals as villains or gangsters.

"The reason that Hollywood is so careful to avoid offending foreign nations and foreign audiences in its films is the fact that receipts on pictures from outside this country have been growing more and more each year. If we producers of more expensive and better films depended upon our receipts from the United States, we'd be bankrupt in no time. Our best markets are now England, Italy, France, the Balkans, the South Americas. Germany used to be, but of recent years has ceased to be either a market, or an interesting field of motion-picture experimentation," says Mr. Goldwyn.

Overproduction Cited

"Overproduction in motion pictures is one of our greatest problems and is traceable right back to the audiences. I usually produce only five or six films a year, though in some years I may make eight or ten. In general, most other studios answer audience demand by scheduling 50 or 60 films apiece each year. Obviously, it is impossible for them all to be well balanced, well played, well produced, even though each be made with the best intentions in the world. Which, of course, they are not!

"This overproduction is the outgrowth of the depression. When jobs were lost and money became scarce, audiences began to decrease. Attendance at the theatres was cut in half. There was a mushroom growth of 'Bank Nites' and 'Free Car Given Away Tonite' and other stunts of attracting people to the picture houses. Anything was tried to make bigger audiences attend the movie houses.

"Exhibitors decided to give the public two pictures instead of one; for the same money, for less money. They began giving the audiences three-hour shows. The double bills came into being.

"To meet this situation of two pictures on one bill," Mr. Goldwyn continued, "the producers began to make a new type of motion picture—a deliberately mediocre product. They even labeled them 'B' and 'C' pictures. They spend as little as possible on them. It is as if a newspaper, wishing to impress its public by putting out a 26-page paper when a 16-page paper would suffice, just stuffed the extra ten pages with virtually meaningless type.

Sees End to Double Bills

"The intelligent man or woman in the audience today no longer is willing to sit through these double bills. They call up the theatres and find out what time the 'main feature' goes on. Thus they carefully avoid the 'B' picture. Or if they do happen to be forced to sit through it, they hiss and catcall and thus ruin their mood for the fine picture still to come. Then they go home and talk over 'what is wrong with the movies.' I predict that 50 per cent of the double-bill houses will go single-bill within a year. But the audience will accomplish it, not we.

"In other words," Mr. Goldwyn tells the public, "don't ask 'what is wrong with the movies?' Ask yourselves 'what is wrong with us, the audiences?' Hollywood can only exist by the rule of audience acceptance and audience rejection. You're only getting what you're asking for!"

PARAMOUNT, UNIVERSAL, FOX SET SALES SESSIONS

Columbia's Series of Meetings Underway; Remaining Product Is Subject of Meetings

Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and Universal Pictures have set mid-seasonal sales conferences between the sales chiefs in the field, home office managers and studio executives, following similar meetings already held by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Warner Brothers. Columbia Pictures is now meeting.

James R. Grainger, general sales manager of Universal, opens Universal's meeting in New York on Friday, traveling to Chicago for a second conference on December 10th.

The Paramount sales session has been scheduled for next month and will be held in Hollywood.

Twentieth Century-Fox will meet in Kansas City in February, date undetermined.

Abe Montague, Columbia's general manager, conducted the first of a series of sales conferences for that company ten days ago, in San Francisco, where Jack Cohn, vice president, presided. In attendance also were Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager; Jerome Safron, western division manager, and branch managers from Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake and Seattle. Mr. Montague will conduct the second conference Saturday and Sunday at the Drake Hotel in Chicago. The meeting will be attended by 12 midwestern branch managers, besides Joe McConville and Lou Weinberg, of the home office, and Mr. Jackter.

On December 12th, the group will travel to New Orleans for a third convention with southeastern representatives, finishing in New York with a fourth conference, the date of which has not been determined.

Both Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Warner Brothers held their meetings in Chicago, two weeks ago.

In all cases the basic discussions centered around a continuance of heavy sales effort on the remainder of contracts to be closed, a concentration on obtaining booking dates for product already contracted for, and an insight into what is coming up in the line of new product.

Paramount's remaining program will be discussed at the Hollywood conference to be held in January by both studio and home office officials. Neil Agnew, Robert Gillham and Russell Holman will travel westward from New York, to sit in discussion with Adolph Zukor and William Le Baron.

Universal Meets Friday

Mr. Grainger, at Universal's first meeting, in New York, on Friday, will outline plans for distributing "Three Smart Girls" and "Top of the Town." In attendance will be F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager; E. T. Gomersall, western sales manager; Sig Wittman, eastern district manager; H. D. Graham, southern district manager; Clair Hague, Canadian general manager, and A. J. Herman, New England district manager.

Among the home office officials who will attend are Edward Bonns, Sidney Singerman and William Kraemer. Exchange managers from ten exchanges will attend. They are Leo Abrams, of New York; Dave Miller, Cleveland; J. Kaufman, Pittsburgh; Nate Sauber, Buffalo; Joe Engel, Philadelphia; Edward Heiber, Washington; Pete Dana, Albany; Morris Joseph, New Haven; W. P. Kelly, Boston, and S. Brint of Toronto.

F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager, returned Monday to the home office, having completed a trip through the southern exchanges during which he held sales conferences at the Charlotte, Atlanta and New Orleans exchanges.

On December 10th Mr. Grainger will hold the next conference in Chicago at the Blackstone hotel. Attending this conference will be Mr. Gomersal, western sales manager, and the following exchange managers: Henry Herbel, Chicago; Paul Krieger, Cincinati; Jerry Spandau, Des Moines; L. J. Miller, Omaha; William Benjamin, Kansas City; J. E. Garrison, St. Louis; J. F. Camp, Milwaukee; Floyd Brown, Indianapolis; Manny Gottlieb, Detroit, and Frank Mantzke of Minneapolis.

Mr. Grainger will carry a print of "Three Smart Girls" with him and will visit in succession the following exchanges, where showings of the picture will be held, together with short sales conferences with individual sales managers. The first stop is Milwaukee, followed by Minneapolis, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angles. On the way back Mr. Grainger will visit the St. Louis, Denver, Omaha and Des Moines offices, completing a four-weeks' trip in which every office will be covered either by himself or Mr. McCarthy or Mr. Gomersall.

20th Century-Fox in February

Twentieth Century-Fox district and divisional sales heads will hold their midseason sales session at the Muelbach Hotel, Kansas City, some time in February. John D. Clark, general sales manager, will set the date soon. The meeting is expected to run two days.

With Charles Clark, former Atlanta salesman, assuming the managership of the Oklahoma City branch, several more promotions are expected to be announced at the Kansas City session. The company's sales force will begin vacations December 21. They end January 2.

William Gehring, S. R. Kent drive leader, will leave December 3 for a Caribbean cruise. He will return December 17.

New K.C. Exchange

Homer Blackwell of the Independent Poster Exchange in Kansas City has opened a new exchange for distribution of independent motion pictures in western Missouri and Kansas. Film Delivery will handle the physical distribution for the new office.

Boettiger Resigns As Hays Assistant

John Boettiger resigned last week as assistant to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., to become publisher of William Randolph Hearst's Post-Intelligencer in Seattle, Wash. Last weekend, the President's son-in-law was en route to Washington to take up his new duties and was accompanied by his wife, the former Anna Roosevelt Dall, who, it is reported, will also join the staff of the newspaper as editor of the women's page.

Mr. Boettiger resigned as assistant chief of the Chicago Tribune's Washington Bureau in 1934 to become assistant to Mr. Hays. Before that, he was a reporter on the city desk staff of the Chicago paper.

Mr. Hays was in Rome when informed of his assistant's resignation by cable and later by letter in which Mr. Boettiger said, in part:

"The matters we discussed before you sailed, and then talked about on the telephone while you were in Rome, have fully materialized and in a few days I will be leaving for Seattle. I have cabled you this fact, but before I go I want to put down a few departing thoughts about the last two years." He then thanked Mr. Hays for making their association pleasant.

The Post-Intelligencer suspended publication more than three months ago after a strike of its editorial employes called by the Seattle branch of the American Newspaper Guild. The differences were settled, however, with Mr. Hearst's announcement of Mr. Boettiger's appointment.

No successor, if any, to Mr. Boettiger will be named at the MPPDA office until Mr. Hays' return from Europe next week and it is announced that Tom Pettey, now with the Producers' Association in Hollywood, and Kenneth Clark, in New York, both of whom joined the organization with Mr. Boettiger, will remain in their present posts.

Loew Stockholder Opposes Stock Option for Schenck

Frank A. Harden, a stockholder of Loew's, Inc., has written a letter of protest to Leopold Friedman, secretary of the company, against the proposal to give Nicholas M. Schenck, president, an option on 9,600 shares of stock per year for five years at a discount below the market price. Mr. Harden insists that unissued stock belongs to all the stockholders and that Mr. Schenck should be on a straight salary.

Feist Visiting New York

Felix Feist, Jr., short subject producer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, arrived in New York from Hollywood this week for a 10-day visit. He said he would produce two shorts with Bob Benchley in the east next year.

Chadwick with Grand National

I. E. Chadwick has signed with Grand National to produce one picture. The story has not been selected, but the picture is scheduled to go into production late in December.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

British National Busy

British National Films, which made a decided impression with "The Turn of the Tide," again was added this week to the list of active producers, shooting at Pinewood the first scenes of "Interval for Romance," specially written for "Street Singer" Arthur Tracy by P. Schiller and Jean de Marguenat. The screen play is by Reginald Arkell, collaborator in the stage production of "1066 and All That."

Directing "Interval for Romance" is Jean de Marguenat, famous for the French production, "La Robe Rouge," which had a successful five weeks at the Academy, foreign language theatre in Oxford Street, London.

Already cast are Margaret Lockwood, Arthur Riscoe, Ellen Pollock, Emil Borea, John Deverell and the pianists Rawicz and Landauer.

Through its directors, J. Arthur Rank and Lady Yule, British National is closely associated with the interests which built Pinewood and which also have investments in General Film Distributors and in Universal. John Corfield, its managing director, was the first to interest the two millionaires just mentioned in film matters.

Rain Was Scheduled

For the first time in history, it is believed, the British climate proved a production asset when, at Denham a few days ago, it was desired to film a rain-swept exterior for the Marlene-Dietrich-Robert Donat 'Knight without Armour." Neither hose nor wind machine was necessary to provide the thoroughly depressing atmosphere called for in a scene picturing a Russian railroad, beside which convicts were to camp in miserable sacking shelters. In the story, Donat, as a Russian commisar, was escorting Miss Dietrich, as a prisoner Countess, through this miserable area to St. Petersburgh, in the throes of revolution, and so far his asthma has remained cured, though the British weather's contribution to the realism of the scene has been so complete that stars and extras alike have been working soaked to the skin.

Over a mile of railway track was laid in the lowland near the river Colne, in London Films' lot, for this sequence; over it, wood-burning locomotives drew cattle trains which paused when the peasants, desperate, threw themselves on the lines..

Jacques Feyder, directing, is well on schedule with "Knight Without Armour," despite delays due to the illness of both stars.

Pommer's Record

Second of the Erich Pommer productions for London Films, "Troopship," went on to the floor this week at Denham under Tim Whelan's direction. Exteriors already have been made on a troopship, bound East.

Leslie Banks and Flora Robson are the leads and James Wong Howe, who shot "Fire over England," is at the camera.

On another Denham set, Muir Mathieson, musical director to London Films, has just completed, for a scene in "Men are Not Gods," the difficult task of conducting simultaneously two groups of musicians playing different pieces. An orchestra of fifty-four, drawn from the London Symphony Orchestra, rendered the Othello Suite by Coleridge Taylor while Maurice Winnick's Dance Band played "Alone" and "Big Bad Wolf." The effect wanted was of one piece of music breaking into the other and, despite the differences in tempo and volume demanded, Mathieson got it.

A character study of Wallace Evennett as Rudolph Pepper, the mad professor, in "Don't Get Me Wrong," Warner-First National British production at the Teddington studios.

Return to America

"King Solomon's Mines," one of the Big Six of the season's films at the Gaumont-British Shepherd's Bush studios—the other five are "O.H.M.S.," "Sabotage," "The Great Barrier," "Strangers on Honeymoon," and "His Lordship"—has finished interior production, and both Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Roland Young have returned to America. A second production unit has now gone to South Africa, where Geoffrey Barkas is working on big location scenes employing 4,000 natives. To take the floor at Shepherd's Bush is "Take My Tip," the Cicely Courtneidge-Jack Hulbert story originally announced as "The Count's Livery."

He'll Be Vicar

Stanley Holloway has been cast for the part of "The Vicar of Bray" in a film with that title to be put into production immediately by Julius Hagen at the Hammersmith Studios. As in the famous ballad, the background will be England and Ireland in the Charles I-Cromwell-Charles II period, and the Vicar, hitherto the classical figure of the eternal time-server, trimming his sails to the shifting political winds and proclaiming "I'll be Vicar of Bray, Sir," under all regimes, becomes the clerical tutor to the son of Charles I and, in due course, the protegé of Charles II. Romantic interest is built upon the daughter of a Royalist Irish noble and the son of a Cromwellian. Hugh Miller, K. Hamilton Price, Felix Aylmer and Martin Walker, good exponents all of cloak and rapier parts, already are cast. Henry Edwards will direct and the camera will be in charge of William Luff.

Anne Tucker McGuire, the young American girl who made a decided hit in G-B's "Strangers on Honeymoon," has been cast by Mr. Hagen in "She Got What She wanted," as one of three schoolgirls, hero worshipers of Rod La Rocque, as a famous Atlantic airman. The others are Dorothy Dare and Mary Cole, and Phyllis Morris has a comedy part as the schoolmistress. Albert de Courville, who directed "Strangers on Honeymoon," is handling this picture for J. H. Productions at Elstree. In the third Hagen studio, at Twickenham, "Silver Blaze," with Arthur Wontner, Lyn Harding, Ian Fleming and Judy Gunn, has been completed.

Fairbanks, Jr., Starts

First shots of the Criterion production, "Forever and Ever" (originally "Jump for Glory") have been made at Worton Hall. It is a Marcel Hellman production, Raoul Walsh directing Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Valerie Hobson, and Alan Hale, and the camera is in charge of Victor Armenise.

Third Formby Film

George Formby, whose name may not mean anything to America at this moment but who is one of the six best box-office bets in England, is making his third picture at Ealing for Associated Talking Pictures under William Beaudine's direction, and with Polly Ward as his leading woman. Entitled "Feather Your Nest," it is comedy in the setting of a gramophone factory.

Robeson to British Lion

J. Elder Wills has formed Fortune Film Productions and will produce "Big Fellow," at the Beaconsfield studios of British Lion with Paul Robeson, currently playing in "King Solomon's Mines" for G-B. British Lion also will release the picture.

"Calling All Stars," claimed as a film title by British Lion and Joe Rock, has been formally recognized as belonging to the British Lion and will be used for the musical at present in work at Beaconsfield.

Itemized

George King is to make "The Elder Brother," from the Anthony Gibbs story, for Paramount-British, at Sound City. Also for Paramount release, "Landslide" is in production at Wembly, Dinah Sheridan in the lead. . . . Noah Beery added to the Pinewood cast of Herbert Wilcox's "The Navy Eternal.". . . "Splinters in the Air," seventh H. W. production, has been completed by Alf Goulding.

Four Dividends Declared; Gross On Broadway Up

Four corporations in the industry, or closely allied to it through affiliations, this week declared dividends. At the same time the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Washington revealed the figures on October admission tax collections showed a gain of $215,613 for theatres in the Broadway district of New York.

The board of directors of the Pathe Film Corporation this week declared a regular dividend of $1.75 on the preferred stock payable January 2.

General Theatres Equipment Corporation also declared a 90 cents dividend per share of capital stock, payable December 15 to stockholders of record on December 5. This will make the total dividends for the year $2 per share.

David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, announced a dividend on the outstanding shares of the corporation's $3.50 cumulative convertible first preferred stock of 87½ cents a share. The dividend covers the period from October 1 to December 31, 1936, and is payable December 26 to stockholders of record on December 9.

At the last meeting of the board of directors, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company declared a dividend of $2 per share on the preferred and common stock, payable December 21 to shareholders of record on December 7.

A sharp upturn in Broadway grosses was revealed this week with the publication by the Bureau of Internal Revenue of figures on October admission taxes in the Third New York district, which jumped from $517,180 in September to $578,974.

October collections on box-office admissions, the bureau revealed, were $537,411 compared with $489,456 in September. Other collections included $2,005 on free or reduced rate admissions, against $1,714; $4,167 on tickets sold by brokers, against $1,699; $30 on permanent use or lease of boxes and seats, against nothing; and $35,360 on admissions to roof gardens and cabarets, against $24,312.

The October collections in the Broadway district represented a gain of $215,613 from the season's low of $363,362, recorded in August, bureau records show.

MOYNE PLAN OF 50 PER CENT QUOTA DISAPPOINTS BRITISH FILM LEADERS

Committee Proposes Commission Which Would Mean Government Control; Wants British Interests to Finance Industry

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

A fifty per cent quota at the end of ten years, the recommendation of the Lord Moyne committee after its months of study, since March 26th, of proposals for revision of the Films Act, has been greeted for the most part with expressions of disappointment in the industry. Coupled with this surprising suggestion, and viewed as even more dangerous, is the committee's advocacy of establishment of a Film Commission, which practically would mean control by the Government, and of the financing of British production by British money interests.

Under the plan of new film legislation, as proposed by the committee, the opening quotas on features would be 20 per cent for distributors and 15 per cent for exhibitors. The present quota is 20 per cent for both exhibitors and distributors.

Of high significance with respect to the British Government's concern in the interests of the industry, is that part of the recommendation which calls for transfer of administration of the Films Act from the Board of Trade to a new Film Commission, which would consist of a chairman and two to four others to be appointed by the Government and to be adequately paid, and with representation in the House of Commons through a Minister or some other appointee for the purpose.

In the hands of this body would fall the important principle of establishing a quota for each year "on the basis of the actual output of Brish long films of a good standard of quality in the calendar year immediately preceding."

The report emphasizes that there would be a statutory obligation on the Commission in fixing the quotas to have regard to the past year's quality of films "from the point of view of the public who sees them."

Blind Booking Rules Stand

Separate quotas for features and shorts are recommended, beginning with a quota for shorts of 15 per cent for distributors and 10 per cent for exhibitors. Both features and shorts, to qualify for the distributor quota, would have to pass a quality test "based directly on the viewing of the films."

Pictures not accepted or not submitted for registration for the distributor quota still would rank for the exhibitor quota. The exhibitor quota would be computed on a three-month basis, and the distributors' on a six-month basis, with a default in one period to be made good in the next.

The blind booking provisions of the present Films Act would be retained, the report declares, and would be strengthened by the demand that distributors make a statutory declaration on the registration of a film that it has not been blind booked. The penalty for blind booking would apply to distributors only, with the maximum penalty increased to £250 ($1,250). On a second conviction the distributor would be liable to a cancellation or suspension of license. Restrictions on advance bookings would be abolished.

Would Drop Scenarist Clause

A statutory declaration would be required from each distributor at the end of each year that no exhibitor was forced to take unwanted films as a condition of booking any picture. All penalties attaching to blind booking would apply to block booking.

The report also recommends abolition of the British scenarist clause. Ten per cent of total footage or 20 per cent of studio scenes, which ever is less, might be foreign in any registered British film.

Three tryouts would be allowed before registration. Exhibition up to 12 weeks of specially approved foreign films outside of the quota obligation would be permitted to take care of the art film problem.

The Commission would take care of such problems as redundancy (over-building), oppressive trade combinations, capital and liaison with local authorities. The Moyne committee specifically recommends that the Government should watch the danger of transfers of British interests to prevent control passing abroad, and also should "encourage financial interests to constitute one or more organizations to finance British production on reasonable terms."

A census of production, to be taken yearly, also is recommended.

Important in the report are the committee's rejection of the cost-footage basis of the quota and its adoption of the quality clause.

The Committee proposes a small increase in the import duties on films to provide for the expenses of the proposed Films Commission not covered by registration and license fees.

In the preamble the report emphasizes America's advantage in the short release period and suggests a move for establishment of similar conditions in this country.

WAINWRIGHTS FLOAT 16 THEATRE CIRCUIT

London and District Cinemas, Ltd., with an authorized capital of £250,000, this week offered 306,000 5s ordinary shares at par and £160,000 of 5 per cent first mortgage stock at 99 per cent. It is understood that the ordinary issue was oversubscribed but the mortgage issue not fully covered; it is, however, underwritten.

The company will control 16 cinemas in London and the home counties previously managed by J. G. and R. B. Wainwright and their associates, which are being transferred for £271,150, payable by £187,650 in cash and the balance by 334,000 five shilling shares. The chairman is Thomas Dudley Cooke, and R. B. Wainwright will be managing director and J. G. Wainwright controller of bookings.

Opening Quotas on Features Would Be 20 Per Cent for Distributors and 15 Per Cent for Exhibitors, According to Plan

Opposition Is Indicated

That the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Kinematograph Renters Society will jointly oppose the Moyne recommendations was indicated at the industry's luncheon Tuesday at the Trocadero in honor of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. British producers appeared to be divided in sentiment regarding the report.

Theodore H. Fligelstone, president of the CEA, said his organization always had tried to cooperate with the production and distribution organizations. He expressed the hope that the same mistake would not be made now as in 1926, his reference being to the alleged failure of Americans to help the British exhibitors at the time to fight the quota bill.

John C. Graham, speaking for D. E. Griffiths, president of the KRS, declared that his organization "is ready and willing to stand shoulder to shoulder with the CEA to discuss things for the common good."

See Danger to U. S. "B" Films

One comment heard on the Moyne report was that American "B" pictures could not be imported if the quota cover for them is too expensive and the result would be a shortage of product.

John Maxwell, who was out of town, had been quoted earlier as favoring a compromise of viewpoints on the report, and declaring that the Film Commission and quality test recommendations called for considerable thought.

Alexander Korda indorsed those two proposals and of the 50 per cent quota said that he saw nothing hostile to American producers," adding that he "would not keep out a single good American film."

Captain Richard Norton of British & Dominions favored continuation of the quota but refused comment on the 50 per cent suggestion. Basil Dean called the Film Commission proposal dangerous, but Max Schach declared himself entirely in favor of the report.

"Redundancy" Snags

In its attempt to control new theatre erection, the CEA has met with various difficulties from licensing authorities. Several of these groups have shown a disposition to regard the argument that a suggested new theatre is "redundant" as an attempt to stifle competition. In quite a large number of cases recently, new licenses have been granted against CEA opposition, and there is undoubtedly a feeling in the trade that the recently renewed, but unsuccessful, attempt of the CEA to enlist cooperation from the Kinematograph Renters Society reflects a realization by the exhibitors' organization that local action is likely to show increasingly disappointing results.

Confirming this view is an announcement from the licensing committee of the Warwickshire county council that it will not take into consideration the question of "redundancy" in considering license applications, in any circumstances.

Recently the CEA approached all licensing bodies with a request for full advance information about applications, in order that opposition might be entered in good time, and it seems that this request may have unexpected results in other districts besides Warwickshire.

Another feature of CEA policy is that, if a license application is granted against opposition from the association, the owner of the theatre involved will not be welcomed as a member of the CEA. There is no evidence that this policy actually has been operated, but it seemed to be indirectly hit at in a discussion before the Birmingham justices last week, in connection with license applications for two new halls.

The chief difficulty, undoubtedly, is that the percentage of failure in cases of opposition tends to increase.

The London and Home Counties branch of the CEA was defeated in a case at Chesham last week, and in the same period a local exhibitor, backed by a residents' petition, failed to stop a license for a new Odeon at Spalding, the Oscar Deutsch interests, powerfully represented legally, arguing successfully that they were being opposed, not in the public interest, but by "an existing and lucrative private monopoly."

Most Films from U. S.

Figures supplied by the Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, in reply to a parliamentary question, show the following situation in regard to the positive and negative film imported into the United Kingdom in the year ended October 31st:

From U. S. A.:
- Positive—16,018,396 feet. Declared value, £91,741.
- Negative—1,587,652 feet. Declared value, £21,144.

From Germany:
- Positive—1,177,465 feet. Declared value, £11,057.
- Negative—164,105 feet. Declared value, £2,889.

An important legal decision was handed down by Justice Porter, in the King's Bench Division, in a case in which an extra player sued Criterion Film Productions and its cameraman, Gunther Krampf, alleging that her eyes had been seriously injured by the lights used in a ballroom scene for "The Amateur Gentleman," in which she appeared.

Awarding the plaintiff, Miss Peggy Crawford, damages of £126: 19s., the Judge ruled that the company, knowing the dangers of the lighting, took the risk of temporary damage to players' eyes, in order to get a good picture. He also ruled against the defense that the danger of "Klieg Eye" was generally known. He found that the lights were not kept on for too long and that they were not of supra-normal power or intensity.

NEWSPAPER COMMENDS UNIVERSAL CRIME FILM

Half of the nation's crime battle might be won if present and prospective racketeers saw and learned the lesson of the picture, "You Can't Get Away With It," the New York Herald Tribune observed Monday in an editorial entitled "Law Enforcement on the Screen."

The picture, made with the cooperation of the Department of Justice in Washington and with J. Edgar Hoover, departmental head, depicts highlights of the work of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, especially during the past three years.

The action against Mr. Krampf he dismissed, finding that there was no proof that he had been in control of the lights, or that he had been negligent.

It appears that this decision sets the precedent that producers are liable for compensation or damages in the case of any cases of "Klieg Eye" in their studios. One of the most important features of the Judge's remarks is the finding that normal lights were used. The inference seems to be that the possibility of "Klieg Eye" is a trade risk inseparable from production, and that it must be borne by the producer and not by artistes.

Drop "Pastures" Radio Piece

Scheduled as a feature of the "Entertainment Parade" item of the British Broadcasting Corporation's London radio program, the transmission of scenes from the film version of "Green Pastures" was cancelled at the last moment by the BBC.

Following so soon after "Green Pastures" had been licensed by the British Board of Film Censors, after five months' consideration, the cancellation of the radio item caused considerable discussion in London, the late date of the decision giving rise to the suggestion either that there had been a pronounced protest from the public or that, from influential quarters, there had been a hint that it was undesirable to broadcast material still, in its stage form, prohibited by the Lord Chamberlain.

"Green Pastures" has its British premiere this week at the New Gallery, Regent Street, a Gaumont-British theatre.

Baird's Direct Television

Baird Television used direct transmission for the first time in the BBC's program radiated from Alexandra Palace. It previously had employed an intermediate film, while Electrical Musical Industries, alternating weekly with Baird as official television operators, used a direct system based on an "Emitrone" camera. Baird now has an Electron camera which, as in the case of the EMI's system, permits dissolving without a black-out.

"Dixey Plan" Developments

Following election of five exhibitor directors of Independent Exhibitors Distribution Company, the cooperative distributing organization popularly known as the Dixey scheme, it is now proposed to proceed with formal incorporation of IEDC as a limited company, the selection, by the exhibitor directors, of specialist directors in production, distribution and finance, and probably a public flotation. Originally forecast to be £500,00, it is now understood that the capital will be £200,000.

The exhibitor membership of IEDC is at present between 200 and 300, each of whom makes a minimum investment of £50.

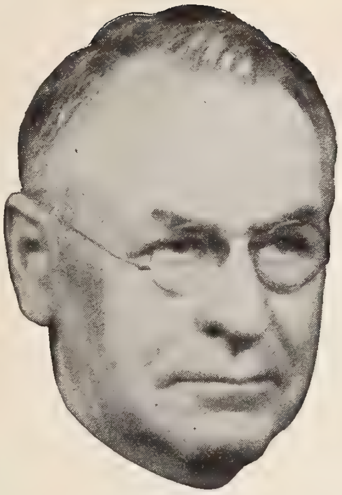
G-B Announces 8 For Two Months

G-B will release eight productions in December and January, Arthur A. Lee, vice-president, said this week.

The pictures for December include: "Strangers on a Honeymoon," screen version of Edgar Wallace's "The Northing Tramp," which features Constance Cummings, Noah Beery, and Hugh Sinclair, and was directed by Albert de Courville; "Love in Exile," filmed from Gene Markey's novel, "His Majesty's Pyjamas," directed by Al Werker with Clive Brook and Helen Vinson co-starred; "Week End Millionaire," a comedy romance which co-stars Buddy Rogers and Mary Brian, and was directed by Arthur Woods; and "Living Dangerously," an ultra-modern drama directed by Herbert Brenon, with Otto Kruger and Leonora Corbett heading the cast of principals.

For January the release schedule is: "Head Over Heels in Love," a new Jessie Matthews dancing musical scripted by Dwight Taylor from an original by Francois de Croisset, directed by Sonnie Hale, with words and music by Gordon and Revel; "The Hidden Power," an Alfred Hitchcock production adapted from a Joseph Conrad novel with Sylvia Sidney starred and with Oscar Homolka, Desmond Tester, and John Loder heading the supporting cast; "Man of Affairs," George Arliss special directed by Herbert Mason from the play by Neil Grant; and "River of Unrest," from the stage melodrama, "The Trouble," directed by Brian Desmond Hurst with John Lodge, John Loder and Antoinette Cellier featured.

Warren Doane, for five years producer of short subjects for Universal, has signed as scenario story head at the Hal Roach studios.



The ideal gift for your projectionist

F. H. Richardson's Bluebook of Projection is the ideal gift for your projectionist. We use the word "ideal" advisedly as Richardson's book will be appreciated by your projectionist and its use will save you considerable money in the maintenance of your projection booth equipment.

This book is new—714 pages of up-to-the-minute text, charts and data with detailed description of assembly, wiring and functioning of all sound and projection apparatus. It may best be described as a practical "trouble-shooter," for it is cross indexed for immediate reference when your projectionist is confronted with those breakdowns that are the nightmare of every projection room.

Our supply of Richardson's Bluebook is limited to less than 200 copies and of necessity we must accept orders on the basis of first come—first served.

If you wish a copy sent to your projectionist during Christmas week, it will be necessary that you fill in and mail the coupon without delay.

"LET'S GET FILM STARS BACK IN FILMS"

POINTS FALLACY OF RADIO SHOWS

To the Editor of the Herald:

I have just read with great interest an article (Motion Picture Herald, November 21) by Mr. Newcomb of Hutchinson, Kan., wherein he states that the use of motion picture stars on the radio is a detriment to our business.

I myself have worked in a theatre since about 1914 or 1915. Having started in business for myself at the age of 18 in the year 1918 and have seen a lot of changes in it since that time, some for the good, some for the bad, and I certainly agree with Mr. Newcomb that the use of motion picture stars on the radio is certainly working a hardship on the exhibitor.

Possibly it is not noticed so much in the larger cities, where a good share of the theatre goers live in apartments and have heated garages and can go out, jump in their car and drive down town and when they get there put their car in another heated garage until they are ready to go home. But here in the country where there aren't those conveniences and they go out, step on the starter, find the battery is low and have to crank for half an hour before they get the old bus started, it is a different story. Would you do it? Neither would I. Not when I could go in the house, sit down beside a nice warm fire and listen to those same stars on the radio; and quite often in some of the same plays that one sees on the screen.

Only a few years ago the exchanges were squawking, as well as the exhibitor, about the numerous free shows traveling the country. Today we have the same thing only in a little different form. When are they going to learn that they can't give away and then expect to sell the same thing?

Furthermore, in the days when free shows were such a menace the companies who were renting the films to these outfits as a rule didn't have any stars or if they did they were has-beens.

Today our major film companies are pushing their biggest stars right to the front on these radio broadcasts.

These companies claim that with such stars appearing on the radio as Dick Powell, Charlie Ruggles, Myrna Loy, Wm. Powell, Lionel Barrymore, Jean Harlow, Olivia De Havilland, Joe E. Brown, Ross Alexander, Pat O'Brien and others too numerous to mention, it will boost the value of the star at the box-office when you play a picture with her or him in it. Possibly it might to a small extent but after all they don't make enough pictures with these stars so that you can show four changes a week and still buck this kind of competition. What about the nights we have to show such pictures as "Star for a Night," "Thank You Jeeves," "Murder with Pictures," "Accusing Finger," "Bengal Tiger," "Isle of Fury" and others against broadcasts of these popular stars.

The companies squawk to beat the devil about double features, two for one admission, and many other tricks the exhibitor has to resort to, to get the public in, but those boys are just making it tough for themselves and the rest of us.

Either the big boys who sit with their feet on the mahogany desks in New York can't or won't see it. Sooner or later they are going to wake up to the fact that the exhibitor is going to refuse to buy all the crows he puts out in order to get a few pictures with stars strong enough to buck this free radio entertainment.

Let's get the motion picture stars back in the motion picture business and leave the radio stars where they are. After all I don't think that radio with the talent it can gather can hurt the theatre much or they wouldn't have put the motion picture stars on the air. A person is more apt to go where they can see these stars and hear them rather than stay at home and just listen to them; but you still can't expect to give the same personalities to the public and then expect to turn around and sell them to the public at the box office. It won't work.—E. L. Parsons, Garden and Palm Theatres, Renville, Minn.

PROBLEM OF LENGTH OF THE TRAILERS

To the Editor of the Herald:

Here is something that I have been thinking about for a long, long time, and that is the length of trailers advertising the coming attractions.

These trailers are becoming very much stereotyped, all of them following just about the same formula. In my opinion they could be cut exactly half, and give us just as good selling punches as the trailers that are being used now.

Of course in a house that runs a single feature on a one week policy, these trailers are all right. But they become a problem in a house that runs two changes; and when we have a house with two or three changes with a double feature policy—"good night!"

I know that we can get the real short sound trailers, without any action, but they do not fill the bill.—H. D. Grove, Manager, Fort Theatre, Rock Island, Illinois.

SEES GOVERNMENTAL REGULATION MISTAKE

To the Editor of the Herald:

Please may I suggest you open your columns, by invitation, to the independent exhibitors to express their opinions on some form of a new N R A.

May I emphatically state right now that attempts at national regulation are utterly impossible in this business. This was conclusively and irreparably demonstrated in the attempt of the Blue Eagle.

Peculiarities of the motion picture business lend themselves only to local autonomy which can be carried out by local boards of adjustment. There are just as many different conditions to contend with as there are differences in film rentals obtained for the same production. This applies to policies, methods and labor difficulties.

I am sure the majority of independent exhibitors of the United States will fight to the last ditch against any new attempt at national or governmental regulation.—H. E. Huffman, President, General Theatres, Inc., Denver, Col.

Bluebook School Question No. 47 was: (A) Explain what function current (amperes) performs and what is consumed in the production of electric power. (B) Explain how you test for clearance between armature and pole pieces of a motor or generator. (C) What do you regard as the proper difference between generator and arc voltage in a motor generator set and why.

The following made acceptable answers: C. Rau and S. Evans; G. E. Doe; D. Danielson; B. DeVietti; C. Oldham; W. C. Brown; W. Limmroth; C. L. Loft; A. L. Cooper; C. Champney; S. O. Sears; J. R. (A) Charles Oldham says, "Electric current, measured in amperes, is the flow of electrical energy along a conductor from one point to another where the pressure is lower. This "flow" represents an effort to equalize the pressure. It is much the same as water flowing from higher to lower level. In the production of electric power, pressure, measured in voltage, is the thing used up or consumed."

W. Limmroth says, "Current is the medium through which pressure (voltage) performs work. Work is performed by pressure forcing current to flow against resistance or electrical friction. An illustrative example is water and the water wheel. It is readily seen that not one drop of water is consumed. It is the pressure that is used up, whether it be gravity pressure or pressure of water confined in a pipe. The greater the amount of either pressure or volume, the greater the amount of power used and work performed. We therefore see that in work performed by electricity, it is pressure and not volume that is consumed."

D. Danielson says, "Amperes or current is the conveyor of electrical pressure as measured in volts. Current is volume and may possess a potential difference capable of performing a function when properly controlled, so that work will be performed. But always it is pressure, not volume that is consumed."

P. and L. Felt reply, "We believe that the exact composition of what we call current is not yet definitely known. However, it is the thing that in every way corresponds to volume in water. It is the medium through which the thing we call pressure acts, though very possibly we do not as yet quite know what constitutes electric pressure. But we do definitely know that, whatever it may be, it is the element in electric action that is consumed in the production of electric power. And here, Dad, is the thing we cannot quite understand: We are told that in, for example, the lamp filament, all pressure is consumed. Yet under overload, both wires of a circuit become heated on both sides of the load. Query: If all pressure is consumed in the load, what then shoves the current along the conductor on non-load and with sufficient force to heat the conductor?"

An interesting question—one which we do not have space for now, but which will be considered at another time, perhaps in my Comments in BETTER THEATRES.

(B) M. L. Oleson says, "Such test may best be made by using a piece of thin cardboard of width varying with diameter of the armature. If it be of considerable size, such as we may expect it to be in a motor-generator set, a strip half an inch wide will serve very well. This strip must be several inches longer than the armature to be tested and must be quite tough. A strip sheared off a full size sheet of cardboard, such as good thin business cards are made from, would be admirable. This strip may be shoved through between the armature and pole pieces and worked around, pulling it backward and forward meanwhile. It thus will not only test the clearance, but will dislodge any dirt adhering to both surfaces, thus serving a double purpose.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 51

It is proposed in a certain city to add projection to available public school subjects. It is not intended to teach practical projection, but only to include the elements of electricity, optics, mechanics, magnetism, acoustics, etc. I ask Bluebook School "students" to think this over and to give their reactions. Also, what should be the minimum age of pupils entering such a course?

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

"However, in addition to this, if the original clearance be not known, then clearance at both top and bottom may be measured by means of strips of metal, the top one first. If the gauge that fits snugly at top will not enter at the bottom, the armature then is out of center in an amount that may be determined by selecting one that will fit snugly at bottom and measuring the difference in thickness of the two gauges.

"But I believe the paper strip should be used in any event, in order that any possible dirt adhesions be removed.

(C) H. B. Smith says, "In my opinion, the difference required will vary with different type of arcs. I believe the recommendation of the manufacturer should be followed."

G. E. Doe replies, "This, Mr. Richardson, is a question that cannot be answered dogmatically. The required variation is somewhat—or should I say considerably—different for different types and strength of light source. My own answer would be that the projectionist should ascertain by experiment exactly what is the lowest pressure required for stability of his light source and—well, that is to me the answer."

And a mighty good one if you ask me. I agree that a fixed answer in volts cannot be given. Occasionally I ask questions to see what the reaction of various men to them will be. I am very sure that answering the "Bluebook School" questions causes men to think and to study. Here is an extract from a letter just received from M. Frank Barkey, projectionist of the Kings theatre in Huntsville, Ontario:

"In the few 'Bluebook School' questions I have thus far answered I find that after seeking the information necessary to make up my answer, the information thus gathered stands out in my mind in a very clear manner and 'stays put.'"

Chesterfield

LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSE: Dickie Moore, Junior Coghlan—Don't say I did not warn you this is not a good picture and will kill business for any type of theatre. No good for kids, no good for adults. It is what you might call an unfinished movie.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN MANHATTAN: Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea—Better than average. Stars both good. —L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

COME CLOSER, FOLKS: James Dunn, Marion Marsh—Give Dunn different roles, please. All he does is talk in his latest pictures.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CRAIG'S WIFE: Rosalind Russell, John Boles—An excellent picture. Wonderful acting by stars. Miss Russell great.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—Nothing to boast of at the box-office, but, in the writer's estimation, the best picture to date.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. Small town patronage.

END OF THE TRAIL, THE: Jack Holt—Just fair. —L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NORTH OF NOME: Jack Holt, Evelyn Venable—Very good action picture.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

PRIDE OF THE MARINES: Charles Bickford, Florence Rice—The word "Marines" in a motion picture title acts as a magnet at our theatre and brings in those patrons who like and expect robust entertainment of a rough and tumble sort. The audience reaction to this picture was very good and the box-office was well supported, too.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

TRAPPED BY TELEVISION: Lyle Talbot, Mary Astor—Fair program picture.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TWO-FISTED GENTLEMAN: James Dunn—No praise for this. Too much "smart aleck" by Dunn.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

First National

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—Very good entertainment for the masses.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DOWN THE STRETCH: Patricia Ellis, Dennis Moore—Good photography, good comedy, but not a good line of paying customers. Believe it would have been a better draw if played on another date. Too much doing on Armistice night. Played November 11-12.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

DOWN THE STRETCH: Patricia Ellis, Dennis Moore—Fair little program picture.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DOWN THE STRETCH: Patricia Ellis, Mickey Rooney, Dennis Moore—Thrilling little racetrack story with quite a few weak spots. We did not care for the attempt to take a boy of Mickey's age and make him a man of the world. He's a swell little actor and did a fine job of it in spite of the handicap. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 20-21.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

STAGE STRUCK: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell—Warner Bros. slipping badly on their musicals. Powell's popularity not so good on account of poor pictures.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

GB Pictures

EAST MEETS WEST: George Arliss, Lucie Mannheim—This is one of the best Arliss pictures made in a long time. Just the role where Arliss is great.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

EVERYTHING IS THUNDER: Constance Bennett, Douglas Montgomery—Keeps you interested from beginning to end.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SEVEN SINNERS: Edmund Lowe, Constance Cummings—Not so good.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper—Freddie, Jackie and Mickey very, very good in their roles. Very good picture.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GEORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor—A splendid picture. Stars perfectly cast.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Robert Taylor, Joan Crawford—Good picture, but not for a small town. We find that a costume picture is licked before it starts in towns of this size. Pleased about 50 per cent. Played October 7-9. Running time, 105 minutes.—W. Jenkins, Lee's Theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo., and People's Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer—Spectacular, but not satisfactory entertainment. Pleased about 30 per cent, some walking out before the picture was over. Never again will I play a picture of this type. Played November 12-14. Running time, 180 minutes.—W. Jenkins, Lee's Theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo., and People's Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE: Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck—Good entertainment and a swell story.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE: Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck—Very disappointing. Not even a good program picture. However, the stars draw some extra business. Played October 27-29. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. Jenkins, Lee's Theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo., and People's Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

KELLY, THE SECOND: Patsy Kelly, Pert Kelton—We had this picture double billed with "Back to Nature" and our people nearly laughed themselves to death. There was a constant uproar from the beginning of one to the end of the other. Everyone seemed in a good frame of mind after it was over. Running time, 71 minutes. Played November 6-7.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

MAD HOLIDAY: Edmund Lowe, Elissa Landi—Book this for one day, otherwise you'll regret it. Played November 15-16.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

OLD HUTCH: Wallace Beery, Cecelia Parker—Beery always pleases. Entertaining picture.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

PICCADILLY JIM: Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans—Too much dialogue. However, has its moments. Business slightly above average. Played September 27-28.—W. Jenkins, Lee Theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo., and People's Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

ROBIN HOOD OF EL DORADO, THE: Warner Baxter, Ann Loring—A natural for Friday or Saturday. Expertly produced and acted. Warner Baxter and entire cast great. Pleased 100 per cent in this small town. Running time, 76 minutes.—E. L. Fawks, Fitz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Small town patronage.

SMALL TOWN GIRL: Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor—The most the Lion can roar about here. MGM's murder pictures out.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. Small town patronage.

SPEED: Wendy Barrie, James Stuart—Just made for small towns. Pleases 100 per cent. Plenty of action, with some interesting angles on car manufacture. Played November 6-7.—W. Jenkins, Lee Theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo., and People's Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

SUZY: Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone—Good picture, also good business. Played September 20-22. Running time, 95 minutes.—W. Jenkins, Lee's Summit, Mo., and People's Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

SUZY: Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone—A none too original story made good by the performances of the star and her support. The audience response was fine.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

THREE WISE GUYS: Robert Young, Betty Furness—Excellent program picture. If you haven't played it, wait and play it about around Christmas. Would be fine for Christmas Eve or Christmas day. Robert Young and rest of cast fine.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

WOMAN WANTED: Joel McCrea, Maureen O'Sullivan—A good program feature for any week night. Plenty of action and drama. Running time, seven reels. Played November 21.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ARIZONA RAIDERS: Buster Crabbe, Marsha Hunt—Comedy western type of story. Better than most of the Zane Grey stories filmed this year. Will especially please all lovers of horses. Many highbred and beautiful horses are shown in this picture. A thrill ending that will bring the kids out of their seats. Running time, 60 minutes.—E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Small town patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Burns & Allen—Personally very much disappointed in this production. Did not seem to jell. Some liked it and some did not. Running time, 99 minutes. Played November 15-17.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

BORDER FLIGHT: John Howard, Frances Farmer—Aside from a thrilling climax, this programer has little else to offer the patron in search of thrills. Its producers evidently had the double feature market in mind when they approved the story and cast.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

BRIDE COMES HOME, THE: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray—All the women, children and old maids came to see it.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. Small town patronage.

HANDS ACROSS THE TABLE: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—The boys went for this one in a big way, developing some of the biggest laughs of our current season. MacMurray is still his natural self and Lombard is "what it takes" to make a star. If you want a program picture that will keep your house in an uproar from start to finish, you won't go wrong with this one. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 21.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

GENERAL DIED AT DAWN, THE: Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll—The name Gary Cooper draws them in, and the picture "General Died at Dawn" drives them out, so what have you, a picture that does better than average business but less than average acceptance from the patron.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

GIRL OF THE OZARKS, THE: Virginia Weidler—There are many who believe this little girl has it all over Shirley Temple. We admit she does not draw like Shirley and, after all, that's what counts. But she is a swell little actress and did this to perfection. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 18-19.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LADY, BE CAREFUL: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle—Does not hit all of them. Try hard to put it over. Some good wisecracks, but they do not make box office. This Paramount better get going and if they don't it is going to be too bad for Paramount exhibitors.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

MY AMERICAN WIFE: Francis Lederer, Ann Sothern—Tailor-made for the small town of La Harpe. While we don't get big money for Paramount pictures, we never have to take unfavorable criticism off the public. When we said "big money" we forgot "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Played it late and every man, woman and child that did not see it in their respective theatres came to La Harpe to see it. We cannot compare the attendance to any feature ever played here; neither are we expecting another "Trail of the Lonesome Pine."—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby, Frances Farmer, Bob Burns—Very well liked. Burns and Martha Raye steal the show. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 13-14.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby—Very good, to light business caused by opposition. Played November 18-19.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS, THE: Fred MacMurray, Jean Parker—A mighty fine western and that is just what it is. Would make an excellent weekend. but the draw is positively 75 per cent men patrons. The women say they don't like it and all the money in the world spent in advertising won't bring in the women patrons. Business good three days. Very, very poor the fourth night.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE, THE: Henry Fonda, Sylvia Sidney—Played this one so old that everyone had seen it. Of course, it's above average picture, but a new program picture would have been better at the box office. Played November 15-17.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

WIVES NEVER KNOW: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—Pretty weak. This comedy team is entitled to stronger material than this. Running time, 73 minutes. Played November 10.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

Republic

BULLDOG EDITION: Ray Walker, Evalyn Knapp—An excellent program picture that our action-loving patrons praised highly. It can play any day of the week and stand up as far as entertainment standards are concerned. Its stars are not box-office for us. so we were forced to double it.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

COMIN' ROUND THE MOUNTAIN: Gene Autry, Ann Rutherford—The Autry pictures have been doing better with each succeeding picture. "Comin' 'Round the Mountain" the best little western that has played here in a long time. The photography was beautiful and as near perfect as it can be made. Autry outgrosses some of the socalled major stars. All of Republic's pictures this year showing a marked improvement. Business excellent on Gene Autry.—Walter and Harold Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

DOWN TO THE SEA: Russell Hardie, Ann Rutherford—This is an exceptionally good program picture that should be especially salable in Greek communities as the characters are all of that race and several of their religious ceremonies are presented. It is a simply told story of a clannish people who wrest their livelihood from the sea by sponge gathering and of the enmity that existed between two factions, the deep sea sponge gatherers and those who confine their activities to the shallow waters. Underwater scenes were made at Tarpon Springs, Fla.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

LONELY TRAIL, THE: John Wayne, Ann Rutherford—Just average western. Played November 14.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

PRESIDENT'S MYSTERY, THE: Henry Wilcoxon, Betty Furness—We are at a loss to understand the lack of response accorded this picture at the box-office. After a dismal opening day we did everything possible to "hypo" the program, but the patrons shied away from it alarmingly, and we jerked it after the third day. If you can sell it, your patrons will undoubtedly be pleased, for it is a genuinely entertaining story with strong mass appeal; nothing high-brow or directly political.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

RIDE, RANGER, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Kay Hughes, Monte Blue—We have great personal admiration for Mr. Autry and his singing ability, but we sometimes wonder why he is such a tremendous box-office attraction at our theatres. We know, of course, that we have energetically sold him to our patrons, yet similar efforts on equally meritorious personalities have not yielded the golden dividends that Autry and his comedian companion, Smiley Burnette, create for us. This is perhaps even more astounding when one takes into consideration the fact that our best house, the New Liberty, seats 1,500 and we find it necessary to book his pictures for four days of preferred playing time to accommodate the crowds. He becomes stronger with each picture and draws despite the rather ordinary treatment given his pictures by the producers. It does seem that the studio publicity department would accord him better treatment in the matter of press sheets and advertising material in view of his popularity, but so far there has been no improvement in the newspaper mats and advertising accessories. The insert cards use the same cut for each succeeding production with only the title being changed.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

SITTING ON THE MOON: Roger Pryor, Grace Bradley—If your patrons are gullible, you may be able to get by with this without being murdered, but if they won't take it, you may suffer the consequences if you give 'em this one. The recording is excellent. the direction is very poor in spots. They bring out some very extra numbers, but not enough money spent on building these numbers. If it means anything to you, brother, we had less than average business, two days.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

SITTING ON THE MOON: Roger Pryor, Grace Bradley—A fairly entertaining musical produced in a somewhat routine manner. It will do best as the companion feature to a heavier picture. Our patrons seemed to enjoy it.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

SPANISH CAPE MYSTERY, THE: Helen Twelvetrees, Donald Cook—Fine program picture for me. Played on Bargain Night.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TUMBLING TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry—Seen by the most of our patrons. Gene Autry liked by everyone. Played on double feature program. We double-feature once each week with a western and love story to pay up the losses on over-bought socalled good product and G-Men stuff.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. Small town patronage.

DANIEL BOONE: George O'Brien—Well produced historical picture. George O'Brien better in this than any of the pictures made by Fox last season. Audience reaction very much in its favor. Running time, 76 minutes.—E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Craford, Texas. Small town patronage.

DANIEL BOONE: George O'Brien, Heather Angel—Terrible. George is usually well liked. but he doesn't make a Daniel Boone. Picture from point of technique. poor. Doesn't follow story and omits many important parts. Sure a letdown from the usual good RKO standard. Played October 11-12-13.—Donald Visger, Liberty Theatre, Kennewick, Wash. General patronage.

HIS FAMILY TREE: James Barton, Margaret Callahan—I went back and dug this up to use on a gift night and it pleased the crowd fine. No box office, but it was a politician's story and at election time went over big.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D General patronage.

MAKE WAY FOR A LADY: Anne Shirley, Herbert Marshall—This one is not so hot. Anne Shirley may be a star, but didn't any one come to see her and my daughter left before the show was over. Thought it would fit into Friday-Saturday, but it didn't. If I had it to do over it would go into gift night. People didn't complain, but just didn't want to see it.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

SECOND WIFE: Walter Abel, Gertrude Michael—O. K. for ladies, but men will not like it.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SILLY BILLIES: Wheeler and Woolsey—A good programer, but it seemed that the first night turned out to be unlucky 13 and no business. Running time, seven reels. Played November 13-14.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Typical Astaire-Rogers. Good as usual. Played November 8-9.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—A very delightful feature that drew better than average business. Played November 11-12.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WALKING ON AIR: Gene Raymond, Ann Sothern—Very good comedy.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WITHOUT ORDERS: Sally Eilers, Robert Armstrong—This is really a fine picture of the life of the modern aviator. I ran it too close to "China Clipper," which costs twice as much, and was very good, but with a month between this little picture would go over fine.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

WOMAN REBELS, A: Katharine Hepburn, Herbert Marshall—This is a nice story and again I made the mistake in running it right next to "Anthony Adverse" and the two are of the same type.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

DIMPLES: Shirley Temple—Realizing that Shirley's popularity will be short-lived, Twentieth Century-Fox is putting her in as many pictures as possible while she is still good box office. That is a wise move. But at the same time, it is very unwise to sacrifice this little starlet in a bad picture in order to keep up on release dates. "Dimples" is poor entertainment. The plot is thin, the continuity is jumpy, and the whole thing leaves the impression that Darryl Zanuck must have said to associate producer Nunnally Johnson, "Now, Nun, we've got to get this picture out to meet the release date. Rush everything. Keep on Bill Seiter's neck and don't let production lag. It may not turn out to be the best Shirley Temple, but then it's a Temple, and that's all that matters. You may go now; I'm expecting Eddie Cantor." And with that, we guess, a poor picture was made. Shirley's popularity may be short. But even so, it should be filled with good pictures. Business started out with a bang, but fell down considerably. Squawks were plentiful. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 1-4.—Ralph Cokain, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

DIMPLES: Shirley Temple—The only remarks we've heard on this have been from disappointed customers. We thought it cute enough, but it isn't the type of picture that will keep Shirley on her record run of popularity. Lots of youngsters on Sunday, with Monday turning in the lowest gross in many moons. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 15-16.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

DIMPLES: Shirley Temple, Frank Morgan—A good picture all the way through and a tie between Temple and Morgan for honors. Will do O. K. by you at the box-office. Our patrons want to know why Fox doesn't give her a story with parents and a home. Getting tired of orphan angles, etc. Played October 28-29-30.—Daniel Visger, Liberty Theatre, Kennewick, Wash. General patronage.

GENTLE JULIA: Jane Withers, Tom Brown—Here is a picture that will please every one. We did a very nice business and it pleased 100 per cent. Miss Withers really can act. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 20-21.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

GIRLS' DORMITORY: Simone Simon, Herbert Marshall—A poor picture with terrible sound. However, majority of the women liked the picture. Slow moving with no action to appeal to the men patronage. Played October 11-12.—W. Jenkins, Lee Theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo., and People's Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Constance Bennett, Loretta Young, Simone Simon—A picture with strictly female appeal. Well done and each character good in their respective role. However, story covers so much ground it is jumbled. Don't promise them too much and they'll be satisfied. Played November 2-3.—Donald Visger, Liberty Theatre, Kennewick, Wash.

PEPPER: Jane Withers, Irvin S. Cobb—Seemed to please everyone. Has a whirlwind finish and gets the house in an uproar. Just right for small towns. Played November 8-9.—W. Jenkins, Lee's Theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo., and People's Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin, Arline Judge—Here's a picture made to order for the small town, and it's my opinion will go big in any theatre. Little Judy Garland has a great future, I predict.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin, Arline Judge, Patsy Kelly—Very pleasant entertainment. Well received. The pick of the football crop this year. Did a nice midweek business. Running time, 93 minutes. Played November 11-12.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin, Arline Judge—Pleased 100 per cent. Football picture with a different angle, with music and comedy, with the musical numbers not carried to the extreme. Played November 3-4.—W. Jenkins, Lee's Theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo., and People's Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—Robert Taylor won the hearts of all who saw it.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—Pleased all. Taylor and Young make great team. Interesting story from start to suspenseful ending. Running time, 72 minutes.—E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Small town patronage.

RAMONA: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—A picture with what it takes at the box-office. The new soft tone color is a great improvement. Scenic value good and will do business if you tell "em." Played October 25-26-27.—Donald Visger, Liberty Theatre, Kennewick, Wash. General patronage.

SHOW THEM NO MERCY: Rochelle Hudson, Bruce Cabot—Powerful and thrilling picture. Received bad print on this. Picture will please if you can secure good print. Running time, 70 minutes.—E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Small town patronage.

STATE FAIR: Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor—The box office success of this reissue proves that the public doesn't forget so easily. In our estimation, Will Rogers never made a better picture.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

THANK YOU, JEEVES: Arthur Treacher, Virginia Field—Not much. Entire cast English. Played November 3.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

TO MARY—WITH LOVE: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy—Drew the ladies for the second night. Men and children here don't know how good it was. Good picture but over-bought.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. Small town patronage.

WHITE FANG: Michael Whalen, Jean Muir—This Jack London story brought in plenty of fans.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BARBARY COAST: Edward G. Robinson—Very good show of its kind, but we made a mistake by booking it for Sunday. Would be better for Friday and Saturday inasmuch as there is a lot of fighting and some shooting and on a whole very rough. Running time, 11 reels. Played November 15.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton—Excellent picture. Fine acting by Huston and Mary Astor.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Paul Lukas, Mary Astor—This is fine entertainment. Mary Astor, Walter Huston fit 100 per cent. The story is very interesting, sophisticated drama, but every one seemed to enjoy it because it was so well done.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

GAY DESPERADO, THE: Nino Martini, Ida Lupino—Singing very good, but picture does not appeal to ladies. Too rough and noisy.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GAY DESPERADO, THE: Nino Martini, Ida Lupino—This is swell entertainment. Music is lovely, enough slapstick to get by. Ida Lupino makes friends of everyone and Martini can sing. I could have improved the picture 50 per cent, but you can't expect the brains of the industry in Hollywood to know that a girl and a man don't throw things at each other in a room for ten minutes nor that the public likes to hear a song sung in English by a singer who speaks English.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, N. D. General patronage.

I STAND CONDEMNED: Harry Bauer, Laurence Olivier—Cannot praise this very highly. Most of my crowd did not like this picture.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS: Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes—A well told story. Acting very good.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY: Freddie Bartholomew, Dolores Costello Barrymore—The few who saw this spoke very highly of it. But it drew the poorest of any Sunday picture in months. Running time, 102 minutes. Played November 15-16.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THINGS TO COME: Raymond Massey—More complaints on this than anything else this year. Don't play it. Terrible, so my people said.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Universal

CRASH DONOVAN: Jack Holt, Nan Gray—A good action picture in which Jack Holt pleased his admirers. Played November 14.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

DON'T GET PERSONAL: James Dunn, Sally Eilers—This show is just what makes satisfied cash customers and they come again. Full of comedy and some love team. James and Sally always give the patrons a good show. Running time, seven reels. Played November 18.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

GIRL ON THE FRONT PAGE, THE: Gloria Student, Edmund Lowe—Very good one-day picture. Played November 10.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

RIDE 'EM, COWBOY: Buck Jones, Luana Walters—We did nice business for this attraction, which was somewhat different than the average Buck Jones western. Satisfied. Played November 7.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland—Went over nicely here. We have a high-brow crowd and the book background helped a lot. It is beautifully produced.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

BENGAL TIGER, THE: Barton MacLane, June Travis—Fair.—L. C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GREEN PASTURES: Rex Ingram—A surprise for our small town. Took in more money and more favorable comment than we have had on a Warner picture since "Gold Diggers of 1933."—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. Small town patronage.

GREEN PASTURES, THE: Rex Ingram—An outstanding production in every way. Caused considerable comment pro and con for quite a few days after the picture played. However, failed to gross slightly more than film rental. Played November 4-5.—W. Jenkins, Lee Theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo., and People's Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

LITTLE BIG SHOT: Sybil Jason, Robert Armstrong—This picture was enjoyed very much indeed. The little star does very well. Running time, 64 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM: All Star—Can't express it. Will just say being a jackass lowered James Cagney's Pres-tige here.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. Small town patronage.

PUBLIC ENEMY'S WIFE: Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay—Very good picture of its kind. Sure would like to see Miss Lindsay get a break with a good part in a good picture. I'll wager she would make good. Played November 3.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

KRAZY'S NEWSREEL: Krazy Kat Cartoon—Here is something different in a cartoon. It's a grand takeoff on Fox Movietone News.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

FIBBING FIBBERS: Walter Catlett—This has been the worst of the two-reelers from Columbia for a long time. Skip it and book the old Andy Clydes or 3 Stooges which are real comedies. Two reels.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

Educational

EDUCATIONAL COMEDIES: "Brain Busters;" "Gold Brick;" "Three on a Limb;" "Give 'Em Air." Prints on these all so bad customers did not know what it was all about. So many scenes cut there was no connection in story.—E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Small town patronage.

E-FLAT MAN: Buster Keaton—This is a two-reel comedy that will please everyone. Keaton will always do good business. Wished he would make some feature length pictures. Running time, 22 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

CHAIN LETTERS: Paul Terry-Toons—Real funny and even the adults liked it. Running time, six minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

LITTLE PAPA: Our Gang—Good comedy for the little folks and the older will like it, too. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Paramount

I CAN'T ESCAPE FROM YOU: Joe Reichman and Orchestra—Played this at the opening of the deer season and the hunters got a big laugh when the deer turned the tables on the hunter in the cartoon.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Michigan. Small town patronage.

PLAY SAFE: Color Classic Cartoon—Grownups will enjoy this, as well as the kiddies. One reel.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Arkansas. Small town patronage.

RKO-Radio

ALADDIN FROM MANHATTAN: Ruth Etting—Would have been better had it been one reel. Miss Etting has fine voice. Two reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Arkansas. Small town patronage.

MAJOR BOWES' Number 4—This was on a par with the others, but has no draw here any more. One reel. D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Arkansas. Small town patronage.

RETURNED ENGAGEMENT, A: Smart Set—Here is a comedy that puts pep into the program. Ford Sterling should make more comedies. Have not had him for so long we thought he had quit the movies. Come on, Ford. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FOX MOVIETONE NEWS, NO. 12: Patrons always demand the best and they get it. We give them Fox Movietone News and they go out satisfied. Fox Movietone News leads all the rest. Running time, 12 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

United Artists

TWO-GUN MICKEY: Mickey Mouse—A good cartoon. Enough said. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

FUN HOUSE: Oswald Cartoon—An excellent one in black and white. Really funny and will cause much patron comment. Running time, 8 minutes.—Donald Visger, Liberty Theatre, Kennewick, Wash. General patronage.

OILY BIRD, THE: Murray and Oswald—Good slap stick comedy. Two reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Arkansas. Small town patronage.

GUS VAN'S MUSIC SHOPPE: Mentone Musicals—A very, very good musical comedy full of good music and dancing. Swell entertainment. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

BIG TIME VAUDEVILLE REEL: Lou Holtz—Good for one reel on any program. One reel.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Arkansas. Small town patronage.

BLACK NETWORK, THE: Nina Mae McKinney, Nicholas Bros.—Our audience is composed of approximately 40 per cent colored and, naturally enough, this one was a big hit with them. The white section of the audience, however, liked the film just as much. A well devised combination of "hot" music—band and vocal—good gags and tap dancing. Running time, 22 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

CHANGING OF THE GUARD: Sybil Jason—One of the very nicest pictures I have seen for a long time. This was all in colors and it really was pleasing to see a short that was truly great in acting and dignity. Running time, 22 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

CHANGING OF THE GUARD: Sybil Jason—Superb short in color. Would have made an excellent addition to a New Year's day program. If you haven't already booked this short, try to get it for your New Year's show. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

CLYDE LUCAS & ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good band numbers. Vitaphone beats 'em all with shorts.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Michigan. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE IN THE AIR: Wini Shaw, Phil Regan—Just a little better than ordinary. Think this company is slipping on these Brevities. Running time, 20 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SHAKE MR. SHAKESPEARE: Carolyn Marsh—Another very poor Brevity from this company. We used to feel that whenever we booked a Brevity we could look for something outstanding. Now it is different. Running time, 20 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SOS Names Asia Agency

Contracts have been signed between the S.O.S. Corporation and Muller and Phipps, Ltd., for the exclusive sale of all S.O.S. theatre equipment in Asia, the Far East and Hong Kong. Headquarters of the new offices will be in Hong Kong and Shanghai.

MGM British Laboratory

Initial moves by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Ben Goetz and Louis B. Mayer to establish a modern developing and printing laboratory in London were taken this week with the formation of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British Studios, Ltd. Capital is listed at $125,000. Mr. Goetz has been in England several weeks on the project and will return shortly to New York and Hollywood.

Leaders Thank Women For Better Films Aid

Leaders of the motion picture industry last week publicly expressed the industry's gratitude to women's clubs for their efforts on behalf of better motion pictures. Addressing the 42nd convention of the State Federation of Women's Clubs at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York, Jacob Wills, Warner Brothers, asked the women's cooperation in the search for suitable picture material of "high literary quality."

Besides Mr. Wills, others who voiced the appreciation of the industry were Edward Finney of Grand National and Louis Nizer, attorney for the New York Film Board of Trade.

Greece and Africa Back Studio Plans

Greece and Africa are entering the international motion picture market with ambitious studio plans, and representatives of the financial backers of the new production enterprises in both countries are now in New York reputedly in search of American production talent. The Greek studios will be in Athens. Several production plants are planned for the north coast of Africa. The envoys are emphasizing scenic and historic advantages of their studio sites.

American Films Gain

American feature pictures are gaining ground in Austria at the expense of German productions, according to the Department of Commerce in Washington. During 1935, the report shows, there were 126 American features exhibited in Austrian theatres as compared with 110 in 1934 and 94 in 1933. The corresponding totals for German features were 116, 129 and 109, respectively.

Plagiarism Hearing Set

Hearing will be held on December 7 in the chambers of Federal Judge Woolsey in New York on the motion to dismiss the action brought by Allen Caruthers, attorney, against Radio charging that "Cimarron" is a plagiarism of his story, "The Sooners." B & K BIDS $1,325,000 FOR McVICKERS LEASE

Other Circuits Follow Balaban & Katz Double Billing in "B" and "C" Theatres of Area

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Offering rental amounting to $1,325,000 for a 20 year lease on the McVickers theatre, Balaban & Katz made the top bid among three seeking this property.

Johnny Jones offered $1,100,000 for the 20 year period. The Hi-Lee, Hi-Lo Candy Company also made a bid of "$1,000 better than the best bid," but as no definite figure was given it was expected this offer would not be considered.

These bids opened at a meeting of the Board of Education, which controls the theatre building, will be decided upon at the next board meeting, December 16th.

Both the B. & K. and Jones offers also said that 15% of the gross would be given as rental providing this figure was higher than the amount of the rental.

The B. & K. bid was to start at $60,000 for the first five years, $62,500 for the next five years, $70,000 for the next five years and $72,500 for the last five years.

The Jones bid was for $50,000 for the first ten years and $60,000 for the second ten year period.

As considerable criticism has been voiced regarding failure to lease the McVickers theatre on previous occasions, it is thought that the Board of Education will rent the theatre when the meeting is called this month. General opinion is that B. & K. will get the lease and make arrangements for Johnny Jones to operate the house. This report coincides with the information that B. & K. probably will start operating the State-Lake theatre, which it recently purchased. The State-Lake now is operated by Jones, Linick & Schaefer, which has the house until May 1, 1937.

B. & K. is having the eleventh and twelfth floors in the State-Lake building remodeled and air-conditioned at once and will move their theatre office staff to these quarters when they are completed.

With Balaban & Katz "B" and "C" week theatres starting double features, other circuits also are inaugurating the plan. The latest is the Essaness group which put twin bills in the American theatre last week, with the same policy slated for the Broadway-Strand and other theatres.

Warner Brothers will stay away from doubles at least until after the first of the year, according to local executives. Added film costs during the holidays are not desired by the Warner circuit. The Avalon and Capitol theatres will have auto giveaways during the Christmas season.

The latest theatre to be built for Balaban & Katz is a 900 seat house on the southwest corner of Belmont and Keating avenues. A. S. Klein, food manufacturer, owns the land and is building the theatre and five stores adjoining it. B. & K. has leased the theatre for 20 years.

C. W. and George L. Rapp, the architects, announce it will cost about $125,000 when completed. The building will be of modern design of brick and stone, with the exterior of block granite and colored terra cotta. The stores will have stainless steel fronts and the buildings will occupy 123 by 133 feet fronting on Belmont avenue.

Another B. & K. theatre now in construction is the Illinois. This will have 1,500 seats on one floor. The inside will be a reproduction of a Roman arena. It will cost approximately $200,000 and will be opened next April, according to J. E. O. Pridmore, the architect.

A cash offer to purchase bonds of the Belpark theatre, 3231 North Cicero avenue, deposited with the American Bond and Mortgage bondholders' committee, has been accepted, Dayton Keith, chairman, announced. The offer, made by B. & K., lessee of the theatre, provides for payment to depositing bondholders of 82 per cent of the par value of the bonds. Mr. Keith expects checks will be available for bondholders by December 10th.

Mr. Keith pointed out that the issue had not yet been reorganized and that proceedings are pending in federal bankruptcy court. Because of many legal complications, he said, it appeared probable that reorganization on a satisfactory basis would take a long time and the committee had submitted the offer which the holders of $264,000 out of $276,500 have accepted.

The property, which is security for the bonds, contains a 2,000-seat theatre, eight stores, and twenty apartments. There are $446,500 first mortgage bonds outstanding.

Pickets were removed from the Warner Metropolitan theatre in Chicago's Negro district last week after Frank Clifford, business manager for the Chicago Operators Union, announced he would not discuss the hiring of colored operators for that and other theatres unless the picketing was stopped. After a conference with the various colored groups, who are trying to get Negro operators and help in all theatres playing to that trade, it was decided to investigate the matter further. The Warner theatre was one of several affected by the demands of the colored organizations.

Roy Bruder and Arch Herzoff with the rest of the B. & K. organization and Sam Clark of Warner's, launched a record-breaking campaign on "Three Men on a Horse" which opened at the Chicago theatre Friday.

Among the multitude of exploitation ideas used were the following:

In the lobby of the theatre was a "talking horse." A full-sized but stuffed horse "spoke" to patrons entering the theatre via a hidden loud-speaker with microphone attachment. At the Christmas toy parade in the Loop last week the exploiters had a toy horse with three men on it. A cow with a sign reading "No Bull—"Three Men on a Horse" is the Funniest Picture In Chicago," also paraded in the streets. At the International Livestock Show this week a champion Clydesdale stallion with three men aboard paraded throughout the show advertising the film. Radio broadcasts, sound trucks and other devices also were used. All B. & K. Loop theatre ushers wore buttons telling about the picture. It was one of the biggest campaigns ever used here.

British Industry Honors Will Hays On London Visit

Welcomed as "a model of leadership for all trade officials," Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was called "an ambassador extraordinary" of a great nation by Theodore H. Fligelstone, president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, at a luncheon given for the MPPDA executive at the Trocadero in London.

Declaring that a frequent British cry in time of crisis is "We want a Will Hays," Mr. Fligelstone who acted as toastmaster at the luncheon, said that if Mr. Hays could give the British industry a lead in self government his visit would go down as one of the greatest events in the history of the industry. He expressed the hope that Mr. Hays' visit to England would further bind together the English-speaking races.

The MPPDA president, in a lengthy address, said it was not his purpose to discuss potentially controversial matters, but to advocate confidence and cooperation. He prophesied third dimension films and more progress in color work as the industry's next developments.

The screen's 250,000,000 patrons each week are a challenge to the teacher, to science and to art to use the power of the screen, he said. Properly used, films might be a definite contributing factor to the advancement of our modern civilization, he added.

Present at the luncheon were Sir Walter Womersley, assistant postmaster general; Arthur Loew; George Hall, M.P.; Sir Arthur Clavering, Richard Dooner, former CEA president; Arthur Jarratt, Joseph Pollard, R. E. Richards, A. J. Gale and Kenneth Nyman, chairman of the London and Home Counties Branch of the CEA. Distributor representatives included John C. Graham, Paramount managing director; Maurice Silverstone of United Artists; Sutton Dawes, W. J. Gell, managing director for Pathe, Ltd., and Samuel Eckman, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer managing director. Others were James M. Beck, London representative of the MPPDA; Harold Smith, Paris representative of the MPPDA; J. Neville Kearney, secretary of the Federation of British Industries, Films Group, and Harry Marks.

Following the luncheon Mr. Hays was honored at a dinner tendered by the Federated British Industries Film Group at the Mayfair, at which John Maxwell characterized him as "an inspiration to the British motion picture industry." The event was attended by 65 industry leaders and Government officials.

Mr. Hays arrived in London last weekend from Paris, where he held a series of conferences with American distributor representatives. He told reporters that no Governmental questions are pending in France at this time, relations of the American industry with the French Government having been fixed in the trade treaty which was negotiated last winter.

He sailed from England on the Normandie on Wednesday and will arrive in New York on Monday.

HUTCHINSON HONORED BY AUSTRALIAN PREMIER

Stanley S. Crick and Charles E. Munro Share in Tribute for Helping Develop the Industry

by CLIFF HOLT

in Melbourne

A notable gesture of good will towards the film industry in the United States was the luncheon tendered to Walter J. Hutchinson, general foreign manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, by the Hon. J. A. Lyons, prime minister of Australia, on Mr. Hutchinson's visit to the federal capital at Canberra. Stanley S. Crick, managing director of Twentieth Century-Fox in Australia, and Charles E. Munro, managing director of Hoyts, were also guests.

The newspapers said the function was given as a means of further cementing friendly relationships between Australia and America, and as a mark of courtesy and token of goodwill towards three men who had done much towards the development of the industry in this country.

On his visit to Melbourne, Mr. Hutchinson was tendered a complimentary luncheon by the executives of Hoyts and Hoyts theatre managers. In a speech that was received with great enthusiasm, Mr. Hutchinson traced the history of the Fox film organization.

"Heavy losses incurred during the depression have now been converted into profits," he said. "Not large profits, it is true, but profits that denote progress and presage a sound future for the company and one of great achievement."

Mr. Hutchinson paid a tribute to Australia's city and neighborhood theatres, which in his opinion compared favorably with the world's best.

Announcements of the 1936-37 production lineups have been well received in Australia. Among leading exhibitors there exists a definite impression that the studios are reacting to the improved national and international economic conditions, and are proceeding with a confidence brought about by correspondingly increased production budgets.

After a careful analysis of both the American and British producers' policy announcements, Mr. Munro, managing director of Hoyts and joint managing director of General Theatres Corporation, told the HERALD's correspondent that he was more confident than ever that next year the industry would command a greater proportion of hits than in any previous period.

"It is plain that producers generally have put into practice the realization that big pictures are the stability of the business," he said. "Having emerged from the economic depression, America will continue to improve a product that has improved considerably in the past twelve months.

"Britain is now alive to the necessity of eliminating second-rate quota films and is injecting star value into her product. In concentrating on films of international appeal, British producers are hitting the bull's-eye as far as this market is concerned.

"Meanwhile, exhibitors are alive to their responsibilities. Theatres are being modernized, and new standards in presentation and comfort have made them ready for the vastly increased patronage theatre owners anticipate."

Just returned from a tour abroad, Stuart F. Doyle, managing director of Greater Union Theatres and joint managing director with Mr. Munro of General Theatres Corporation, said that in the United States it was impossible not to be impressed by the air of confidence in film circles on both the east and west coasts. More money, he said, was being spent on production, and he believed that the coming season would find the studios turning out a higher grade of film, "of such standard that it must ultimately react to the benefit of exhibitors."

These opinions come from two men who are managing directors of companies that directly and indirectly control 106 theatres in the Commonwealth, and from a marketing point of view in Australia are of the utmost importance. Exhibitors are more or less accustomed to confident predictions by production and distribution executives at the commencement of each season.

At the conclusion of her England to New Zealand flight, Jean Batten was signed for exclusive personal appearances in the 65 theatres controlled by Amalgamated Theatres, Ltd., throughout the Dominion. Her first appearance was at the Plaza, Auckland, the day of her arrival. Special significance attached to the deal lies in the fact that it was clinched by 20th Century-Fox representatives in Sydney barely a week after that company's purchase of control in Amalgamated was announced.

"It just keeps rollin' along," was the catch-line used by the Liberty theatre, Sydney, as "Show Boat" proceeded merrily into its 18th week.

MGM REICH BUDGET IS $36,750 PER FILM

Maintenance cost of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer branch in Germany amounts to approximately 175,000 reichsmarks ($36,750) per picture imported, according to F. D. Strengholt, managing director of the distributor subsidiary in Berlin. The company has 170 employees, with the payroll and maintenance of distribution channels budgeted at 1,000,000 reichsmarks. If 10 pictures, the usual number, are imported, the cost is thus 100,000 reichsmarks each. This sum is increased to about 175,000 reichsmarks by the cost of post-synchronization, of 40 prints, and of the import license.

New Board Starts 'Revived' AMPA

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, completely resuscitated from its recent near-demise, started anew this week, with a complete new board of directors, finance committee and general committees, but continuing under the presidency of Gordon S. White, of Educational.

The old board resigned in a body two weeks ago when the membership protested against a change of procedure, which included conservative-type meetings and a reclassification of members.

Charles Leonard resigned also, as vice-president, and is succeeded by Ralph Lund, secretary, who will fill both posts. Herbert Spencer Berg continues as secretary, and these, with the following appointees, comprise the new directorate: S. Barret McCormick, Ray Gallagher, Paul Benjamin, Don Hancock and Marvin Kirsch.

Herbert Berg is treasurer and chairman of a new finance committee which will seek ways and means for reducing the AMPA's debt of $1,700. Working with him will be Mr. Kirsch and Mr. Gallagher.

A new membership committee is headed by Paul Gulick, and is composed of Joe Gallagher, Ralph Lund and four others to be named.

A special committee on arrangements for the annual AMPA advertising-publicity awards is composed of Vincent Trotta, chairman, and S. Charles Einfeld, S. Barret McCormick and two others to be named.

Al Sherman heads the new publicity committee, assisted by James P. Cunningham, Jose Schorr, Peggy Goldberg and John Nelson Harrower.

Program and entertainment committees are yet to be named.

The AMPA's first "liberal" policy meeting under the new deal enforced by the will of the members was set for Thursday, at the Hotel Edison, where Colonel Jay C. Flippen, acting as master of ceremonies, was to introduce as guests: District Attorney William C. Dodge, of New York; Bobby Breen and Burgess Meredith and Margot, of "Winterset," besides others.

Special Master Allowed $10,000

Federal Judge Coxe in New York has granted Special Master John E. Joyce an interim allowance of $10,000 for his services in the Paramount bankruptcy and receivership, which was from June 16, 1934 to date. An additional allowance will be granted when the Paramount case is completely closed.

Legitimate Houses Sold

The Majestic, Royale and Masque, legitimate theatres in New York, were sold at auction Monday to the Magoro Corporation through its attorney, William Klein. The sale was the result of a foreclosure action brought by the Continental Bank and Trust Company against the Theatre Zone Realty Company, Inc.

Contingent Liabilities:

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation is guarantor of various leases and financial obligations of various subsidiary and affiliated companies. Where defaults have occurred and claims have been filed, provision has been made in the figures shown above for settlement of such claims. In a number of instances, however, no default has occurred and, therefore, estimate of the contingent liability is impracticable.

There are certain lawsuits pending against subsidiary companies, the liability in respect of which is not determinable.

NOTE:

The foregoing figures do not include any estimated provision for payment of expenses of reorganization.

 The figures in respect to outstanding Common Stock and capital surplus are exclusive of shares of Common Stock to be issued as provided in Article IX of the Plan and shares which may be allotted to Atlas Corporation by way of compensation. The issuance of these shares will increase the figures shown in respect to outstanding Common Stock and to the extent of such increase will decrease the capital surplus.

H. L. Clarke Sued For $3,000,000

The Utilities Power and Light Company, $400,000,000 international utility giant, has filed suit in Chicago against its former president, Harley L. Clarke, charging misappropriation of that amount of funds. Mr. Clarke is a director of the company but resigned the presidency on October 30th, reputedly under pressure from the Atlas Corporation, New York investment organization which gained control of the company founded by Mr. Clarke in 1915.

Mr. Clarke's financial interests have been many and diversified. President of numerous utility and power subsidiaries of his company he was also on the boards of several banks. He entered the motion picture field when he formed a company to market educational films and financed a portable camera invented by a University of Chicago professor. He acquired 30 small theatre supply houses and merged them into the National Theatre Supply Company. This expanded through other acquisitions into the General Theatres Equipment Corporation, one of the largest in the country.

When William Fox ran into difficulties with his Fox Film Corporation Mr. Clarke bought an interest in it, finally becoming president of the production company and its distributing units, Fox Theatres. During the depression General Theatres went into receivership, Fox Film suffered reversals, and the United States Senate stock market investigating committee in December, 1933, began to investigate what was called Mr. Clarke's $65,000,000 "paper fortune." In 1932 he resigned as chairman of the board of Fox Films and shortly after that disposed of all his motion picture holdings. Since that time he has been attempting to recoup his once large fortune.

Additional Tax Liens Filed

Approximately $75,000 in tax liens were filed in the federal court of Los Angeles against motion picture executives and players Monday by Ned Rogan, collector of internal revenue. He claims the sums are due for 1935. The heaviest liens are against Miriam Hopkins for $55,758; Bette Davis, $1,399, and Alexander Hall, $845.

Shakespeare Passed His Screen Test in 1900's

"As You Like It" is Forty-seventh Film Written by Bard of Avon

A season ago Notre Dame's football conquerors of Army had a triple-threat halfback named William Shakespeare. This season the motion picture on Broadway has a triple-threat screen writer by the same name. What with the Elisabeth Bergner "As You Like It" (Twentieth Century-Fox) just concluding at the Radio City Music Hall, the Shearer-Howard "Romeo and Juliet" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) continuing to crowd the aisles of the Astor theatre on Broadway, and the Max Reinhardt version of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" still on view in the suburbs, after a Broadway run, the old Bard of Avon is directly responsible for three different important productions running concurrently.

Some critics called this "Shakespearean cycle" in motion pictures a new phenomenon.

But to workers on the WPA Federal Writers Project, who are compiling a "Critical Bibliography of the Film in America," all this is old stuff. To them "As You Like It" is merely the 47th in a long series of film versions of Shakespeare, most of which were made in the first 15 years of the century. In fact, something far closer to a genuine Shakespearean cycle in the film took place 25 years ago, when 14 film productions of 12 different Shakespearean plays were released in 1910-1911.

Shakespeare's screen test was passed, not in 1936, but early in 1900, when Sarah Bernhardt was presented in a "talking" picture of the dual scene from "Hamlet." The talking was reproduced separately on an Edison cylinder record.

In 1903, when "the movies," no longer content with the depiction of the waves breaking on the shores of Dover, had turned to real plots, producers marched in a body upon the classics generally and upon Shakespeare in particular. In the flood of productions that followed, 14 of the plays were filmed in five different countries, several in colored versions, featuring a variety of "big names," ranging from Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree to Theda Bara.

In fact, in 1911 Shakespeare on the screen was so much a matter of fact that parodies were in order. Beginning with "Romeo and Juliet in Town" (Selig-Polyscope), they reached the all-time high (or low) of "Mike Capulet vs. Pete Montague—How They Fought at the Quarry" (Biograph slapstick, 1914).

Following are additional sidelights on some of the earlier Shakespearean productions, as WPA's staff records them:

As You Like It

The only film version prior to the Bergner production is thus listed in a "Catalog of Educational Motion Pictures" (1910): "This famous comedy of Shakespeare, done out of doors by a very competent company 915 feet. Lease price—$118.95."

Merchant of Venice

A "grand recitation, with 10 exquisite colored slides," was offered for sale by Harbach and Co., film and photographic supply dealers in September and October, 1901 Price—$5.

A CHRONOLOGY OF SHAKESPEARE FILMS

Following is a chronological list of the screen versions of Shakespeare's plays in the order of frequency, as listed by the WPA researchers:

ROMEO AND JULIET, made seven 6 times, in whole or part, between 1908 and 1936.

HAMLET, six times, between 1900 and 1915.

MERCHANT OF VENICE, five times, between 1901 and 1921.

A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM, four times between 1909 and 1935.

MACBETH, four times between 1908 and 1916.

7 KING LEAR, three times between 1909 and 1916. 7

THE TEMPEST, three times between 1910 and 1915. 12

TAMING OF THE SHREW, three times between 1908 and 1929.

OTHELLO, three times between 1910 and 1923.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA, three times between 1910 and 1914.

JULIUS CAESAR, twice, 1905, 1909.

AS YOU LIKE IT, twice, 1910, 1936.

MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR, once, 1910. 9

TWELFTH NIGHT, once, 1910. 10

Romeo and Juliet

The one-reel version made by Vitagraph in 1908 was advertised as "the only Shakespearean tragedy written around a love story. . . . Filmed in Central Park. . . . magnificently staged, gorgeously costumed and provided with numerous scenes which were beautifully tinted." The two-reel version made by Thanhouser in 1911 drew the following effusion in Moving Picture World, later merged into the HERALD: "It is creditable to the makers of the present film that each of the reels tells a story of its own; one of the love story, the other, the tragedy. As the reels are issued at different times, this will help the exhibitor. Some day it is hoped an arrangement will be made which allows of such productions being released at the same time, the only sensible and logical way. . . ."

In a colored version made by Pathe in 1913 Juliet is betrothed to Tybalt and the character of Paris is omitted entirely.

The two productions made in 1916 (by Quality-Metro and Fox) starred, respectively, Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, and Harry Bayne, and Harry Hilliard and Theda Bara.

Excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" appeared in "Morning Glory," with Katharine Hepburn, and in "Hollywood Revue of 1920," with Norma Shearer.

Taming of the Shrew

This seems to have been regarded, at least by the critics, as a moral disquisition. Of the Biograph production in 1908, a reviewer said: ". . . it is indeed an object lesson, teaching us to see ourselves as other see us." And of the Urban-Eclipse version in 1911, a different critic remarked, "This Katherine of Shakespeare is a standing sign-mark for parents who permit early indulgence by their girls and who are careless of their education."

The Tempest

The first production was a filming of a stage presentation by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree. Of it a critic said, "This remarkable production taken under the ordinary conditions of stage lighting during representation, illustrates the great advances in animated photography which the motion picture camera has rendered possible. The shipwreck with all its intense realism is reproduced with startling detail. The lightnings flash, the billows leap and roll and break. . . . The film is issued tinted to the suitable weird moonlight color. . . ."

Othello

Another example of the popularity of the colored film in the early days. The first screen version, made by Pathe Film d'Art in 1910, was in color.

Macbeth

The Pathe production released in 1910 was blurbed in the Pathe catalogue as follows: "In order to do justice to the masterpiece of this great writer, the best French actors were employed to take the leading parts. . . ."

The Triangle eight-reel production starring Beerbohm Tree (1916), is described as "the most archaeologically correct version of Shakespeare's tragedy ever made anywhere."

Hamlet

Many of the earlier "Hamlets" seem to have been in name only. The one made by Molies in 1908 began with the graveyard scene and was devoted largely to attempts to emphasize Hamlet's madness. Similarly the production by Asta Films, in 1921, "employs the theory that Hamlet was a woman and was in love with Horatio. . . ."

Julius Caesar

The first version, made in 1905, was titled "Shakespeare Writing Julius Caesar." It showed "the author in his study trying to write the scene of Caesar's murder. Suddenly his thoughts take life and right before him appears an old Roman forum. Shakespeare sits in his armchair and watches all that occurs. . . ."

Another production of this play achieved prominence in 1909, when in a discussion of censorship a "Reverend Gentleman" was quoted as having cited the shortness of Caesar's tunic to prove that movies were an immoral influence.

Horwitz Denies Giving To Allied "War Chest"

Denying the report in MOTION PICTURE HERALD issue of November 28th that he had contributed $1,500 to the "war chest" of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, M. B. Horwitz, independent exhibitor who owns and operates six theatres in Cleveland, telegraphed this week from Columbus, where the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio were in convention Tuesday and Wednesday:

"Up to the present moment I have not contributed one dollar, and as treasurer of the Ohio organization make the further statement that I have not received one dollar from any Ohio exhibitor as a contribution to this fund. Any pledges or contributions that may come will be through action that will be taken at the convention."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

HIGH HATS AND FANCY VESTS

What with the giant nationwide socko exploitation campaigns now successfully in progress on many fronts, there hardly needs to be any special alarm over the heart beat and pulse of the old bingo and bango in motion picture showmanship. But not so long ago there was indication in various sectors of a bit of a drift away from the tried and true brass band school of bally on individual pictures to a stronger policy of theatre and theatre service building. And thus it may be in order now to do a bit of checking up on how showmen in general are taking it.

Comment has already been made here on the immediate public acceptance of Warner Bros. "Gold Diggers" air tour. Alongside of this, set down the reception now being accorded the Howard Dietz - Billy Ferguson advance stunt on MGM's "Tarzan Escapes" wherein Capt. Volny Phifer with the boa and champanzee of the picture is touring the country to wide acclaim.

Both campaigns are breaking front page, winning welcome from important civic officials, bringing great crowds together to gaze in wonder, and better yet, to read again and again, to repeat again and again the titles of the pictures for which these elaborate drives are intended. And both campaigns are 100 per cent pure bally, ballyhoo "unashamed if not unadorned" and effective beyond expectation because of it.

The true boxoffice value of institutional buildup and sincere service has never been discounted in these pages. In their place, they play an important part of profitable theatre operation. But they rank no more importantly than the necessity of wide-open hit-'em-again bally at those times where the only answer is the old sockeroo.

Sure enough, there is always a steady market for formal apparel, but there never was a day when the high hat outsold the fancy vest.

SANTA CLAUS SHOWMEN

Reporting in last week's issue and in this on their December campaigns, members almost without fail set forth elaborate plans for toy and canned goods matinees, free shows and other entertainments to be put on in cooperation with leading newspapers, civic bodies and service clubs. Taking these scattered reports as a fair cross-section of similar arrangements now being readied in every corner of the United States and Canada, there is ample reason for believing as always that through the instrumentation of exhibitors as a whole, Santa Claus will not fail unfortunate juveniles who look to no other place for their rightful share of Yuletide happiness.

In any listing of the motion picture's good forces toward the strengthening of industry prestige, high in the column must be placed the role played, and enthusiastically, by theatremen to make Christmas real for legions of underprivileged and otherwise neglected children.

SHORT, SHORT STORY

Recently unemployed member who just landed a new job graciously credits the Round Table for the break. It seems that during the interview the exhibitor asked for some additional data on his background and the Round Tabler noting a late copy of Motion Picture Herald which carried a story of one of his last campaigns in the former situation, opened it to the Round Table section, pointed out the contribution.

In the same mail another member long silent, writes to explain his seeming lack of cooperation by saying his superiors do not look with too much enthusiasm upon managers who contribute to the trade papers. Thus the Round Tabler who is doing a handsome job and is only too eager to detail his activities, prefers not to risk stepping on tender, official toes.

Some time ago in these pages J. J. Fitzgibbons, General Manager, Famous Players Canadian Theatres and one of the real big men in exhibition, had this to say about it: "It is amazing that so many good managers can see and execute ticket selling ideas for either a screen personality or story, yet fail to realize the importance of publicity for themselves. When a manager fails to take advantage of the opportunity given him, he definitely dissipates an asset of inestimable value to himself."

New career for managers may be indicated by the resignation of a Detroit theatreman to become a member of the city's police force. Evidently figures the experience in handling kids at those Saturday morning shows should fit him for a prominent spot on the Riot Squad.

Wedding Announcements Mailed by N. Y. Criterion

Reported by Phil Laufer of Arthur Jeffrey's exploitation staff of the New York Criterion is the wedding announcement mailed out to a list of 25,000 within a radius of 25 miles of New York to publicize "Wedding Night."

Card announces the "marriage of Mr. Cary Grant and Miss Joan Bennett," among those present being (and here was listed members of the entire cast). At bottom of card was the "at home after" date and the usual R.S.V.P.

Girls Play Bazookas In School for Le Tempt

Homer Le Tempt, Paramount, Ft. Fairfield, Mass., put on a novel exploitation stunt to sell "Big Broadcast" by purchasing five Bob Burns' bazookas and having five girls play these in one of the local school rooms two days ahead of opening. Stunt went over so well, the girls were asked to play at assembly for entire school.

WINDOW DISPLAY. To sell "Give Me Your Heart" and the March of Fashion reel at the Strand, Akron, Ohio, Harvey Cocks promoted window in leading department store.

Popeye Show Staged By Siegal in Rochester

Ed Siegal, now manager of the Leff-Meyer's Bronx New York Lido, pulled a nifty campaign on a Popeye morning show at the Cameo in Rochester before leaving that spot for the new situation. Ed tied in with three newspapers for free plugs and also hooked in with the local Wurlitzer store for free music lessons in addition to furnishing talent for the Popeye stage show.

Announcements at the local schools, heralds, coloring contests and effective window displays effected by the Wheatena Company, who furnished blowups on Popeye rounded out the rest of the campaign.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"

School Kids Queried On Newsreel Shots

J. R. Wills, Uray Theatre, Ouray, Colo., ties his "March of Time" reel to local grade and high schools by contacting teachers and offering passes to children correctly answering list of prepared questions pertaining to certain historical shots in the reel.

To give the stunt a good start, Wills gave a free showing, adding a cartoon and short subject, kids marched from school in a body.

Egan Takes Pictures Of Calgary Bronks

Calgary Bronks, through arrangements made by Pete Egan, Palace Theatre there, had a novel and entertaining type of practice recently.

The Bronks saw themselves through the medium of moving pictures taken during the Calgary-Regina grid battle at the Stadium. Play by play they relieved the game and had their mistakes pointed out to them by Coach Cronin. Pete arranged to have the pictures presented in the boys' dressing room, stunt crashing local dailies with swell stories.

Annual Exhibit Put On In Lobby By Julius Lamm

Reported even more successful than the display put on last year was the annual Merchants' Fall Exhibit sponsored in conjunction with the leading business men of the Glenville section of Cleveland by Julius Lamm, of the Uptown Theatre. This year's show, which took place in the theatre's spacious lobby, ran during the first week in November with some 30 merchants and organizations cooperating, including the American Legion, Greyhound Bus Lines, Sonoco Oil, etc.

Space was sold in the outer lobby and rotunda with prices running from $10 to $25 per unit and in exchange each merchant received regular theatre admission tickets for that amount to be disposed of to good customers or with regular purchases. To attract the public, valuable prizes were offered and money for this purpose gathered by selling raffle tickets for the prizes. Tickets wholesaled to merchants for one cent each and distributed in proportion to the size of the individual businesses. One prize was given away each night of the exhibition.

Trailer was run to plug the exhibit and extra advertising utilized by the theatre and stores, latter also stressing this in windows, etc. Sound truck made the entire district a week ahead and the neighborhood papers of course front paged the proceedings ahead and during the show. Opening night was featured by address of local mayor with Legion band parading to the theatre for further buildup. Theatre was strikingly decorated with all manner of banners and flags.

It was a big week, according to Lamm, as in addition to his regular show patrons had an opportunity to witness the many elaborate displays, illustrated to left, and also to draw for the prizes.

Newspapers Aid Levin On "Dodsworth" Date

By concentrating heavily on the newspapers, Ed Levin staged a campaign for "Dodsworth" that helped to break the alltime house record of the United Artists Theatre, Chicago. Photos, features, stories and editorial comment ran for several days in advance of the opening.

Through a tie-up with the Packard Motor Car Company two special models were driven through the main streets offering free rides to the theatre to see the picture. Five hundred posters printed locally covered all the downtown stands and spots of advantage stressing the Modern Screen Award given to "Dodsworth." Displays of Grossett & Dunlap editions of Sinclair Lewis' book were placed in all leading book stores.

An effective stunt was the Inquiring Reporter and a Daily Times cameraman, who interviewed and photographed a number of patrons and gave the picture full billing in the large amount of publicity.

Limerick Stages 'Jinx Prevue' on Friday the 13th

It so happened that George Limerick had booked "Case of the Black Cat" to open on Saturday, Nov. 14th, which gave him the smart idea for what he termed a Jinx Prevue to be held at 11:15 the night before. Thus the special screening coming on Friday, the 13th, gave George plenty of latitude for trick tieups and newspaper layouts. For instance, his first ad carried "dare" copy followed out in other ads such as illustrated below. Tied in also was a gag to attract the kids, Limerick running ads announcing free admission during the run of the picture for all youngsters bringing live black cats to the theatre. Both the prevue and the kid offer broke page one in the local press. Cards for the prevue carrying such copy as "Would you walk under a ladder?", "Would you cross the path of a black cat?" were distributed.

To help along the black cat idea, Limerick had a large cage so constructed and placed on the sidewalk. Lettered cards on each side were in keeping with the "dare" copy. Other street stunts included an eight-foot ladder in foyer week ahead, placed so that patrons would have to walk under it or take the other side of the lobby. Another ladder was placed from top of boxoffice to frame in front so that patrons had to walk under it.

Many Ladder Stunts Used

Ladders were also placed against the marquee with the same idea in mind, tiein posters announcing: "Are you superstitious?" and for street ballyhoo, boy with one shoe off made the downtown district carrying banner with the "superstitious" copy plus line "is it bad luck to walk with one shoe on and one shoe off?" At soda fountains and cigar stores, the same idea was used with "three-on-a-match" copy.

George reports that as he had never heard of the stunt before, it was in the nature of an experiment which turned out to be a winner. And as Friday, the 13th, happens as often as three times a year, Limerick passes along the details for the members.

Universal Holds Screening In Air Over New York for "Flying Hostess"

Announced as the first time a complete sound feature was shown in flight was the screening of Universal's "Air Hostess" in a transport plane some 8,000 feet over New York City to local newspaper and wire service reviewers. Stunt was arranged by Joe Weil, exploitation chief, with aid of Harry Ormiston, and honorary hostess for the occasion was Judith Barrett, star of the picture, shown above describing sequence in film to plane's regular hostess. Special 16 mm. print was prepared for the screening with necessary juice supplied by storage batteries. Screen was placed over door of pilot's cockpit and windows curtained to shut off light. Stunt was repeated in Chicago and Kansas City.

Columbia Ties Up GE For "Pennies from Heaven"

For "Pennies from Heaven," Columbia Pictures have just completed a tieup with the General Electric Corporation, whereby the utility company has placed its entire selling staff back of the campaign with 53,000 dealers and 50,000 house-to-house salesmen plugging the picture in conjunction with its "Home Thrift Plan."

The Electric Company's campaign further includes the distribution of 1,000,000 "Pennies from Heaven" folders; planting of national advertising with space allowance in the copy for name of theatre.

Special window display cards are also being distributed to all dealers, along with a de luxe campaign book explaining every angle of the tieup and instructing them to contact the theatres in their district where the picture is playing.

London G.B. Radio Amateurs

Reversing the order of Major Bowes' idea which brings winners on his radio program engagements in stage units, the Gaumont British theatres in London have been conducting amateur contents at the various houses with winners appearing on special programs through tieup with British Broadcasting Co. Publicity on the stunt for G B is handled by J. Forsythe, chief publicist.

Serkowich's New Way Of Advertising Coming Hits

That lobby displays on coming attractions can be made newsy, interesting, and capable of stopping a lot of people without upsetting the decorative scheme of any lobby, is the belief of Ben Serkowich, Capitol Theatre, N. Y., accompanying photo shows display, the larger pictures are black-and-white and the smaller are 11x14's . . . captioned with tricky copy. Illumination was supplied by bulbs concealed behind frosted glass at the right side of each section of the display. Explanatory copy was run over all.

Through tieup with local shoe store, Wally Caldwell, Loew's Valentine, Toledo, for "Great Ziegfeld" distributed fan photos of stars both at store and theatre. Easeled oil paintings of scene stills were planted in hotel lobbies and accompanying photo shows one of the smart window displays planted by Wally in a luggage shop.

Three weeks ahead, newspaper campaign was started, dailies running stories with art and chain grocer paid for distribution of 10,000 roto tabloids in exchange for theatre mention on back page. Spot announcements were made on radio, ice cream parlor plugged a "Ziegfeld" sundae and reserved ticket envelopes were distributed to housewives.

Furniture Window Sells "Adverse"

Ken Grimes, at the Warner Theatre, Morgantown, West Va., contacted local furniture dealer who featured a window display of French furniture with plenty of selling copy on the picture spotted in the display. Cards were placed on telephone mouthpiece reading "make a date with Anthony Adverse" and giant pass for the mayor was carried through streets before delivery.

Sixty foot banner was placed on bridge, visible from some distance, mounted 24 sheet was carried through streets and then planted on court house, banner was also displayed at stadium during local football games and sidewalk stencils were used at important street crossings.

Jumbled Title Used By Ralston for "Madness"

Howard Ralston, Warner Ritz, San Bernardino, Cal., used a teaser stunt on "Adventure in Manhattan" with two boys kept busy a few days ahead of opening interchanging four-foot letters atop theatre so that title was spelled incorrectly (see photo.) Opening day, letters were arranged in proper order. Two arrows were planted on sidewalk opposite theatre, calling attention of pedestrians to boys at work.

Another gag that Howard used was to plant a safe in front of his house with card alongside, copy reading "Can you open this safe? There is something valuable inside for you, free. It's a ticket to see," etc., etc.

Harris Hosts Parents Of Town's New Babes

Clay Harris, Ritz Theatre, Marianna, Fla., uses a swell gag whenever there is a new arrival in the family of any of his patrons. Following is the letter Clay mails to the babe:

"This is probably the first letter that you have received and at that it doesn't mean much to you. You are saying to yourself, 'Those folks at the Ritz Theatre must be crazy, I am only a month old.' Well, Charles, maybe we are, but we want you to do something for us. Enclosed, you will find two tickets to the Ritz Theatre, and it won't be very long before you realize, that the Ritz is Jackson County's Entertainment Center. Tell Mother and Dad, that you wish that they would leave someone with you one afternoon or evening, and step out to the Ritz as your guest. If you do this for us, we will be very much obliged and they will thank you also."

Clay reports the stunt as garnering him plenty of goodwill.

Conner Dresses House For "Jailbreak" Date

Taking newspaper headlines, stories and pictures, Marlowe Conner, Grove Theatre, Chicago, Ill., for "Jailbreak" made up an easel for lobby display including photos from pressbook. These were mounted and edge of easel was trimmed with small chains from one end of which dangled a black cardboard ball with playdates.

Another display consisted of jail cell built for foyer (see photo). Realistic atmosphere was added by use of chains, swinging lamp with green light and the walls were written on with sayings becoming a jail cell. The inmate was an usher dressed in stripes, who talked to the folks about the coming attraction as they gathered to look at him. Title above display was transparent, behind which was a row of flashing lights.

Window in local store consisted of board painted red on which were mounted various devices used by criminals in jailbreaking and all surrounded with stills. Bars were put over entrance doors to theatres, necessitating patrons walking through cell.

Wire Steel Mills On "Magnificent Brute"

In order to stress the particular appeal of "Magnificent Brute" to the "steel" workers of Syracuse, N. Y., David Freeman, manager, and Joseph Ott, publicist of the Schine Eckel Theatre, arranged with the local Postal Telegraph office to send special wires to all the steel mills and metal fabricating plants. The wires were preceded by explanation telephone calls to the plant managers which assured their placement on the bulletin boards. Wire copy was: "Out of The Roaring Steel Furnaces Leaps This Blazing Drama of Untamable Men, 'Magnificent Brute,' with Victor McLaglen and Binnie Barnes—One of the Greatest Pictures of the Year!"

Columbus Papers Accord Liberal Space to Theatres

Picture Reviews Written by Editors Considered Accurate Guide for Patrons

by EDDIE MAYER
in Columbus

Columbus—capital of Ohio—the place where the state's legislative fabric is woven—a fabric too often inimical to the interests of the exhibitor—is located approximately in the center of the state. Although the focal point for a rich and fertile agricultural community, it compares very favorably with its sister cities in the matter of manufacturing and distribution. Among the more prominent commodities falling within these classifications are agricultural implements, airplane and automobile accessories, boots and shoes, brass and bronze products, chemicals, lumber and tobacco products, machine tools and patent medicines, in addition to sundry other articles of various descriptions which keep the wheels of industry turning. Products of the farm and field, too, find ready outlets here through well-maintained market places, commission houses and private enterprises, the agrarians, incidentally, contributing no small part to the sum total of theatre attendance.

Ranking third in size in the Buckeye State, with a constant population estimated at 300,000, exclusive of the vast army of out-of-town students attending the famed Ohio State University, the surrounding territory, both in the immediately contiguous suburbs and the more remote districts, provide a potential patronage draw of, roughly, one-third of the number of regular city inhabitants.

First-Run Houses Close Together

RKO and Loew's control the first run situation. The former has the Palace, a 3,000-seat house, the Majestic, with 1,000 seats, and the Grand, a 1,200-seater, all under control of Nat Holt, division manager, with headquarters at Cleveland. Loew's operate the Ohio, a 2,800-seat house, and the Broad, also with a seating capacity of 2,800, both under jurisdiction of W. A. Finney, with headquarters here, but whose territory extends to Kansas City and St. Louis, as also Dayton, Toledo and Akron in Ohio, and Indianapolis, Ind. The RKO Palace, managed by C. Harry Schreiber, who also is city manager, and Loew's Broad, with Frank Henson in the managerial seat, are located directly opposite each other on West Broad Street, a short block from High Street, which is the main thoroughfare, Loew's Ohio, in charge of Russell Bovim, likewise city manager, and the RKO Grand, with Charles "Buddy" Winthrop at the helm, are located almost side by side on East State Street, only a square away from the other two houses, and less than a block from High St. The RKO Majestic, of which W. Clifford Bozman is the skipper, and which, incidentally, has just added the title, "Columbus' Thrill Theatre" to the billing, is on High Street about midway between the two pair of houses mentioned.

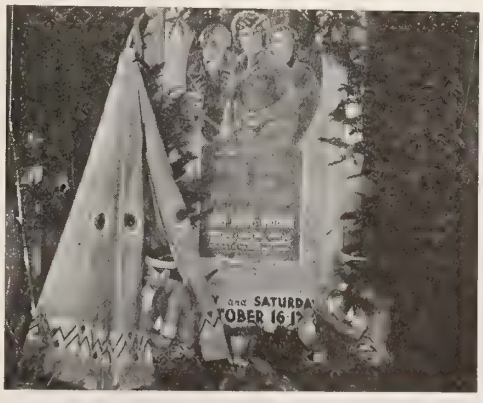
If it were distinguished for no other reason, Columbus may lay claim to fame for being one of the few if not the only city where newspaper editors themselves usually review pictures, often in the first person, singular. This, according to our correspondent, makes the reviews "appear more like a personal discussion, rather than a routine newspaper account."

The ingenuity of local theatremen in conceiving effective exploitations, the high standard of operation, are among other points covered in this article on theatre business in the Ohio capital which continues the Showman's Travelogue series now current in the Round Table pages.—A-MIKE

Thus the entire group of first run houses is virtually within a stone's throw of each other. This makes it particularly convenient for those patrons who are inclined to "shop" for their entertainment through the medium of stills in front of the theatre. Then, too, when one of the first runs happens to do an outstanding business, the other houses are more or less benefited by the public having been brought into the theatre district while they are movie-minded.

In this connection it is pertinent to note that Columbus is, perhaps, one of the worst overseated first run situations in the country. The combined seating capacity of the five first run houses, as noted, is approximately 12,000. This means an average of one seat for each 250 persons in the city's population. The RKO Grand is the latest addition to the national circuit control, having been acquired about a year ago, entirely remodeled following a disastrous fire which completely gutted the interior, and converted into a deluxe "streamlined" theatre—the first of its kind in this section. It formally opened last October.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"



ATMOSPHERIC DISPLAY. Tepee, campfire, foliage, spruce, balsam and Indian kids formed part of the attractive lobby display created by Lee Billings, Garrick, Virginia, Minn., for "Mohicans."

In the subsequent run setup, W. C. Chesbrough operates a chain of six houses in the downtown and neighborhood locations. These are the Grandview, Garden, Hudson, Alhambra, Northern and Empress. He also has three subsequent runs at Dayton, Ohio. J. Real Neth, who controlled the Grand at the time of the fire, is the operating head of the State, Clinton, Cameo and Eastern, while C. A. MacDonald has the Arlington, Southland and Thurmania, the first two being more in the deluxe category. There are also a few two-unit chains, in all, an aggregate of some 50 houses—more than the normal quota for a situation of this size.

Although no statistics, sufficiently revised to be currently applicable are on record as to the average wages paid the workers in the different crafts, or the percentage of skilled and unskilled labor, white collar workers, intellectuals, etc., the latest available data on population breakdown into racial divisions indicates, in round figures, roughly 245,000 native whites, 35,000 negroes, 1,700 foreign-born whites and 200 other nationalities. From the same source, considered authentic, it is learned that there are approximately 145,000 gainful workers and 6,000 illiterates, exclusive, naturally, of those confined in correctional institutions maintained by the state.

Matinee Business Light

The average first run admission is 30 cents for matinees, with a 40-cent rate at night, inclusive of the three per cent retail sales tax which exhibitors now are assessed on grosses under a revision of the law, effective Jan. 1, 1935, which changed the collection setup from the previous 10 per cent straight admission tax, with exemptions on admissions of 10 cents or less. Scales for the subsequent houses are more or less variable in the downtown, neighborhood and suburban sectors. They range from 10 to 25 cents. Some of the houses maintain a 10-cent rate at all times, Saturdays, Sundays and holidays included, while one of the subsequents, the Knickerbocker, downtown, plays several acts of vaudeville at some time during the week in addition to the regular picture program, within the price scale mentioned. Several houses, particularly those in the outlying districts, operate only in the evenings. Matinees, with possible exception of Saturdays, Sundays and holidays have not been justified by attendance.

Enrollment at the Ohio State University, which average range is from 10,000 to 14,000 during the regular winter term, with a sizeable attendance at the summer school, accounts for a considerable amount of theatre patronage. This, however, is not a constant flow, and, therefore, not a dependable factor in arranging bookings or anticipating attendance. Neth's State, strategically located in close proximity to the University campus, derives a goodly share of business from the student body, although other subsequents, as well as first runs, attract an appreciable following in proportion to the pictures offered.

Efficiently operated street railway systems, with a six-cent fare, believed to be the lowest of any city, considering the vast mileage involved, bus lines and a number of taxicab companies, with a large fleet of cars always available at reasonable rates, make downtown Columbus easily accessible. Interurban trolley cars, as well as intrastate bus service, provide transportation to and from the more remote suburban districts and outlying areas.

While it may be said that practically every average family in Columbus owns an automobile or has access to one, the tendency is to employ one of the aforesaid methods of public transportation to reach the downtown section to attend the theatres.

The parking situation, with restrictions and limitations perhaps the same, in effect, as obtains in other metropolitan centers, presents a problem always acute. Congestion in the business districts, with the usual inconveniences, annoyance and delay in readily finding a suitable parking space, makes garage parking almost a necessity for the length of time to see a show. However, garage parking is not, for divers reasons, always relished by the potential theatre patron. The question of parking at the neighborhood and suburban spots is rather negligible in comparison. Some few houses offer free parking space, but street parking usually is available in abundance. This is one of the factors that is tending to divert business from the downtown houses, especially in the evenings, except in such cases where an unusually outstanding picture might justify driving downtown, when use of the automobile is preferred to the street cars or bus.

Managers First to Respond

Managers are affiliated with various fraternal organizations, according to their personal preferences and inclinations. However, almost without exception, theatre men, park managers and radio attaches are actively identified with the Columbus Variety Club—Tent No. 2 in the formation of the national organization—where they are wont to foregather for an hour's congenial diversion and comradeship. However, be it said to the full credit of all theatre men in every branch of the industry, both independent and under circuit domination, that they are invariably the first to respond in both personal and professional capacities, to calls for help, or active participation in drives for relief or other humanitarian undertakings. For this they are noted. These activities, as well as other customs which reflect the human side of business, have made theatre men here well and favorably known to the public, either personally or by reputation.

Theatres specialize in the comfort and convenience of their patrons. This has become almost an obsession with some managers. The houses always are faultlessly clean, and particular attention is paid to ventilation, heating, air-conditioning, etc., where such latter system is installed—and it is installed in first runs, and some of the subsequent run houses. Keeping projection and sound up to the highest standard of efficiency is a creed with the majority of managers.

First Runs Advertise Heavily

The first run houses spend very considerable sums for newspaper advertising—probably more in the aggregate than the average city of similar size. The heaviest displays are generally used on Thursdays—the day before the programs change. These usually dominate the theatre pages, often making a carryover to the next page necessary for the readers and publicity material. Hand lettering and appropriate art are liberally used, and the layouts are, therefore, sufficiently conspicuous to attract immediate attention. Window cards are sparsely used. Advertising and publicity for the three RKO houses is prepared and handled by John L. Barcroft, local director, while Fred Ostrecher does a similar job here for Loew's. On days other than Thursdays, small advertisements, usually single column, are used, but since they are composed mostly of hand lettering and art instead of the cold, conventional printer's type, they at once "stand out from the crowd" on the theatre pages.

The subsequents do very little, if any, advertising through the week, unless it be for some very special occasion. On Sundays, however, they run rather large one and two-column straight-type display advertisements. These are more or less conventional in design, usually placed in juxtaposition on the page, thus resembling what an uninformed person might construe as "community" or "cooperative" advertising, which, as a matter of fact, it is not, excepting only in a series of ads of several houses in a given chain.

Newspaper tieups are frequently used, but street ballyhoo, save on very rare and infrequent occasions, is definitely out. However, the managers, especially in the first run houses, are particularly resourceful in creating and staging lobby displays and exploitation stunts to sell the show. Many of these are decidedly original and unique and are rewarded with considerable unsolicited newspaper space. In fact, a recent lobby display at the RKO Palace was used as the front cover design of a local weekly tabloid—the Sunday Star.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"

TRACTOR AT THEATRE. Caterpillar people cooperated with Vern Manning, Helstrom Theatre, McPherson, Kan., by stationing tractor in front of house during entire run of "Earthworm Tractors."

Harrold Eckert is theatre editor of the Ohio State Journal, morning sheet. Sam T. Wilson occupies a similar desk at the Columbus Dispatch, while Wm. C. Cunningham handles the Columbus Citizen, both afternoon papers. These writers accord liberal space to reviews on which a by-line is used, but never is a likeness of the writer used in the column. Syndicated columns with a Hollywood dateline and the customary by-line are used by all three papers, as also are paragraphs as fillers.

Reviews are nearly always written by the editors themselves, rather than delegating the task to a subordinate. The complete casts of pictures head the columns, and often the reviews are written in the first person, singular, which make them appear more like a personal discussion rather than a routine commercial newspaper account. Reviews go into considerable detail, and the editors are disposed to be very fair and impartial. The public has, therefore, come to place more than the ordinary amount of confidence in the reviews, which are considered an accurate guide for patrons. The editors, incidentally, are a congenial bunch, both among themselves and with the theatre managers.

The Columbus Dispatch, the only paper with a Sunday issue, normally devotes several pages, and sometimes an entire section to the theatres, punctuating the stories with special art. All three papers devote practically one whole page on Thursdays, and nearly a whole page on other days, to the theatre, playing up the current attractions from various angles. The papers also carry a "Theatre Guide" on the proper page. In this are listed all attractions at both the first runs and subsequents, with starting times of features at the first runs. The Sunday Star, weekly illustrated tabloid, which was mentioned above, published by the Ohio State Journal, featuring sensational stories and specializing in the customary lowdown on current scandal, has a theatre section in which first run attractions are given a generous pictorial and copy play. Stories and pictures of stars generally also are carried, together with Hollywood columns by syndicate writers.

Few Stage Shows Booked

Regular theatre opposition, competing for the amusement dollar, consists mainly of night clubs with rather elaborate floor shows, although recently the Hartman, originally a legitimate house, but subsequently playing vaudeville and pictures, has, under management of Robt. F. Boda, been featuring dramatic and musical road attractions, which

Huge Floral Float Promoted for "Swing"

Charlie Mensing of Warner's Empress in Owensboro, Ky., tied up with local florist who decorated a float which toured streets during "Swing Time" engagement. Float was attractively arranged with swing completely covered with flowers in which boy in top hat and tails was swinging a pretty girl a la Rogers. Three-piece colored band almost entirely hidden by flowers furnished the music and truck was well bannered plugging both florist and picture.

Small swings were erected in each school yard and in public parks, carrying large signs plugging date, beauty parlor devoted entire window to Rogers stills showing styles of hairdress with entire background of window a miniature stage showing Astaire and Rogers in spotlight effect.

Good sized gas-filled balloon was anchored to top of theatre and properly spotlighted from which was hanging a swing in which dummy dressed as Astaire swung through the air; balloon was lettered with title and credits. Smaller swings were suspended from under marquee and through cooperation of local dance hall, Charlie arranged one of the scenes from the picture, dressed couple as Rogers and Astaire and had them do the "Waltz in Swingtime."

King Given Top Presents So Simons Holds Wedding

Jack Promotes Headman of Tribe for Gypsy Stage Ceremony

by JACK A. SIMONS

Manager, Poli, Hartford, Conn.

The only stunt that I can point to with absolute certainty and say that it and it alone packed my theatre was a public wedding on my stage of a Gypsy prince and princess at the Capitol Theatre, Steubenville, O. It was in early June, business was not particularly good, romance was in the air, and all that sort of thing. I discovered that in previous years public stage weddings had worked out pretty well in the town, so I decided then and there to pull this gag out of the bag and put on it a somewhat different and novel dress. I knew that about 10 miles out of town a Gypsy band was encamped. So, one day, after placing my wallet and valuables in the safe, I drove out to the encampment. There I found, much to my amazement, in this band a real, honest-to-goodness princess. Luck was with me, too, in that the king of the tribe, one Jewish gentleman from the Bronx of New York, was visiting there that day. Hostile at first, the balance of a pack of cigarettes soon warmed him up. While the "brats" of the tribe were letting the air out of a rear tire of my car, I sat on a rug in a stuffy tent talking "turkey" to the holy of holies.

Makes Deal with the King

My proposition was to have two of his tribe folk joined into one on the stage of my theatre. And all he could say in Bronx Gypsy was: "How much." When he told me that the princess of the tribe, as fair a flower as ever swatted flies under a canvas tent, was about to take the plunge with a prince in a tribe in Chicago, I promised him a slice of the moon. He added, too, that he would first have to get the consent of the prince, although being king he could swing it.

The proposition he finally accepted was this: He would have first pick of all the presents we promised to promote for the couple. This, of course, was to be our little secret. The wedding was to be put on in true orthodox Gypsy style, with the full ceremonial. Another inducement made to the king was that the audience would be invited to the encampment for the feast and merry making after the stage ceremony. Thus was created a fertile field for palm reading, pocket-picking and the like.

Word soon got around town about the wedding, the first Gypsy wedding and of a real prince and princess ever put on on any stage, or, as I was told, ever in public. While the preparations were going on and interest was running high we were promoting scores of presents. Newspapers were carrying stories and pictures, and the wedding night was the talk of the town. Came then the wedding day and that afternoon the king walked into my office for his private share of the spoils. What he left for the bride and groom you could put in a mosquito's eye.

I picked the poorest night normally of the week for the occasion. I even promoted chickens, ducks and young suckling pigs for the gala wedding supper. Anybody and everybody wanted to give something—much to the liking of the king. Hours before the ceremony the theatre was packed and jammed and with hundreds turned away. The wedding ceremony, absolutely legitimate, was one of the most beautiful as well as impressive that either I or anybody in the audience had ever seen. Every ritual was carried out and was explained in English to the audience by an interpreter. A Gypsy band, members of the camp played; Gypsy girls danced, the mayor and other dignitaries were in attendance and all in all it was as colorful as it was beautiful and much more pleasing and enjoyable to the audience than any routine show they could have seen.

And it definitely packed my theatre.

Newspapers Aid On "Come and Get It"

A full-page cooperative ad from department store was promoted by Sam Gilman of Loew's as part of his campaign on "Come and Get It." The ad was run for two successive days in the News and Patriot. Gilman also plastered the title all over the classified pages of the Telegraph, inserting it under each heading, and stole a three-column promotional ad in the bargain. Both morning and evening papers carried the stunt.

As a ballyhoo, two men and a woman dressed in costumes of the picture covered the business section. One used a triangle to attract attention while the others distributed circulars to the large crowds that followed them. Several elaborate window displays were arranged with the leading merchants, in addition to cooperative ads.

Local radio stations went to town in a big way for the picture. Ed Wallace, United Artists representative, was interviewed over WKBO's "Do You Know" hour and got in some strong plugs with full billing.

PUBLIC PRICE-MINDED

form of entertainment has been conspicuous by its absence in late years. Pictures also are roadshown at the Hartman. Memorial Hall is used for symphony concerts, operas and similar artistic endeavors. These bookings, however, are sporadic, and, therefore, not constantly competitive. Summer opposition is offered by outdoor amusement parks and occasional night baseball games in addition, of course, to circuses and similar transient attractions. Olentangy Park in past seasons has featured outdoor movies, while nearby Buckeye Lake Park is on the picture circuit of the Alpine Theatre Co., Kingwood, W. Va.

Stage shows in picture houses, prevalent a few years ago, now are non-existent, save for an occasional booking at the RKO Palace, but these are few and far between. The demand for this type of entertainment appears to have definitely waned, but for what reason is anybody's guess.

Good Pictures Patronized

Whether Columbus is a good show town is a matter of divided opinion, depending on where you are sitting. It formerly was, yes. But with the large number of theatres now in existence it is something else again. It depends, too, on what elements are necessary to constitute a really good show town. However, regardless of what may be said pro or con, the one fact remains that when the product is right, Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public do not hesitate to unloosen their purse strings. Evidence of this fact is found in "San Francisco," which played three continuous weeks at Loew's Ohio—almost unheard of previously, and "The Green Pastures," which established a weekend record for grosses at the RKO Palace.

Again, there is no gainsaying the fact that patronage gradually is drifting from downtown to the subsequent run houses. Patrons are inclined to be somewhat price-minded, and many of them wait until the picture plays a second run. Besides, the majority of the subsequent runs play double features at some time or other during the week, and this also is a factor. A recent estimate by one who should know places the percentage of patronage division between downtown and subsequent run houses as 52 and 48, respectively.

Independent exhibitors wield considerable influence in matters of both policy and patronage. Nearly all of them are affiliated with the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio—an Allied affiliate—presided over by P. J. ("Pete") Wood, as secretary and business manager, who is a registered lobbyist, and very largely instrumental in obtaining passage of legislative measures when beneficial to the exhibitors' interests, and influencing defeat or modification of proposed or existing measures which might be detrimental to the exhibitors. Shrewd, keen and unusually alert, Wood is credited with having sponsored and fought to a successful conclusion many legislative acts which have smoothed the rough road of the exhibitor, who otherwise might have had to "fold his tent and quietly steal away to seek other fields to conquer."

Columbus is a part of the Cincinnati trade territory, and served by exchanges out of Cincinnati, with exception of Paramount, which maintains a branch here under management of M. R. Clark, affectionately known to the trade as "Duke," a veteran film man, and, incidentally president of the Columbus Variety Club for the past several years.

In Columbus the state censors pass upon what the public shall and shall not see, the surgeons of the celluloid functioning under the state department of education. The state director of education is ex-officio of the censor board. Few pictures are banned in their entirety, but if they are it is generally for good and sufficient reasons. However, the censor's edict always is subject to modification if and when the object of the ban is modified or eliminated by the producers. The fact that fewer eliminations are ordered now than formerly is evidence that the pictures submitted for review are of a much higher standard from the standpoint of morals.

In the history of the industry, Columbus boasts of what is believed to be the oldest theatre in Ohio, if not in this section of the country—namely, the Grand, as referred to earlier. Originally built as the Dramatic Temple more than 80 years ago—in 1855 to be exact—it later became the Anthenium, then the Grand Opera House, and subsequently the Grand, later assuming the circuit prefix. It was at this theatre that sound pictures had their Ohio premier in "The Jazz Singer."

Claims Oldest Exhibitor

In point of service, too, Columbus has the oldest exhibitor—Max Stearn—who originally introduced "moving pictures" in the city at the old Exhibit Theatre in a prominent downtown location. With ordinary kitchen chairs as seats, the programs of one and two-reel "features" lasted all of ten minutes. The admission was the then unheard of price of five cents. The Exhibit still is in operation, although Stearn now operates the Southern, another downtown subsequent run house.

Another point of special interest in Columbus is the Bexley Theatre, a pretentious suburban house recently opened by Theodore Lindenberg, inventor of the sound which bears his name. The theatre consists of two separate and distinct auditoriums, separated by a solid dividing wall, but served simultaneously by one projector.

Although irrelevant to this analysis, it might be said in passing that there is one "spot" where pictures are shown—where the audience is personally escorted into and out of the "auditorium" by a coterie of uniformed "ushers"—where a full house always is assured, even though not composed of the "best people." This is the Ohio State Penitentiary, where pictures are shown on regular schedules. This competition, however, is not causing any concern to the exhibitors.

Newspaper Contest Sells "Come and Get It"

The News-Post six-day contest on Frances Farmer's matrimonial problems, with a two-column cut each day, was one of the high lights of Lou Brown's campaign on "Come and Get It" at Loew's, Baltimore, Md.

Brown made an effective three-way tieup with Castleberg's Jewelry Store, Station WCAO and the theatre for a "man-on-the-street" broadcast which was held the night before the opening. A tremendous crowd assembled in front of the theatre for the stunt and passes were distributed.

Another stunt was the amateur photography show which is an annual event there. More than 300 drug stores used elaborate window displays giving the picture and show full billing. Brown also arranged with the Hub Department Store to run an Edward Arnold "double" contest, advertising the fact with the newspapers as well as window displays. In addition Lou planted a 15-minute song-guessing contest over WEBR.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"

Caldwell's Novel Display

Accompanying photo shows 12 ft. by 15 ft. gold, silver and blue pebbled paper shadow box used by Wally Caldwell, Loew's Valentine, Toledo, Ohio, to announce new season product. Automatic machine in large center star contains 24 cards (street car size) which change every 10 seconds revealing titles and stars of forthcoming productions. Display is spotted in lobby and Caldwell reports it a sure attention-getter.

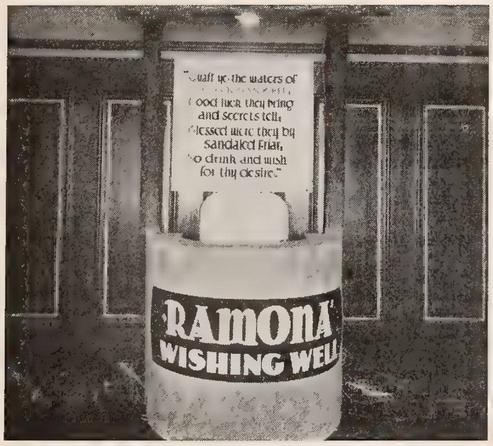
MORE ON CHRISTMAS



Silver's "Romona" Wishing Well

Silver Ties "Ramona" To Theatre Anniversary

Nat Silver, Strand Theatre, Lowell, Mass., tied his theatre's 19th anniversary to "Ramona," one of his stunts being a wishing well which was used in the inner foyer built around the drinking fountain (see photo).

Entire top of marquee was covered with gaily colored pennants and oversized candles with electric light bulbs in top. Extra publicity was garnered by attendance of local orphans and Nat invited one of the locals to act as guest cashier opening night; woman had served as one of the flower girls 19 years previous when the theatre first opened its doors.

Local baker contributed birthday cake with tickets to those guessing its weight, and through tieup with contributing merchant, bar was erected in lobby and coffee served to patrons. Papers came through with cut and two-column story of Nat's theatrical background and department store put on a fashion show at theatre. Congratulatory wires received from various stars were received, special floral decorations were promoted for lobby and to top off the celebration, Mayor Dewey Archambault spoke.

First Canned Goods Matinee

First "canned" campaign reported to this department was B. B. Hamilton's at the Palace, Norwich, Conn., with 1,700 youngsters admitted in exchange for cans of food at Hamilton's Thanksgiving party.

Newspaper under two-column head ran long story of the show and program featured a safety address by Chief Taft of the local fire department, cautioning kiddies against dodging cars, riding bikes in streets, etc.

Hamilton's Thanksgiving Canned Goods Collection

In addition to the many campaigns listed last week and contributed by members on their activities for pre-Christmas and holiday exploitation, the following reports from Round Tablers Lester Stallman, Lew Chatham, Floyd Nessel and Morris Rosenthal which arrived too late for publication last week are herewith listed.

The most popular newsboys in Bethlehem, Pa., are to be rewarded with suitable promoted prizes from the stage of the College Theatre on Christmas Eve, according to the tiein made by Manager Lester Stallman and local daily. Voting blanks will be carried in the paper with votes cast only at the theatre. On Wednesday night preceding Christmas, pony and police pup giveaway are set. Leading stores are tied in to run co-op copy on early shopping and theatre on bags and parcels.

Unique lobby display installed after Thanksgiving is in form of an animation showing youngsters going downhill on sleds and another group walking uphill with their sleds. Automatic waterfall and all the ice and snow trimmings are built in, the display planted beneath a Christmas tree decorated in modernistic style and illuminated with colored spots.

On Christmas morning, boys will distribute red and green cards house-to-house, copy reading: "P. S. I had to come back to tell you of the excellent picture at the College," etc., and signed 'Santa Claus.'" Stallman is also presenting dancing school classes during matinees of Christmas Week when extra subjects suitable for children will be included in the programs.

Eight Public Schools Compete In Chatham's Carols Contest

Listed as his most successful holiday idea used last year was Lew Chatham's public school carols contest at the Sooner, Norman, Okla., in which pupils of eight grade schools competed in singing Christmas carols from the stage. One group appeared each night up until three days before Christmas with city music teachers acting as judges. Prizes were free shows to the winning group, show selected by parents and teachers. Contest brought many parents, relatives and friends to the box office, says Lew, the extra effort bringing in a lot of fat dividends.

Another good school hookup worked last year was citywide contest tied in with local paper for the best essay on "What Christmas Means to Me." Cash and guest tickets were awarded and the rules of the contest stressed the spiritual side of Yuletide over the commercial influence, and still another hookup in the same direction is Chatham's annual contest for children in the first to sixth grades on a Christmas color contest. Entrants make up drawings and cutouts of any Yuletide subject with pass coupon books for prizes. Newspaper tiein brings the necessary publicity.

Special Christmas Prevue put on with cooperation of 20 leading merchants is effected in form of a lucky number party with stores and theatre distributing numbered coupons with purchases and admissions. Valuable prizes are selected and the stunt is plugged in lobby, on screen, in theatre and store ads, in store windows. Strong picture is chosen for the prevue and Christmas Day, the picture strongly advertised with National Screen trailers, window cards, heralds, newspaper ads, etc.

Elaborate decoration inside and cut is also created and special display for the marquee will be an animation of the "Star of Bethlehem" in color, with the three wise men and camel on an endless belt and the star hooked to a flasher. House projectionists and display artists put this together and Chatham reports it the city's most attractive showing.

In conjunction with the leading service clubs, special matinees are set for the underprivileged and county crippled children's clinic show arranged with the chamber of commerce. Food matinees, holiday cuts in all ads, are other ideas and Chatham also makes a strong drive to sell coupon books for gifts with prizes to member of the staff for highest total of sales.

Pre-Christmas Gift Nights Featured by Floyd Nessel

Started on Dec. 2nd, a series of gift nights is now in progress for patrons at the Jefferson and Lincoln Theatres, in Goshen, Ind. Each Wednesday night, for four weeks, F. D. Nessel, city manager, has arranged for worthwhile giveaways, such as electric coffee makers, pen sets, tons of coal, radios, etc., with the capital prizes, an electric or gas cooking range given away on the last gift night. Prizes are displayed in lobby with plenty of publicity by theatre and cooperating merchants in local and out-of-town papers. Nessel credits the idea for last year's big weeks before Christmas and expects to repeat this month.

Toy and food matinees are also arranged in the usual manner with aid of local clubs, newspapers, etc., and a checking service for shoppers is also being plugged. Most important are good pictures during the preholiday weeks, and Nessel reports strong support in this direction from the circuit's booking office.

Rosenthal Borrows Store Clowns To Appear At Christmas Matinee

For his matinee on Saturday before Christmas, at the Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn., Morris Rosenthal will have Santa Claus in the lobby to distribute candy to the children and is promoting a lot of large mechanical toys for lobby display. As one of leading stores is arranging for clowns to entertain in the toy department, Rosy is planning to borrow the services of these fun-makers for the occasion. For street bally, a stilt-walking Santa is also contemplated.

Lobby is to be decorated elaborately with fireplace interior and large trees. House artist is now working on an exterior Christmas scene display with falling snow from snow-bag and miniature figures on wheels riding around to add life to the display.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

is the director of exploitation for the Herbert Wilcox Productions in London and started his career as service boy at the age of 18 at the Paramount in Cardiff. From that spot he was promoted to chief receptionist, assistant and then manager of the house. At the age of 23, Graham became house manager of the Plaża, the youngest house manager ever to control Paramount's London key house and general manager of some of the other Paramount Theatres throughout Great Britain. After a few appointments at other theatres, Bob became director of exploitation with British & Dominion Films Corporation and then to his present job. Graham had the first British broadcast studio attached to a theatre in England, from the Futurist in Birmingham and programs were regularly transmitted.

is not entirely a stranger to our section, joining from Auckland Cinemas, Ltd., in Auckland, New Zealand, where we anticipate frequent and lengthy reports of his theatre activities so that they may be detailed in our pages for the benefit of his brother showmen on this side.

manages the Schine Holland Theatre in Bellefontaine, Ohio, and since we haven't been hearing so much from that sector we're hoping that this new member will start the ball a rolling and send along some campaigns on his recent activities.

manages the Granada Theatre in New Prague, Minn., has been in showbusiness six years, serving as usher, advertising manager and exploitation and publicity director along with having taught school the first two of the six years. Al was assistant manager under Jack Wright, whose recently acquired managership of the New Auditorium Theatre at Red Wing, Minn., has promoted him to his present job at the Granada.

is the assistant manager of the Regent Theatre in Kearny, N. J., and with him and Norman signed up we are expecting to have plenty to report from Kearny. Lorenz has worked on a newspaper, been a farm hand and has been in showbusiness about a year, but while he admits to being a babe in experience, will gain invaluble aid from our section.

in Glendale, Ariz., manages the Glendale Theatre; entered showbusiness in 1928 for Warner's in Hollywood as usher, later becoming chief of service. After a time he worked for Milt Arthur at the Fox Fullerton and was then transferred to Long Beach to the West Coast Circuit and then promoted to assistant manager of the Strand, in San Pedro. Wise remained there until 1935, at which time he opened the Glendale.

Above head of William Powell was created by W. A. Sandefur, Leeds Theatre, Winchester, Ky., and done in burnt umber, sepia and orange with crimson on the cheeks and lips and pale green highlights. Background was mottled with the full pallette.

manages the Jefferson Theatre in Ft. Wayne, Ind., for the Quimby Theatre circuit and has been in showbusiness for the past 29 years, but as a vaudeville actor and under the tutelage of Manny Marcus, general manager, was given his first managerial job at the Jefferson. Roy reads our pages religiously and promises to contribute worthy and helpful ideas. That's the spirit, Gordon, send them along and we'll do the rest.

is the assistant manager of Warner's Strand Theatre in York, Pa., and since signing up we haven't heard from him. Your responsibility to your club just starts when you sign on the dotted line, Gil, so how about some accounts of your recent doings at the Strand?

is in Bazine, Kan., managing the Jewel Theatre for the Larned Theatres, and since he frankly admits that our pages have proved helpful to him for some time, we're hoping he'll show his reciprocity to his brother members by telling us what he does to keen the shekels coming into the box-office.

is the assistant at Schine's Holland in Bellefontaine, Ohio, working for Lazar. Al started as bill boy, later bill poster, then usher, doorman and now assistant. Certainly between him and his boss there's no reason why we won't be detailing accounts in our pages.

manages the State Theatre in Sterling, Ill., having started in as usher at the Lyric in Morrison, Ill., staying there until he went to the Capitol where he was promoted to assistant. From there we find Dillenbeck managing the Butterfield Majestic Theatre in Ann Arbor, Mich., later at the Butterfield Liberty in Benton and from that job to his present assignment.

is the assistant manager of Famous Players Metropolitan Theatre in Winnipeg, Canada, working under Frank Willis another member of the Club. With Famous Players almost solidly signed up as members and the Metropolitan completely represented now on our rolls, we are sure there will be many accounts of what's going on up that way to report soon.

at Loew's Orpheum, New York City, is the assistant manager, starting as usher, reel boy, doorman, general utility and publicity man. Leon was formerly assistant at Loew's Woodside before assuming his present job, and since he is close enough to Club headquarters, we hope he'll stop off on his next trip down this way to get acquainted.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Claremore, Oklahoma

Dear Herald:

We don't know that it will be of any particular interest to the reader to know that we are in Claremore, Oklahoma, the home of the late Will Rogers, in fact they probably won't give a darn where we are, but anyhow we are in Claremore at a hotel named Will Rogers Hotel, and it is a good one too. Just about everything down here is named after Will Rogers. Federal highway No. 66, which runs from Los Angeles to Chicago, runs through Claremore. We don't know what they call it in other states but here in Oklahoma they call it the "Will Rogers Highway," and it is so designated on the road map.

We passed through a little town near Claremore and saw a miniature house and a sign reading "The birth place of Will Rogers." The name of the town was "Oologah," and the reader can pronounce it any way he pleases, we offer no instructions.

F. H. Jackson operates two theatres here for the Griffith Amusement Company of Oklahoma City. We called on Mr. Jackson and he curbed a desire to shoot us. He said that when we called on him a couple of years ago we reported that he had a new baby at his house and that he got letters and telegrams from the boys all over the state sending congratulations on his new baby but that we got our report mixed with the report of the boy at Vinita as he was the one who had a new baby, and so we hasten to correct it and say that Mr. Jackson didn't have a new baby, but then no knowing what will happen. Anyhow, we had a nice visit with him just as we always did.

When we called to see Mr. De Shazo of the Rex theatre at Nowata he was out playing golf and we had to wait for him to come back. We were invited in his home to wait for him and we had a very delightful visit with Mrs. De Shazo. She said that she and Mr. De Shazo got a great kick out of what we said in our colyum some years ago when we were in a cafe up in South Dakota and the girl brought us a dish of carrots. We don't remember what it was we said and we didn't know that we ever said anything funny, but we remember that when the waitress brought us a dish of carrots we looked up and said "Oh, you have sold your cow, have you?" and she replied "What do you mean, sold my cow?" and we replied, "Well, we presume you have sold her, you brought us her feed."

You know we are not crazy about carrots. Veterinaries say they are awfully good for cows and some doctors say they are good for people, and probably they are, but we are going to let the people and cows who like 'em eat 'em. You know that almost everyone likes eggs and oysters, and they are probably good, but to us they are about the two nastiest things to eat there are. All right, you eat 'em, we'll take huckelberry pie for ours. But then this is going off on a tangent. What we wanted to say was that we enjoyed our visit with Mr. and Mrs. De Shazo immensely, and we hope to go back there and visit them again sometime.

Over at Minneapolis, Kansas, we called on Mr. and Mrs. Musgrave, who operate the Ritz theatre. When we drove up in front of the Ritz we saw them looking out of the box office window and they were laughing, and we don't know yet whether they were laughing at us or April Shower. If they were laughing at April Shower we'd get awfully sore about it, but anyhow, we had a delightful visit with them and also a check for a renewal of their subscription to the HERALD, and that helped a whole lot.

They say there are three or four ways to skin a cat. Well maybe there are, but we wish someone would try a couple of 'em on a big Tom that has been holding an argument with another one under our window all night. We never shot at a cat in our life and missed him.

W. H. Williams has been operating the Rialto at Tonkawa for sometime without the HERALD. We told him he shouldn't try to do it and he agreed with us. We wish all the other boys would act that way with us. We are the easiest guy to agree with on earth.

J. S. Bonner operates the Gray's theatre at Enid. J. S. says we called on him once at Abaline and again in Sherman, Texas, and that he was glad to know that we were still running at large. Yes, we are, but we are keeping our movements under cover as much as we can. J. S. wanted the HERALD and he is going to get it. We wanted to see Mr. Blair, a brother of our old friend Sam Blair at Belleville, Kansas, but we couldn't find him.

Clinton, Oklahoma is away out in the western part of the state close to the "dust bowl," and out there is probably where that red dust came from that the boys got back east the past summer, but C. W. Gutherie kept the Ritz theatre open regardless of the dust. That's the way it is with these Oklahoma boys, you couldn't whip 'em out with an earthquake. C. W. is a mighty swell guy, and you can take it from us without any further proof.

Wesley Ruggles is redecorating his Broadway theatre at Anadarko. It looks like it would be a pretty swell house when he gets through with it. Wesley is going to get the HERALD to give him some additional pointers, just like all the other boys ought to do.

R. M. Rector of the Columbia theatre in the same town didn't want his subscription to expire, and so we consented to look after it for him. We're awfully accomodating that way.

These Oklahoma people are known as "Sooners." We understand that they got that name because some folks settled here while it was known as the "Indian Territory" and before Bill Hart made "Tumbleweeds" and Richard Dix made "Cimarron," all three of which helped to make the picture industry.

Up in Kansas they are known as "Jayhawkers." Jevver see a "Jayhawk"? A Jayhawk looks like a bird that is a cross between a crow and a pelican and its feet run mostly to beak. He's got a beak like a kingfisher.

The Nebraskans are known as "Bug Eaters" although we don't know what a bug tastes like. We expect to go down to Texas in a couple of weeks and call on the "Longhorns" and we hope to find them like we did once when we wrote—

Everything's fine here in Texas
From Brownsville clear up to Colexus,
The Longhorns are putting on fat in the pens
The roosters are in soft with the Plymouth Rock hens
And the girls have shed their's and are now wearing men's
So everything's fine here in Texas.

There are some more boys we'd like to mention but our space is limited, so they will have to go until another time. Won't that be a relief though?

"OH, SUSANNA!"

Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, "Champion," The Light Crust Doughboys—Just finished "Oh Susanna!"; largest business in four years. No telling what it would have done on Saturday. Tell Gene Autry hurry and make another.—J. V. Carter, Jr., Majestic Theatre, Comanche, Texas.

Ed. note: Gene has made another, several others in fact—"Ride, Ranger, Ride," "The Big Show" (Texas Centennial special), "The Old Corral," "Round-up Time in Texas." Three more, including a second special, to follow.

CAROLINA PLAYHOUSES, INC., AYDEN, NORTH CAROLINA.

When something good in motion pictures comes our way, I will take enough time to express my appreciation for its value.

There is probably no star more popular for small towns with a big outlying rural section than Gene Autry. It is my serious belief that Gene Autry's music is the thing that is most vital in his popularity.

William S. Hart was admired by thousands for his fast gun-play. Gene Autry is loved by theatre patrons for his music. He is handsome on the screen and everything he does is of high entertainment value. I am glad to take this little time to tell you that my firm opinion is that Gene Autry is the strongest bet you have, or will find in several years to come.—W. C. Ormond.

COLONIAL THEATRE, KANNAPOLIS, N. C.

As box office attractions I find that the Gene Autry westerns are so far above the other action pictures that there is no comparison between them. My box office receipts on Autry pictures are on a par with the biggest box office pictures on the market. They certainly are worth praising.—W. W. Powell.

NILES THEATRE, ANAMOSA, IOWA

We played "Oh Susanna!" on a Sunday and Monday to an excellent business. In fact it out-grossed three major features played on Sunday and Monday about the same time. In fact, to be perfectly frank with you, it ranked right along with "San Francisco" and "Rhythm on the Range" in receipts. This is a great picture for rural audiences and young folks and if our brothers will check their houses closely, they will find that this is where they get their business on Sunday.

We understand that some of the exhibitors say that we are crazy to play westerns on Sunday, that their people would run them out of town. You can tell them for us that they lack guts, and if they wish to make some real money, to play one of the Gene Autry Singing Westerns on Sunday with the right kind of shorts and they will build up something for the future.—Clifford L. Niles.

IN these, the exhibitors' own words, the theatremen of the nation are given first-hand information on the foremost western star in the business today. The lowdown on box office performance by the men behind the box offices. It is a service for exhibitors by exhibitors. Address all communications to—

Autry is head and shoulders above the other singing western stars as far as my audiences are concerned. Continue to give him the right material and good direction as well as supporting casts and I'm sure that he will continue to be the box office tonic that he is. And, boy, I think I know my westerns.—P. A. Boone.

"OH, SUSANNA!"

The best Autry to date. Business above average. Autry building all the time. We have established a good following for the Autry pictures.—C. J. Schultz, Orpheum Theatre, Tremonton, Utah.

ANSONIA THEATRE, WADESBORO, N. C.

Gene Autry for my town is the best western star on the screen today.—L. L. Drake.

THE BIG SHOW

A Western that goes behind the scenes for many novel and amusing situations, an 'opera' that is replete with plenty of music and singing, and a moving and spectacularly exciting script, this production is of a fine, pleasing grade. Smiley Burnette lends plenty of comedy interest. For the most part the action is on the site of the Centennial, and this should prove an audience draw.—Motion Picture Daily. Pardon us for sneaking in the comments of an exhibitors' paper.

Vol. 125, No. 11

December 12, 1936

THE NATION RE-MAPPED

THE motion picture industry is likely to find itself very much a party at interest in the proposal for Federal incorporation of all organizations engaged in interstate business. Most of the theatre circuits and all producers and distributors serve territories that are geographically, not politically, bounded and with boundaries that rarely or never coincide with state lines.

The Federal chartering of businesses just now gets added attention by the recently gained support of Senator Borah. Friends of the movement are hastening to urge that it is not at all to be confused with the Federal licensing scheme contemplated by the bill introduced in the last Congress by Senator Joseph C. Mahoney. However, with the trends what they are in the manifestations emanating from Washington, the distance from charter to license does not appear so great.

Meanwhile the current issues and discussion bring forceful realization that the industrial and social developments of the era have created communities based on relations and propinquities of time and space that have nothing at all to do with the works of the surveyors and boundary commissions of the days when we traveled by stage and horseback.

A VERY fairly accurate map of the present adjustment of the population areas of the United States into what may be called "business states" is presented by the pattern of the motion picture's exchange system with the screen's key cities as the capitals.

Another mapping, which would be found to contain many closely identical lines, could be had by surveying the effective boundaries of circulation of the larger newspapers. Such titles as The Kansas City Star, The Chicago Tribune and The New York Times immediately bring visualization of defined areas, great states within the nation and widely overspreading political boundaries, just as do the motion picture distributor place names like Boston, Los Angeles or Denver mean regions not even remotely related to the shape of the states in which they are located.

It would seem that the ancient, honorable and well intended doctrine of state's rights, at least as it pertains to how and with whom we do business, is up against a set of circumstances which have been growing more and more complex with the development of communication and transportation. Whatever this does to other business it will also do to the motion picture.

IT is interesting to recall, too, that this unofficial but economically determined set of business states was first and most clearly defined by the experiences and evolutions of the motion picture distribution system, first apparent and effective some twenty-seven years ago. It was then that the Motion Picture Patents Company, having surrounded the industry, set about making it efficient and through its General Film Company distributing arm eliminating wasteful confusions and duplications of distribution which contributed only to the receipts of the express companies. Generally the exchange boundaries were determined by a sort of rule of thumb calculation in balancing the cost of time for a print in transit against film rentals.

Once upon a time, or about twenty years ago, one distributor operated sixty-eight exchanges in the United States and Canada. Now something less than half that many seems to be ample.

Meanwhile the political trend toward a new order of Federal attention to business and the obliteration of state lines is not necessarily to be considered integral or identical with the economic remapping of the nation by business, or indicative of any inherent sympathy between the movements. Here, and the world over, governments are having a time of it seeking to relate themselves to a world made or being made over by the new technologies. Broadly it may be observed that business is more immediately responsive and elastic than government.

The motion picture industry, which has recently been engaged in an extensive and intensive process of social adjustment, will, in this connection, note a certain cogency in the remarks of Mr. James M. Landis, of the Federal Securities and Exchange commission, in Augusta the other day when he urged a convention of investment bankers to consider that "self-regulation" would be their most effective response to the significances of the last national election.

A RECENT excursion into newspaper files of two decades ago discovered a great pother of attention by the press, through the instrument of city-beautiful movements, addressed at the "billboard menace," a competitive advertising medium. That reminds one that only the other day it was radio.

This Week

Chance Games Setback

The most severe setback suffered to date by Bank Night came this week in a ruling by a United States circuit court of appeals in Denver that the game, owned by Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., is so closely akin to a lottery that it is not entitled to copyright protection. More than 5,000 theatres in the country pay from $5 to $50 a week for licenses from Affiliated to use Bank Night.

The decision is quoted on page 13.

Earnings Increase

Motion picture earnings continue to mount substantially, as reflected this week in seven dividend declarations, five bonus payments and an estimated 30 per cent appreciation in the valuation of motion picture stocks.

Financial news of the week also includes an analysis of the Paramount structure, as reported on page 43.

Plane Economy

Use of planes for transporting players to and from remote and widely separated locations has been demonstrated as a practical economy by George Hirliman in production of "Park Avenue Logger."

Gus McCarthy's "Hollywood Scene" appears on page 35.

Newsreels and England

American newsreels this week placed before the public the first motion pictures of King Edward VIII and Mrs. Wallis Simpson of Baltimore, just as the political crisis brought about by the friendship threatened to come to a climax in London. The subject was treated in a dignified manner by all the newsreels. Many of the pictures were taken months ago.

The story is on page 15.

Honoring Zukor

More than 600 executives and members of the motion picture industry gathered in Hollywood's Trocadero last Thursday night to assist the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in honoring Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of Paramount, who is celebrating his 25th year in the industry. At the same time, Neil F. Agnew, vice-president and general sales manager of Paramount, announced in New York that silver medals would be presented to the 204 exhibitors who played "Queen Elizabeth," starring Sarah Bernhardt, in 1912 and 1913, the first picture of feature length sponsored by Mr. Zukor.

Details of the Silver Jubilee celebration are on page 41.

Exhibitors Elect

The annual meetings of two exhibitor organizations this week resulted in the reelection of the presiding officers. Charles Picquet was again chosen to head the North and South Carolina Motion Picture Theatre Owners, and Sam Pinanski was again elected president of Allied of Massachusetts, MPTOA affiliate.

Details of these and other exhibitor organization activities are found on page 16.

Self-Regulation

United Artists this week became the third major distributor to accept trade practice proposals submitted by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. The company will eliminate recording and score charges and will cooperate in the establishment of local conciliation boards for the settlement of disputes. Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, announced that he will convene his trade practice committee in January to discuss further concessions with distributors and to formulate plans for the local boards.

The present status of the MPTOA program is outlined on page 23.

New Chicago Outlet

Exchange managers in Chicago would welcome a decision by the Board of Education December 16th to lease the McVickers theatre in the Loop to Balaban and Katz. They point to the fact that many pictures cannot get an opening in downtown Chicago until 90 days after national release date.

Developments of the week in the Chicago sector are detailed on page 76.

Profit in Experience

Up may go the salary list but down comes production overhead when name contract players are assigned to low-budget productions, according to current Hollywood production philosophy.

How this can be is explained on page 35.

Hays Returns

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers of America, Inc., returned to New York this week from a European trip, saying that he was "immensely pleased" with the accord reached with the Italian government concerning the withdrawal of American film revenue from Italy. Mr. Hays refused to comment on his conferences with the Italian officials, saying the details would have to come from the State Department or from Rome. He also announced that no successor to John Boettiger, his assistant, who resigned last week, would be named.

Three Re-creations

Three productions figuring in the studio news of the week are re-creations of pictures made a short generation ago and approved by box offices of that era. They are "Seventh Heaven," "Clarence" and "Quality Street."

Details pertaining to these and other pictures are given on page 35.

Step toward Television

Television broadcasts on a commercial scale took another step toward actuality late last week with the demonstration, before an audience composed chiefly of representatives of the press, of the coaxial cable recently constructed between New York and Philadelphia. Dr. Frank A. Jewett, president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, conducted the experiment and said "This is not a television circuit as we are demonstrating it, but it is a necessary step toward television." Other developments in the visual broadcasting field also took place in England and concerned the Baird Television Company.

Detailed account of the demonstration and other happenings are found in the story on page 61.

Sales Gatherings

Mid-winter sales meetings by Columbia Pictures and Universal Pictures were concluded this week and Paramount and General Pictures announced they would hold similar meetings next month in Hollywood and Chicago respectively.

Slow Unionization

A gradual process of unionization rather than an intensive drive for a closed shop in the motion picture industry is the plan of the Screen Actors' Guild, according to Kenneth Thomson, secretary of the organization. In Hollywood after attending the American Federation of Labor convention in Florida and after conferring with theatrical labor leaders in New York, Mr. Thomson said that no business directly affecting labor in motion pictures was considered but that valuable contacts had been made.

WPA Competition

The concentrated attack of all Broadway theatre interests is suggested as the only means of defeating the competition of the WPA Federal Theatre Project.

The idea is explained on page 17.

Aylesworth on Education

M. H. Aylesworth, chairman of RKO and former president of the National Broadcasting Company, pointed out that educators must cooperate with the radio broadcasting and motion picture industries in order to utilize fully these entertainment mediums as adjuncts to instruction, in a speech at Princeton University this week.

The film executive's views are quoted on page 26.

For British Juveniles

Five hundred British theatres are providing children's matinees weekly for 600,000 youngsters, but by trebling the number of houses participating in the plan a million dollars of new revenue could be realized annually, raising the income from this source alone to $5,000,000 a year, Simon Rowson said at a London conference called by the British Film Institute.

Briskin on Radio

Samuel Briskin, RKO vice-president in charge of production, believes that a careful and exhaustive survey of the effects, good or bad, of radio broadcasts by motion picture stars is the greatest need of the moment in connection with that problem. Such a survey is needed, he said, before producers can form any policy toward the continuance or the control of such radio appearances.

An interview with Mr. Briskin is reported on page 26.

Dutch Protest Taxes

Theatre owners in Haarlem, Holland, threaten to close their theatres if the proposed increase in admission taxes from 20 to 25 per cent goes into effect. The Dutch Motion Picture Federation has been asked to mediate between the theatre owners and the municipality.

This and other news of Holland will be found on page 70.

Readjustment in Vienna

Austro-German negotiations looking toward readjustment of regulations governing film imports have brought about a meeting in Vienna of American distributor representatives at which were discussed three methods of offsetting possible resultant inroads upon American revenues.

A resume of the situation and a presentation of the plans discussed are given on page 60.

Color in Germany

Opticolor, color process developed by German technicians, will not be in general use for some time in German theatres because of the cost involved for new equipment, says a report from R. M. Stephenson, United States trade commissioner in Berlin, to the Department of Commerce. Adoption of the process for general use would entail expenditure of approximately 17,586,000 reichmarks by theatre owners, the report estimates.

See page 46.

Kiss Censor Dies

The man credited with having limited screen kisses to three feet of film in the state of Pennsylvania, died on Wednesday in Philadelphia. He was Dr. Ellis Paxon Oberholtzer, distinguished historian and author, who, as a member of the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors from 1915 to 1921 was responsible for ruling the "clinch kiss" out of motion pictures shown in that state.

Dr. Oberholtzer, known throughout the industry for his strict decisions in ordering eliminations, dropped dead as he entered a library in Philadelphia. He was 68 years old. A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, he had studied in Berlin, Paris, Heidelberg and Vienna. Among his numerous books was "The Morals of the Movies."

French Copyright Law

Under a proposed law now being considered by the French Government the rights given to an author under a copyright are so broad that it may be impossible for producers to make enforceable exclusive contracts for production of any work by a French writer. The bill, if approved, may prevent the entrance of the United States into the International Copyright Convention.

The wide difference between the new law and the generally accepted conception of a copyright is explained on page 28.

Up to the Ostrers

Unless the Ostrer Brothers can deliver to John Maxwell, head of British International Pictures, the 5,100 "A" or voting shares of Metropolis and Bradford Trust, holding company which controls 57 per cent of Gaumont British, the deal for the purchase by Mr. Maxwell of G-B control will collapse, it was indicated Tuesday in London.

Studying the Screen

The motion picture is gaining considerable attention from educators as a subject of study in itself, apart from its value as a tool for the use of teachers in the field of visual education.

This story is on page 57.

Berry Picking

Proposals by industry and labor for a new definition of interstate commerce under which the Federal Government would be authorized to regulate hours, wages and conditions of labor, were to be the chief business to be discussed at the meeting of the National Council for Industrial Cooperation, called this week in Washington by Major George L. Berry.

An account of the meeting is on page 66.

DOES COLLEGE PAY? Robert Whitney (right), graduate of the University of California, believes it does. He gave up psychiatry to appear on the stage opposite Katherine Cornell and Universal Pictures has signed him to a contract. His first film will be "She's Dangerous."

YES, THIS IS PARIS. Edward G. Robinson, Warner Brothers First National star, is seen with Mrs. Robinson as entertained by the press. The jovial journalist second from Mrs. Robinson's left is Mons. Pierre Autre, staff correspondent in the French capital for Quigley Publications and himself active in theatre management.

IN BUENOS AIRES. Arthur W. Kelly, United Artists vice-president and general foreign sales manager, was greeted by representatives of the South American press on his arrival in Buenos Aires in the interests of his company. Shown are South American journalists and members of the United Artists organization at one of the receptions which were given during the executive's visit.

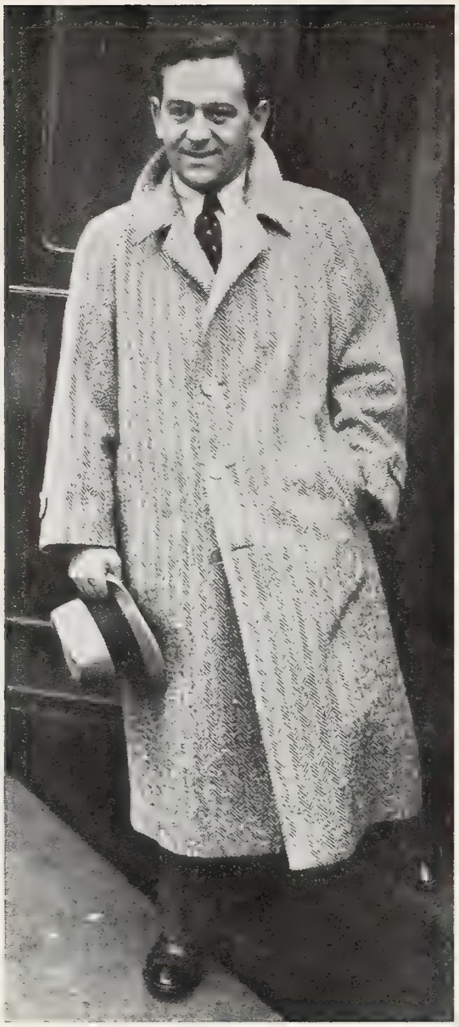
AT OPENING. Burgess Meredith and Margo, stars of the stage play and the RKO-Radio film version of "Winterset," by Maxwell Anderson, attend the premiere at Radio City Music Hall.

PAPERS OF IMPORT. Edward Elien, London, England, Al Friedlander, president of Fortune Film corporation, Friedrich Feber, composer, director and producer of "The Robber Symphony," and J. K. Chapman, vice-president of Fortune Film corporation, are shown at signature ceremonies attending consummation of a contract for U. S. distribution.

TRY THIS ON YOUR MARQUEE. The name of the young lady on the left is Aulikki Ratawaara and she has been given a long term contract to appear in Gaumont-British productions. She is from Finland, where she starred in opera in such fashion as to draw studio attention.

AMPA RESUMES. The newly revived Association of Motion Picture Advertisers held its first open luncheon meeting of the season at the Edison Hotel, New York, last week, with President Gordon S. White presiding, Jay C. Flippen serving as master of ceremonies, and with Margo and Bobby Breen, stars of RKO-Radio pictures, as guests of the session. District Attorney W. C. Dodge was speaker.

FELICITATIONS. Deanna Durbin, who will make her film debut in "Three Smart Girls," Universal, celebrated her fourteenth birthday in New York last week, and expressed a wish to meet Mayor Fiorella La Guardia, who welcomed her to his office and conveyed his official felicitations on the day and on her opportunity in motion pictures.



ON SCENE. William Wyler, co-director of "Lloyds of London," Twentieth Century-Fox production, is seen on arrival in the British capital for the premiere at the Leicester Square.

TRIBUTE. Cecil B. DeMille, producer of "The Plainsman," Paramount Silver Jubilee release, stopped off in Denver while en route to California and placed a wreath on the grave of Colonel William Frederick Cody, otherwise Buffalo Bill, whose life was contemporary with the period treated of in the DeMille production.

HOMEWARD BOUND. Anna Neagle, who will be starred in "The Three Maxims," Herbert Wilcox production to be distributed by GB in America, returns to England after visiting New York.

'BANK NIGHT' NEAR-LOTTERY, U.S. APPEALS COURT SAYS

Denver Bench Says Registration Plan Appears To Be "Subterfuge to Escape Stigma of Being Lottery" in Ruling

Indiana District Court Dismisses Infringement Action; Georgia State Bench Says Chance Game Violates Lottery Laws

Continuance of the stormy career of chance games, costing the motion picture industry millions of dollars annually in money awards, was threatened this week by three court decisions, one of which gave the practice its severest blow to date.

The United States circuit court of appeals in Denver held that Bank Night is so closely akin to a lottery that the game is not entitled to protection under the copyright.

This decision was followed by action of the United States district court in Indiana in dismissing a copyright infringement suit instituted by the owners of Bank Night against an exhibitor group of Fort Wayne, Indiana, headed by Jack Eiser.

The state court of appeals in Georgia declared Bank Night violates the state anti-lottery laws.

Wisconsin called a halt to chance games.

Illinois merchants and clergymen continued their fight to rid the state of cash awards at theatres.

In a unanimous opinion by three judges, the tenth United States circuit court of appeals in Denver declared that Bank Night, owned by Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., was not entitled to the assistance and protection of a court of equity. The court also said that it appeared that the elaborate registration system was only a "subterfuge to escape the stigma of being a lottery."

See Possible Ban on Chance Games

Theatre men in the west construe the decision as meaning the possible outlawing of all forms of giveaways in places where admission is charged, even though no charge is made for the chances on the prizes. The court said in its decision that it was plain that if everyone participating in the drawings refused to buy admission tickets the prizes would not be offered.

The case went to the circuit court from the United States district court of northern Oklahoma. The district court had refused to grant Affiliated Enterprises an injunction stopping Fred Gantz of the Star theatre, Sand Springs, Okla., from using Bank Night. Affiliated had pleaded infringement and unfair competition. Mr. Gantz did not deny using the plan but said infringement was impossible.

In the decision, the circuit court upheld Mr. Gantz, ruling that while no one has a right to reprint or republish the copyrighted book of instructions, anyone may practice and use the methods described in the manual without infringement, such practice being far removed from the offense of republishing the book.

Used in 5,000 Houses

Bank Night was originated a few years ago by Charles U. Yaeger, then a booker for Fox Colorado theatres. The plan became popular, was copyrighted, and at present more than 5,000 theatres are using the plan under license, according to Affiliated Enterprises. Mr. Yaeger is president of the company and Rick Ricketson, manager of Fox Intermountain theatres, is his partner. The company started in two small office rooms but soon bought a two story building on film row in Denver for its headquarters. Included in the company's holdings at present are half a dozen theatres, a printing company, a film trailer company, and Div-vy, another giveaway plan.

THEATRE BECOMES "SHOOTING GALLERY"

"Bulls-Eye," a new audience game, was introduced for the first time at Loew's Lincoln Square, New York, last week. It is a simple mechanical contrivance whereby a person in the audience can press the "trigger" of a wooden pistol and cause numbers to flash on a target on the stage. The day after the introduction the legal department of Loew's received a telephone call from the office of Paul Moss, city license commissioner.

"We've heard about your 'Bulls-Eye' game. You must have a shooting gallery license if you are shooting at a target."

The legal department finally convinced the authorities that the house is still a motion picture theatre.

Theatres adopting the plan are reported to be paying from $5 to $50 a week, according to their seating capacity, for use of Bank Night, and salesmen for the company are said to be paid a commission of 30 per cent.

The case of Affiliated against Gantz previously had been dismissed by the district court at Tulsa. After the dismissal, the company took the case into federal court of appeals. Emmet Thurmon, attorney for Affiliated, said after the decision that he will file at once for a rehearing and, if denied this, will appeal to the United States supreme court.

Mr. Thurmon pointed out that the decision was the first made against Bank Night, the plan having been upheld in five state supreme court decisions. He warned that "anyone who thinks the contentions of my client are not good may shortly find himself in court. The decision will not deter Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., from continuing its suits against infringers."

Claims Reviewed

Parts of the decision of interest to exhibitors follow:

"The plaintiff, in further support of its claimed rights to said plan and system (Bank Night) and to the relief which it seeks, alleges that as author and proprietor of said plan and system it has procured copyright therein in accordance with the statutes of the United States and is the owner thereof. A copy of the copyrighted pamphlet or sheets consists of three printed pages. It does no more than describe the socalled plan or system. An additional exhibit to the bill with the heading 'Bank Night Instructions,' consisting of two pages has printed on it 'Copyrighted by Affiliated Enterprises, 1934.' It consists of further description of the plan or system and how it may be carried out, including minute details of the drawing and payment of the amount of the prize advertised, and as if from over-caution and apprehension it repeats: 'All persons must be allowed to register without payment of an admission fee.'

"Assuming the copyrighted matter to be within constitutional purpose and also within statutory requirements there are no allegations of fact showing infringement of the copyright. Defendant did not reprint, publish, copy or vend the claimed copyrighted matter, so far as the bill shows. The complaint is that he used the plan and system. The plan or system is not covered by plaintiff's copyright and could not be. In Bake vs. Seldon 101 U. S. 99, the court said: 'Now while no one has a right to print or publish the book, or any material part thereof, as a book of instructions intended to convey instructions in the art, any person may practice the art which he has described and illustrated therein. The use of the art is a totally different thing from a publication of the book explaining it.'

Trademark Not Allowed

"Plaintiff in support of its claimed rights in said plan and system alleges that its said plan and system is designated as Bank Night; that prior to the filing of the bill it made application to the Secretary of State of Oklahoma for registration and recording of the words 'Bank Night' as a trademark and form of advertising of its said plan and system for the purpose of obtaining, and did obtain the right asked. As to this we think it is sufficient to say that our examination of the statutes of Oklahoma discloses no such authority for the registration and recording of a trademark for the purposes here claimed. The Oklahoma statutes confine the filing of trademarks to manufacturers or dealers in specified goods; to persons or unions that have adopted or used designs of advertisements for the purpose of making known that particular wares or merchandise are the product of such workingmen; and trademarks to be used on containers of dairy products.

"Similarly the acts of congress on the subject restrict the use of trademarks to merchandise and provide that they be affixed thereto. We fail to find legislative provision or judicial approval and sanction of the use of trademarks with a plan or system of action. The pleader realized his dilemma. It is alleged:

"'It (Affiliated) has secured a property right and interest therein and the sole right to use said name as a trademark; and that said name has become attached to this plaintiff and become a designation of this plan throughout the United States and the state of Oklahoma, and is known in every state as belonging to and designating the plaintiff and the exclusive property therein.

"'That the plaintiff in the use of the name Bank Night has acquired a valuable reputation and good name, and enjoys the goodwill connected with the use of said trademark in the business of licensing the plan designated thereby.

WISCONSIN HALTS CHANCE GAMES

" 'That the plaintiff as sole and exclusive owner of Bank Night and the goodwill appurtenant thereto, and being desirous of licensing the plan to all possible users, has organized and established a nationwide organization for the sole purpose of advertising and licensing the said plan and use of the trademark Bank Night; and large sums of money have been expended in behalf of such organizing and advertising.'

"This is a bold claim to a right in gross or at large in a trademark. There is no such right. We fail to see that the claimed copyright or trademark in anywise supports the bill.

"The plan or system portrayed in the copyrighted sheets discloses more than once that an admission charge must not be exacted as a condition entitling one to participate in the drawing. Everyone, if he holds or does not hold or buys or does not buy a paid admission ticket to the show, is entitled to register, and he is designated by number and must be permitted to have an equal chance with every other registrant in drawing the prize. This seems to be a subterfuge to escape the stigma of being a lottery. It is apparent that no one would be given prizes if all participants in the drawing paid no admission fees. Show places are conducted for profit. The plan would be wholly worthless as a moneymaking scheme, both to lessee or lessor. It is further apparent that when non-paying participants and those who pay admissions are each given the same chance at drawing the prize the lucky number may represent one who paid to get it only because of his interest in the drawing. Indeed that is more than probable.

"Then how can it be maintained that the supposed evasion converted a lottery or gambling device into a mere altruistic opportunity and occasion to bestow a gift? If not within the literal definitions of those vices, plaintiff's plan and system is too closely akin to have the protection and assistance of a court of equity."

"The order appealed from is affirmed."

Ruled Lottery in Georgia

Chance games in theatres violate the state anti-lottery law, it was ruled by the Georgia state court of appeals in affirming the conviction of Joe Jarman, operator of a theatre in La Grange, Georgia, on a misdemeanor charge. The exhibitor had been sentenced in city court to a fine of $250 or six months in prison. The appeal court decision read in part:

"A motion picture show operator who gives to his customers, in addition to admission to the show, an opportunity to draw by chance a prize or money or property is guilty of conducting a lottery. Mutuality of risk is not necessary to constitute a lottery. The purchaser of a ticket may get value received and the whole risk may be assumed by the operator.

"When the general scheme of such drawing is such that only those who have purchased tickets may participate therein, and are entitled to win the prize, such scheme does not lose its identity as a lottery because some may participate in the drawing who have not bought tickets."

The Lucas & Jenkins circuit discontinued chance games immediately after the verdict.

Wisconsin Exhibitors Warned

Charging that Bank Night and similar drawings for prizes as conducted by eight theatres in Rock County, Wisconsin, are in violation of the anti-lottery statute, District Attorney John H. Matheson has warned exhibitors to discontinue the practice within a week. Police Chief Joseph T. Kluchesky of Milwaukee has announced that he will seek legislation to ban all chance games in theatres as well as pinball machines and similar devices.

UNION CINEMA CIRCUIT PAYING 22 PER CENT

The year's statement of Union Cinema Co., Ltd., of England, shows a net profit of £45,731 against £30,245 in the previous year, and a final dividend of 15 per cent is being paid on the ordinary shares, making the total for the year 22 per cent.

In addition, shareholders receive a bonus issue of one £1 ordinary share for every twenty held. Union, in which the leading figure is C. F. Bernhard, recently announced an amalgamation scheme with its associated companies—National Provincial Cinemas, Ltd., and Oxford and Berkshire Cinemas, Ltd.

Ban Sought in Illinois

The fight against chance games in Chicago, begun last week by merchants under the ægis of the Better Business Bureau and which is receiving the support of clergymen and others, is continuing. Bank Night and similar plans are lotteries and participants in Illinois are subject to fines of from $25 to $2,000 under an opinion by Attorney General Otto Kerner to Bernard E. Wall, state attorney-elect for McLean County.

Chicago Opinion Awaited

Kenneth Barnard, business manager of the Chicago Better Business Bureau, is awaiting the opinion regarding the legal status of the games which Barnet Hodes, city corporation counsel, was ordered to prepare for Mayor Edward Kelly.

Upon this opinion depended the action the bureau would probably take in the matter. If it found the prize drawings were illegal, plans for prosecution would be started immediately.

In the meantime Mr. Barnard was collecting all available evidence to show that the games were illegal and should be stopped. The decision handed down in Denver which indicated that Bank Night was a lottery, was considered by the bureau manager as very damaging to the statements of local theatremen that they were not operating games that were illegal.

Chicago theatres, however, continued to operate the various games as usual. The State-Lake with "Prosperity Night," a game licensed by Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., owners of Bank Night, had a $4,150 award available this week for those who cared to participate. The Oriental theatre with $3,000 available last week found a winner for $2,000 of the amount and this week has but a mere $1,250 to offer.

Outlying theatres have prizes ranging from $50 to $3,600 and the total of the amounts available throughout the city runs into the tens of thousands of dollars.

One report circulated in Chicago was that pin-game and slot machine operators were back of the drive to oust the games but this could not be substantiated.

"I do not think that there can be any question as to illegality and criminal character of the scheme described in your letter," Attorney General Kerner said. "All of those participating in it in any way are subject to fine of not more than $2,000.

"I think it is also clear that all who have anything to do with such a scheme could be included in a charge of conspiracy to commit a criminal offense, and this charge would subject them to possible imprisonment, not to exceed two years."

Cooperative Plan in Omaha

With the settlement of protests by neighborhood exhibitors on their assessments, Bank Night is scheduled to start in Omaha on December 16th, a week after the last of the free auto nights. Under a cooperative arrangement for the plan 27 neighborhood and downtown houses are included. The first night's prize will be $1,000 to which will be added $500 each week for two weeks provided there is no winner. In charge of the plan are E. R. Cummings, Tri-States district manager; Sam Epstein of Epstein Theatres Corporation; Walter Creal, owner of the Beacon, who will be treasurer; John Quinlan, assistant Brandeis manager, and August Herman, co-owner of the Muse.

National Dissolves Dozen Subsidiaries

National Theatres Corporation has dissolved about a dozen subsidiaries in line with the new tax law, it was learned this week. The holding company has retained many of its companies because of leases and partnerships.

No action has been taken on a second dividend to Chase National Bank and Twentieth Century-Fox, which owns the stock in National. Spyros Skouras, operating head for the circuit, is scheduled to arrive in New York this week from Los Angeles.

UA Officers To Attend Board Session on Coast

George J. Schaefer, Etienne Pallos and Emanuel Silverstone left New York for the coast this week to meet with the United Artists board of directors on production matters. Mr. Pallos, general manager of London Films, plans to remain in Hollywood for a few weeks. Attending the board meeting will be Dr. A. H. Giannini, president and chairman of the board; Mary Pickford, Samuel Goldwyn, Charles Chaplin and a representative for Douglas Fairbanks.

Blank Leaves After Partnership Sessions

A. H. Blank is now en route to Des Moines after preliminary conferences at the Paramount home office in New York on a new operating agreement for the Tri-State circuit of Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois. Mr. Blank's current partnership agreement expires at the year's end. Indications are that a decision will be reached by Paramount within the next few days on either an extension of the present agreement or the terms of a new one.

NEWSREELS ADOPT CONSERVATIVE STAND ON BRITAIN'S ROYAL CRISIS

Four Give King's Friendship for Mrs. Simpson Prominent but Dignified Treatment; Universal Has Special Short Subject

All American Newsreel Material Rushed to London for Distribution at Discretion of British Subsidiaries of the Companies

The first presentation of newsreel pictures specifically referring to Great Britain's "constitutional crisis" over King Edward VIII's contemplated marriage with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, was made this week. In Pathe News, News of the Day, Fox Movietone News and Paramount News the English situation was accorded prominent place, with scenes of the English King and his American friend, all accompanied by dignified commentary remarks. Universal Pictures is to release a short subject on the life of the monarch. The motion picture's treatment is conspicuously conservative in comparison with the "headline" treatment of the press.

Practically all the newsreel companies were prepared for this week's train of events, and were ready to rush to exhibitors film that their cameramen had been photographing as far back as early in the summer.

G-B Pictures in New York, British owned, rushed into Broadway's Criterion theatre—effecting a program switch in mid-week—with "The Life of the Prince of Wales" and "Love in Exile," on a double-feature bill. The Prince of Wales film is a six-reel record of King Edward VIII's life from his early boyhood. "Love in Exile," purported to be the story of a king who abdicated for love, was produced by Capitol Films, in England, for G-B release, and was taken from Gene Markey's novel, "His Majesty's Pajamas."

Fox Movietone News was the first to reach Broadway theatres, sending out scenes of the King and Mrs. Simpson swimming at the French Riviera. The pictures were made five months ago, Truman Talley, head of Fox Movietone said.

For Exhibitors First

Less than 12 hours after the reels were distributed, Mr. Talley said, he was swamped with telephone calls both at his office and home from magazines, newspapers and photo syndicates asking for copies of the pictures, some of the offers being as much as $100 for a single frame. Mr. Talley refused to sell, however, on the theory that he had a "scoop" and exhibitors should get the pictures first, he added.

At Paramount News, W. P. Montague said, "We released to all our clients last Friday a special of 350 feet, giving the facts of the story up to that time. The pictures included scenes of the King, the Duke of York with his wife and daughters, Prime Minister Baldwin, scenes of Mrs. Simpson, her birthplace, her Baltimore home, the school to which she went, her two former husbands and a sequence on Mrs. Simpson, Mr. Simpson and the King in the window of St. James' Palace in London.

"We are releasing this week interviews with Lord Marley, Hugh Walpole, and man-in-the-street type interviews with typical Canadians to give us the point of view of both English and Dominion subjects. As fast as material comes over from England on the developments, we are releasing it to the theatres.

"All our releases have been entirely factual, without sensationalizing or interpreting the pictures, the emphasis being placed on the political rather than on the romantic angle of the story."

Jack Connolly, head of Pathe News, said he was releasing stills of the King and Mrs. Simpson individually and scenes of the two together at the Grand National. The views of church and state are expressed by Bishop Stires and Lord Marley, speaker of the House of Lords.

News of the Day gathered the more recent news shots already made of the King and Prime Minister Baldwin and compiled them with views of the monarch in guard's uniform at the head of his troops in contrast with the cabinet head leaving 10 Downing Street for Buckingham Palace. Mrs. Simpson's features were prominently displayed in the reel.

All the companies, it is reported, communicated with their London offices and discussed the possible complications that might arise from the newsreel treatment of the situation and were all assured that there was nothing to fear in view of the dignified treatment and commentaries of all the reels.

All the American reels also have been rushed to London branches for distribution in the British Isles, subject to the discretion of the English distributors. The editors in New York refused to comment on the possible vetoing of the reels in England, saying that it was not a matter for them to discuss since they had no connection with the English subsidiaries.

Universal announced "the timeliest short feature of the year," entitled "King Edward the Eighth," ready for immediate release. Lowell Thomas, a personal acquaintance and traveling companion of the King, and Charles Ford, Universal newsreel editor, have been working day and night compiling, editing and recording "a unique subject showing with amazing fidelity and the voice of authority the democratic character of the most popular and most talked-of King of England in the last century," said Universal.

"Many Americans had an insight into the democratic behavior of the Prince of Wales," continued Universal, "but Lowell Thomas had a unique opportunity to observe it when he travelled with him for three months on Edward's tour of South America."

"The picture contains a number of interesting highlights from this trip," they continued, "as well as many other human interest scenes of King Edward doing things that no King of England ever dared to do before. He is the first King, for instance, who ever held a reception outside of Buckingham Palace on the lawn. This was his first reception as King. He is also shown fraternizing with the Boy Scouts at their jamboree last year, riding his grandfather's old tricycle at Coventry, hobnobbing with the disabled veterans at Bristol, refereeing a stable boys' boxing bout, as well as in the kingly roles of trooping the colors and reviewing the British navy. He is the first King ever to fly his own plane and is shown inspecting the Royal Air Forces and more recently visiting the South Wales miners."

Embassy Theatre Marquee

The Embassy theatre, Broadway house featuring news and short subjects, attracted attention early this week by its advertising. The marquee, in lights, on one side read, "Life Story of 'Wally.' King and Mrs. Simpson Together." The other side of the marquee had "Life Story of King and 'Wally,' See Them Swim Together." Smaller placards on the walls advertised "See King and 'Wally' in St. James' Palace. Also Life Story of 'Wally'." A large easel was placed on display in front of the box-office, and later moved into the lobby, reading "Special Life Story of 'Wally' Simpson. See Her Swim with King. Also Intimate 'Shots' Thru Palace Window."

This is not the first prominent appearance of King Edward VIII in motion pictures. Several features have emanated from London in recent years showing the King's activities when he was Prince of Wales. From South America came a pictorial record of his trip in the late 1920's when he was referred to as "England's Greatest Traveling Salesman." Prior to that he willingly posed for all the cameras of Kinograms when he made his first trip to Canada and the United States.

King Edward VIII's first newsreel appearance, however, goes back to 1901 when he was photographed by the motion picture cameras of the British Mutoscope and Biograph Company. This scene, which shows him playing as a small boy with a rifle in a soldierly manner, is included in the Paramount release of this week.

CORONATION FILMING UNDER 'CONSIDERATION'

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

The Right Honorable Ramsay MacDonald, Lord President of the Council, replying to a question in the House of Commons in London this week, said that permission to film and televise the Coronation of King Edward VIII in Westminster Abbey was "under consideration," but that no final decision could be announced until experiments had been carried a little further. The answer is read in the trade as meaning that, if it is technically possible to obtain a picture without interruption of the ceremonial, permission will be given, probably on the basis of all British newsreels having the right to release an officially approved picture. The British Broadcasting Corporation for some time past has foreshadowed a televised picture of the Abbey ceremony as its first historic achievement.

United Press reported from London Tuesday night:

"Moviegoers cheered newsreel pictures of King Edward today, but were given no opportunity to view pictures of Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

"Newsreels advised audiences that, in view of the unsettled situation, they would not show pictures of the chief actors in the love drama. They then flashed a picture of the King, attired in a guard's uniform and riding a horse, and the words, 'God Save the King'."

CAROLINA EXHIBITORS ATTACK DOUBLE BILLS

Convention at Charlotte Opposes Spread of Policy; Other Exhibitor Sessions Held

The Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, Inc., in its 24th annual convention at the Hotel Charlotte, Charlotte, N. C., December 7th expressed alarm over the spread of "double feature" policy in theatres in this area, and requested the exhibitors of the Carolinas not to adopt the practice.

The theatre owners asserted that the motion picture industry will be cheapened and ruined by theatres persisting in exhibiting two full-length pictures at a single show. A resolution was passed in which the association went on record as opposed to the double feature policy and asked exhibitors not to adopt it.

Another resolution introduced by M. S. Hill of Greensboro, chairman of the resolutions committee, and passed by the association, protested sales practices of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "in attempting each year to increase film rentals on pictures which are not justified by the pictures delivered."

Ed Kuykendall of Columbus, Miss, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in a speech at the meeting pointed out the necessity of theatre owners becoming real community assets. He said civic-minded people should use their theatres for community benefit.

"We must stand ready to combat legislation that discriminates against the theatre owners," said Mr. Kuykendall. "We are perfectly willing to pay our part of the cost of government, but we do not want to be discriminated against. By the attendance of the public at shows, the public designates the type of entertainment it wants. The entertainment is determined by the patronage. Merchants should support the theatres since much furniture and clothing is purchased in imitation of that seen on the screen. We are opposed to the double features policy because it will encourage cheap pictures."

The association approved Mr. Kuydenkall's stand on double features and on the copyright problem, and approved the Duffey bill. The 10-point program of the MPTOA was approved, and the association voted to aid Mr. Kuykendall in making the program "a medium through which fair trade practices can be made effective for the producers, distributors and exhibitors alike."

Picquet Reelected

Charles W. Picquet, who has been president of the association for 13 consecutive years, was re-elected for another term.

Other officers chosen were: H. E. Buchanan, Hendersonville, first vice-president; Albert Sottile, Charleston, second vice-president; Mrs. Walter Griffith, Charlotte, secretary and treasurer; W. H. Hendrix, Greensboro; H. R. Berry, Hartsville; Robert E. Bryant, Rock Hill; Frank Beddingfield, Charlotte; E. L. Hearne, Albemarle; H. F. Kinsey, Charlotte; John F. Miller, Hickory; S. S. Stevenson, Henderson; Lyle M. Wilson, Roanoke Rapids, directors.

Mr. Picquet presided at the sessions, which were held at the Hotel Charlotte. Leaders at the convention said the attendance was larger than that recorded at any other meeting in 10 years.

Mr. Kuykendall's address dealt in detail with most of the problems of the theatre operators. He presented a prospect of improving business over a period of years and commended the Carolinas organization for its effectiveness in dealing with the industry's affairs.

Edward Levy of New Haven, Conn., general counsel of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, addressed the convention on the social security legislation and various other legal aspects of theatre operation.

The afternoon session was given over to discussions on various subjects of theatre operation, relations between the theatre owners and the distributors and producers of films and other divisions of the industry.

Other Exhibitors Meet

Sam Pinanski of the M. & P. Theatres of Boston was re-elected head of Allied Theatres of Massachusetts, MPTOA affiliate, and re-elected also were John Devlin, vice-president; Stanley Sumner, treasurer, and Joseph Brennan, secretary.

M. A. Rosenberg, president of the MPTO of western Pennsylvania, has appointed six committees for 1937. The committees and their officers are:

Ways and Means—E. T. Beedle, Canonsburg, chairman; Sam Gould, Pittsburgh; Joseph Gellman, Duquesne; Frank Panoplos, Clairton, and F. H. McKnight, Pittsburgh.

Arbitration and Grievance—William D. Davis, Pittsburgh, chairman: Fred J. Herrington, Pittsburgh; Dr. C. E. Herman, Carnegie; E. H. Goldberg, Pittsburgh; Harry W. Walker, Sharpsburg, and William Finkel, Pittsburgh.

Legislative—William L. Brown, Tarentum, chairman; William J. Walker, Crafton, and Fred J. Herrington, Pittsburgh.

Membership—Bennett Amdur, Pittsburgh, chairman; William R. Wheat, Jr., Sewickley; Israel Roth, Pittsburgh; Floyd Bender, Millvale, and Charles S. Philbrook, Pittsburgh.

Entertainment—Frank Panoplos, Clairton, chairman; Norman C. Huhn, Pittsburgh; A. F. Glazer, McKees Rocks, Carl A. Poke, Pittsburgh, and Morris Roth, Duquesne.

Public Relations—William Finkel, Pittsburgh, chairman; William L. Brown, Tarentum; Dr. C. E. Herman, Carnegie; Mrs. Martha Guthrie, Grover City, and Peter Antonoplos, East Pittsburgh.

Mr. Kuykendall may not be a candidate for re-election to the MPTOA presidency when the organization holds its annual election in Miami early next March, he indicated in New York this week. Mr. Kuykendall, who recently disposed of his two theatres at Columbus, Miss., may either re-enter exhibition or accept one of several offers which he has received recently, either course being calculated to permit him to make his permanent headquarters near his home.

Edna Buckler Replies

Edna Buckler Tuesday filed an answer in the New York federal court in her $2,000,000 damage suit against Sidney Kingsley, Norman Bel Geddes, Random House and Samuel Goldwyn charging that her play, "Money," was plagiarized by "Dead End."

DeForest Bankruptcy Petition

Lee DeForest, noted radio inventor, has filed a voluntary petition of bankruptcy in the federal court at Los Angeles. He lists his liabilities at $103,943.95 and his assets at $390, all exempt.

Organization Seen Needed in India

by G. A. THAKUR
in Bombay

"The bane of the Indian film industry is the lack of organization and unless all the branches of this industry muster their forces and come under one banner, the progress that the industry has been making will be jeopardized." Thus observed Yusuf Ali Fazalbhoy, director of Bombay Radio Co., Ltd., Film City, and ex-secretary of the Motion Picture Society of India, in a statement to the Associated Press of India. Mr. Fazalbhoy had just returned after an extensive tour of the Continent, America and the Far East studying questions connected with the radio and cinema industries.

Referring to the potentialities of the cinema industry as a means of education in rural uplift, Mr. Fazalbhoy remarked that for visual instruction cinema afforded an invaluable medium, particularly for teaching geography, science, general hygiene and sanitation both for the young and the adult, but without the help of the State, nothing could be capable of producing the right type of pictures for the purpose.

Referring to the lack of organization in the motion picture industry in this country, Mr. Fazalbhoy deprecated the tendencies in some quarters to form independent associations, which he thought would result in nothing but the dissipation of energy.

Referring to the future of the film industry, Mr. Fazalbhoy said indigenous talent in the technical section should be encouraged by all possible means and suggested that much of it would probably be found in the amateur worker. Unfortunately, amateur photography and cinematography is in our country a luxury inasmuch as under the present tariff rules one has to pay practically double the price for the necessary material.

Dictograph Obtains Stay

An injunction was granted Tuesday in the New York supreme court restraining Pirnie, Simons and Company, the A. M. Andrews Investment Corporation and other banks and investment firms from transferring control of their stock in Dictograph Products Company, Inc. The Dictograph company sought the injunction to maintain the status quo pending determination of the ownership of 31,000 shares.

Pathe Application Rejected

The Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington has denied the application of the Boston Stock Exchange for unlisted trading privileges in Pathe Film Corporation common stock on the ground that the stock is not substantially equivalent to Pathe Exchange common, a stock admitted to unlisted trading on the exchange, within the meaning of the regulations under the Securities Exchange Act.

CONCENTRATION OF B'WAY FORCES URGED TO FIGHT WPA COMPETITION

Goal Should Include Widespread Demand for Stage Players as Essential Complement of Film Industry—Ayer

by FREDERICK W. AYER

Frederick Wellington Ayer, author of this article, is one of Broadway's younger stage producers, having achieved success early as the producer last season of "Parnell," an historical play which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is about to bring forth in a film version.

His opinions are set forth as reflecting the attitude of the Broadway stage towards the United States Government's competition in theatricals, which competition—in the form of the WPA Federal Theatre Project—also impinges upon the motion picture theatre box office.

The United States Government, which, nearly four years ago, flaunted for a brief time its NRA Blue Eagle in the face of unfair competition, this Fall entered into direct competition with the established legitimate theatre, and while there has been no real attempt on the part of organized managers to concerted action against the invader the situation cannot but be regarded as serious. Criticism of the WPA's Federal theatre project for competition with private enterprise—both motion picture and legitimate theatre—has been recurrent along Broadway for some months past, but thus far nothing constructive has been suggested as a panacea.

To appreciate this lack of organized action against such a problem as now confronts established Broadway managers it must be realized that there actually is no organization, comparable with those in the motion picture industry, capable of handling the problem.

The only exception to this is Actors' Equity Association, all-powerful associate of the American Federation of Labor, and, after all, this happens not to be Equity's problem. Out of some 12,500 theatre people throughout the nation currently employed by the WPA, at least 1,000 are Equity members. This might seem to be a small proportion of total employables, but it must be remembered that all manner of creative and technical talent who under no circumstances come under the Equity auspices, are included in the group, from directors, stagehands and others to scenic designers and painters.

Managers' Problem

The WPA fight, therefore, becomes solely a matter between the manager of the Government, for as long as Equity members are employed that organization is not inclined to complain. It is, furthermore, not a fight for the Dramatists' Guild. That body has little cause for dissatisfaction with the order of things, for, if one of its members can write a sufficiently popular play, the playwright is apt to make nearly as much money as he can through established Broadway production channels. The author is paid $50 per week per unit and it is to be noted that Sinclair Lewis has been receiving in the neighborhood of $1,400 weekly from WPA units throughout the country for performances of his play, "It Can't Happen Here."

Managers, however, appear to be at a loss as to how best to handle the matter. Through their only organization, the League of New York Theatres, which in the past has proved ability only to make a noise, and little more, there have been feeble protests that the Government has broken its "gentlemen's agreement" not to produce within the established theatrical belt, commonly known as Broadway. To this WPA replies that it never had an agreement of this sort, adding that it does not want to compete with the professional stage, merely to provide employment for the many indigent workers of the profession which the theatre is not, apparently, able to do.

Nevertheless the Government now openly boasts that it is an important factor in Broadway show business. No one as close to the picture as the Broadway manager can deny that this is so. WPA shows during the past six months in New York have been doing "S.R.O." business, while Broadway productions have dropped by the wayside in untold quantities and it is obvious, even to the casual observer, that drastic action must be taken if the commercial theatre is to survive.

It is suggested that, while Equity and the Dramatists' Guild are not immediately concerned, there must be a consolidation of all forces in the theatrical business, with stagehand unions, scenic designers' unions, Equity and the Dramatists' Guild working hand-in-glove with the managers. If such a consolidation could be effected, it is inevitable that, for a time, certain hardships would be enforced upon members of the workers' unions. Equity would have to refuse to allow its members to appear in WPA shows; the Guild would have to tell its writers they cannot do business with the Government, the same thing being true with the unions of craftsmen and other creative talent.

Further it should be the goal of the consolidated groups in making this stand against WPA to create a widespread demand for such entertainment as an essential complement of the motion picture industry. That the film industry depends considerably upon the theatre for many classifications of workers cannot be denied and thus far the Hollywood industry has taken little interest in WPA projects, either as a potential competitor or as a source of talent.

Time Declared Ripe for Road Managers to "Cash In" on Growing Interest Fostered by WPA Theatre Publicity

Plans to revive the road and to bring back vaudeville have been common in recent years, but nearly all of them to date have hinged on some sort of govermental subsidy, which never has been forthcoming, and it would seem that the present time offers the best possible opportunity for road managers to "cash in" on a rapidly-growing interest in legitimate attractions in the provinces, this interest due largely to the WPA itself and its nation-wide publicity on the theatre projects.

"The extensive propaganda mills of WPA have constantly ground out statements that the federal government was rebuilding the theatre from the ground up and was planting local roots of interest in the stage throughout the country, rather than pandering to Broadway," writes John L. Gould in the New York Herald-Tribune. "More than once, WPA officials have insisted that if the federal government could not save the theatre the ship might as well be abandoned."

Although the ever-delicate situation on Broadway has made theatrical leaders loath to speak officially, particularly because the WPA holds the purse-strings for aiding many needy theatrical folk, the undercurrent feeling about the stage's future is in flat contradiction to the governmental theory.

Say Commercial Theatre Is Alive

The feeling is that the commercial theatre is far from dead, that the essential need is some effective propaganda and a little constructive anti-WPA action such as that suggested above, and that showmanship tactics, involving the use of recognized stage and screen stars and their attendant glamour, are the best attraction for a public denied living entertainment for years, due to depression and motion picture competition.

That the WPA has no intention to slacken its ever-tightening grip on the theatre was evidenced last week by an announcement from regional headquarters on New York by Philip W. Barber, director, that immediate reorganization of the New York project, designed to centralize responsibility, pool production resources and cut red tape, is to be effected. And this despite the fact that the WPA Theatre Project is now weeding out "unneedy" workers by the hundreds.

Combining Materials and Personnel

The plan is to be put into effect gradually during the next two months and it will find seven of the more important units retaining their names but combining their materials and personnel in one main project. The groups concerned are the "Living Newspaper," the "Popular Price Theatre," the Brooklyn-Queens unit, the Bronx-Manhattan unit, the "Suitcase Theatre," "891," and the Negro Theatre.

In practice the new scheme means, simply, that if the "Living Newspaper" wishes to borrow an actor working for the "Popular Price" theatre but not being used at the moment, the actor can be transferred directly without the delays and formality necessary up to this time.

UNITED STAGE FIGHT ON WPA URGED

The result, Mr. Barber believes, will be "better plays for the public and more constant employment in actual productions for actors and technical workers."

Responsibility for individual plays under the reorganization plan will be centralized and a national play policy board will be set up. The board will be composed of regional directors whose aim it will be to plan at least three months in advance the program for various regions and, ultimately, the entire country, Mr. Barber reveals. Each board member will be responsible to the national director for his own region and will be a consultant on other districts.

As an example of encroachments which already have been made by WPA on the Broadway scene, the project announced last month that it had taken a lease on the Ritz theatre in West 48th street, formerly a Shubert property. WPA also has on lease the Biltmore theatre and the Maxine Elliott, both of which have been noted in the past as strongholds of the legitimate drama. All three of these houses are within the established Broadway theatrical belt and while the Adelphi is just beyond the boundary, WPA last season leased the Manhattan theatre, giving it up only this year in favor of the Adelphi.

Four Outstanding Successes

Outstanding successes of the federal theatre in New York thus far have been "Murder in the Cathedral," "The Negro Theatre's" version of "Macbeth," "It Can't Happen Here" and "Horse Eats Hat." All of these have been commercial hits, despite the low admission prices charged. Any one of these is considered to be worthy of regular Broadway presentation, but in every instance the WPA has beaten Broadway managers to the playwrights concerned.

Brock Pemberton, outstanding Broadway showman and one who always can be relied upon in a fight, summed up the feeling of legitimate managers toward WPA when, after it had been announced that the Ritz theatre had been leased to the Government, he termed such a move as bad for the commercial theatre.

"More and more the WPA is competing with it," Mr. Pemberton said. "We had a gentleman's agreement with them to keep out of the theatrical district, but they are creeping into it from every direction.

"The better their plays are, the worse they are for the commercial theatre because they offer competition. The worse they are, the worse it is for the commercial theatre because they set low standards and mislead people not acquainted with the theatre, giving them a false idea of it."

There is yet another angle to the fight between the WPA and the commercial theatre about which little has been written. Actors are complaining in ever-increasing numbers that when they resign from WPA service to take regular stage jobs which have been short-lived they are not given preferential rating when seeking to rejoin WPA, this despite the fact that it has been said by Hallie Flanagan, WPA theatre administrator, that all actors on the payroll who attempt to obtain regular employment will be taken back by the relief show projects afterwards.

The resultant effect of such policy on the part of the WPA toward the actor has been an almost complete stultification of his ambition for, rather than take a chance of unemployment, he is sticking to the morsels of bread—$24.83 worth weekly—held out to him by WPA when he might be making both bread and butter on Broadway.

Theatre Forces in Action Again To "Organize" Legitimate Drama

Disregarding any influence which the WPA Federal Theatre Project may have in preventing rehabilitation of the stage, the organized powers of the legitimate theatre moved again late last week to revive the theatre on its own merits by making it attractive to the public.

The League of New York Theatres, the producing managers' organization, Actors' Equity Association, the American Federation of Labor theatrical local, and the Dramatists' Guild, the play makers' union, gathered to again take up the problem but with the same negative results that have featured previous gatherings.

The movement was to seek more support via the radio Wednesday night over the National Broadcasting Company's Red network at midnight with a program featuring an address by Lawrence Robinson, managing director of the American Theatre Movement, and talks by Daniel Frohman, Selena Royle, Mrs. Richard Mansfield, Douglas Montgomery and others.

The consensus of opinion at last week's meeting was lost sight of, however, in the ensuing denials by the Dramatists' Guild representatives that better plays can be written, by Equity that better acting is available and by the managers that admissions could be reduced.

Other suggestions included one for calling in a few motion picture and affiliated theatre executives for consultation with the possible idea of merging the film and legitimate theatres, the stage people to provide plays, and casts, to be put on in the motion picture theatres along with the regular picture program and the profits to be split equally. The latter idea appeared to be the most popular at the time the meeting adjourned.

Kent Heads Seal Drive

Sidney R. Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox, has been chosen chairman of the motion picture section of the business groups cooperating in the 30th annual Christmas Seal sale of the New York Tuberculosis and Health Association.

Quarberg Joining Schulberg

Lincoln Quarberg, former publicity director for Pickford-Lasky Productions, will join the B. P. Schulberg studios, succeeding "Scoop" Conlon, who resigned to organize his own publicity organization.

Sunday Shows Win and Lose

Widespread action pertaining to the showing of motion pictures on Sunday includes passage of a resolution requesting a referendum on the subject at Annapolis, Md., the consideration of an ordinance prohibiting Sunday shows in Waynesboro, Va., and the refusal of the Vancouver, B. C., city council to grant permission for a special Sunday preview of "Nine Days a Queen" on the ground that it would establish a precedent. A test case of anti-Sunday statutes has been introduced in Buena Vista, Va., while church organizations of Lynchburg have announced a boycott of Sunday cinemas recently authorized. On the contrary, the board of aldermen of Greenville, N. C., have sanctioned Sunday shows at the town's two theatres.

Hedges Leaves NBC Post

William S. Hedges, head of the National Broadcasting Company's managed and operated stations, Monday resigned his network post to become vice-president of the Crosley Radio Corporation, owner and operators of stations WLW and WSAI, Cincinnati.

Film Board Moves Offices

The New York Film Board of Trade on January 1 will take over the entire 25th floor of the Paramount Building in Times Square. The organization is now occupying a lower floor in the same building.

"PRODIGIOUS" is a fancy word for those Variety muggs! I'll look it up sometime!

"PRODIGIOUS BOX-OFFICE"
says Daily (Coast) Variety

"A worthy successor to 'The Thin Man'. Dashiell Hammett carries on and the screen playwrights, Frances Coodrich and Albert Hackett score again. The personnel is led by the same top names, including Director W. S. Van Dyke, and grosses may even exceed those on "The Thin Man'. Magnetic marquee names, fascinating story handling, all spell prodigious b. o. W. S. Van Dyke's direction is flawless in combining comedy and suspense on a never-flagging level of sophisticated entertainment. Relationship between Powell and Loy is sheer delight. Screen play is outstanding, sparkling in characterization, dialog and incident. Hunt Stromberg's production is distinguished showmanship."

"BIG AT ANY BOX-OFFICE"
says Film Daily

"Big at any box-office. This gay, rollicking comedy mystery should score heavily at the box-office and cast is headed by William Powell and Myrna Loy, who were an ideal team in the 'Thin Man'. They romp through their present roles and pile up the laughs. Comedy situations are fresh, with Director Van Dyke extracting the fullest measure of fun. Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich, who wrote the 'Thin Man' screen play, did nobly with the script for the sequel. Hunt Stromberg rates much credit as the producer."

UNITED ARTISTS THIRD TO ACCEPT MPTOA'S SELF-REGULATION PLAN

Company Agrees to Abolish Recording and Score Charges, Approves Local Boards, Rejects 10 Per Cent Cancellation

Kuykendall To Reconvene Committee on Trade Practices in January; Warns of Legislatures Meeting Next Month

The motion picture industry is proceeding with efforts to establish a program of fair trade practices and arbitration machinery to adjust trade disputes. This week United Artists became the third major distributor to accept, in part, the plan of regulation proposed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Universal and Twentieth Century-Fox previously had agreed to the exhibitors' proposals, in the main.

In a letter to Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, George J. Schaefer, vice-president of United Artists in charge of sales, said the company will agree to abolish recording and score charges and will support the plan for the establishment of local conciliation boards with the provision that further discussions be held on the machinery involved and the jurisdiction of the boards. Because United Artists sells its pictures on an individual feature or producer basis, it cannot grant a 10 per cent cancellation privilege, the letter said.

Mr. Kuykendall, acting for the theatre owners, plans to reconvene his trade practice committee in New York in January to resume individual negotiations with heads of distribution companies in an effort to obtain additional concessions or more liberal definitions of those already granted. It is not expected that all distributors will have announced their decisions on the proposals by that time, but it is assumed that a sufficient number of acceptances of the concilation board plan will have been received to make possible an agreement on final plans for their establishment.

MPTOA Warns of Legislatures

The MPTOA, in a bullein to members this week, called attention to the convening next month of the legislatures of 42 states and Congress and besought the industry to abandon moves to obtain passage of "spite and futile legislation" in order to present a united front against genuinely adverse legislation which it feels will be proposed.

Among prospective measures which would require concerted industry action, if they are to be forestalled or defeated, the bulletin lists new state taxes on admissions; state laws to require two or more licensed operators in every projection booth; banning of juvenile attendance after 7 p. m. and employment of licensed matrons for children's sections during matinees; state and federal attempts to draft minimum wage and maximum hour agreements; more rigid state and city building codes; laws to punish the return of false box office statements as embezzlement; compulsory public liability insurance; employment of a full time house fireman; an increase of municipal censor boards, and "all of the 'half-baked' statutes that will be thought up 'to protect the safety of the theatre patron' once the lawmakers are started on regulation by statute."

Attacking the Neely-Pettengill bill, the bulletin denies that the proposed bill would eliminate block booking and declares that its passage would be certain to bring on a swarm of new censor boards and increase censorship powers and fees.

"Such measures as the proposed criminal laws to prevent designated play dates and to put the affiliated circuits out of business." the bulletin says, "are obviously unconstitutional on numerous grounds, will undoubtedly be tied up in litigation for many years, and can easily be evaded in innumerable ways."

The MPTOA statement urges its own trade practice program as the fairest and most logical method of settling disputes between distributors and exhibitors and call for the full support and cooperation of members for its completion.

A liberal unrestricted cancellation privilege is put forward as the only satisfactory solution for block booking problems and asserts that the present and prospective concessions from distributors on the trade practice program are indicative that real relief of this kind is at hand for every exhibitor.

The bulletin emphasizes the improvement in the moral tone of pictures during the last two years and declares that, as a result, "the only remaining agitation against the morals of the movies is by those who make a living out of such agitation."

Asks Further Consideration

In a letter thanking Sidney R. Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox, for the cooperation of his company in accepting the MPTOA program, Mr. Kuykendall requested further consideration for exceptions to two points taken by the distributor. The company agreed to unconditional cancellation privileges but only in cases in which the exhibitor has purchased all the product offered for sale at the same time, excluding foreign made pictures or pictures not made in the Fox studios.

Mr. Kuykendall requested that this point be reconsidered, and the privilege be allowed to apply to all contracts for ten or more feature pictures. The latter also asked that renewed study be given to the proposal to eliminate score charges which 20th Century-Fox refused to do.

United Artists' Statement

The statement by Mr. Schaefer of United Artists accepting the MPTOA program read as follows:

"(1). United Artists Corporation is unable to grant the 10 per cent cancellation privilege. You know, of course, it has been a long standing policy of selling our product on an individual picture or producer basis. Furthermore, there is no business relation or common interest between the various producers who only use this corporation as a common medium for distribution.

These producers make from three to six pictures a year and do not in themselves attempt to make or supervise a large quantity of pictures.

"(2). We are entirely in accord with your suggestion that local conciliation boards be established with a central appeals board located in New York City.

We would like to have a further discussion as to the machinery of these boards and their jurisdiction of the matters that come up for the special consideration of this Board.

"(3). We believe that the matter of uniform clearance is fundamentally sound but based on the decisions of the federal courts it will be necessary at the time of the sale to negotiate for the necessary clearance.

Oppose Double Features

"(4.) We are decidedly against the practice of over-buying. Again this is entirely in the hands of the exhibitor. We are decidedly against the practice of double features.

"(5). We should like to see an end to all unfair competition between exhibitors but this is a problem that must be worked out.

"(6). With regard to non-theatricals, we are heartily in accord with your suggestions and it has never been our policy to serve such accounts that in any way conflict with the business of a theatre.

"(7). We believe it would facilitate matters greatly if there were a short uniform contract, but cannot agree to adapt one because of recent court decisions. We are in favor of a clear and concise contract, and as short as possible.

"(8). Effective with the sale of our 1937-38 product, this company will abolish the practice of recording charges to the exhibitor.

"(9). It will be impossible to forego the practice of negotiation for preferred playing time due to the fact that so much of our product is played on a percentage basis. Theatres do their best business on Saturday, Sunday and holidays and we feel we are rightfully entitled to a reasonable share of that time. We do not believe that the exhibitor should be required to play pictures that are unsuitable for Saturdays and Sundays and we will be reasonable in that respect.

"(10). Our corporation does not distribute a large number of shorts. We only have the Disney Cartoons and these are sold separate and distinct and are not made a part of our feature sale. We are entirely in sympathy with the movement of your organization for a better understanding between the exhibitor and the distributor and are willing to cooperate with you and any other organization at all times in that respect."

Two Large Studios Get Ultra-violet Sound Units

Edwin M. Hartley, RCA Photophone sales head, who recently returned to Camden, N. J., from Hollywood, reported this week that the installation of the new ultra-violet sound recording channels in the major studios is so far advanced that all of them are due shortly to turn out improved sound.

Four units have been completed for the Twentieth Century-Fox studios, Mr. Hartley said. Similar equipment has been installed at the Warner Burbank studio where recordings are to start by the year end, he added.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Durant, Oklahoma

Dear Herald:

This country around Durant is where they raise the turkeys and pecans, although they didn't raise many pecans this year.

When they take their turkeys to market they drive them along the road in droves like they do cattle. Some places we saw several hundred turkeys in feed lots where they were being fed to get them ready for the Christmas holiday season, and if it weren't for Oklahoma and Texas, the turkey market would be higher than a cat's back. Down here the market runs around ten cents per pound and when we were down here before, they told us that one man sold a gobbler for $12.00. Gosh, but that was some gobbler. If they are that high this Christmas the chances are that we will order sowbelly.

But speaking of that boy Gerald Stettmund, who operates the two theatres at Chandler. Gerald gets pretty doggone ornery once in awhile. Some years ago we called on him and he wrote to the Herald and gave us a pretty good panning and some cartoonist drew a cartoon of us calling on Gerald and it was published in the Herald and Gerald has it on the wall in his office. Our main objection to the cartoon is that it makes us look like Andy Gump. If Andy should see that cartoon he would probably get sore about it. Well, anyhow, we had a nice visit with Gerald and Mrs. Stettmund, just as we always did, for they are pretty swell people.

We always like to go to El Reno and visit Mr. and Mrs. Enloe of the Criterion theatre. They are always so courteous and pleasant, and this time was no exception. Those are the kind of people who make the motion picture industry what it is today. We have a standing invitation to come back some time, and we hope we can.

If you should ever go to Guthrie you should go to the Melba theatre and meet A. R. Powell, the manager, and when you do you will see a swell show and meet one of Oklahoma's ace theatre managers.

When we called on Mr. Powell he said we called on him two years ago and that he was glad we called on him again. We had forgotten it until he called our attention to it. We meet so many of the boys it is hard to keep them all in our mind.

The Griffith Amusement Company of Oklahoma City has probably the largest independent circuit of theatres in the United States, and, we might add, the best managed of any of them. This company is known throughout this Southwest country for their square dealing with the public and also with their theatre operators. Wherever we go we hear nothing but praise of the Griffith Amusement Company, and whenever an operator of a circuit house praises the management you will find that that is something. We were treated very courteously when we called on them in Oklahoma City recently.

RCA WILL SPONSOR OPERA BROADCASTS

The Radio Corporation of America will sponsor this season's broadcasts of performances at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, "as a Christmas gift to radio listeners throughout the world," according to an announcement by David Sarnoff, president of RCA and one of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera Association. The regular Saturday afternoon performances will be broadcast beginning December 26th but the season's first opera broadcast will be the special matinee performance of "Hansel und Gretel" on December 24th. During the last two or three seasons the Metropolitan broadcasts have been presented under commercial sponsorship. They were originally presented as unsponsored sustaining programs.

We had the pleasure of calling on Milan and Sharp of the Lyric theatre at Chelsea and J. D. De Shazo of the Rex theatre at Nowata. Nowata is a fine looking town and we judge that the name comes from the Indian dialect and probably has some meaning but we can't translate it into United States. It is a good town just the same.

We presume that many of the readers of this magazine never saw a cotton field. The first time we ever saw one we thought we were heading right into a snow bank, although it was 100 in the shade.

We wonder what Andy and Herb Anderson of Detroit Lakes and Bill Miller of Cloquet, Minnesota, and a lot more of the boys up north would say if they saw a cotton field. When you see a man stooped over and dragging a sack behind him as long as a sled tongue, don't think it is some kind of an animal and shoot him, it's a cotton picker.

A good crop of cotton stands about waist high, but this season a crop that got knee-high seemed to be the exception. Dry weather cut the crop short like it does the corn crop up in the corn belt, and this makes it pretty tough on the country.

Eli Whitney is entitled to the thanks of this southern country for inventing the cotton gin, for without the gin the whole United States would have to wear hemp for pants, and hemp is pretty doggone scratchy. They run the cotton through the gin and the gin takes out the seed and the seed is taken to a press and the oil pressed out of it and it is called "Cottolene," and Cottolene is used by bakers for making shortening and pastry and other forms of grub.

W. T. Kerr of the Platt theatre at Sulphur suits us just about 100 per cent. W. T. is a graduate of a college, is a football coach and a swell theatre operator, and when you get that combination you have something to write home about. Maybe though it was because he had us renew the Herald subscriptions for four of his theatres that made him seem like he might have come from Nebraska. Anyhow, we are going to swear by W. T. Kerr, but then of course we don't swear (sometimes). But if you should ever go to Sulphur you should go and see W. T. and his show.

Over at Waurika we ran onto a member of the Izaak Walton League, and whenever you find a member of the Izaak Walton League, and a theatre manager, too, you will know that you have found somebody worthwhile. Ed Crew, the manager of the Empress theatre, is the boy.

The season was opening for quail shooting the day we got there and Ed was going out to get some and wanted us to go with him, but we are a hard working Polander and couldn't do it. We'll betcha Ed got the limit, at least we hope so. If Ed can shoot like he can manage a theatre there won't be enough quail left to stock the state. Ed wanted some pheasants to stock the state and we told him to write to Frank B. O'Connell at Lincoln, state game warden of Nebraska, and we thought he could arrange to have some trapped up there for him, as Nebraska had plenty of them. We stocked the state when we were game warden. It sure is a pleasure to run across a theatreman like Ed. There are lots of 'em if we could only meet 'em all.

We saw a girl going down the street today with enough barn paint on her lips to cover a henhouse. Gosh, we'd sooner kiss a hen.

F. J. Jamison operates the Temple theatre at Temple. We called him up at his home and he said, "Boy, I'm coming right down," and he did. We took his renewal of the Herald without any argument. Argument don't get you anywhere, and sometimes it don't get you that far.

There are a few more of the boys that we haven't space to tell about but we appreciate their kindness just the same. Whenever you find a theatreman who is taking the Herald you don't need to watch him, he's generally 100 per cent plus. That is probably because "The Herald COVERS THE FIELD Like an April Shower."

Next week we are going down to call on the Longhorns.

PRODUCERS AT SEA ON STARS' RADIO SHOWS

Careful Study of Effects of Broadcasts Is Needed, Says Briskin in New York

A careful and exhaustive survey should be made of the effects, good or bad, of radio broadcasts by screen stars, and the results should be employed to guide future policy of motion picture producers toward the radio, in the opinion of Samual Briskin, RKO vice-president in charge of production.

"Conflicting opinions on the benefits or detriments of such broacasts stand in the way of the establishment of any definite policy by producers," the studio official said, "and only a careful study can solve the problem."

Mr. Briskin, in New York in connection with studio phases of the RKO reorganization plan, said that production activities have not been hampered to any great extent by the receivership. He said that at least half of RKO's product next season may be comprised of "A" pictures. The schedule will include from 50 to 52 features and the increased number of "A" pictures will involve an additional expenditure of from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000 in the production budget, he said. The executive left for Hollywood on Sunday.

Commenting on the controversial subject of broadcasts, Mr. Briskin said that only by a survey such as he advocates can producers determine whether to discourage their continuance or establish machinery for proper control of the stars' appearances. The recently appointed producers' committee, headed by Edward J. Mannix, can do much by persuasion to lessen the more obviously injurious broadcasting activities but it has no power to enforce its decisions because of the provisions of player contracts, he added.

All player contracts except those of stars who are definitely radio personalities prohibit radio appearances without permission of the studio, Mr. Briskin explained. He said that he recently granted permission to Victor Moore and Helen Broderick to appear in a series of NBC broadcasts beginning January 1st. Such permission, he added, is never given except after consideration of the proposed air program and the suitability of the material for the individual star.

More "A" Films Needed

In discussing plans for RKO production next season Mr. Briskin commented that the time is past when a company can produce only three or four big pictures a year. Increased emphasis on "A" pictures next year, he said, will mean the development of new talent by his company. This factor, he pointed out, will account for much of the increased budget expenditure contemplated.

A scarcity of story material has led to the production of unusual pictures, Mr. Briskin said, such as "Winterset" and "The Plough and the Stars." Whether or not producers will do more pictures that are off the beaten path will be determined by audience reaction, he added.

Sees Place for Color

Mr. Briskin's contract with the company extends for three years from January 1st and was not up for discussion during his visit to New York, the executive said. Concerning the reorganization plan he said that there has been no mention of his becoming a member of the board of directors of the reorganized company. He expressed himself as favoring the provision of the plan which would permit company executives and employees to acquire stock in the new company. The plan, as a whole, should be received favorably by stockholders and creditors alike, he said.

Although it is not now planned to use color in any RKO productions either this year or next, Mr. Briskin said that it is his belief that it has a definite place in motion pictures and great value for certain types of pictures, but it cannot be overemphasized and must be used with great care.

Questioned concerning the possible effects of television on motion pictures, the studio chief said that the new medium will, if anything, be of help to the industry.

National Decency Legion Reviews 18 New Pictures

Of 18 new pictures received and classified by the National Legion of Decency during the current week 11 were called unobjectionable for general patronage, five were noted as unobjectionable for adults and two were cited as objectionable in part. The new pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Arizona Mahoney," "Besehl ist Besehl" (German), "Die Ganze Welt Dreht Sich Un Liebe" (German), "General Spanky," "Jungle Princess," "Roaring Lead," "Sing Me a Love Song," "Song of the Gringo," "Stormy Trails," "Three Smart Girls," "Yellow Cruise." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Banjo on My Knee," "Der Mutige Seefahrer" (German), "Laughing at Trouble," "Lloyds of London," "Poil de Carotte" (French). Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Rembrandt," "Wald-Winter" (German).

Minneapolis Kills Limitation Measure

For the third time in six weeks the Minneapolis, Minn., city council committee on ordinances has voted—3 to 2—against a measure to limit the number of theatres in the city. All measures have been advanced on the basis of fire, safety or traffic hazards but are admittedly backed by interested showmen. Minority members of the committee have threatened to bring the matter to the floor of the council.

Aylesworth Urges Educators to Aid Screen and Radio

Educators must cooperate with leaders in radio and motion pictures if the educational phases of these amusement industries are to be developed properly, M. H. Aylesworth, chairman of Radio Keith Orpheum Corporation and former president of the National Broadcasting Company, declared in a speech at Princeton University this week.

Mr. Aylesworth spoke at a reunion of the Guild of Brackett Lecturers which was attended by the faculty of the university.

Radio and motion pictures are primarily amusement enterprises and their interest and adaptability in the field of education are necessarily limited, the film executive said. The usefulness of these mediums in schools is, however, unlimited, he said, and should be recognized and adopted by educators.

"Public information, news, great national events, governmental and industrial affairs are the best means of carrying on education by radio," he said. "The primary field of radio broadcasting in education is in the homes of the people and not in the classroom and it is most effective in what might be called adult education."

After emphasizing again that the screen and radio are constituted chiefly for entertainment, Mr. Aylesworth said:

"The motion picture industry has always been willing and anxious to aid the student in the classroom. . . . However, if we are to make motion pictures effective in the classroom, where we have both visual and aural illustrations and demonstrations, it becomes necessary for a definite plan of instruction which is acceptable in all of the schools, colleges and universities, to be sufficiently outlined for those in the motion picture industry whose duty it is to deal with this subject to intelligently prepare the material for the classroom screen."

Roxy Reorganization Seen Delayed to March

Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey has set December 18th as a new hearing date for filing a plan of reorganization for the Roxy theatre, New York, and close observers of the developments are of the opinion that it is unlikely the property will be freed of court supervision before March. Judge Caffey discharged the Real Estate Bondholders' Protective Committee as intervening parties on December 2nd. There is a growing belief that Twentieth Century-Fox will operate the theatre, ultimately, under a long term lease.

Decision Reserved In Tally-FWC Appeal

Decision in an attempt by T. L. Talley and the Corbar Corporation to have the Fox West Coast receivership case reopened was reserved in the United States circuit court of appeals in San Francisco this week. A decision is not expected for some time. The hearing was on an appeal from a lower court which held it had no jurisdiction.

"TARZAN" TOPICS!

FRENCH COPYRIGHT STEP PERILS U. S. ENTRANCE

Law Considered by Government of France Would Prevent Assignment to Anyone

A new copyright law now being considered by the French Government will if approved, prove a serious obstacle to the entrance of the United States into the International Copyright Convention, may bring the withdrawal of other nations from the convention, and may prevent producers from using material written by French authors and playwrights.

According to a report to the copyright committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America the proposed law is so widely different from the American juridical conception of a copyright that producers could not make enforceable exclusive contracts with authors.

"The law was drafted and is sponsored by individuals with a social and economic point of view which is difficult of comprehension for American business people accustomed to dealing in literary or artistic properties commercially," the report points out. The sponsors are quoted as saying that they very definitely desire to depart from emphasis on copyright as a species of property to its treatment as an element of personality involved in "labor."

The report, prepared by Gabriel L. Hess, general counsel for the MPPDA, points out that the proposed bill, by its provisions against alienation of an author's rights, prevents assignments of a copyright to anyone. It does, however, permit the author to make certain concessions, apparently in the form of licenses, to others to exercise certain rights in a limited way.

"Despite the idealistic interest of the sponsors of this legislation in saving authors and men of letters from what they believe to be exploitation by others," the report continues, "legislation of the type proposed will render a distinct disservice to authors. While we still live under socio-economic systems which preserve the profit motive and hold out pecuniary rewards for creative ability, there will be no incentive to be an unsung, unpublished, unproduced and unheard of author. French authors may find that, under the onerous conditions of this law, there will be fewer publishing houses, motion picture or stage play producers, willing to undertake or risk investment in bringing the works or production adaptations thereof to public attention nationally or internationally."

Of three main sections of the law, one devoted to "Publishers' Contracts" is of interest to motion picture producers in the light of the introductory comment that the special regulations are to be applied to all categories of publications "to be sold in stores, for musical publications, for phonograph publications, for cinematographic publications, and for the publication of matters graphic, plastic or applied art." Under the provisions of this section it may be impossible for a producer to negotiate for production rights for other than a specific work or to put an author under exclusive contract.

Basically, the law differs from the American basis of copyright rights, according to the report, in that it assumes that a copyright is inherent in the person of the author, is inalienable, that is cannot be sold or given away, and comprises the moral right to claim authorship of the work and to stop any attack on the work by destruction, deformation, mutilation or any other change, and the pecuniary right to obtain remuneration for exploitation of the work in any form. Simply, this is taken to mean that while an author may grant the right to some one else to produce his work in any specified form, he retains the original right to the work and may, by legal sanction, prevent any change in the work itself or in any provisions of the license he grants.

The law also differs from American legal practice in a point, common also to other European copyright laws, covering the definition of the scope of copyright subject matter. Having no limitation to "writings," oral copyright is included in this scope as it is also in the Rome Convention of the International Copyright Convention. This definition is one of the points which has deferred entrance of the United States into the International Convention.

"Great Guy" Release Set for Christmas

Christmas Day is the date selected by Grand National Films for release of the James Cagney production, "Great Guy." The company expects to have one-third of its entire program completed or underway by the end of December, according to an announcement.

Operator Unions Still Unmerged

Representatives of the Allied union and Local 306 of New York met in the office of Howard Cullman at the Roxy theatre on December 7th and failed to complete ironing out of differences which have prevented consummation of the merger urged by Mayor La Guardia. Another meeting was agreed upon but no date for it was set.

Washington Warner Meeting

Warner Brothers managers in the Washington, D. C., territory this week met in the offices of John J. Payette, general zone manager, for a discussion of policies. Among those who spoke were: George A. Crouch, assistant general zone manager; three district managers—Harry Lohmeyer, Washington; Nat Glasser, Virginia, and Guy Wonders, Maryland; Frank La Falce, director of publicity and advertising; Charles MacGowan, head of the contract department; Alton Pratt, head of the sound department; Louis Ribnitzki, assistant film booker, and George Werner, short subjects manager.

Paramount and General Pictures Set Sales Sessions

Conclusion this week of mid-winter sales meetings by Columbia Pictures and Universal was followed by the determination by Paramount and General Pictures of dates for similar meetings. Paramount set January 8th to 10th, in Hollywood, and General scheduled January 15th, in Chicago.

Abe Montague, Columbia general sales manager, closed the two-day sales convention at the Drake Hotel in Chicago as he disclosed that the company has already sold 87½ per cent of the total available bookings. He also said that a decision would be made shortly relative to the feasibility of roadshowing "Lost Horizon" when it is released. He stated that reports of men in the field on the plan are being studied.

More than 75 delegates were in attendance, comprising division and branch managers, office managers, bookers and the sales forces of the following Columbia exchanges: Washington, D. C., Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and Des Moines. Division and branch managers present included Phil Dunas, the mid-central division manager; C. H. Shalit, central division manager; S. A. Galanty, mid-eastern division manager; A. H. Levy, A. S. Moritz, H. C. Bissell, M. Solomon, O. J. Ruby, C. D. Hill, B. C. Marcus, I. M. Weiner and M. H. Evidon. Home office representatives included Joe McConville, Rube Jackter, Lou Weinberg, Louis Astor, Max Weisfeldt, Hank Kaufman, Leo Jaffe, Maurice Grad, Milt Hannock, George Josephs and Leonard Picker.

With James R. Grainger, general sales manager, in charge and J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, R. H. Cochrane, president, and P. D. Cochrane, vice-president, at the luncheon, Universal held a winter sales meeting at the New York Athletic Club last weekend. "Three Smart Girls" and the forthcoming "Top of the Town" were discussed.

Present were F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager; E. T. Gomersall, western sales manager; Sig Wittmen, eastern district manager; Harry D. Graham, southern district manager; Clair Hauge, in charge of Canada; Eddie Bonns, short subjects sales manager; A. J. Herman, New England district manager; William Kramer and Sidney Singerman of the home office, and Leo Abrams, David Miller, J. Kaufman, Nate Sauber, Joseph Engel, Edward Heiber, Peter Dana, Morris Joseph, W. P. Kelly and S. Brint.

Paramount's annual production conference will be held at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles from January 8 to January 10, instead of at Palm Springs as originally scheduled.

General Pictures will hold a convention of exchange men in Chicago in January with Henri Elman, Chicago franchise holder, in charge.

William Danzinger has rejoined the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer publicity department in the New York home office.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

There is more than one unfathomable aspect to the United States Government's Social Security Act which, beginning January 1st, and thereafter forever more, imposes a compulsory tax on motion picture and all other business employees against old age insurance that becomes due and payable at 65. The rigid optimists of the Administration point out that Mr. John Q. Citizen, on the average, will receive some $85 per month after 65, and they arbitrarily establish 77 as the average age of mortality. Their point is that the average man not only reaches age 65, but putters about until he's 77.

The payoff is that the United States Government's Bureau of Census now announces that man's average span of life is 59 years!

Tsk-tsk Department:

"We're keeping pace with the times," shouts the Roanoke theatre in bold newspaper advertisement display. "Two weeks ago," they continue, "we inaugurated the Triple Feature Program in K. C. It was accorded an ovation—literally a landslide. Today momentous events are taking place, courses are being changed, new thoughts are taking hold of the people, and the same thing is true of the entertainment world. So we say, 'We are keeping the pace.'" And with that eloquent introduction the Roanoke theatre management announces three feature productions—"Three Wise Guys," "Meet Nero Wolfe" and "Navy Born"—all for the magnificent charge of ten cents.

That may be keeping the pace in Kansas City's bitter double-bill battle—but it's certainly not keeping the peace.

"Writer, director and prospective star would all benefit from seeing the story staged before being filmed. New constructive ideas would be generated, and I believe the final picturization would be a better one as a result."—Hollywood Director Edward H. Griffith, in Film Daily.

A better idea would be to have the writer, director and prospective star see the completed motion picture, observe how it "flops" and then make it over the right way. That's the pre-view method.

Many a turkey put to roasting for holiday tables had a theatrical inspiration.

Mrs. E. J. Myrick, whose husband is managing director of the United Chain Theatres in New Orleans, is, on the occasion of this turkey-season, celebrating her third year as America's only large-scale woman turkey raiser. Mrs. Myrick's turkey farm is a 300-acre expanse near Folsom, La. She regularly travels to the spot from New Orleans with bundles of scientific turkey-raising journals to do the job along "completely scientific lines." Today she has 1,800 large turkeys, healthy, well fed and in the best of shape for the Christmas carving knife.

She does not build shelters for them, but has them roost in the open. Mrs. Myrick developed her own feed, and worked out the idea of shifting the flock every so often from one part of her farm to another, keeping them together with a large screen. As soon as they have eaten up all the green things she moves them to avoid any danger of disease from contamination. Outside the main enclosure is a smaller one, a "jail" for misbehaving turkey-cocks. When they fight they are segregated this way, so as not to be a disturbing influence on the weaker sex. Within a day or so they calm down and they're let out on parole.

His patience exhausted, Selig finally rapped loudly on the exhibitor's desk. "Hiram," he shouted, "You only see me once in a while—and you can see these cattle every day. Let's talk motion picture business!"

Schenck Awarded Option on Stock

The stockholders of Loew's, Inc., gathered at their annual meeting in New York Tuesday and approved a five-year personal contract for Nicholas M. Schenck, president, and the transfer of the late Irving G. Thalberg's unexpired five-year option for the annual purchase of 9,698 2/5 shares of stock at $40 per share by a vote of 970,414 to 4,284. More than 100 stockholders attended the session, which was conducted by J. Robert Rubin. The contract is the first Mr. Schenck has had with the company.

All officers of Loew's were reelected at a board meeting Wednesday.

Under provisions of the five-year contract, Mr. Schenck's salary and percentage continues as heretofore. He has been getting $2,500 a week, plus two and a half per cent of the net profit after deductions of $6.50 dividends on the preferred stock and $2 on the common stock. Last year, it was said by Mr. Rubin, on a query by a minority stockholder, the president received $312,000 and the year before $186,000.

The transfer of Mr. Thalberg's unexercised stock option was the subject of much criticism. A number of the minority stockholders were of the opinion that Mr. Schenck's salary or bonus should be increased rather than transfer the option. It was pointed out also by Mr. Rubin that in 1932 Mr. Schenck turned down a long-term stock option as well as a service contract, stating at the time that he felt it was for the best interests of the company that the others get the contracts.

The stock arrangement, as passed, provides that Mr. Schenck cannot sell the stock for less than $15 under what he pays for it; and that if the stock is under $55 he cannot sell. In the event the president should die within the five-year period, his estate can claim the stock option for the given year, provided death takes place after February 1.

Mr. Schenck, Mr. Rubin, David Warfield, George M. Armsby, David Bernstein, I. Frey, Leopold Friedman, John R. Hazel, C. C. Moskowitz, William A. Parker, Thomas Nelson Perkins and William A. Phillips were reelected directors of the company.

During the meeting, Mr. Bernstein, who is treasurer, said that all Loew employees earning $50 and under a week who have been with the company or any of its subsidiaries for more than a year will receive two-weeks' salary as a Christmas bonus. Other employes in the same brackets who have been with the company less than a year will be given a bonus on a sliding scale.

Nicholas M. Schenck and Al Lichtman are scheduled to arrive in Hollywood this week from New York.

MEMORIAL SERVICES FOR DEAD PROPOSED

To the Editor of the Herald:

For some time it has been my wish to always try to do some things which will keep clean in the minds of everyone our industry and its people.

And so, adding another thought to these attempts, now comes the idea of "Memorial Services" to be held once each year in memory of those who have passed from our midst. It is indeed astounding to see the large list of names which I have gathered, and it is my proposal to set aside that great enemy "selfishness" and let friends, former business associates and relatives attend with us such a service to pay homage and to show our respect in this direction.

Therefore, I would like with your cooperation to gather a committee and for us decide on the best efforts that we may lend toward this movement.—Ben Roman, 395 Fort Washington Avenue, New York City.

ADVISES EXPLOITING OF NEW WESTERN STAR

To the Editor of the Herald:

To date I have played two Grand National pictures, "White Legion" and "Song of the Gringo." "White Legion" is all right, nothing startling or sensational but a good feature for a double feature program or a family night.

However, I am glad to say that "Song of the Gringo," with Tex Ritter, is decidedly one of the better westerns. My patrons all went out praising the picture highly and I anticipate a very nice business on the next Ritter. I did much better on this one than I do on the average western.

It will pay the exhibitor to do a little extra advertising and exploiting not only to sell the new company but also the new star.—Ed Mansfied, Regent Amusement Co., Kansas City, Mo.

WPA Discharges Striking Actors

The climax of the "sit-down" strike of 175 employees of the Federal Theatre Project of the Works Progress Administration in New York, as a result of the wholesale reduction over two weeks ago in all WPA ranks, was reached this week when the dissenting workers were discharged by Edmund H. Levy, Deputy Works Progress Administrator, in the absence of Colonel Brehon Somervell, New York WPA Administrator, who is in Washington. Approximately 100 of the discharged employees had been employed in the theatre project and the others in the labor project.

The "sit-down" strikers had been denied food by the WPA guards watching them since the strike started several days ago, and went out to a nearby restaurant. When they returned to the WPA headquarters at 701 Eighth Avenue, they were denied re-entry to the building and handed "pink slips" discharging them.

Mr. Levy announced that the dismissals had been ordered in compliance with a ruling by Colonel Somervell, which read:

"Notice is hereby given that all employees who collect or congregate on premises belonging to or rented by federal or New York City WPA projects to constitute an interruption of the regular work of the project, or who enter upon and remain, or remain on property occupied by WPA projects without official consent after closing hours, will be subject to immediate dismissal."

Actors Equity was also drawn into the dismissal disputes at its last meeting when arguments between angry WPA actors and Equity officers were narrowly diverted as the WPA workers demanded aid from the organization in keeping their federal jobs. Some 992 federal workers are scheduled to be dropped and many of these are actors.

Meanwhile, in Los Angeles, where the second largest Federal Theatre Project outside of Manhattan is concentrated, 300 employees will be dropped from the theatre project roll, according to J. Howard Miller, western regional director. This move is a result of the general reduction of WPA ranks and will reduce the Los Angeles payroll about 7,000, Mr. Miller said.

On the other hand, Administrator Harry L. Hopkins in Washington indicated a halt to any general WPA dismissal policy. He gave assurance that none needing work would be dropped. New York City lay-offs were stopped.

Court Postpones All William Fox Actions

Vice-Chancellor W. Frank Sooy has postponed all action in the New Jersey chancery court on the $9,535,000 William Fox receivership because of the growing complication of actions in other courts. The hearing on a show cause order involving efforts to have All-Continent Corporation placed in receivership and further restrained from disposing of its assets, was set over indefinitely. Decision was postponed to January 5 on an application made this week to dismiss Mr. Fox personally from this action.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Three Re-creations

Of the 10 latest pictures put into production, two are re-creations of films that in years past thrilled legitimate stage and motion picture audiences. One is the memorable "Seventh Heaven," which first lifted Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell to stardom. The other is Booth Tarkington's "Clarence." Other than these, the starters are new material. A similar representation shows in the list of completed pictures, where "Quality Street," made once before, about a decade ago, has been readapted for modern audiences.

In the new "Seventh Heaven" version, which Henry King is directing for Twentieth Century-Fox, Simone Simon and James Stewart will be seen in the roles which originally featured Miss Gaynor and Farrell on the screen. The supporting cast includes Gregory Ratoff, John Qualen, Gale Sondergaard, Victor Killian, Mady Christians and Thomas Beck.

Under its own sponsorship Paramount started "Clarence." It will present Roscoe Karns, Charlotte Wynters, Johnny Downs, Eleanore Whitney, Eugene Pallette, Spring Byington and Richard Powell. George Archainbaud is directing. The second number on the Paramount program is "Bring Me His Ears," a Harry Sherman Hopalong Cassidy production. William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison and George Hayes are starred with Stephen Morris, Nora Lane, John Beach, Charlene Wyatt, Trevor Burdette, Al Bridge and George Chesebro. Nate Watt is directing.

Two pictures started at Warners. In "The Case of the Stuttering Bishop" Ann Dvorak, Donald Woods, Linda Perry, Anne Nagel, Gordon Oliver, Tom Kennedy, Helen MacKellar and Craig Reynolds will be seen. William Clemens is directing. With William Keighley at the helm, "The Prince and the Pauper" started. The cast includes Billy and Bobby Mauch, Barton MacLane, Murray Kinnell, Montague Love, Claude Rains, Fritz Leiber, Donald Crisp and Errol Flynn.

MGM started "Under the Cover of Night." Edmund Lowe and Florence Rice are starred, with Henry Daniell, Frank Reicher, Theodore Von Eltz, Sarah Haden, Dorothy Peterson, Zeffie Tilbury, Robert McWade, Nat Pendleton and Eric Welton. George B. Seitz is directing.

Columbia started "Raiding Guns," which will feature Charles Starrett, Peggy Stratford, Charles Middleton, Ed LeSaint and Ted Oliver. Leon Barsha is directing.

For Radio release, George Hirliman started "Park Avenue Logger." With practically all work being done on location, the cast lists George O'Brien, Beatrice Roberts, Gertrude Short, Bert Hanlon, Ward Bond, Willard Robertson and Robert Emmett O'Connor. David Howard is directing.

A serial, "Dick Tracy," was started by Republic. Under the direction of Ray Taylor and Alan James, it will feature Ralph Bird, Kay Hughes, Smiley Burnette, Carleton Young, Fred Hamilton, John Holland and Richard Beach.

Maurice Conn Productions began work on "Dawn Rider." The cast features Ariane Allen, David Sharp, John Merton, John Ward, Roger Williams, Stanley Blystone, Frances Walker, Earl Dwyer and Allen Greer.

Though the number of finished productions is small, two of them seem to be of the class that excites patron and exhibitor interest. Potentially in this group is Radio's "Quality Street." In it Katherine Hepburn, Franchot Tone and Fay Bainter are featured with Eric Blore, Cora Witherspoon, Estelle Winwood, Florence Lake, Helena Grant, Bonita Granville, Clifford Severn and Sherwood Bailey, George Stevens directed.

More important of the two completed Twentieth Century-Fox Films undoubtedly is "Stowaway." A Shirley Temple picture, it also will present Robert Young, Alice Faye, Eugene Pallette, Helen Westley, Arthur Tracher, Allan Lane, J. Edward Bromberg, Astrid Allwyn, Robert Greig, Jayne Regan, Julius Tannen, Willie Fung, Phillip Ahn, Helen Jerome Eddy, William Stack and Honorable Wu. William A. Seiter directed. The Jones Family in "Off to the Races" presents Jed Prouty, Slim Summerville, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Kenneth Howell, June Carlson, George Ernest, Florence Roberts, Billy Mahan, Ann Gillis, Russell Gleason and Fred Toones. Frank R. Strayer directed.

"Avenging Angels" was completed by Treasure Pictures. The cast lists Noel Madison, Lila Lee, Ethel Jackson, Douglas Walton, Harry Holman, Arthur Singley and Snug Pollard. Victor Halperin directed.

WARNERS SEE RECORD WITH ELEVEN IN WORK

With 11 pictures now in production and tests for another being conducted, the Warner Brothers-First National studio at Burbank claims to have set not only a company record but what they believe to be a record for the industry. Four pictures entered production last week end, in addition to seven others already before the cameras. According to Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production, every one of the 22 sound stages on the Warner lot is occupied daily for the first time in company annals.

Experience Pays

Major producers will use more of their name contract players in their lower bracket budget pictures during the coming season. Successful experiments by Warners and MGM have shown that it is possible to bring in a picture within low budget requirements with two or more high salaried players in the cast. The reason is that the additional salary cost is more than balanced by the fact that a picture can be made more quickly with capable performers handling the top roles.

Pictures dependent on inexperienced actors to interpret the story take longer to make and are subjected to delays which are not encountered when experienced players work.

MGM's success with pictures boasting such names as Franchot Tone, Lionel Barrymore, Stuart Erwin, and others has made others pause to consider. Warners have launched "The Great O'Malley," which offers Pat O'Brien, Sybil Jason and Humphrey Bogart and are planning others. Other producers are expected to fall in line.

Plane Economy

Picture companies have taken to the air for entertainment and production purposes before, but seldom has one made use of airplanes as has George Hirliman in connection with production of "Park Avenue Logger" previously.

Needing lumber camp sequences, it was discovered the best available locations were in Eureka, Cal., Grant's Pass, Oregon, and Bellingham, Wash. Sound trucks, technical and labor crews were sent to the locations over the road and via rail. To get George O'Brien, leading lady Beatrice Roberts, director David Howard, camera man Frank Good, associate producer Leonard Goldstein and assistant director George Sherman to the sites, a 14-passenger Boeing Transport plane was chartered.

Leaving Los Angeles on December 3 for locations that previously had been selected, also by plane, the company made locations in three states in four days and was scheduled to arrive home on Sunday, the 6th.

Chartering a plane for such a purpose may seem to be a costly undertaking. But when it is considered that by using the old-fashioned means of transportation 10 days would be required just to move the company around, the experiment is economical not only from a time-saving viewpoint but from that of expense as well. Additional cost entailed by using the plane was fully made up for by the amount of money saved in cutting down the number of days alloted to the production schedule.

Hays Returns With Italy's Film Accord

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., returned from Europe on the Normandie Monday and said that he was "immensely pleased" with the accord reached with the Italian government concerning the withdrawal of American motion picture revenue from that country and the importation there of American pictures.

Beyond stating that "an accord had been reached in principle," Mr. Hays declined to discuss the agreement, saying that details would have to be made public by Ambassador William Phillips at Rome, whom Mr. Hays credited with the success of the discussions.

Italy had proposed a drastic limitation of imports of American motion pictures and a decree which would have retained in these two-thirds of the revenue of American film companies derived from that country, with additional limitations on the uses to which such credits might be put. Earlier reports from Italy indicated that no quota restrictions would be imposed and that approximately 50 per cent of the Italian revenue could be withdrawn without specific limitations on the uses to which the balances remaining in Italy might be put.

Mr. Hays said that the American State Department and Ambassador Phillips had been "thoroughly cooperative and most helpful" in the situation and that there was apparent in Italy "a sympathetic understanding of the problems there of the American film industry."

Mr. Hays said that he had not been fully informed concerning the objectives of the meeting called by the National Council for Industrial Progress, which was to open in Washington Wednesday, and that as a result no decision had been made at that time on sending an official industry representative to the meeting.

The MPPDA president also said that no successor would be named to fill the post vacated by John Boettiger, his assistant for the past two years, who resigned recently to become publisher of William Randolph Hearst's Seattle Post-Intelligencer. Mr. Boettiger's work, he said, would be absorbed by others in the organization.

When queried by ship news reporters for metropolitan newspapers on the recurrent reports that James A. Farley would become associated with the MPPDA in some official capacity, Mr. Hays said: "That's your story. It belongs to the newspapers and all I know of it is what I learn from you."

Mr. Hays, who was accompanied by Mrs. Hays, was met at Quarantine by Carl E. Milliken, Gabriel L. Hess, Frederick L. Herron, Kenneth Clark and Walter Trumbull, of the MPPDA, and John Flinn, former secretary of the Code Authority for the industry.

While abroad, Mr. Hays visited Paris and London, in addition to Rome, and while in England was honored by the Film Group of the Federated British Industries.

AMPA Picks Board And Committee

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' new board of directors and committees were announced last Thursday in New York by Gordon S. White, president, at a meeting at the Hotel Edison. Mr. White pointed out that the selections are subject to approval by the membership at a later session. District Attorney William C. Dodge was guest of honor at the luncheon.

The new board comprises Mr. White as chairman, Paul Gulick, Ralph Lund, Herbert S. Berg, Don Hancock, Marvin Kirsch, Ray Gallagher and Paul Benjamin.

On the finance committee are Mr. Berg, chairman, Mr. Kirsch and Mr. Gallagher.

Mr. Gulick is chairman of the membership committee which includes Joseph Gallagher, Paul Lazarus and Mr. Lund.

Al Sherman heads the publicity committee which consists of Jose Schorr, Peggy Goldberg, Jack Harrower and James P. Cunningham.

Tentatively set on the committee on arrangements for annual awards are Vincent Trotta, chairman, and Barret McCormick.

Although it has been decided to hold meetings every other week, an exception to the rule will prevail this week when a special session will be called to hear George Hummel, of the Times-Wide World, explain and demonstrate the new portable sending apparatus of World Wide Photos, besides Friedrich Feher, composer and director of "The Robber Symphony" and Cyril Von Baumann, of the Roosevelt-Baumann Ecuador Exposition.

Parents to Join Board of Review In Film Selection

New York's machinery for independent selection of suitable programs for a potential weekly audience of 200,000 local school children and parents and relatives was extended this week to embrace a plan for pre-viewing all product long before it reaches theatres.

According to the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, under whose auspices the School Review group known as the Schools Motion Picture Committee will now review films, more than 50 public and private schools are represented in the movement inaugurated less than a year ago. Mrs. Alonzo Klaw, chairman of the committee, said upwards of 50,000 students already are being influenced by the activities of the committee.

The plan had its origin in formation of the Schools Motion Picture Committee, with Mrs. Alonzo Klaw, of Friends' Seminary, as chairman; Mrs. William Barclay Parsons, Jr., president of the Parents' League, vice-chairman, and Mrs. Irving Heyman, chairman of the Horace Mann School Motion Picture Committee, as secretary, aided by an executive committee consisting of Mrs. William T. Kennedy, Mrs. Russell Patterson, and Mrs. William Platt. Its purpose was to select complete weekend programs for young folk between the ages of 12 and 16, that also have adult interest and appeal.

Members of the committee see all releases in advance, qualifying first as regular members of the Review Committee of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures.

In addition to Mrs. Klaw and Mrs. Heyman, the following names have been submitted for membership to the Reviewing Committees of the National Board of Review, so that they may participate in the Schools Committee reviewing: Mmes. T. Merrill Prentice, Collier Platt, Jacob Gould Schurman, Jr., Austin Purvis, C. Blake Townsend, Whittemore Littell, Whitney Shepardson, Russel H. Patterson, James A. Edgar, Charles V. Graham, Peter Oliver, S. C. Coleman, John B. McAfee, E. A. Asherman, Howard Hamershlag, Albert Clay, Stephen Davenport, Archibald Richards, David L. Richardson, William Platt, Gilmer Siler, Alfred Loomis and Mrs. John L. Rutherford.

Fannin Election Assured

At the next meeting of the board of directors of the International Seating Corporation, W. A. Fannin, formerly district manager for Heywood-Wakefield Company, will be elected president. C. C. Koontz has just returned to International Seating offices in New York from a trip to southern and western key cities.

Joseph Steiner, sales manager for Tobis-America, has returned to New York after a sales tour of the country on which he completed arrangements for simultaneous openings of "Carnival in Flanders" in key cities on January 1st. The picture is going into its fourth month at the Filmarte, N. Y.

600 HONOR ZUKOR IN HOLLYWOOD
JUBILEE MEDALS GO TO 200 OWNERS

Many Stars of Silent and Sound Era Attend Testimonial Gathering of Executives and Academy

More than 600 guests attended the dinner given by executives and stars of the industry in cooperation with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences at the Trocadero in Hollywood last Thursday in honor of Adolph Zukor, chairman of Paramount. It was the first of the Zukor Silver Jubilee social activities. Paramount will be host to 3,000 in Hollywood January 7th.

At the event Thursday, the guests were addressed by Louis B. Mayer, Jesse L. Lasky, Joseph M. Schenck, Frank Lloyd and others who have known Mr. Zukor or have been associated with him since his first days in the industry. The honor guest spoke briefly in acknowledgment.

Many stars were present of the silent as well as the sound era who made their first appearance before a motion picture camera as players on Mr. Zukor's roster, including Marguerite Clark, the Paramount production head's first "discovery," who journeyed from her home on New Orleans' St. Charles Avenue to California to pay tribute to the man who directed her screen career.

Boris Morros, associated with Mr. Zukor for many years as managing director of the Paramount theatre in Times Square and now musical director of the studio, was chairman of the entertainment program which included Jack Benny, Irving Berlin, George Burns, Martha Raye, Bert Wheeler, Gertrude Niesen, the Ritz Brothers, Tony Martin and others.

The dinner was planned by a committee which included Darryl F. Zanuck, George Jessel, Frank Capra, Claudette Colbert, Cecil B. DeMille, Howard Estabrook, Henry Herzbrun, Grover Jones, Mr. Lasky, Mr. Lloyd, Carole Lombard, Nathan Levinson, Mr. Mayer, Mary Pickford, William Powell, Norman Taurog and Waldemar Young.

The ceremonies were highlighted with the presentation of an inscribed silver cigar box to Mr. Zukor by the Academy. Mr. Zanuck was chairman of the dinner and George Jessel acted as toastmaster. Joe Lewis was master of ceremonies.

OHIO EXHIBITORS FELICITATE ZUKOR

Among the final acts of the delegates to the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio convention last week at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel in Columbus was the passage of a resolution congratulating Adolph Zukor on his Silver Jubilee. A copy of the resolution was wired to Mr. Zukor at the Paramount studios in Hollywood.

Another resolution criticized Paramount's accessories selling policy as a "burden upon exhibitors." A copy of this resolution also was mailed to Mr. Zukor.

Exhibitors in U. S. and Canada Who Played "Queen Elizabeth," First Feature, To Get Silver Medallions as Tribute

More than 200 exhibitors serviced by exchanges in 22 key cities in the United States and Canada who played "Queen Elizabeth," starring Sarah Bernhardt in the first full-length picture shown in America, through which Adolph Zukor pioneered in production, will be awarded silver medallions by Paramount Pictures, it was announced in New York this week by Neil F. Agnew, vice-president and general sales manager.

It was in 1912, according to Terry Ramsaye's history of the motion picture, "A Million and One Nights," that Mr. Zukor first became interested in "Queen Elizabeth," which had been produced in Paris by Louis Mercanton. Mr. Zukor, Joseph Engel and Edwin S. Porter, who produced Rex pictures for Universal, formed the Engadine Corporation and bought the American rights to the film for $18,000. Mr. Zukor then got for it a license from the Motion Picture Patents Company and it was decided to roadshow the film. The picture was not proving a success along these lines when Alexander Lichtman, now assistant to Nicholas M. Schenck, president, at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and then only a short while out of the army, joined Engadine as a salesman, selling the picture for a total of approximately $80,000 for a handsome profit. Meanwhile, Mr. Zukor and his associates had formed Famous Players Film Company and his climb to the top of the industry was well started.

Of the list of 204 exhibitors who will receive the medallions, 106 are in the East, 68 in the West and 30 in Canada.

Fortune To Handle "Robber Symphony"

"The Robber Symphony" will be the first picture to be handled through the recently formed Fortune Film Corporation, an agreement having been closed by Al Friedlander for Fortune with Edward L. Klein of Concordia Films, Ltd., of London, the producer. The picture, featuring Magda Sonja and Hans Feher, is described as the first "composed" film and was written, directed and composed by Friedrich Feher. Production was at the Elstree studios in England with exteriors photographed in the Austrian Alps. Mr. Friedlander is negotiating for a Broadway theatre in New York. He plans to run the picture on a two a day basis with Mr. Feher conducting a symphony orchestra for the run of the picture.

SEVEN DIVIDENDS, FIVE BONUSES, 30% STOCK GAIN REFLECT EARNINGS

Fourth Quarter Earnings of Paramount Are Expected to Be in Excess of Those of Nine Previous Months Combined

Numerous dividend declarations and surprise bonus payments to employees are the latest evidence of the marked upward trend in motion picture earnings.

This week's dividend crop will harvest rewards to the thousands of stockholders of Columbia Pictures Corporation, Keith-Albee-Orpheum, Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., of Canada, Loew's London Theatres, Paramount Pictures, Inc., Trans Lux, and Balaban and Katz.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation—emerging in reorganization from receivership—Twentieth Century-Fox, Loew's, Wometco Theatres and Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises have started the bonus-payment move in motion pictures. Others are expected to follow, with several of the other "Big Eight" companies reported to be considering such action.

Wall Street nodded approvingly at the estimates by financial editors of a 30 per cent increase in the valuations of motion picture stocks on the New York Stock Exchange between November 1st and December 1st. The appreciation started when the general market took an upward swing immediately following the Presidential election, when motion picture stocks on the Exchange took on an added value of some $82,172,500 in the two weeks between the election and November 16th, rising from a $812,592,000 valuation to $894,764,500.

Paramount Quarter High

News from the Paramount headquarters atop the home office building at Times Square indicated that the fourth quarter earnings are expected to exceed those of the whole previous nine months, which earnings totaled $2,256,685. Too, it was said, that aggregate savings of $5,000,000 are expected as a result of the economy program inaugurated following the reorganization last year. Immediately all three Paramount stock issues reacted to this news and on Tuesday the stocks set new highs for the year. Most active of the group was the common, which gained one and five-eights points to a high of 23 on a sales turnover of 48,300 shares. The first preferred rose seven points to 166 on a trading of 4,300 shares, while the second preferred gained one and one-quarter points, to a new high of 20¾ points.

Indications that Paramount's earnings for the fourth quarter in 1936 might exceed the $2,256,685 net for the whole nine months came last Friday when estimates were made by observers on the outside that the final three months probably will bring a $2,500,000 profit to the company.

Earnings for the first two months of the current quarter will approximate $1,750,000, and a December net of $750,000 is not unlikely, in the opinion of informed sources, reported MOTION PICTURE DAILY. The figure for the final quarter, however, will depend to a large extent upon the receipt of additional dividends from theatre subsidiaries and whether or not anything is applied to earnings for the period from the $700,000 remaining of the special inventory reserve of $2,500,000 which was set aside out of 1935 earnings, it was said. In the first three-quarters of this year a total of $1,800,000 of the special reserve was applied.

CIRCUIT ANNOUNCES BONUS AND PRIZES

A $15,000 bonus plan and prize money totaling $19,000 payable each quarter to managers and their assistants has been announced by H. J. Fitzgerald, general manager of the Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises. Distribution of the money will be based on business increases over a certain quota in each theatre. Theatre cashiers, formerly receiving $10.50 weekly minimum salary and $15 maximum, will be increased to $12.50 and $18, it was announced at the same time. The circuit comprises 49 houses in Wisconsin and Michigan.

Dividend action on the company's first preferred was postponed by the Paramount board at its meeting yesterday until December 10. The board stated its intention of declaring a dividend on that date, payable on December 26 to stockholders of record on December 15, but said that it was found to be "impossible to determine the amount of the dividend until the latest possible earnings statements and dividend declarations have been reported by subsidiaries and received by Paramount."

Delay in receiving the necessary reports is occasioned by "the number of subsidiary companies controlled by Paramount and the ramifications of various tax problems," the company said.

Earnings and dividend prospects for the year end were discussed the other day with the board by a number of Paramount's principle theatre operators, it is understood. In New York at this time were N. L. Nathanson, of Canada; L. J. Ludwig and John Friedl of Minneapolis; Karl Hoblitzelle of Dallas, and A. H. Blank of Des Moines.

At the year end, arrears on Paramount's first preferred will amount to $12 a share, and $1.20 a share on the second preferred. According to the board's statement, there is no intention of taking dividend action on the second preferred at the December 10 meeting, on Thursday.

Regardless, financial editors of the news press predicted that Paramount's dividend payment would be set anywhere between $6 and the entire $12 arrears. The Evening Journal, New York, quoted "an officer of the company" as saying that a substantial payment "may have to be made."

"Sensational rise in earnings in the third quarter and the surtax clause (of the tax law) are chief factors forcing payment by the company," added the Journal.

$5,000,000 Savings Expected

The opinion was expressed by Motion Picture Daily that "aggregate savings of $5,000,000 are expected by Paramount officials to result from a program of current and future economies involving both operations and refunding."

Of this amount approximately $1,500,000 was said to have been realized already through home office and studio economies which have been placed in effect during the past four months. Another $2,000,000 in savings is anticipated on or immediately after January 1. Of this amount, $500,000 will reflect further economies in studio operations, bringing the total savings from increased operating efficiency to $4,000,000.

Dividends Coming from Columbia, KAO, Loew's Canadian Theatres, Loew's London Theatres, Paramount, Trans Lux

On January 1 Paramount will call in approximately $25,000,000 in bonds and other obligations of subsidiary companies both here and in England, which are now outstanding at interest rates of six per cent. The obligations will be replaced by private financing to cost three per cent. an official of Paramount said, according to the Daily. He estimated the saving from this source at $1,500,000.

Within six months, it was added, the outstanding $25,000,000 of debentures of Paramount Pictures, Inc., which also bear six per cent interest, will be called in by the company and likewise replaced with private financing which also would cost three per cent and result in a saving of another $1,500,000. None of the new financing will be public, it was said, and while the identity of the financing group was not divulged, it is believed that Atlas Corporation, Lehman Brothers and associates will figure prominently in the refunding program.

The home office and studio economies referred to, do not involve reductions of either personnel or salaries, it was explained. The home office economy program was described as "already completed," while savings at the studio are being effected largely through Adolph Zukor's success in keeping productions within budget limitations.

Refunding Underway

"Paramount Pictures, Inc., with current earnings running at the rate of around $1,000,000 monthly, is well on the road to recovering its former position as the leader in the industry in size and earning power," said the Wall Street Journal this week. "A continuation of this rate of business would place Paramount close to the top of the industry in annual income.

"Theatres are sharing in the general upturn in attendance throughout the country, studio operations are again on a profitable basis and, with the resulting improved credit of the company its six per cent funded debt is being refinanced on a three per cent basis.

"The stated policy of the present management is aimed at not only controlling the largest chain of theatres in the industry but also again showing the largest gross and net earnings," declared the Journal, adding:

"The refunding program is well underway. There are $24,998,182 six per cent debentures of the parent company outstanding, callable at par, and $20,058,422 mortgages and bonds of subsidiaries on which interest rates average around six per cent. Since Paramount and its subsidiaries now have over $20,000,000 cash on hand, it is planned to retire a portion of the debentures and refund the balance with three per cent serial bank loans. The various subsidiary obligations will also be refunded in a similar manner. Thus, arrangements have been completed for refinancing the $3,500,000 mortgage on the studio properties at three per cent for six years.

"It is hoped that this program will be completed within the next six months, effecting an annual saving in charges of around $1,000,000.

"To further reduce operating expense, plans call for a reduction of about $1,000,000 in New York controlled operating expense and a cut of about $1,000,000 in studio overhead.

Studio Improvements Cited

"Paramount reported a net profit for the September quarter of $2,013,764 after applying $200,000 inventory reserve—most of this net coming in the last two months of the period. Profits during the final quarter have been running at a better rate indicating the possibility of at least $3,000,000 net for the last three months.

"Although the sharp turn around in Paramount's affairs since last summer has been due mainly to the comeback in earning power of its chain of nearly 1,500 owned and associated theatres, important improvement has been made in studio operation in the last few months, putting this division of the business in the black. High-cost pictures, carried over from last year's schedule, caused losses in the production division in the first six months of 1936. These losses were partly charged against a reserve of $2,500,000 set up from 1935 earnings. New films being currently released or scheduled for release in coming months are expected to be much better in quality and are well within budget costs.

"Paramount's studios are now in charge of Adolph Zukor, chairman of board, who has spent a life time as a producer. Under his management, Paramount earned over $5,000,000 from its film production in 1933 and around $4,000,000 in 1934, when the theatres were still losing money. It is believed Paramount production department can again be built up to this lever of earning power.

"Paramount has by far the largest chain of theatres of any amusement company, about 1,100 leased, owned in fee or controlled by stock ownership, and a total of nearly 1,500 including associated houses," continued the Journal.

Theatres' Improved Status

"During the depression, most theatres lost money as a result of high overhead and low level of attendance, but during the receivership period Paramount and its subsidiaries arranged favorable adjustments in leases and debt charges of theatres. Now, with attendance and admissions on the upgrade, the improvement is reflected sharply in net. Once past the break-even point, from 70 per cent to 75 per cent of additional box office gross goes directly to net, since the only important item of increased expense is a higher film rental based on a percentage of the theatre gross.

"Average admission prices have risen slightly but exact figures are difficult to obtain since few general box office advances are made. During the depression, attendance was larger during the bargain hours and smaller when the higher evening prices prevailed. Now with more people at work, some of the bargain prices have been eliminated and attendance is larger at the regular price showings.

"Paramount's theatre operations are in charge of Barney Balaban, president of the company, who built up one of the most successful units in the chain, the Balaban and Katz theatres grouped around Chicago.

96 Cents a Share Earning Seen

"Paramount has not yet issued an income account covering the first nine months of operation as a whole. In the first quarter net was $718,922 after applying $800,000 of the inventory reserve; in the second quarter there was a net loss of $476,000 after applying $800,000 of the inventory reserve; and in the third quarter net was $2,013,764 after applying $200,000 of the reserve. On this basis, net for the nine months period was apparently about $2,300,000 after taking advantage of $1,800,000 of reserves set up from previous earnings. These reserves were made necessary because of high cost of films made in 1935, and now that studio operations are on a profitable basis they will no longer be necessary.

"On the basis of its present capitalization, Paramount's earnings in the third quarter were equal to 96 cents a share on 1,610,457 shares of common stock. In the final quarter profits per share should be materially larger. However, in gauging earnings available for the junior shares it should be borne in mind that the 249,981 shares of first preferred are each convertible into seven shares of common and the 644,140 shares of $10 par second preferred are each convertible into 9-10 of a share of common. In the event earnings on the common continue at their present rate, it would obviously be to the advantage of preferred holders to convert. Complete conversion would give the company 3,939,420 shares of capital stock.

Columbia Dividend

The board of directors of Columbia Pictures, at the annual meeting in New York last weekend, declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents per share on the common stock, and also on the voting trust certificates, payable January 2, 1937, to stockholders of record December 18.

Keith-Albee-Orpheum this week declared a dividend, out of capital surplus, of $7 per share on the seven per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock of the corporation for the four quarters ended June 30, 1933, payable on December 21 to stockholders of record December 14. The dividend covers the arrears due for all of 1933.

A dividend of $5 per share on the common stock of B. & K. has been declared by the company's board of directors. It is the first since July, 1932, when 37½ cents was paid.

Marcus Loew's Theatres of Canada voted an accumulation dividend of $1.75 a share on the seven per cent preferred, payable December 15. Arrears on the stock total $43.75 a share.

Loew's London Theatres also declared an accumulation dividend of 17½ cents a share on the seven per cent preferred, payable December 15. After this payment arrears will total $2.27½ per share.

Trans Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corporation has declared a special dividend of five cents a share, payable December 21 to stockholders of record December 2.

Bonuses Declared

The RKO circuit employees in the field and home office earning $40 and under per week will receive a Christmas bonus of a week's salary, the board of directors decided in New York this week. This differs from last year's bonus in that last year the extra checks were limited to the home office employees and that those earning from $40 to $150 were not included. It is expected the workers will receive the extra checks during the week of December 21.

Stockholders of Loew's, Inc., have approved a bonus of two weeks' salary for employees of a year's standing who earn less than $50 a week.

Twentieth Century-Fox last week announced that $500,000 in bonus checks would be distributed to all employees in the lower salary brackets and to the distribution forces throughout the world. The full bonus will be paid to those in the company employ for one year, with partial sums for those affiliated only six months.

Wometco Theatres, Inc., in Miami this week announced that it would give all employees who have been with the organization five years a two-weeks' salary bonus at Christmas. Those who have been employed for two years will receive one week's salary.

New German Color Process Hindered By Increased Cost

Because of financial difficuties being met at present by the German film industry there is little hope that Opticolor, the color process developed by German engineers, will be in general use in the immediate future, according to a report to the motion picture section of the Department of Commerce from R. M. Stephenson, United States Trade Commissioner in Berlin.

Use of the process by all cinema theatres in Germany would involve a total investment of 17,586,000 reichmarks, the report estimates. This sum would be expended for new projection lenses, new carbons and screens of greater reflecting efficiency. It is pointed out that the amount is about seven per cent of the gross box office receipts for the 1935-36 season. This burden would be added to a sum estimated at 20,000,000 reichmarks spent recently by theatres for installation of additional projectors made necessary by a decree of the Reichsfilm restricting the length of reels to 600 meters.

Although use of the process in production requires only a change in the camera lenses it is estimated that costs would be considerably increased because of the use of special scenic properties and the employment of color directors and other technicians. Additional costs of copying prints would total about 10 per cent of the costs for black and white prints and the cost of the film itself would be about 60 pfennigs a meter compared to 28 or 32 pfennigs for plain negative.

The report points out that German colored film production will be very largely dependent upon the domestic market because "there would be little profit to be made from exports, at least for a long time, as it is safe to assume that many foreign countries would be much slower than Germany in adopting the new method and in many other cases other processes would no doubt be employed."

"Gold Diggers" Take to Train

Forced to entrain for Buffalo when bad weather caught up with them, Warner Brothers' exploitation troupe of flying "Gold Diggers" were delayed 24 hours in that city on their return trip to Hollywood. They stopped at Columbus, O., Monday, Indianapolis, Ind., Tuesday, with Kansas City, Salt Lake City and San Francisco on their itinerary, which would bring them back to Los Angeles this weekend.

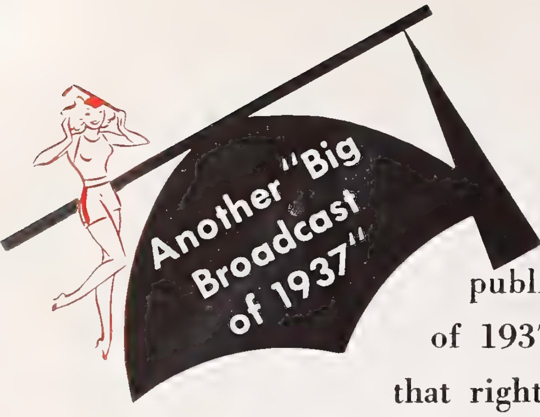
Bud Pollard, director, has filed a voluntary petition of bankruptcy in the United States district court for Southern New York. He lists liabilities of $15,850 and no assets.

Mr. EXHIBITOR: here is your sales analysis on

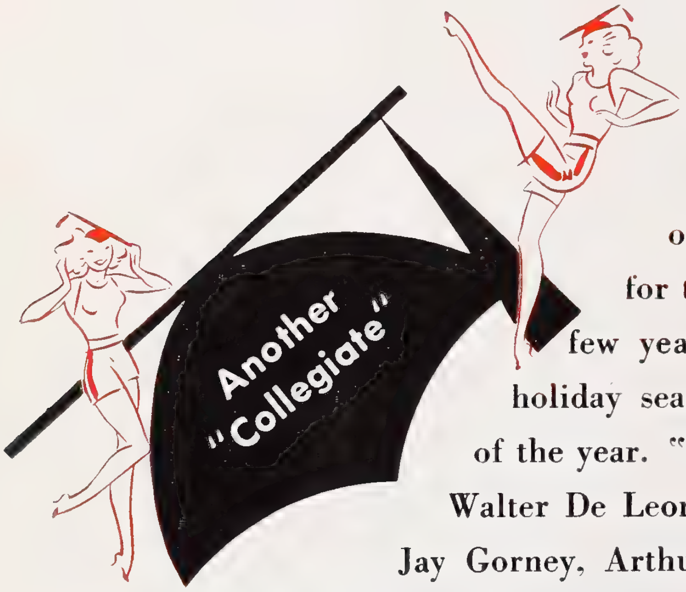
• All the facts you need to know to Put This Big Paramount Holiday Special in the top grosser class

Believing that trade advertising should be informative as well as stimulating reading, Paramount here publishes the first of a series of sales analyses on major Paramount productions. Any questions not completely covered in these analyses will be gladly answered either at your local Paramount Exchange or at the Paramount Home Office, Paramount Building, Times Square, New York City.

Paramount Pictures



STAR POWER . . . is the first and most important sales angle on "College Holiday". Paramount gives you Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, and Martha Raye right while the public is hot for them after their smashing success in "The Big Broadcast of 1937". In addition to their popularity with picture fans . . . do not forget that right now is the height of the radio season, and all of them are now radio headliners! In addition to these "Big Broadcast" stars, "College Holiday" presents that tried and true box-office favorite, Mary Boland, with Etienne Girardot, Ben Blue, and a whole lineup of those Paramount youngsters we have been building in recent hit pictures.



TIMELINESS . . . is the next important sales angle on "College Holiday". Realizing that holiday business depends for the most part on youth appeal, Paramount has for the past few years given exhibitors a big-time college musical for the holiday season. Last year's "Collegiate" was one of the big grossers of the year. "College Holiday" has the same appeal plus. J. P. McEvoy, Walter De Leon, Harlan Ware, Frederick Hazlett Brennan, Henry Meyers, Jay Gorney, Arthur Sheekman, Nat Perrin, James Seymour, Bobby Vernon and Edward Welch . . . the pick of Hollywood's gag men . . . have combined to turn out a college musical not "just as good as 'Collegiate'," but about twenty times faster and funnier. Frank Tuttle, who directed the first "Big Broadcast," is in charge of "College Holiday".

More Hit Tunes Than "Rhythm on the Range"

HIT TUNES . . . these days are one of the most important sales angles on any picture. "College Holiday" has actually more potential radio hits than "Rhythm on the Range", Paramount's outstanding tune show for 1936. Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin have knocked out another of their wow numbers, "I Adore You", also "A Rhyme for Love" and "So What?" Burton Lane and Ralph Freed give you "Sweetheart Waltz", "Who's That Knockin' at My Heart". And, in addition to these, plus a Minstrel Number sung by none other than Martha Raye, "College Holiday" contains the Alma Mater songs of seven leading American universities.

PRODUCTION VALUE...means plenty in box-office returns. A fan can smell a weak production a mile away. "College Holiday" is one of those big-time productions which Paramount has been turning out these past few months in impressive succession. Here are a few facts to back up this statement: Sets include a huge Greek temple, covered entirely in white satin, with living models; an acre of the studio's back lot was transformed into the rotunda of a girl's school, jutting out over a real lake; a hotel lobby, one of the largest sets ever constructed at Paramount, is made even more impressive by a mural painted by a noted artist especially for the picture.

PRE-SOLD TO MILLIONS

EXPLOITATION

on "College Holiday" already has been enough to promote it right into the hit class. Jack Benny has plugged the picture on his hit program Sunday nights. And General Foods have begun another campaign similar to their successful dealer tie-up with Paramount for "Big Broadcast". Burns and Allen have plugged the show on their popular weekly program. Martha Raye, joining the ranks of radio stars December 22nd over the Columbia network, begins then to exploit the picture for you (check your local station for tie-in). In addition to this the tunes from the picture have already been featured by Camel Caravan, and Shell Chateau. Readers of Esquire Magazine will read a large advertisement by Gantner Bathing Suits, advertising "College Holiday" and showing a picture of two of the stars, Marsha Hunt and Leif Erikson. These are only a few of the major tie-ups. See Press Book or query your exchange for information on local tie-ins.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Rainbow on the River

(Radio - Sol Lesser)

Drama

Taking everything into consideration, the story, cast, musical content and class production support, "Rainbow on the River" has the ingredients to stack up with many of the year's outstanding box office grossers. The material to entertain audiences, particularly those of the family type and women, is there. So is the showmanship stuff needed by exhibitors who go in for business building exploitation.

The story is emotion stirring drama with an appealing punch. Fundamentally it is a tear-jerker in which due respect has been paid to the value of intelligently applied hokum. The cast features the juvenile singing and acting prodigy, Bobby Breen, also May Robson, Charles Butterworth, Alan Mowbray, Benita Hume, Henry O'Neill, Louise Beavers and Marilyn Knowlden, with Lillian Yarbo and Stymie Beard prominent in support. The music, presented by Breen, the Hall Johnson Choir and St. Luke's Choristers, is distinctive and a treat for music lovers as well as the regular run of the mill patrons. This content ranges from the thematic title song to specialties, plantation melodies and sacred hymns. Production settings and detail are of consistent high caliber.

In theme, locales being old New Orleans, New York and the South again, Civil War orphan Phillip is sheltered by his old negress slave mammy, Toinette. A kindly priest, Father Josef, who reveres Toinette's devotion to her charge, traces Phillip's parentage and pleads with Toinette to send the boy to his grandmother, Mrs. Ainsworth. The boy and old slave dread the thought of separation. However, Toinette's hope that the youngster will be raised as quality folks impels her to accede to Father Josef's wishes.

In the home of rebel-hating Mrs. Ainsworth, who ignores Phillip because she does not consider him her kind, his life is cold and spiritless, the torment accentuated by the persecutions practiced on him by Mr. and Mrs. Layton and their brat daughter, Lucille, a selfish family in the house who hopes to inherit the Ainsworth fortune. As dramatic and comic incidents alternately provoke tears and smiles, Mrs. Ainsworth gradually melts under the boy's simplicity, sweetness and charm. Though maintaining her austere dignity, the escape of Phillip's pet mice, a present given him by the priest and a reminder of happier days in the South, which rouses Mrs. Layton to fury, is the turning point in the boy's affairs. About to run away to Toinette, he arouses the household and when the Layton's berate the boy, Mrs. Ainsworth rises in wrath to announce that she's going to investigate thoroughly. Back to New Orleans and to Toinette, who is pining away even though she has been promised the finest funeral ever held, come grandmother and grandchild. When Toinette identifies Phillip as Mrs. Ainsworth's own flesh and blood, the triumph of the trio is complete, as is the disappointment of the avaricious Laytons.

The kind of picture that almost any kind of theatre may be proud to announce as a feature of its program, the production offers, other than its inherent qualities, the fact that it is adapted from "Toinette's Phillip." A showmanship asset that commands respect, it can be used as a means of establishing contacts and creating interest which the merits of the picture will justify.

Previewed in Pantages Theatre, Hollywood. The audience reaction to the story, music and efforts of the players was highly enthusiastic.—GUS MCCARTHY.

After the Thin Man

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Comedy Murder Mystery

The stars of "The Thin Man" and the writing, directing and producing crew that put it together have made a follow-up to that outstanding commercial entertainment feature that has all the earmarks of being a worthy successor. The show of comedy and melodramatic mystery put together in a style to interest showmen and patrons. Atmospherically and in fundamental plot similar to the first picture, "After the Thin Man" nevertheless is refreshingly different. Not directly a sequel, it has the redoubtable amateur detective Nick Charles and his wife Nora and the well remembered little dog Asta further adventuring in the field of baffling crime solution.

Essentially a laugh provoker, the show is also a guess-proof murder mystery. Though long in running time, the film moves at a speedy pace. There are occasional letdowns, but on the whole the feature quickly generates and continually holds interest in its comedy, drama and mystery.

To San Francisco come the redoubtable Nick and his wife Nora, honeymoon bent. About as welcome in the household of Aunt Katherine and his moss-backed in-laws as a case of smallpox, he's immediately jerked into a family scandal. Sister-in-law Selma's husband, Robert, who has been philandering, is murdered. Immediately suspicion is attached to Selma, to David who once aspired to marry her, to night club entertainer Polly with whom Robert has been playing around, the racketeer Dancer, tinhorn thug Casper and a suavely menacing looking Chinese Lum Kee. Aided and hampered by Nora and Asta, Nick sets about unraveling the mastery, to free Selma. As hilarious comedy and suspensful drama have their innings in dialogue and situations, two more murders are committed. Casper is strangled and an unseen janitor shot. As he did in "The Thin Man," Nick gathers all the suspects together, certain that as he goes about questioning of individuals the culprit will give himself away. His idea again succeeds in a thrill packed climax, the twist of which will surprise all who have formed advance conclusions.

The elements of popularity are evident in the personnel value, quality of acting, story telling technique and production detail. It shouldn't require anything more than to remind patrons they have in store a banquet of the same kind as the entertainment provided for them in "The Thin Man."

Happy Go Lucky

(Republic - Albert E. Levoy)

Comedy-Drama

Materials to amuse and entertain fun-loving audiences and arouse exhibitors' commercial interest are provided here in ample quantities. Presented in smart fashion, production, acting and directorial elements being of high caliber, the show is a hokum, farce tinged blending of comedy, romance, melodrama, music, intrigue, mystery, suspense and thrill action. The production is capable of being a front runner in lots of cases.

Around the dual identity plot, treated in a novel and effective manner to add lusty zest to all the excitement provoking mistakes that ensue, the picture builds interest immediately and holds it consistently. In Shanghai, Happy Cole, cocky musical comedy singer, is taken by Mary Gorham to be Bill Lyons, missing transpacfic flier. No amount of explaining will alter

Mary's opinion and Happy is content to let them think he is an amnesia victim. He gets into a few ludicrous messes with producer Davis. But when a bunch of conspirators, headed by Bennett and Matzdorf, intent on stealing American naval aviation secrets, also make the same mistake, Happy is in real hot water. Follows a kidnaping which entails numerous hair-raising fistic melees and escapes, and Happy, who has come to believe that all but him are mad, is hard put to know what to do. Unable to get any assistance from Wallis, international police chief, or U. S. Consul Brown, Happy returns to the stage. Just after producer Newell has mistaken Bill Lyons for his missing performer, Happy taunts a bunch of seagoing gobs to chase him to the house where Mary and her father are held captive. As the sailors go to work, the plot of Bennett and Matzdorf is busted up, Mary is saved for Happy and Mr. Gorham is rescued to give him a radio singing job.

The show is well acted and presented in a manner to provide the maximum amusing entertainment for general audiences. Regan's singing is one of the film's highlights. Yet the whole combination is of such class that no one need be afraid of presenting it to average audiences.

Previewed in Warner Theatre, Beverly Hills. The patronage was enthusiastic over the entertainment offered.—G. M.

Headin' for the Rio Grande

(Grand National)

Western

This is a pleasing balanced production of western routine material. With its quota of hard-riding, gun-play, hand-to-hand combat and romantic moods the picture should find favor with western adherents. The photography and settings are assets to the picture being of a higher degree of perfection than is common to productions of its category. In tune with the current vogue in western stars, Tex Ritter, sings and plays the guitar while not otherwise engaged in more perilous exploits.

The picture is particularly fortunate in its supporting cast. Among them are noted some old favorites who fit into the scheme of things very capably, such as Charles King, William Desmond, Warner Richmond and Snub Pollard. Eleanore Stewart is concerned with the romantic and Syd Saylor with the comedy elements of the story. The story itself is typically western of routine vintage.

Ritter and Saylor, two cowboys heading for the Rio Grande, stop to have chow with Budd Buster, who is on his way to market his herd. While there a band of rustlers swoop down on Buster and attempt to intimidate him but Ritter drives them off. Later on Ritter performs the same service for Pop Hart and his daughter, Miss Stewart. Ritter and Saylor trail along with the Hart contingent to protect them.

Ritter gets into an argument with King, one of Hart's hands, and beats him up. King retaliates by shooting Hart. Riter takes Hart into town for medical attention. In the meantime the rustlers make off with Hart's herd. During a melee in a saloon Ritter is accused of killing a man and is put in jail. Buster helps Ritter escape and they with the aid of Indian fighters apprehend the rustlers.

Here Comes Carter

(Warner)

Comedy Drama

This is a story about a radio commentator who elects to broadcast uncomplimentary news items about Hollywood personalities with what he and the story seek to establish as justification. As to manner of microphone delivery the character (played by Ross Alexander) is more or less reminiscent of Walter Winchell.

Among the incidents bearing upon the story of his activity are libel suits, gangster attacks and, of course, romantic episodes, clean, in which he figures as hero. The action is swift for the most part and the dialogue contains many bids for laughter. Anne Nagel, cast as a radio singer and the commentator's sweetheart, sings a few song numbers. The picture closes in a burst of gunfire bringing death to the gangster-in-chief under faintly credible circumstances and a happy ending.

The story offers Kent Carter as a film studio publicist discharged for telling the truth about a foppish male star whose brother is the town's top gangster. Carter obtains a radio commentator assignment and broadcasts facts which drive the actor out of pictures. The gangster brother is assailed likewise and orders Carter slugged. Then he decides to kill him when, continuing his broadcasts, Carter blames the gangster for the attack. A policeman kills the gangster.

Whatever exploitation appeal may reside in mention that the picture relates to radio commentation and film studio publicity is available. The title derives, presumably, from the narrator's microphone catchphrase, which is, however, "Here comes trouble," perhaps denoting a title change at some point between shooting and release.

Reviewed at the Palace theatre, New York, where the picture shared a program with "Cain and Mabel" and was quite quietly received.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Racing Lady

(RKO Radio)

Romantic Drama

No race track picture could be a race track picture without the mad whirl about the oval in the final few hundred feet. Nor could one be a race track picture unless somewhat along the line the baddie gamblers gave the honest old man the works. Nor could it be much of a race track picture unless a heroic girl was mixed up in it some way or other.

Well, "Racing Lady" has all the prop standbys and not much else, unless the standard romantic love interest must be counted in. It's hardly an attraction to excite anybody's interest.

After the crooks have put the honest old man behind the eight ball, his daughter takes up the burden of training and racing horses. She gets along pretty well until a publicity mad motor magnate thinks it would be a good idea for him to get into the game for advertising purposes. No one is surprised when the girl and the tycoon fall in love. Nor are they surprised when the girl develops a horse that looks like a hotshot winner. They might get a little provoked when he tries to keep the girl-trained horse he owns out of a big handicap. But that's only the dramatic prelude that stirs the girl up and gets her to put the steed in the race anyway, which, of course, he wins. If anything but all around forgiveness, realization that everybody is a pretty good fellow and the proverbial love and kisses failed to follow, there might be occasion for surprise. But there isn't.

Musical Comedy

This is an eye-filling, ear-tingling, big-scale musical comedy in which, contrary to custom, neither music nor comedy is slighted at the expense of the other and both are employed at full value without cost to the romantic story of which they are integral parts. This extremely congenial commingling of entertainment factors owes a good deal, no doubt, to the factual nature of material backgrounding the fictional incidents portrayed. In any case, the picture constitutes substantial support for exploitation weighted on the side of romance, music, comedy or spectacle, or for whatever combination or grouping of these may be deemed appropriate for a given situation.

On the side of personnel the showman has Gladys Swarthout, Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Veloz and Yolanda, Herman Bing and Fritz Lieber as highly mentionable personalities effectively cast.

Miss Swarthout sings a number of songs well, all in English, none of operatic character, and enacts with simple charm the principal feminine role. Mr. MacMurray portrays a jazz band leader who croons, a glib young man with contempt for truth, the principal male character. Mr. Oakie heads the comedy division, dealing competently with competent dialogue, and Mr. Bing is a close second in a characteristic assault upon the language. Veloz and Yolanda have two striking dance numbers, one as characters in the story and one as themselves, while Mr. Lieber deals in mature, respectful manner with the portrayal of Franz Strauss, descendant of the great Johann.

The story is essentially simple and not without a measure of historical foundation. Buzzy Bellew, American, takes his jazz band to Vienna and opens an engagement at a cafe next door to the waltz palace conducted by Franz Strauss and his granddaughter, Elsa, in the tradition of Johann Strauss. Prosperity for the Bellew engagement brings failure to the Strauss institution and Buzzy, who has won Elsa's love under an assumed identity, leaves his orchestra and returns to America when she learns the truth. Ultimately he inspires a project whereby the Strauss enterprise, which has collapsed, is brought to New York, where it succeeds. He is finally drawn to the place and discovered by Elsa, who effects an arrangement co-featuring the Strauss and Bellew orchestras as well as a happy ending.

The major portion of the picture has to do with Vienna and is impressively staged. Production numbers, adequately warranted by story events, are staged in logical progression, ranging from a modest folk dance in an Austrian beer garden to a Broadway finale of vast and conclusive proportions, this last to the strains of "The Blue Danube" as played by a symphony orchestra, a jazz orchestra, and finally by both. Memorable melodies of later date are "Paradise in Waltz Time," "On a Merry-go-round" and "Can I Be in Love?"

Golddiggers of 1937

(Warner Brothers)

Musical Spectacle

An established and consequently familiar title, a type of entertainment that likewise is somewhat similar, a group of familiar associated personalities, quite a batch of new faces, a lot of comedy, plenty of music and dancing, the expected complement of production spectacle, bevies of pretty girls and elaborate production go to make up the amusement and commercial prospects of this latest version of the "Golddigger" series. The elements that brought popularity to previous editions may be expected to function in like manner in connection with this.

A gag premise has been selected for story purposes. It results in the familiar back and on stage atmosphere. Peek, neophyte insurance solicitor, hounded by an axiom-mouthing executive, is inveigled by chiselers Wethered and Hugo into selling Hobart, ready-to-die producer, a million-dollar life policy. Assisted by Norma, Genevieve, Boop and Sally, Peek's job is to keep Hobart alive while Wethered and Hugo conspire to rush him to the undertaker. To the tune of much singing and dancing, lots of hilarious fun and plenty of atmospheric color, Hobart becomes a gay old codger. As the conspirators are confounded, Peek stages the show, the principal screen feature of which is a black-and-white silhouette, featuring scores of gold-digger beauties in military cadenced marching dances.

With Powell and the Misses Blondell and Farrell performing up to the standard they have set for this character entertainment, Victor Moore, as Hobart, comes through with a show stealing performance, and the comparative newcomers Lee Dixon and Rosalind Marquis are effective in adding to the film's gayety. In one or two cases dialogue lines are pointed for double meaning interpretation, but in relation to the general scheme of things, particularly the comedy contrast, they are hardly of a nature to cause any serious objection.

The Great O'Malley

(Warner Brothers)

Romantic Drama

A human interest character drama, also a comedy leavened dramatic romance, this is of the nature of attractions that audiences take to themselves with consequent surprisingly favorable returns at the box office. Essentially the story is of the regeneration of a hard-boiled New York cop who considers it his duty to enforce the law to the letter. It's told in honest, straightforward style, without any resort to artificial or forced theatrics and in a way that stirs the emotions and sympathies of ordinary folk.

Despite the counsel of superior officer Cromwell and friendly priest Father Patrick to temper his sense of duty with humanness and mercy, flatfoot O'Malley bullheadedly refuses to listen. He picks up Phillips for a minor infraction, and the arrest causes the man to lose his first chance in years for a job. Consequently Phillips commits a robbery in order to obtain food for his wife and child Barbara. O'Malley nabs him and provides the evidence that sends him to prison.

Despised by brother officers, given up as impossible by Cromwell, O'Malley is relegated to traffic cop. There some sense of reason works its way into his skull. Becoming attached to Barbara and interested in school teacher Judy Nolan, O'Malley, not knowing who the child is, does his bit to make life easier for her and her mother. When the child is injured in an accident, he foots the bills that assure her recovery. Then, when he finds she is the child of the man he sent to jail, he secretly helps arrange Phillips' release. Phillips, not knowing that O'Malley is his benefactor and bent only on revenge, shoots the cop. In the investigation that follows, O'Malley, whose experiences have humanized him, claims it was an accident. As he wins exoneration for Phillips, he is reinstated in the respect of the force, in the affections of Judy, and has the lasting friendship of the Phillips' family.

With Pat O'Brien making his role believable and the entire cast contributing high caliber support, this is the kind of attraction that should benefit considerably by word-of-mouth advertising.

March of Time, No. 4

(RKO Radio)

Very Good

Continuing its dramatic presentation of the world's news in forthright manner, "March of Time" in the current issue covers three subjects of varied interests and origin.

First to Europe and a review of the events leading up to and the culmination of Belgium's new policy of complete neutrality. Several shots are shown of King Leopold, who issued the proclamation that Begium's alliance with France had been terminated, and include the coronation, the auto accident in which the Queen was killed, and the Queen's funeral. There are also shots of Leon Degrelle, Fascist and a power politically in Belgium.

The St. Lawrence seaway plan is presented and illustrated by map and diagram. Needing but a last link to complete the seaway and open up an outlet from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic, the project is discussed pro and con. Opponents of the plan are in the Mississippi River section and the seaport cities along with the railroads connecting these bases with the Great Lake centers. Another complication provides for the drafting of an international treaty with Canada.

In rapid sequence the camera depicts the WPA Federal Theatre Project and the ramifications encountered so far in producing and directing plays, using unemployed actors. Flashback sequences of some oldtime vaudeville acts are followed by scenes of some of the more outstanding productions the theatre project has presented to date, culminating in Sinclair Lewis' "It Can't Happen Here." Running time, 21 minutes.

The city council of Waynesboro, Va., has under consideration a municipal ordinance to prohibit Sunday shows. A vote will be taken on Monday.

AMERICA'S UNIVERSITIES TURNING TO FILMS AS A SUBJECT OF STUDY

Increasing Number of Colleges Gives Courses on Construction of Motion Pictures; Potential Source of Fine Talent

University of Southern California, N. Y. U., and Columbia Among Leaders; Visual Education Activity Shows Growth

A widening educational concept of the motion picture, as a subject for study in itself as well as a new and valuable tool for the use of teachers in various fields, is being fostered by an increasing number of colleges and universities which have inaugurated courses aimed to show the student of what the motion picture is made, thus creating a possible new source for technical and artistic talent for Hollywood.

Although not as well developed as the visual education aspect of the motion picture or as the teaching of film appreciation in elementary and high schools, courses in the artistic, social and technical elements of the motion picture are receiving considerable attention from educators in schools of higher learning the country over. This attention ranges from series of lecture courses at several universities to a separate Department of Cinematography at the University of Southern California, in which instruction is given in the technical production of films as well as in their place and influence in other fields of education.

Educators and those in the industry who are watching the growth of motion pictures as a subject of study and a method of education view these courses in the technical phases of film production as potential training media for future actors, directors, writers or technicians, but regardless, the immediate value to the motion picture and to education of extensive study of the social, psychological and artistic implications of the cinema is already admitted.

Many Courses on Films

One of the principal higher schools emphasizing technical instruction in film production is the University of Southern California. In the Department of Cinematography, which is headed by Dr. Boris V. Morkovin, the courses include those on story and continuity, fundamentals of production, technique of the art director, laboratory methods, acting and expression, camera technique, sound recording and reproduction, and a seminar in comparative cinema directing.

In addition to these the department offers instruction of interest to students in other fields. In connection with the department of music a lower division course entitled "Music and the Motion Pictures" covers the use and development of music in films, first

Two other courses on educational films and on methods of teaching motion picture appreciation of education. A special course on the social and psychological aspects of motion pictures, given by Dr. Morkovin, treats of the evolution of the motion picture industry; distribution, publicity and exhibition; personality and mass reactions of children and adults, and the educational, commercial, industrial, scientific and international aspects of the industry.

EUROPEAN THEATRE SEEN IN DECLINE

"Americans, particularly those in show business, should wake up in the morning and thank God they live in this country," according to Charles K. Gordon, theatrical producer and manager for the last five years of the Apollo theatre in Paris. He returned from Europe two months ago.

Mr. Gordon listed Germany as the "worst country" at present for the legitimate stage or motion pictures because of the limitation of expression. He listed Italy and Russia as next in order as countries in which dramatic expression has been stifled. In France, the producer said, there is liberty of expression but taxes are so high that it is practically impossible to produce any good plays.

New York University Lectures

An inclusive course at New York University, under the joint auspices of the School of Education and the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, is designed especially for teachers, social workers and those working in community motion picture programs. Given by lecturers, individuals widely known in the industry, it covers the cinema field in its artistic, technical, educational and social phases.

According to the syllabus the course keeps in close touch with the practical school and community programs related to motion pictures, such as the Schools Motion Picture Committee, the Metropolitan Motion Picture Council, and the Young Reviewers of the National Board of Review. Boys and girls from elementary and high school photoplay clubs are brought to the class as visitors and the conduct of their clubs is explained. Graduates of the course are eligible to become members of the reviewing committees of the National Board of Review. The class is under the direction of Dr. Frederic M. Thrasher, associate professor of the university's School of Education and a member of the executive committee of the National Board.

Columbia Workshop Plan

Columbia University, in its courses on the art of the theatre, offers a class on scenario writing and production. The course follows the workshop plan, allowing for individual writing projects. There are lectures, conferences and seminars, some conducted by members of the industry, and exercises are assigned in the writing of story treatments, continuity, screen dialogue, plot building, character delineation, the dramatization of setting and comedy methods. A library of professional scripts and still photographs from produced pictures has been built up for the use of the class and the study of the scripts is paralleled by the projection of the pictures for the class. The course is given by Mrs. Frances Rowland Patterson, a member of the Exceptional Photoplays Committee of the National Board of Review and the author of two books on the motion picture: "Cinema Craftsmanship" and "Scenario and Screen."

At Hunter College for Women, conducted by the City of New York, a course named "A Survey of the Motion Picture Field" is being given this semester. It comprises a series of lectures by notables in the industry.

The lectures were arranged through the cooperation of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. According to the announcement of the course it is planned to continue later this term and in subsequent terms with specialized courses in various branches of the industry.

Other Universities Active

Other universities, while not reaching as deeply into the study of motion pictures, impinge upon the field in related courses. At Syracuse a study of motion picture production in connection with the university theatre is under the direction of Professor William Falk of the Department of Drama. The University of North Carolina gives a course in motion picture criticism in the Department of Journalism under the direction of Walter Spearman. The English department of the University of Florida is conducting a course on the history and development of the motion picture.

The oldest university interest in the motion picture has been with films as a means of visual education, both in using educational pictures in courses and in instructing teachers in the use of them as aids in child education. This interest has been fostered by the United States Department of Education, which maintains an extensive library of educational films of all types which are loaned to schools on application, and by the recently established Department of Visual Education of the National Education Association.

Courses in Teachers' Colleges

A partial list of universities giving courses in visual education in their graduate departments of teachers' colleges includes state institutions of learning in Arizona, California, Colorado, Honolulu, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington and Wisconsin. Others are the New York State College of Forestry, Iowa State College, Marywood College, Boston University and the University of Chicago.

AUSTRO-GERMAN NEGOTIATIONS THREATEN U.S. FILM IMPORTS

Representatives of American Companies Meet to Discuss Three Suggested Methods of Offsetting Possible Result

Austria Expected to Change Rules Governing Import of Product from Germany and English-Speaking Nations

by HANS LORANT
in Vienna

Important changes may be brought about in the importation of American films to Austria in the near future. The final settling of this problem depends on the outcome of negotiations between Austria and Germany concerning the film-exchange between these two countries.

Should the German point of view prevail, a larger number of German films would be imported to Austria and this would mean further restrictions and difficulties for American films in this country. That these changes are soon to be expected is indicated by the fact that negotiations have already started between the Austrian authorities and local representatives of American film companies regarding the problem of the American film import to Austria.

Dr. Lanske, president of the Austrian Filmkonferenz, had already discussed with American managers the possible reforms which the Austrian Government might make affecting the conditions of American film importation to Austria.

Three Suggestions Made

Dr. Lanske suggested three possible ways in which to settle the problem of the importation of American films to Austria. These three possibilities are:

Self-contingentation, meaning that the American companies should themselves fix the total number of films imported to Austria, this figure to be lower than the previous quota, and that they should determine among themselves how many films should be imported by each American film company. In this case, the companies would be free from governmental interference, but they would be expected to set the total number of imported films at a figure which should not be too big for the Austrian film market.

Second possibility: forced-contingentation, meaning that the total number of American films to be imported to Austria should be fixed by the Government.

Third possibility: the raise of the price of the permit tickets which every company has to pay for every film. The suggestion is that the permit tickets of a film running in one copy only should cost 1200 shillings, as they did before, but that the permit ticket of a film running in two copies should be raised from 1800 shillings to 3600 shillings, and that of a film running in three or more copies should be raised in a similar proportion.

This proposition was discussed by the representatives of American film companies at a meeting which was attended by MGM, United Artists, Paramount, Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO-Radio and Universal Managers. At first the representatives of Universal and RKO were in favor of the idea of self-contingentation because in this way the American companies would bar all governmental interference. But ultimately they were won over to the opinion of the MGM representative, who opposed the idea of self-contingentation because, he said, it would inevitably lead to further restrictions which the companies would be compelled to make.

REICH SEEN GAINER BY HUNGARIAN PACT

Although the official text of the film agreement recently concluded between the German and Hungarian governments at Berlin has not been made public, information concerning its contents as indicated in informed quarters leads to the general conclusion that Germany has virtually dictated terms, although certain phases of the reported pact are apparently favorable to Hungarian exhibitors.

It is indicated, as well, in Budapest, that American motion pictures will have even less market in Hungary than at present, under the new agreement.

All Oppose Second Method

All representatives opposed vigorously the measure of forced contingentation and they decided to fight against the passing of such an edict. They all agreed that too many American films are imported to Austria, but they were of the opinion that any restriction imposed by the government upon American pictures should be rejected most determinedly by the local managers. They also discussed the possibility of the raise in the price of the permit tickets and announced that films running in one or two copies simply cannot stand any more burdens. A slight raise might be possible in the price of films running in three or more copies.

The representatives of American film companies also discussed the possibility of dubbing their films in Austria to a larger extent than they had hitherto done. But, according to the RKO Manager, the dubbing of a big film since only really good features are worthwhile to be dubbed would cost about 30,000 or 40,000 shillings, and this sum is too large to warrant the American companies in dubbing their films in Vienna.

The situation is so grave that the day after this conference the European managers of MGM and Warners announced that they would have to close their Vienna branches in case of any importing restrictions imposed upon American films by the government.

In order to understand fully the position of American films in Austria, it is necessary to review the development of the film import. The total number of English-speaking films in 1936 was 73, in 1935 this figure jumped to 126, and in 1936 it will probably reach 200. In Vienna and in the big cities audiences became used to English-speaking films, although a few years ago they did not go to see American and British talkies. Now even neighborhood theatres show programs containing English-speaking films only, which a few years ago would have been impossible. Thus the demand for American and British films increased during recent years, while the number of imported English-speaking films increased to even a larger extent, so that the supply is greater than the demand, and thus even the super-products of American film companies can not be properly exploited.

Added to this fact, there is the disadvantage of the large number of second-rate film products imported to Austria.

Big Pictures Carry Others

In the case of a film with two copies, the distributors' expenses are about 11,000 to 12,000 shillings and the average takings are 15,000 to 18,000 shillings. There are a few films which score more than this but they are exceptions. Two or three big box office successes are necessary in a season for a firm if it wants to make up for the losses of the other films, as very often a picture does not bring in more than 6 or 7 thousand shillings.

The representatives of United Artists, Warners and RKO announced that they would be willing to dub a part of their films in Austria every season in case the government gave them some financial aid. A film dubbed in Austria has the advantage of not having to buy a permit ticket, which, in case of three copies, would mean 4,400 shillings saved. But this sum is too small in the face of the high expenses of dubbing and the fact that films dubbed into German in Austria are not allowed to be imported to Germany and will not be allowed to be imported to Czechoslovakia in the near future.

The position of the American companies is rather delicate. The local managers are fully aware of the fact that their productions are not absolutely indispensable on the Austrian market. When, at the conference with Dr. Lanske, one American representative remarked that when the American film companies were compelled to withdraw from the Jugoslavian market they were, after a short time, humbly begged to take up their activities again, he got the answer that such a thing would not happen in Austria.

Of course, if this actually happened, the result would be stagnation in the film market, since variety, originality and the driving force of competition is chiefly provided by American pictures.

BROADCASTERS ALREADY ARE EYEING HOLLYWOOD FOR TELEVISION TALENT

Radio Engineers Laying Plans to Double Facilities at Studio Center As Well As in Her Neighbor City, San Francisco

Erpi Indicates It Will Protect Baird on Patents; Goldsmith Points Out Necessity for the Film Industry's Cooperation

Radio broadcasters, prospering from their recently acquired talent source in California motion picture studios, already are eyeing Hollywood with a view to developing that channel for television—agreeing that Hollywood will be the center of commercial television broadcasting.

And while National Broadcasting Company was estimating this week that some $15,000,000 would be required to string a "coaxial" television cable from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York were conducting further demonstrations of the cable in the open.

Columbia Broadcasting System also has plans for bringing television to Hollywood, these including construction of a $1,000,000 studio there which will contain an experimental television laboratory.

Too, television, was the subject of other developments, as follows:

Electrical Research Products, Inc., motion picture sound equipment subsidiary of the American Telephone-Bell-Western Electric system, indicated its agreement to protect Baird Television Company, of London, on television patents.

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, RCA consulting engineer, pointed out the necessity of the motion picture business cooperating in development of television.

The Federal Communications System, in Washington, let it be known that no hearings are contemplated in the immediate future on allocation of television channels.

The prediction that Hollywood will become the center of television broadcasting activities within the next two years was made by Don Gilman, vice-president of National Broadcasting Company in charge of the Pacific Coast division, on his return to California from New York, where he attended television demonstrations.

NBC television facilities will be increased to 425 scanning lines at an early date, he said, and the talent available in Hollywood will make it a field for experiments.

Engineers are surveying the Hollywood territory and laying plans for doubling radio broadcasting facilities, with similar plans in work for a San Francisco unit, Mr. Gilman added.

Coaxial Cable "Talking Test"

The coaxial cable, more familiarly known now as a "television pipe," installed between terminals in New York and Philadelphia, last week had its first "talking test" when Dr. Frank A. Jewett, president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, spoke with members of the press, and others, over the circuit which is looped within itself to cover 3,800 miles, although in reality the cable spans less than 100 miles.

Television was not actually demonstrated on the line in this initial speech test because the terminal instruments now in use were said to be unsuitable for motion pictures. "Our main purpose in the preliminary experiment is to reveal the telephone possibilities, not television," said Dr. Jewett. "The performance has been up to expectations and no important technical difficulties have arisen to cast doubt upon the future usefulness of the coaxial-cable system. Much work remains to be done, however, before coaxial systems suitable for general commercial service can be produced.

PARENTS' AID ASKED IN SELECTING FILMS

Desirable motion pictures cannot be achieved unless women, including mothers, "who put over the motion picture industry," support this type of production to the exclusion of undesirable films, Mrs. Willis P. Miner, chairman of motion pictures, New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, said Saturday at a meeting of the Queensboro Federation of Mothers' Clubs. She spoke at the 71st assembly of the organization held at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Step Toward Television

"This is not a television circuit as we are now demonstrating it, but it is a necessary step toward television. We think we know how to use it for television, but that is several months off. As far as television is concerned, it is still around the corner, and all we can say at this time is that the cable is a possible network link for television transmitters in the future."

The "pipe" will handle the same amount of traffic as one of the present arm-sized cables comprised of 480 wires. Therefore, it was explained, the costs of building and installation are materially reduced. Instead of the usual "Bundle" on paper-insulated wires used in telephone lines, the new cable contains a pair of copper tubes, each about the diameter of a lead pencil. Within it, and about the same size as the lead in the pencil, is a wire held centrally by thin discs of thin rubber, spaced along the wire.

"What we are literally doing along this cable is radio transmission," continued Dr. Jewett, "but we are sending it over what might be called a segregated slice of the ether. In this case, however, all of the ether is in the little pipes of the cable. It is a scheme for making radio transmission free of the elements that bedevil radio, such as static and fading."

Problems "Formidable," Says Sarnoff

A few days prior to the New York demonstration, a glowing picture of the day when television will take its place in the American scene was envisioned by David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, speaking in Philadelphia before the Franklin Institute, the oldest scientific society in the United States.

Mr. Sarnoff's invitation to address the institute was in recognition of his 30 years in the field of radio. Prior to the meeting he was feted at a dinner given by the directors of the institute at the Rittenhouse Club.

Mr. Sarnoff said the problems of television were "formidable" but not unsolvable. "Television broadcasting, even more than sound broadcasting, will be the great consumer of art," he said. "It will constantly demand more and better writers, musicians, actors and scenic designers, new thoughts, new words, new songs, new faces and new backgrounds. Television will call for a whole new generation of artists.

"Another problem in television is that of network syndication. Our present facilities for distribution of sound broadcasting cover the vast area of the United States and serve its $128,000,000 people. Similar coverage for television programs, in the present state of the television art, would require a multiplicity of transmitters and network interconnection by wire or radio facilities still to be developed."

"From the standpoint of research, laboratory development and technical demonstration, television progress in the United States continues to give us unquestioned primacy," Mr. Sarnoff said. "The chief distinction between television in this country and abroad is the distinction between experimental public services undertaken under government subsidy, and commercial developmnt undertaken by free initiative, enterprise and capital of the pioneers of America."

No Hearings for a Year

Meanwhile, the Federal Communications Commission in Washington has advised that no hearings on allocation of television channels for commercial purposes are anticipated until approximately the end of another year. The commission's policy now, it was pointed out, is to consider television strictly on an experimental basis in granting licenses.

The commission also expects that in about another year work will start in drawing up definite television standards of practice after reviewing hundreds of pages of testimony and technical data gleaned from the two hearings bearing on television which it held last June 15 and October 5. No further hearings of a general nature on allocation have been scheduled, the commission deciding to pass on individual applications as they arise, as in the case of Farnsworth Television Corporation of Pennsylvania, which was given authority last week to construct a new experimental visual broadcast station to be operated at Springfield, Pa., on various high frequencies with one kilowatt power, unlimited time.

Goldsmith Urges Cooperation

Television was also a recent subject in Rochester, N. Y., where its cooperation with the motion picture industry was asked by Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, RCA consulting engineer, in a speech before the convention of the Institute of Radio Engineers. Dr. Goldsmith pointed out that the motion pictures have methods and output which can be somewhat adapted to the needs of a certain part of television procedure, while television can put certain new methods and devices which should be useful at the disposal of the film industry.

"The motion picture field, in our opinion, has little to fear from television broadcasting if it maintains a forward-looking outlook and is well-guided," Dr. Goldsmith said. "Certainly the relationship between these sister arts could and should be pleasant and mutually helpful in the best interests of each."

Dr. Goldsmith also proposed the exclusion of studio audiences from television broadcasts to eliminate annoyance resulting from alleged competition with theatres. He urged that television receiving sets be built in the simplest possible manner with the smallest number of tuning instruments possible.

"Commercial television broadcasting, to win general acceptance and to enjoy a healthy growth, must be built on the basis of a group of necessary elements. These are a constructive governmental attitude implemented by corresponding regulations, an active group of television broadcasting stations at least partly interconnected into a national network for program syndication, forward-looking program building organizations, careful engineering and manufacturing methods rendered effective by suitable merchandising practices and satisfactory servicing, an enthusiastic and numerous group of home lookers, and finally a number of broadcast advertisers willing and able to secure the part-time attention of the home audience," Dr. Goldsmith said.

ERPI to Aid Baird

In New York it was revealed that Electrical Research Products, Inc., has agreed to protect the Baird Television Company of England affiliate of Gaumont British Pictures, on patents on the television transmitter the English company has furnished the British government, and has granted permission to its British licensees to provide motion pictures to the British Broadcasting Company for experimental television broadcasts without charge until July 5, 1937. It is also said that the company refused, however, to make a general agreement on its television patents with the Baird concern because "it does not know where television is going."

No company in America has asked Erpi for permission to use motion pictures recorded on its apparatus for experimental television purposes, but if such requests are made they probably will be granted, according to Whitford Drake, executive vice-president. Mr. Drake said that American Telephone and Telegraph Company had very clear patents in relation to the use of motion pictures for television.

"We can say with conviction that so far as this company is concerned our long travail is ended, and we now rejoice to feel we are about to face the commercialization of television from an aspect so far of necessity denied us," said Sir Harry Greer, chairman of Baird, at the annual meeting in London recently, the Wall Street Journal reported.

Patent Pool Proposed

Following upon the recommendations of the Television Committee, the British Broadcasting Corporation was entrusted with national television transmission. As a result the BBC entered into a contract with Baird for the manufacture and installation of a transmission plant at the Alexandra Palace. As far as the transmission side is concerned the Baird company has spent enormous resources and energies in convincing the authorities that television is practicable. The committeemen emphasized in their report that the companies interested should recoup themselves for their expenditure by the sale of receiving sets, and referred to the desirability of forming a comprehensive patent pool. No definite steps have yet been taken to form such a pool.

"You will appreciate," Sir Harry said, "that while from the point of view of transmission patents we cannot at the moment visualize any return other than a manufacturers' profit on the provision of these transmission sets, we must look to recoup ourselves for our endeavors by deriving revenue from the manufacture and sale of receiving apparatus to the public, and when I say public I include places of amusement, hotels, large blocks of flats, and so on."

The first Baird set gives the largest picture of any set so far publicly exhibited. It is 12 by 9 inches in size, and the company has fixed the retail price of the set at 85 guineas, approximately $425. This receiver can take transmissions on the Baird system and also the Electrical Musical Industries system, which is Marconi controlled.

Close upon the statement of the Baird chairman came announcement in London by Major B. C. Tryon, British Postmaster-General, that the plans to link London with provincial cities by cable for transmission of television programs had been completed and that work would start soon to connect London with Birmingham and Manchester.

Goldwyn to Make Eight Next Year

Samuel Goldwyn has announced that he is scheduling eight pictures for the 1937-38 season, instead of his usual four. He has budgeted $10,000,000 for the schedule. In making the announcement Mr. Goldwyn said;

"The industry is in danger of losing much prestige because of the increase of factory made pictures to meet the double bill market. Product has dropped down generally in recent times, and but for the present freedom of money, box offices throughout the country would be suffering."

The eight pictures include a remake of "Stella Dallas," "Hurricane," "The Adventures of Marco Polo," "Goldwyn Follies," "Dead End," "Revolt of Manila," "Folly and Farewell," and an untitled story being written by Lillian Hellman.

Mr. Goldwyn, David O. Selznick and Walter Wanger have announced jointly that a drive for big name talent on a pooling basis will be started immediately. Each artist contracted will be guaranteed three pictures, doing one for each of the three producers. The new system will not conflict with present production schedules nor will it affect arrangements with talent now under contract, it was said. Adolph Menjou is the first star signed under the agreement.

MGM-Macfadden Tieup Aimed at Amateurs

Pointed at an estimated 750,000 amateur motion picture producers is a 10-weeks campaign to be conducted by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Macfadden publications inviting amateurs to see the Pete Smith short, "Wanted, A Master," reproduced from a 16 mm. amateur production, and submit their works for possible use in like manner. Any films chosen for reproduction will be paid for at the rate of $500 each.

Sound Equipment Licensed

Andre Debrie, Inc., manufacturers of studio and laboratory processing equipment, have been licensed under RCA patents to manufacture and sell a new non-slip printer for accurate film processing which will be based on technical principles developed in RCA laboratories.

Actors' Guild Plans Steady Unionizing Rather Than Drive

A gradual process of unionization rather than, intensive or carefully organized drive for a closed shop in the motion picture industry is foreseen by officials of the Screen Actors Guild, according to Kenneth Thomson, secretary of the Guild.

Mr. Thomson returned this week to Hollywood after attending the American Federation of Labor convention in Florida and after lengthy conferences in New York with executives of Actors' Equity Association. The Guild official said that his purpose in attending the AFL convention was to meet labor leaders and give them evidence that the Guild is willing to cooperate in the labor movement in every way.

The convention did not pass any resolutions nor consider any questions directly affecting the motion picture industry at the Tampa convention, the delegates being concerned chiefly with the split between William Green, president of the Federation and John L. Lewis with his Committee for Industrial Organization. Mr. Thomson said, however, that the national labor organization is fully aware of the actors' group and that contacts made at Tampa may prove of importance at a later date.

The Guild secretary did not reveal the purpose or the result of his conference with theatrical labor chiefs in New York. Actors' Equity and the Actors' Federation of America are supporting the Guild by suspending members now working in pictures who do not join the coast organization and it is believed that even closer cooperation will result from the discussions.

A committee representing producers has been conferring for the last month with Screen Playwrights, Inc., writers' organization, and it has been reported that the negotiations are proceeding harmoniously.

Wilcox To Produce "Victoria the Great"

Herbert Wilcox, British producer, has announced a production of "Victoria the Great," a panorama of the life of Queen Victoria of England. Release is scheduled for June 21, 1937, to coincide with the effective date of the lifting of the Lord Chamberlain's embargo on stage and screen productions, agreed to by King Edward VIII. Negotiations are proceeding to contract a well known star for the title role and an English director who is now working in Hollywood.

YOU COULDN'T HAVE BETTER REVIEWS EVEN IF REMBRANDT PAINTED THEM HIMSELF!

"'REMBRANDT' is a photoplay to put the old legitimate theatre to shame. I wouldn't trade Mr. Laughton's doughty Dutchman for half a dozen Broadway Hamlets . . . Charles Laughton creates masterpiece as Rembrandt in classic screen biography . . . Charles Laughton, admirable actor, presents a three dimensional portrait of a painter in 'REMBRANDT,' the memorable motion picture at the Rivoli. Here is a classic of the screen . . . The result is something for which to be thankful." —Robert Garland, N. Y AMERICAN

"Pictorially engrossing and filled with deft and subtle characterizations . . . It is a masterly achievement that Mr. Laughton has not only invested these interludes with power and conviction, but has integrated the entire photoplay about his warmly vital and many-sided impersonation . . . A film of great visual beauty." —Howard Barnes, N. Y HERALD TRIBUNE

"Laughton plays 'REMBRANDT' to perfection . . . Rich in color, this film portrait of an artist is a handsome acquisition for Charles Laughton's personal gallery. His followers will experience delight in 'REMBRANDT.' It is a handsome, absorbing, provocative film." —Bland Johaneson, N. Y DAILY MIRROR

"A distinguished film, as produced and directed by Korda. An incisive portrait of a genius, as projected on the screen by Laughton. Elsa Lanchester gives a fine and sensitive performance of the little maid whom Rembrandt loved through later years. Gertrude Lawrence gives distinction to the role of Geertje, who was Rembrandt's mistress." —Kate Cameron, N. Y DAILY NEWS

"Charles Laughton does his most brilliant acting to date. A distinguished and beautiful film that bears the unmistakable stamp of his genius. Adjectives like 'breath-taking,' 'haunting' and 'startling' are of small use. No matter how admirably they may have served their purpose in describing the grandeurs of other outstanding films that have come his way, they sound hackneyed when applied to 'REMBRANDT.' For the beauty of the film is, in its use of light and dark, like nothing the screen has ever before achieved and is as difficult to describe in words as these qualities in one of Rembrandt's paintings or etchings." —William Boehnel, N. Y. WORLD-TELEGRAM

"We can only recommend it in the strongest terms. A great, and rich, and glowing motion picture, a picture signed all over with distinction, like one of the master's own canvases. 'REMBRANDT' is as much Mr. Korda's greatest production to date, as it is, at once, the noblest subject and the best likeness — so far, at any rate — in Mr. Laughton's inspired gallery of historical portraits." —B. C. Crisler, N. Y. TIMES

"When news first came that Laughton was to do 'REMBRANDT' for Alexander Korda, you began anticipating an honest, historically faithful picture in which Laughton would turn out another brilliant performance. Check. 'REMBRANDT' now at the Rivoli, lives up to expectations . . . Magnificently produced." —Archer Winsten, N. Y. POST

LABOR DOMINATES BERRY CONFERENCE

Regulation of Hours, Wages and Working Conditions Among Topics of Washington Session

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Indorsement by industry and labor of a new definition of interstate commerce under which the Federal Government would be authorized to regulate hours, wages and conditions of labor, as well as the trade practices of establishments engaged in interstate commerce, was to be sought this week at the second annual meeting of the National Council for Industrial Progress headed by Major George L. Berry, President Roosevelt's Coordinator for Industrial Cooperation.

The motion picture industry as a whole was but poorly represented at the Council session, the few industry leaders who did attend as observers refusing to take part in the deliberations. A preliminary film conference called for Wednesday was cancelled at the last minute, Sol A. Rosenblatt, former NRA code administrator, Nathan Golden of the Department of Commerce Motion Picture Division, and two others, being the only ones present. Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors was the only film group to accept the invitation to attend the general Council meeting.

The Council on Thursday was scheduled to hold open meetings at which reports of the various committees set up last year were to be submitted, to be followed by addresses by Major Berry and Government officials including Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Senate committee on interstate commerce; Representative Samuel Rayburn, chairman of the house committee on interstate commerce; Frances Perkins, secretary of labor and representative of the Federal Trade Commission, and William Green, chairman of the council's labor group.

More than 3,000 invitations to attend the conference had been sent out by the council to representatives of industry and labor. Only a fraction of that number attended.

Roper Not Participating

The absence of representatives of important industries was attributed to their belief that the conference did not represent a move by the Administration but was, rather, an independent effort by Major Berry.

Lack of Administration approval of the project was indicated by the disclosure that the Department of Commerce was taking no part in the conference and that Secretary of Commerce Roper expected this month to receive a report on NRA from a special interdepartmental committee, set up at the request of the President and composed of Cabinet members and representatives of industry and labor.

Generally speaking, industry was reluctant to participate in the Council because of the dominant position of labor in the council.

At the opening of the council session it became evident that labor conditions would be major subjects of discussion, particularly since the labor representatives were supported by the demand made by the American Federation of Labor at its annual meeting at Tampa last week for general adoption of the 30-hour work week.

Regardless of the final outcome of the meetings of the council for industrial progress, substitute NRA legislation will be sought almost immediately upon the convening of Congress next month, with probably a score of bills, representing the views of as many diversified groups, submitted in the early days of the session.

Some of the bills will parallel the original NRA act but, according to their sponsors, with their provisions so written as to meet the objections voiced by the Supreme Court in invalidating the recovery law. A large and strong group, however, will support legislation providing for the Federal incorporation of companies engaged in interstate commerce, offered last session by Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming and this month given the approval of Senator Borah of Idaho, and as alternatives to either of those types of legislation, it is expected proposals will be made for revamping and tightening up the antitrust laws and for the wider adoption by industries and trades of voluntary codes under the Federal Trade Commission program.

President's Attitude Indicated

Administration officials thus far have given little indication of the attitude of President Roosevelt on the subject, but he has been represented as favoring the adoption of a constitutional amendment redefining interstate commerce so as to give the Government a legal basis for the authority it sought to wield under the NRA act, before proceeding with the adoption of direct legislation.

Such a program, however, does not meet the views of the members of the Berry group, who at their meetings this week were planning a policy for control of labor and industry which they will seek to have affirmed by Congressional action.

Film Loans Rejected

High Administration officials this week were understood to have turned thumbs down on proposals that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or other Federal agency make loans to private interests for the production of motion pictures.

Tentative suggestions that such a step might be taken, set forth as a possible subject for discussion at the meetings of the National Council for Industrial Progress, met with a decidedly cool reception among officials who pointed out that the Government has consistently maintained a policy of refusing loans for projects on which the return was uncertain.

U. S. Films Gain in Austria

American features have been gaining in Austria at the expense of German pictures, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from its Vienna office. Last year 126 American features were exhibited compared with 110 in 1934. The corresponding totals for German features were 116 and 129.

Wanger on MPPDA Board

Walter Wanger Productions was elected to membership in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America on Wednesday at the quarterly meeting in New York, and Walter Wanger was named a member of the board.

BOOK REVIEW

FOUR-STAR SCRIPTS, by Lorraine Noble. Published by Doubleday, Doran, December 4th, 1936. 392 pp. ($2.50).

The first twenty-four pages of Lorraine Noble's contribution to the growing list of books pertaining to the writing of motion picture scripts contain all that the author has to say on the subject. The remaining 268 pages are given over to a complete reprinting of the shooting scripts used in producing "Lady For a Day," "It Happened One Night," "Little Women" and "The Story of Louis Pasteur." The division is appropriate in view of the declared purpose of the author and with respect to the character of the printed matter on both sides of the dividing line.

A foreword asserts, "The motion picture has become one of the most popular forms of entertainment ever known. Its drama stirs our emotions, and its influence upon us is sometimes so subtle and so deep as to leave lasting impressions that may affect our lives in unexpected ways. Writing for the films has therefore become a matter of public trust when the pictures influence the mental attitudes and emotional states of such a vast audience." This may or may not have been written as an after-thought. In any case, the author's text has little relation to the "public trust" aspect of her profession. On the contrary, the business of writing for the films is discussed as a strictly commercial pursuit and is made to appear, perhaps unintentionally, as a dull, mass-production activity.

Miss Noble's formula for writing a successful picture is extremely simple. The aspirant is told to select a star, study the pictures in which said star has appeared, cast about for a story idea which can be shaped to this star's personality and proceed to write into the story incidents and situations which have been productive of box office satisfaction when used in other productions. The aspirant is then furnished a glossary of technical terms and, as models, the four shooting scripts above mentioned. He is told, also, that one or a dozen other persons will have their way with his brain child before it goes to the camera and that not even the title may remain when they are through with it. The author is less cynical than seasoned in these references.

A note on the jacket of the volume describes it as "a complete and authoritative book for everyone interested in film writing and making, and for the legion of amateur movie-makers who are learning the technique or movie directing and photography." "Complete" is a pretty strong word, and "legion" may or may not be strictly accurate in the application made of it, but the scripts are of undeniable value, and Miss Noble's comment indicates experience and sincerity.—W. R. W.

German Pictures Will Total 220

According to the preliminary program, 220 feature pictures will be released in Germany during the 1936-37 season, the Department of Commerce reports this week from Washington. It is by no means certain, however, that this tentative schedule can be lived up to, particularly as regards the share given to American films as the censors in this respect have for months been postponing a definite decision.

Under present plans for the coming season, UFA will have 27 German and three foreign pictures on its schedule; Tobis will distribute 67, eight of which will be from foreign studios, while Bavaria will have four foreign and 18 domestic features and Terra will handle 14 from Germany. Other German companies will have a total of 55 and American imports are expected to total 32, bringing the grand total to 220.

The Department of Commerce also reports that while it is generally felt that the quality of German films is being continually improved, the commercial side of the industry is causing great anxiety because of the steadily rising production costs.

Japanese Exhibit Television System

by TETSUYA MORI
in Tokyo

The decision to hold the next Olympic Games in Tokyo in 1940 has led to increased activity in the television field, looking to a practical application of the device generally during the games. A public demonstration of the Hamamatsu System, developed at Waseda University and the Hamamatsu Technical School, and held at the Uyeno Scientific Museum here, was pronounced an outstanding success by the capacity audience.

In an effort to strengthen the distribution arm of their newly merged units, Toho and Nikkatsu have signed several capable executives. Most important acquisition in manpower is S. Sasho, former Paramount manager here, who had worked for Paramount for 18 years and is generally recognized as one of the most able distribution executives here, who has been signed as general manager of distribution.

The Empire Trading Company has acquired the Japanese distribution rights to the Celebrity cartoons. Eight color cartoons will be included in the first group to be handled by Empire.

The contract for distribution in Japan and Manchukuo of Republic product, the subject of considerable interest here, has been obtained by Ohbei Eiga-sha, following negotiations carried on in New York between Republic officials and K. Ono, nephew of the president of Ohbei.

It is reported that the company will release 25 Republic films here annually, of which 10 will be brought here between now and next May.

"SCIENTIFIC MARKETING" OF FILMS IS PROPOSED

But MPPDA Already Is Contacting Same Groups; Theatres Are Training Managers

A campaign of "scientific marketing research" to stimulate and extend patronage at motion picture theatres is being proposed to producers and distributors by J. J. Apatow, school man and recently associated with Consolidated Amusement Enterprises, independent circuit in New York, as well as with non-theatrical companies.

Mr. Apatow claims to have made a study of the motion picture "in all its phases," and especially exhibition, with the hopes of inaugurating a movement along lines to attract a new potential audience of millions who rarely visit the theatre and are not "picture conscious." Mr. Apatow proposes a "Motion Picture Exhibitors' Research Institute" to direct this work, with Mr. Apatow as the executive director.

The organized film business, however, apparently has not been impressed by the proposals, since the work would be along the same lines as current activities of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. A representative of one theatre organization is said to have written Mr. Apatow that he would be interested in the plan if all the other companies could see merit in it. That has not been forthcoming.

Mr. Apatow, in outlining his plan, says, "This need for careful research demonstrates that most moving picture theatres are not using methods that may be available to 'create' a maximum of business without adding to the immediate burden of additional overhead."

Training School Suggested

Some time ago, the proponent of the idea sent out a form letter to circuit heads and executives in the home offices, asking for their opinions. In this letter he said:

"Out of this 'patronage building' research work might be developed a training school for the preparation of potential executives or managers of film theatres. This form of educational work is illustrated by the American Institute of Banking which is supported by banking interests, and the Prince School of Education for Store Service, which is supported by the National Retail Drygoods Association."

Critics of the proposal reply to this that it is the practice among practically all circuits to train their own men in their own theatres and to give promotion from the ranks where deemed fit.

Practically all the large companies feel that that which is suggested by Mr. Apatow's "institute" contributes nothing to what is being done by the publicity, advertising and exploitation departments in the home offices, along with the MPPDA, to help exhibitors sell pictures to all types of audiences. Several of the companies regularly produce films directed primarily at the so-called "class" type of audience.

For example, Warner Brothers and MGM have brought Shakespearean works to the screen. In publicizing "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which had a direct appeal to educational and cultural elements and organizations, Warner's regular home office and studio staffs were augmented by special representatives who toured the country. MGM, for its "Romeo and Juliet," also has waged special campaigns.

Cooperating with Civic Groups

Mr. Apatow's advocacy of the use of newspapers, radio and nationally circulated magazines is answered with the fact that the large companies not only have been giving increased attention to these media but also have been making concerted drives toward enlisting the aid of parent-teachers, and similar groups, to increase the interest of children in the theatre.

In sending his prospectus to exhibitor leaders, Mr. Apatow asked whether these executives would be willing to serve as directors of his "institute." One of the leading theatre operators in the South replied that he was not interested in "theatre leagues" outside the bounds of his own state, and that reply apparently reflected the sentiments of the others asked to join.

Revising Releases For Buenos Aires

by N. BRUSKI
in Buenos Aires

The Association of Distributors at Buenos Aires has submitted to the Society of Impresarios (exhibitors) a revised exhibition plan for this city and its suburbs, which is designed to aid exhibitors in recouping the losses in attendance they have sustained recently. The exhibitor group requested such a plan of revision from the distributors.

The plan includes a limitation on the number of films to be shown on any one program, provides for increased protection for first-run theatres, elimination of the price difference between stall and balcony seats with a uniform price to be set for each, designation by each exhibitor of the classification of his house, the permitting of lower prices on old films on Mondays, and the requirement that exhibition dates must run consecutively on each film. If approved, the plan will go into effect January 1st.

The producers, studio and laboratory owners of Argentina held a meeting here with the object of forming an Association of Argentine Motion Picture Producers. A managing committee appointed includes: Dr. Sebastian Naon, president; Jorge Mendez Delfino, vice-president; Dr. Emilio Carreiro, secretary, and Julio Lofiego, treasurer.

500 BRITISH MATINEES FOR 600,000 JUVENILES

And Simon Rowson Sees Million Dollars Additional Revenue by Tripling Theatres Interested

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Problems of the child patron, and of the supply of suitable films for children's performances, were considered at a conference held here under the aegis of the British Film Institute.

Over ninety delegates, including representatives of the Home Office, the Ministry of Education, and numerous organizations concerned with child welfare, were given the opportunity to discuss the problem with such wellknown members of the industry as T. H. Fligelstone, president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, Simon Rowson, Sidney Bernstein and Ken Nyman.

Mr. Rowson said that five hundred British cinemas provided children's matinees weekly, and entertained 600,000 young patrons for receipts totaling £300,000 ($1,500,000) a year. He suggested that the number of theatres could be trebled, the revenue increased to £1,000,000 a year and producers thereby provided with £200,000 of new revenue yearly.

Asserting that the children's matinee at present was an unprofitable undertaking, Mr. Bernstein and Mr. Nyman saw a remedy in establishment of a central organization to supply special films, citing the American Museum of Modern Art as a model. The conference formally approved the suggestion for the formation of such a body on a non-commercial basis, the details to be worked out later.

Later the delegates attended the screening of a "specimen program" for children at the Metropole, Victoria, noting the reactions of the juvenile audience. A general conclusion was that the "Western" type of film was vindicated. That the killings in that type of film had no bad effect on the children comparable to that produced by films of a horrific or sadistic character was an opinion expressed by those who attended the showing.

In the discussion at the conference proper, S. W. Harris, delegate of the Home Office, said: "The Home Office considers there is very little connection between films and young offenders. Juvenile delinquents may visit films, but are not made by them. The child may copy film methods but not motives." Dr. E. Manuel Miller, of the Child Guidance, officially endorsed this opinion.

"Green Pastures" in London

Passed for "Universal" exhibition by the British Board of Film Censors after five months consideration, "The Green Pastures" attracted a very big attendance to a Tivoli press view five days before its premiere run at the New Gallery, and was given extended space in the London papers of the following day.

With one exception, press critics gave no support to the prohibitory agitation being organized by a religious publication, with discussion in the House of Commons and action before local licensing authorities foreshadowed. Seton Margrave, film critic of the Daily Mail, headed his review with the words "Films That Should Not Have Been Passed," and while praising the handling of the subject, expressed the view that, "as something to be included in the ordinary programs of cinemas, it seems to me one of the most unsuitable films ever admitted as general film entertainment." All other papers praised the film highly, the News-Chronicle using the caption "Moving and Lovely."

QUOTA LAW FACTOR IN BRITISH TREATY

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

American producers or exporters have not protested to the State Department regarding British proposals for gradually reducing the number of foreign films which may be shown in British theatres, but there is a possibility that the subject may be discussed in connection with the pending reciprocal trade agreement with Great Britain.

The department is observing developments in the British film situation and, it has been indicated, is prepared to protest if complaints are registered that the proposed quotas discriminate against producers in this country.

Paul Holt, in the Daily Express, quoted Lord Tyrrell, president of the British Board of Film Censors, as saying: "If I had banned it, one-third of the local authorities of this country could still have passed it. People would then have gone to see it in the spirit in which people read indecent literature, because it is banned. I consulted no one before passing 'The Green Pastures.' I consider it a most moving and reverently produced film."

"The Green Pastures" is the first film introducing a sacred figure to be passed by the BBFC. Only one or two minor cuts in action and dialogue were required. If a controversy is created by certain religious organizations a very considerable difference of opinion among the clergy and members of various denominations will be revealed; one wellknown cleric has expressed the view that it is suitable for exhibition in churches.

British Color in "Pagliacci"

A number of trial sequences in British Chemicolour in the Capitol-Trafalgar production of "I Pagliacci" will be retained in the copies of the film released, it was announced by Max Schach, after viewing these scenes. They also had been shot in black and white as a precaution. In footage they amount to nearly one-third of the film.

British Chemicolour is a process, examples of which have yet to be seen, credited to Karl Grune, the director of "I Pagliacci," in combination with cameraman Otto Kanturek and Viktor Gluck, and will be made available to all producers through British Chemicolour Process, Ltd., of which Mr. Grune is managing director.

"I Pagliacci," with Richard Tauber and Steffi Duna, will be a United Artists release.

At the annual meeting of United Picture Theatres, Ltd., A. E. de B. Jennings, the chairman, reported a total debit balance of £398,681 and said there was no prospect of a dividend return to shareholders. In the year the company made a trading profit of £27,829, but debenture interest and other charges produced a net loss of £13,636.

UPT is managed by Gaumont-British, which receives £10,000 a year, or 5 per cent of the gross takings, whichever is the larger amount.

BTP Reduces Debts

British Talking Pictures, Ltd., shows a profit for the year of £2,634, against £3,962 the previous 12 months. The trading profit was £1,683 against £815. During the year, the company received from its sister company, Associated Sound Film Industries, Ltd., the balance of £44,666 first mortgage debenture, and accrued interest, and used this amount to repay a loan of £7,500 and to pay creditors 4s 6d in the pound, making the payment to date 13s in the pound.

In the Associated company's accounts, it is shown that the amount for which the Wembley studio was sold to Fox British Pictures, Ltd., was £50,000.

Technicians Ask Standard Contract

The Association of Cine Technicians, with 1,200 members drawn from the ranks of specialized workers in studios, as distinct from workers organized in trade unions, has presented its draft Standard Agreement to 13 studios, three newsreel companies and five laboratories. It asks:

A working week of 48 hours. Special overtime and Sunday rates.

Two weeks holiday with pay; payment during illness.

Fifty per cent participation in profits made by the sub-letting of technicians' services.

Screen credit for actually responsible technicians, instead of only for heads of departments.

Minimum salary of £1:15s per week to juniors, to eliminate unpaid "Learners."

No overtime demand is made to newsreel companies and, in laboratories, a 44-hour week is the demand. Wage scales asked range from £4 minimum to £6:10 maximum.

License Renewals Held Up

Applications for renewal of theatre licenses have been adjourned in 60 instances, it is stated, by the chairman of the Entertainments Committee of the London County council in order that owners may comply with demands already made by the council for alterations and improvements. Licenses will depend on the extent to which necessary work has been undertaken by Dec. 10, date of the adjourned hearing. In the case of 18 other theatres, short period licenses only will be granted to permit similar alterations.

The conflict between the municipality of the Haarlem and the film theatres regarding the proposed increase in admission taxes by the municipality seems to grow out of a general conflict between the Dutch Motion Picture Federation and a combination of Dutch municipalities.

Haarlem has five cinemas, and until now generally 15 to 20 per cent of the receipts have been due as box-office burden. In Haarlem this percentage is 20, but nevertheless the municipality of Haarlem decided to raise the admission tax for cinemas to 25 per cent. In spite of the fact that the theatre managers protested against this measure and pointed out that such a rise irrevocably would lead to the closing of the theatres, as further exploitation would become impossible, the decision was not withdrawn, and therefore the Dutch Motion Picture Federation tried to intermediate. But also this was in vain. Although it was argued that all the Haarlem theatres would be closed if the admission tax is raised, immediately after the realization of the proposal, no results have been reached.

The action of the Federation has been based for years on a decrease of the admission tax to a general standard of 15 per cent and Mr. de Hoop, president of the Dutch Federation stated that the Haarlem cinemas would remain closed until the admission tax becomes 15 per cent, when the proposal would be realized.

During a press-conference the situation of the Dutch trade was explained. The theatres here have to work two months in order to pay their admission tax and have to try to earn their general expenses including film rental in the other months. Making profits will become absolutely impossible when the taxes are raised. Some years ago, a similar raise of the admission tax was realized by other Dutch municipalities, as Hilversum, Groningen and Venlo.

The Haarlem municipality argued that the picture-goers have a certain prosperity and that the theatre managers should raise their entrance fees in order to pay the higher taxes, but practice taught that if the theatres do so, their public doesn't return or buys tickets for cheaper seats. The municipality expects increased receipts of fl. 25.000, yearly by the higher taxes, but the increase would make exploitation of theatres impossible.

During the years 1933, 1934 and 1935 tax receipts in Haarlem with a population of 130,000 have been fl. 88.500, fl. 94.000, and fl.102.000. The Dutch Government is able to prevent execution of the Haarlem decision, and although the Government was advised in favor of the Haarlem municipality, no definite decisions have been taken. Meantime, the Haarlem municipality also took measures. Against the "threatening" of the Dutch Motion Picture Federation has been planned now an engagement between the eight most important Dutch municipalities to fix a general admission tax for cinemas above 20 per cent in any case. If such plans are realized, the M. P. Federation will have to fight against eight towns at the same time, and in all these cases closing of the film theatres would be difficult.

Subsidy Considered

With the exception of some pictures, the Dutch motion picture industry continues to produce pictures not only unsuitable for export, but also only yielding losses in Holland, through low artistic quality. More and more force has been put to support the domestic industry by subsidies on the part of the Dutch government, which, of course, would have important consequences.

The fact for instance, that a picture such as "Rembrandt" has been made in England with an Englishman, Alexander Korda, as producer, has put this matter more clearly. The general opinion is that a picture on such a subject—the story of Holland's most famous painter—should have been made by a Dutch company, as this material could only be handled by Dutchmen. However, it is granted that at the moment no Dutch producer would be able to make a good Rembrandt picture. Even the Dutch pictures that proved to be box-office successes, have been made under direction of foreigners, e.g. Kurt Gerron, Jaap Speyer, Oswald and Nosseck, average directors only of the past.

A stimulant would be created for instance, to give subsidies only to those producers who made a picture worthy to be "awarded" by a subsidy. If such a measure is taken, it would not be disadvantageous to foreign product.

This week the new Dutch picture "Oranje Hein" had its premiere in the Amsterdam cinemas Royal and Rialto at the same time. The picture was held over in the Royal Theatre only. The success was average. Filmex, a booking office in Amsterdam, has production plans to make "Pygmalion," by Bernard Shaw. Cast and direction are not scheduled. The Max Orphiils production "Komedie om geld" ("Comedy for Money") also had its premiere in the Amsterdam Tuschinski theatre. This picture, as was "Merijntje Gijzen's Jeugd," is better than the domestic films produced until the present moment.

Devaluation Effects Slight

Although it generally was expected that the Dutch film theatres would raise their entrance fees as a consequence of the guilder devaluation, the Dutch Motion Picture Federation positively declared to the trade and newspaper press that this will not follow, as the motion picture situation in Holland is very difficult already, and the public certainly would not pay higher prices.

In spite of the fact that the position of the cinemas has become rather uncertain by the devaluation, because the value of the Dutch guilder cannot be fixed, provisionally no measures will be taken to guarantee the profits of the theatre owners.

Paying more film rental is absolutely impossible for the Dutch theatre-manager. Higher rents cannot be paid because raise of the entrance fees will be impossible.

Small Film Studio To Be Opened

Loet C. Barnstijn, film producer who made "Merijntje Gijzen's Jeugd," box-office success of the Amsterdam City theatre, and representative of United Artists, has joined a special small film department to his studio at Wassenaar (near the Hague) as public interest in the small film grows steadily. Mr. Barnstijn purchased all equipment of the N. V. Omnium Film Corp., The Hague.

One positive result of the "Rembrandt" openings—at the City theatre in The Hague on November 12th and the Amsterdam City theatre the following day—was the notable increase of newspaper attention paid a premiere. In De Telegraaf, leading Dutch newspaper, appeared interviews with Jesse L. Lasky and Sylia Sidney. Miss Sidney was quoted by an American reporter as saying American production had nothing to fear from British competition. Mr. Lasky, however, said Hollywood must take to heart the warning that British competition is serious.

The picture opened to excellent attendance at both theatres. Charles Laughton and Mr. Korda were at both premieres, as were high ranking government executives. However, patronage did not hold up. The newspapers' critiques were none too good. They praised Laughton's acting but felt that he did not present the real Rembrandt. The atmosphere was commended and the depiction of Dutch life of the 17th Century. The picture is being released by Loet C. Barnstijn's Film Corporation.

The problem of the fixing of minimum admission prices is again before the Federation. The organization has declared against double featuring.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended December 5, 1936, from 110 theatres in 18 major cities of the country was $1,366,328, an increase of $296,931 over the total of the preceding week ended November 28, 1936, when 109 theatres in 18 large cities aggregated $1,069,397.

SEE NEW LOOP OUTLET IF B&K GETS McVICKERS

Chicago Exchange Men Find Many Films Delayed 90 Days After National Release

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

If the Chicago Board of Education decides at its meeting December 16th to lease the McVickers theatre to Balaban & Katz, the decision will meet with unanimous approval among local exchange men, who constantly are finding the outlets for product in the Loop most inadequate.

Varied reports have been passed about regarding the plans B. & K. has for the McVickers, if and when it gets the lease. The circuit's executives say plans will wait until they get it.

If B. & K. gets the McVickers lease, it will remodel the theatre for opening in the spring. It will be operated on a second-run film and stage show policy at low admission rates, similar to the way the State-Lake theatre is operating at present.

The State-Lake theatre, which recently was purchased by B. & K. would then be converted into a first-run picture house with no stage shows, and extended runs when necessary. The State-Lake is in the center of the Loop theatrical district, an ideal spot for the all-film plan, while with vaudeville and films the McVickers would have enough appeal to bring patrons over to that house, which is a bit off the main theatrical thoroughfare.

The McVickers achieved its greatest fame as a stageshow house, and this reputation would help such a name to be established again.

If B. & K. gets the McVickers, the report is that the circuit would make a deal with John Jones, who now manages the State-Lake, to run the theatre on a percentage basis. Jones has been most successful at the State-Lake under its present vaudeville-film policy.

Providing the State-Lake is turned into a first-run theatre by B. & K. the release of films will be speeded up considerably. At present many pictures are released in Chicago as much as 90 days behind release. By the time they reach the outlying theatres they are six months old and exhibitors say this hurts, as all the publicity and buildup at the time of release has been lost.

Looking over the records for the last four months, the Loop releases have been as follows:

COMPANY	NUMBER OF FILMS	WEEKS PLAYED
MGM	13	28
20th Century-Fox	15	21
First National	6	6
Warner Brothers	11	14
Paramount	16	19
RKO Radio	7	13
Universal	8	8
Columbia	7	7
United Artists	6	8
Gaumont British	2	2

M-G-M with 13 pictures heads the list with the most playing time. "The Great Ziegfeld" accounted for a considerable part of this, as well as the fact that the United Artists theatre tieup which Metro has with B. & K. makes it simpler for M-G-M pictures to get an extended run in the Loop.

Twentieth Century-Fox, with 15 pictures, got 21 weeks playing time, and has no affiliation with any of the Loop theatres. Radio with seven pictures and 13 weeks' playing time in the Loop can credit the most of this time to the long run given "Swing Time" at the RKO Palace. Paramount fared well through its B. & K. affiliation, and Warner and First National broke about even, as did the other companies.

Abe Frankel, Des Moines theatre and amusement park operator, was in Chicago last week attending the convention of the National Association of Amusement Parks. Mr. Frankel said that "merry-go-rounds" and not Bank Nights were the money makers at the amusement parks.

Allan Usher, Paramount branch manager here, will be the principal speaker at the first evening meeting of the Better Films Council of Chicago, on December 16th, following a dinner.

Junior members of the Federation will be guests of honor at the gathering, which will be held in the Lighting Institute at 20 North Wacker Drive.

Mrs. Edward J. Lehman, president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Archibald Mathis, state chairman of the Juniors, and all district chairmen will be guests of the council.

Other speakers will be Miss Margaret Moore and Mrs. Francis J. Waindle. Mr. Usher will talk about "Releasing Prints in the Chicago Area."

A picture will also be screened at the meeting followed by a demonstration of how the previewing committee prepares the film guide.

Before departing for Florida for a vacation, Lieut. Harry Costello, head of the Chicago Censor Board, granted a permit to "The Wandering Jew," a picture previously barred. Lieut. Costello also gave a general permit to "Rembrandt," which had been slated for a "pink" ticket.

William Frawley, Paramount player, arrives in Chicago Saturday as the Chicago representative for the Paramount Golden Jubilee honoring Adolph Zukor. Mr. Frawley will stop at the Congress hotel and will play host to local newspapermen. Chris Dunphy, of Paramount's coast publicity forces, also will arrive at the same time. He will leave for the East, however, the following day. Mr. Frawley will visit Milwaukee and other nearby cities.

The second annual Movie Christmas Basket Parties will be held here December 22, at 11 A.M. Every theatre in Chicago will join in making this event the outstanding theatrical charity affair of the year. Matinees will be held at all theatres outside the Loop, admission to be the donation of one or more items of food.

Sponsored last year and again this year by the Chicago Amusement Publicists Association, the 1936 Christmas Basket Parties are expected to collect 25,000 baskets of food for the needy. Last year the total was 20,000 baskets.

Aaron Saperstein, president of Allied Theatres of Illinois, is chairman.

Films for the matinee are being supplied free by the exchanges.

National headquarters of the Women's Christian Temperance Union last week held a preview of their recently completed talking picture, a four-reel film called "Ethyl Alcohol, Its Nature and Its Properties." Northwestern University students cooperated in the making of many of the tests to show the effects of alcohol on human beings.

The Burton Holmes company made the film, which was directed by Elmer Clifton of Hollywood.

Mrs. Anna Marden De Yo, national corresponding secretary of the WCTU, said that if this film proved successful—it is to be distributed free—others of a similar type would be made.

Mr. Montague reported that 87½ per cent of all availabilities were closed and that the majority of the remainder would be closed soon. He said reports regarding the feasibility of roadshowing "Lost Horizon" would be studied. He declared that the release date of the Grace Moore picture "Interlude" would be decided upon when enough playing time was available to permit of extended runs.

Previewed here for the delegates was "Dodge City Trail," which stars Donald Grayson, Chicago singer, who was signed from the Henry Busse orchestra by Harry Cohn.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN MANHATTAN: Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea—Although business held up fairly well on this picture and it is good entertainment, the real spot is the strong end of a dual. Not sold as a special, and for this reason exhibitors can afford to use it either on a twin program or weekend. Admirably suited for either. Running time, 73 minutes. Played November 15-16.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

First National

DOWN THE STRETCH: Patricia Ellis, Dennis Moore—Our first picture on double reels. This makes a great improvement over the single reels. The picture went over very well and everybody seemed to enjoy it. Quick action and a good clean story. Running time, 66 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—A real tractor salesman, a real farmer's picture, chuck full of hilarity.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Grand National

DEVIL ON HORSEBACK, THE: Lili Damita, Fred Keating—Not so hot. Grand National will have to do better than this if they intend to get anywhere. Running time, 79 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—If Metro could continue to make such pictures as this and "Old Hutch," a small-town exhibitor might be more inclined to agree with the film salesman when he says their product is worth more money. Here is a picture that was enjoyed by young and old, male and female. Business was well above average and the compliments were profuse. Productions like this are a credit to the industry. Running time, 91 minutes. Played September 19-21.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor—A well-made costume picture that did a terrific flop at the box office. Maybe we played it too late! If this be true, the blame is not with us. Running time, 102 minutes. Played November 15-17.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

LIBELED LADY: Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—One of the smartest, cleverest pictures we have run in some time. It has just about everything and it keeps you guessing right until the end. You know just what and when things happened.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LONGEST NIGHT, THE: Robert Young, Florence Rice—This must have been made while MGM was trying to decide what special would be next on the schedule. Put it on a double bill, and your patrons will declare you gave them a feature and a short subject. Personally, I think the "Crime Doesn't Pay" series are much better. Running time, 50 minutes. Played November 12.—Ralph Cokain, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

MAD HOLIDAY: Elissa Landi, Edmund Lowe—A good program picture. Now that you have Elissa Landi, why not give her a break? If any studio can make a star of her, you can. Running time, 67 minutes. Played November 19.—Ralph Cokain, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

MISTER CINDERELLA: Jack Haley, Betty Furness—Just plenty good. Both the actors and audience all seemed to have a grand time and as it pulled above average I feel O. K. also. Running time, eight reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

OLD HUTCH: Wallace Beery, Cecilia Parker—Homespun drama that pleased the Beery fans. Picture just an extra-good programmer. Average business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 8-10.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

ROBIN HOOD OF EL DORADO, THE: Warner Baxter, Ann Loring—An extremely good action picture. Very well mounted. They apparently spent more money on this than they generally do on action pictures. Business above average. Played October 7-8.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO: Clark Gable, Jeannette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy, Jack Holt—A very fine production that gets you pats on the back, but after settling up it leaves the net much less than an ordinary weekend western. We've played several pictures that have out-grossed this and left us much more for ourselves. Everyone regrets working, too, for the exchange.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO: Jeanette MacDonald, Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy—Biggest hit ever played here. At the close of the film, the men rose as one, paid a momentary tribute of silence and then broke into the loudest and longest burst of applause we have ever known. Hundreds of the men stopped on their way out of the auditorium to express their personal appreciation. I am forwarding same along with my own to MGM. Surely one of the biggest pictures of all times, lavish, stunning, the absolute tops in cinema spectacles! A cast chosen to perfection. Spencer Tracy, as Father Mullin, plays his greatest role to date. Jeanette MacDonald proved herself the most versatile singer on the American screen by running the gamut from grand opera to jazz. (P. S.—She is also gorgeous in a very feminine way). If you haven't played this one so far, don't fail to do so at your very earliest opportunity. Running time, 115 minutes. Played November 28.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WIFE VERSUS SECRETARY: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy—Drew fair business, but it is not a very good small town picture. Pleased the girls.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

Paramount

ARIZONA RAIDERS, THE: Buster Crabbe, Marsha Hunt—Pretty good Zane Grey western. It seems as if these Zane Greys are getting poorer every year. Running time, 58 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Easily the best "Broadcast" to date and drew a better house than have the previous ones. Cast is chock full of talent and they provide plenty of fun for any audience. Played November 29-30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GENERAL DIED AT DAWN, THE: Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll—I believe most of my patrons liked this picture. It is pretty strong and dramatic in spots but makes good film fare. Receipts were not what they should have been. Played November 12-14.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

GENERAL DIED AT DAWN, THE: Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll—Heavy drama that allows no comedy relief, and suffers in this respect. Fans prefer a let-down from continued suspense, but they don't get it in this one. Below average Sunday-Tuesday business, which always slumps for us on this type picture. Running time, 98 minutes. Played November 22-24.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

GENERAL DIED AT DAWN, THE: Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll—A fine production with good box office value. If Paramount keeps on turning out this caliber show or better and maintains with other exhibitors the fair and cooperative attitude they have shown us of late we are sure they are going places. And we're for them strong. They'll deserve success. Played November 20-21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD BOULEVARD: John Halliday, Robert Cummings—A fair picture but the stars aren't strong enough to be a strong pull. Played November 5-7.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

LADY, BE CAREFUL: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle—A very clever picture. Patrons liked the show. Supporting cast good. Played November 26-28.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

LADY, BE CAREFUL: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle—An ace high comedy. Lew Ayres is excellent in the leading role of the love shy sailor. You can recommend this show to your folks and not have to hear they won't like it. They sure will. Not a dull moment in its 70 odd minutes. Played November 27-28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MURDER WITH PICTURES: Lew Ayres, Gail Patrick—A good action programmer. It will entertain. Lew Ayres does good work. Played November 24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MY AMERICAN WIFE: Francis Lederer, Ann Sothern—Something different by way of story and is lively entertainment throughout. Played November 25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

POPPY: W. C. Fields, Rochelle Hudson—Pleased. Business about average. Played October 10-11.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby, Frances Farmer, Bob Burns—Business good on this one; a small town natural. Burns stole the show. He will do us a lot of good in future pictures. Played November 28.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Vilage and rural patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby, Frances Farmer—A little disappointed, but it did us good at the box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SON COMES HOME, A: Mary Boland, Donald Woods, Julie Haydon—Mary Boland does an about face in this one, going from the ridiculous to the sublime and doing a swell job of the heavy dramatics. She very definitely reminds one of the Marie Dressler both in looks and actions, although she's much younger. We'd say give her another serious role. Played November 18-19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SKY PARADE: Jimmy Allen, Katharine De Mille—Pretty good program picture. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THREE CHEERS FOR LOVE: Eleanore Whitney, Robert Cummings—A better than average musical which we received at bottom contract price. Carried some very good comedy. Normal business. Running time, 63 minutes. Played October 14-15.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

YOURS FOR THE ASKING: George Raft, Dolores Costello Barrymore—An entertaining picture with a different story angle. Fine cast led by George Raft and Dolores Costello Barrymore. Played November 17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Republic

COMIN' ROUND THE MOUNTAIN: Gene Autry, Ann Rutherford—Beats 'em all for drawing in the cash customers. Hope "The Big Show" and other Gene Autrys are as good. Played November 21.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

DOWN TO THE SEA: Russell Hardie, Ann Rutherford—Interesting picture of sponge fishing. Played November 23-24.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

FOLLOW YOUR HEART: Michael Bartlett, Marion Talley—This grand opera type is death to the box office. We just can't take it. No more "Metropolitan," "Grace Moores" or "Marion Talleys" even if they come free prepaid. Played November 22.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

OH, SUSANNA!: Gene Autry, Frances Grant—These Autry westerns are the best and most satisfying of any we have played in years. Gene is pulling us in new patrons that ordinarily do not go for outdoor pictures. Running time, seven reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa.

RKO Radio

BIG GAME, THE: June Travis, Philip Huston—Played this on dual on Armistice. Picture well produced with lots of action. Above average midweek business. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 11-12.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

BIG GAME, THE: June Travis, Philip Huston—A timely feature of college footfall and gridiron heroes that was enjoyed by everyone with the slightest interest in this sport. An ideal picture for a double bill. Business was well above average and the feature brought forth many fine compliments from football fans. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 19-21.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

LET'S SING AGAIN: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta—The songs were a little over the heads of part of our audience. Bobby Breen unquestionably has a remarkable voice. Just a poor programmer for us.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

LOVE ON A BET: Gene Raymond, Wendy Barrie—I don't know why I did not play this sooner. Very good comedy romance. Played October 21-22.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

MAKE WAY FOR A LADY: Anne Shirley, Herbert Marshall—Neither leading so-called star is box office here and combined with a gooey, goofy story, full of constant chatter, makes a dull evening. Running time, seven reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

MUMMY'S BOYS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Good. All of their pictures do quite well here. Running time, 76 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Very good picture, but not near as good at the box office as their previous ones. It seems as if this pair is slipping. Running time, 120 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WALKING ON AIR: Gene Raymond. Ann Sothern—Pretty good program picture that did not mean anything at the box office. Running time, 69 minutes.—P. G. Held. New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

WITHOUT ORDERS: Sally Eilers, Robert Armstrong—Nice program picture. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

WITHOUT ORDERS: Sally Eilers, Robert Armstrong—Here's an honest-to-goodness small-town box office champion. With a little more comedy relief it would class as the best airplane drama ever produced. The farewell punch of the picture has the patrons hanging on to their seats. Photography and recording are flawless. And it was delivered on a low allocation! The management of this theatre would be delighted to trade all his high-priced costume box-office flops for productions like this. Running time, 64 minutes. Played November 26-28.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

SEVEN SHOWMEN JOIN REPORTERS

New contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" hail from territories as widely separated as Ontario and Texas. They include the following:

E. L. Fawks, Ritz theatre, Graford, Texas.

M. Ewing, Amus-U theatre, La Harpe, Ill.

Harold and Walter Currell, Gem theatre, Logan, Utah.

W. M. Redmond, Rose theatre, Glendive, Mont.

Mrs. E. L. Tait, Lauder theatre, Mount Forest, Ontario, Canada.

Returning to the reportorial staff after a year or more are the following:

B. R. Johnson, Orpheum theatre, Niapwin, Saskatchewan, Canada.

J. W. Lehrkind, Strand theatre, White Sulphur Springs, Nebraska.

Read the reports of these exhibitors on the story of product as the box office tells it to them.

Twentieth Century-Fox

AMBASSADOR BILL (Re-issue): Will Rogers, Marguerite Churchill—Rogers still pulling above average. Running time, eight reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

BORDER PATROLMAN, THE: George O'Brien, Polly Ann Young—Good comedy western. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BORDER PATROLMAN, THE: George O'Brien, Polly Ann Young—A very average O'Brien picture which gets by. Should be double billed. Played to an average weekend.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

CAN THIS BE DIXIE?: Jane Withers, Slim Summerville—Can this be Jane Withers? Can this be a Twentieth-Century Fox picture? Can this be the brainstorm of Lemar Trotti who, in the past, has been credited with some outstanding successes? Can this be good entertainment? It can, but isn't! Can it? That's right; can it? Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 27-28.—Ralph Cokain, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

COUNTRY BEYOND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Paul Kelly—Very well done and pleased everyone who attended. You cannot go wrong on this one. Good print. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 24-25.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

COUNTRY BEYOND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Paul Kelly—Got a double surprise on this one; both pleasant. Picture is a small-town natural and business considerably above average for Friday-Saturday. Pulled patrons we hadn't seen in weeks. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 13-14.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

GENTLE JULIA: Jane Withers, Tom Brown—They all liked this one. Jane Withers is getting to be quite an actress. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GIRLS' DORMITORY: Herbert Marshall, Simone Simon, Ruth Chatterton—Our folks seemed to like the things they found in this picture. Simone Simon was liked. It's too bad we don't have more parts for Ruth Chatterton. Her role in this is small but exceedingly well played. Played November 22-23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

O'MALLEY OF THE MOUNTED: George O'Brien, Irene Ware—We find these little George O'Brien pictures please our audiences. This was on a par with the rest.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Johnny Downs, Stuart Erwin, Jack Haley, Patsy Kelly—In the words of one of the swell songs in this dandy entertainment, "it's slightly terrific!" No one could ask for a better cast than is here assembled and with a hilarious story plus snappy music it gets across as one of the 20th Century's high spots. Played November 27-28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND: Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart—An exceptionally good drama that appealed to the men. Receipts poor. Played November 19-21.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—Business above average on this one. Pleased nearly everyone. Played November 14-15.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—This was not much of a drawing card for us. All this talk about Taylor being such a big drawing card did not prove out true. Running time, 79 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL, THE: Shirley Temple, Alice Faye—Shirley is still the "tops." Brings 'em in and they like it.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL, THE: Shirley Temple, Alice Faye—Good. Shirley Temple is not the drawing card she used to be. This only did about two-thirds as much at the box office as her previous ones. Running time, 79 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—Good, but "The Country Doctor" was better and did more business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 22-25.—Ralph Cokain, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

ROAD TO GLORY, THE: Warner Baxter, Fredric March, Lionel Barrymore, June Lang—A grim story of war realistically produced. Fine acting by excellent cast. Business, however, was very bad. It didn't draw the women and consequently flooped badly despite the holiday. Played November 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STAR FOR A NIGHT: Jane Darwell, Claire Trevor—A fine cast, a swell human interest story, nice direction. Yes, a first class programmer. Any type audience will enjoy it. Played November 20-21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STATE FAIR (Re-issue): Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor—Again our people paid a wonderful tribute to the memory of Rogers. This picture grossed second high since we have had the theatre, the record gross being held by "In Old Kentucky," played last March. "State Fair" outgrossed "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" 20 per cent, "San Francisco" 80 per cent and "Captain January" 20 per cent. What more can be said? Played November 21-22.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

TO MARY—WITH LOVE: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy—Good program picture. A little mushy at times. It is hard to understand why the producers ruin a good picture many times by injecting too many kisses. The average patron doesn't care for these mushy scenes. Running time, 87 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

UNDER TWO FLAGS: Ronald Colman, Victor McLaglen, Claudette Colbert, Rosalind Russell—I expected this to do more business than it did. Our people do not seem to go for pictures laid in other countries. Like one man said: "I didn't like it; too many foreigners." Played October 17-18.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

WHITE FANG: Michael Whalen, Jean Muir—A very good Northern picture that pleased our people. The dog does wonderful work. P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

United Artists

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Mary Astor—Great in every respect but one, and that is that Chatterton, while she was good in her role, was an unhappy choice for the brainless, flirty wife. Huston was the trouper that he has always been, going through his role as though he was not acting; natural, is what I mean, and Mary Astor splendid. Certainly she had a lot of appeal in this role. The type of picture, while essentially dramatic, is a joy to run and have them coming out telling how much they liked it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Universal

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION: Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor—Every day I seem to get dumber and dumber! Bought Universal contract two weeks ago. "Pick up 'Magnificent Obsession,' " begged the salesman. "No," says I, "it's too old, and furthermore, Robert Taylor never made me a penny," etc., etc. Finally, after said salesman promised me the best hat in Cleveland and the best dinner in same city if "Magnificent Obsession" did not go over big in my town, I dated it in contrary to my best judgment. I take great pleasure in reporting that I don't get either the hat or the "best dinner"; we packed them in for three days. For the benefit of exhibitors who may be almost as dumb as I, let me repeat what Harry Young (the salesman) told me: "It's a great picture and a great box office magnet regardless of age or anything else." Moral: This just goes to show that although a salesman may be wrong fifty per cent of the time, whenever he stands to lose hats and dinners, you had better sit up and listen to him. Running time, 112 minutes. Played November 22-24.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

DISORDER IN THE COURT: Three Stooges—Okay nonsense from the Three Stooges—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IN MY GONDOLA: Color Rhapsodies—An excellent colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: Columbia hasn't let us down once with these.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SPEED MAD: New World of Sport Series—Average action reel with speed as its subject.—L. I. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STARS OF TOMORROW, NO. 5: Fair acts make up this amateur offering.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THRILLS WITH DAREDEVILS: New World of Sport Series—Average action reel for this series. Okay material.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UNTRAINED SEAL, THE: Color Rhapsodies—A fair color cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

VOICE OF EXPERIENCE: We played several of these series and find them most instructive and interesting with favorable audience reaction.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Educational

BIRD LAND: Paul Terry-Toons—Fine for the entire family and it will please everyone. Running time, six minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

HOLD THAT LINE: Treasure Chest—Pretty good. Running time, 9 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ONE BIG HAPPY FAMILY: Tuxedo Comedies—One of the best comedies of the year. Do not pass it as it is a riot.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SEEING NELLIE HOME: Song and Comedy Hits—Very good. Running time, 9 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

WAY OUT WEST: Song and Comedy Hits—Very good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALL-AMERICAN TOOTHACHE : Patsy Kelly Comedies—A better than average comedy. Running time, 2 reels.—P. E. Brauns, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

BEHIND THE HEADLINES: Pete Smith Specialties—This excellent short subject created much favorable comment. What a swell time Pete Smith must have dialoguing his short subjects. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ralph Cokain, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

BEHIND THE HEADINES: Pete Smith Specialties—An excellent Pete Smith reel. Shows the collecting, writing and printing of a big story in the newspaper. Out of the ordinary.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FOOL PROOF: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—These Crime-Doesn't Pay-featurettes are all good, and Metro doesn't skimp in producing them effectively. We always give them top spot and extra billing.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

GREAT AMERICAN PIE COMPANY: MGM Miniatures—Based on a story by Ellis Parker Butler. Very clever short. Something different than the usual run of comedies. Running time, 11 minutes.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

HILL TILLIES: Patsy Kelly Comedies—A comical series of events as Patsy and Lyda Roberti go Tarzon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HONEYLAND: Harman-Ising—Expert cartoon antics set to good musical score. Especially the cartoonist's interpretation of "The Flight of the Bumble Bee."—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOW TO SLEEP: Robert Benchley—Motion Picture Academy chose this one as the best short of 1936. Most unique. The boys here, however, do not have the lavish double bed arrangement for trying out Bob's suggestions. The film is chuck full of laughs. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LUCKY CORNER, THE: Our Gang—Fair comedy from the Gang. Not as funny as some but is okay nevertheless.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NEW SHOES: Tabloid Musicals—One of the new Tabloid Musicals. Clever and well received.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: We're playing Fox Movietone News on Monday-Tuesday and News of the Day Friday-Saturday. So far we find them hard to decide on. Rather feel inclined to favor Fox.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ON THE WRONG TREK: Charley Chase—One of the best Chase comedies we have played and that is saying a great deal.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

PAN HANDLERS: Patsy Kelly Comedies—They try Patsy with another blonde but they don't team like Thelma did but gave us a fair comedy.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PUBLIC PAYS, THE: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Unusually good Crime Doesn't Pay Series. Running time, two reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

RURAL MEXICO: FitzPatrick Travel Talks.—Good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SACRED CITY OF THE MAYAN INDIANS: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A good color travelogue.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SECOND CHILDHOOD: Our Gang—An exceptionally good comedy. Running time, 2 reels.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

STARLIT DAYS AT LIDO: Musical Revues—One of the prettiest reels we have played for some time. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SUNKIST STARS AT PALM SPRINGS: Musical Comedies—As good as they come. Plenty to entertain any audience in this festive short.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SWING BANDITRY: Tabloid Musicals—A very excellent musical one reel. Well made, excellent talent makes this outstanding.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VIOLETS IN SPRING: Musical Comedies—Not bad; not good. Running time, two reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

WEST POINT OF THE SOUTH: MGM Miniatures—Just an average filler. Running time, 1 reel.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

Paramount

BETTY BOOP AND LITTLE JIMMY: Betty Boop Cartoons—This got quite a few laughs. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

BETTY BOOP AND THE LITTLE KING: Betty Boop Cartoons—A very good cartoon.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

DANGEROUS JOBS: Paramount Varieties—An interesting subject visualizing several dangerous jobs.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacok, N. H. General patronage.

FIGHTING MARLIN: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Very good Sportlight of sea fishing.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

GYPSY REVELS: Headliners—A fair musical. Will get by.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HILLS OF OLD WYOMIN', THE: Screen Songs—A fine Screen Song. Deserves preferred time, especially in the small towns.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MUSICAL CHARMERS: Headliners—An excellent band act of Phil Spitalny and his Girls band.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 9—Average subjects in this moderately entertaining single reel.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PLAY, DON: Don Bestor and Orchestra—An excellent band number.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

POODLE, THE: Paramount Varieties—Interesting story in pictures of the Poodle. Shows them to be a much more talented dog breed than the name implies.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SONG A DAY, A: Betty Boop Cartoons—One clever idea keeps this cartoon above mediocrity.—L. A. Ir-

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Broadway Brevities—Phil Harris has a fine voice captivating our patrons.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HALF WIT-NESS: Pepper Pot—Very good as Warners always are worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JOE PALOOKA IN "THE CHOKE'S ON YOU": Shemp Howard, Robert Norton—Slapstick and not very good slapstick at that. Will get by on Saturday.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

NUT GUILTY: Vitaphone Novelties—Not very good. Did not please. Too silly. Nothing good about the entire thing. Running time, 12 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

VITAPHONE ENTERTAINERS: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—Very good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

VITAPHONE HIPPODROME: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—These vaudeville series are very interesting.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

Miscellaneous

THE PLOUGH THAT BROKE THE PLAINS: Resettlement Administration—If this had been condensed to about twenty minutes, it would have held patrons' interest. I feel it was a good subject to show in our drought district, as it was true to life, except that we are not hit quite that bad. Running time, 3 reels; about 28 minutes.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

PLOUGH THAT BROKE THE PLAINS, THE: Federal Resettlement Administration—This is a picture to play for not only farmers but for the socalled lovers of Art. This picture pleased the entire audience. The settings are very beautiful. It makes one feel that this country, the United States, is a real country with great open spaces. If you wish to play this picture it is loaned free of charge and it is three reels long and will fill in if your picture should run a little short. Truly a great masterpiece and can be classed with "Rhythm in Light," "La Maternelle" and many other foreign pictures which we have played at our theatre, The Owl, which just plays foreign cinemas. Running time, 34 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

RED CROSS TRAILER: Shirley Temple—It is really not quite the thing to fill up space for a picture that is only two minutes long. However, this trailer which the Red Cross put out is really wonderful. After anyone sees Shirley act in this picture and asks you to join the Red Cross I cannot see how anyone could refuse her. It is done in such a way that her appeal gets across to the audience. My patrons have told me that this little reel was worth the price of admission alone. Shirley told this little story about how people are really suffering, and that it was not just a setting in a moving picture. Shirley can really act and this trailer showed that she has had real training with diction. The Red Cross may be proud that they had such a fine trailer for their annual drive. This shows that the motion picture can be put to many, many things of great importance.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

The commercial department of Pathe News has closed a deal with New York World's Fair, Inc., to produce a short subject to aid in raising funds for the affair which is scheduled to open in Flushing in 1939.

Film Sales to Canada Gain 183% Since Pact

An increase of 183 per cent in the exportation of photographic films to Canada as a result of the reciprocal trade agreement which became effective January 1, last, was claimed by the State Department in Washington last week in an analysis of trade during the first six months under the pact.

Exports of films from January to June, it was said, were valued at $412,000 (Canadian currency) against $229,000 for the same period last year. The department also asserted that exports of radio apparatus and tubes increased 415 per cent, shipments of which were valued at $1,004,000 this year against $629,000 in 1935. The figures cited by the department were compiled from official Canadian statistics.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

LESSON IN HARMONY

In spots where managers are friendly and allowed to work harmoniously for the good of the cause, it isn't far out of line to say that grosses generally are better than in situations where theatremen spend most of their time heaving bricks at each other.

Now, Cleveland of course is not an isolated instance of managerial teamwork but is mentioned here because of the opportunity afforded your Chairman last week during a visit to the Ohio key city to observe at first-hand what this same teamwork means to the boxoffice and by the same token the individual showman's state of mind. The layout does not necessarily mean that the folks tuck each other in every night or that healthy differences of opinion are unknown. Far from it. The laddies are like any other family of husky normals and do their fair share of scrapping. But when the occasion is called for in matters that count, those Clevelanders present a front that takes a lot of cracking.

It may be because there are division heads about such as Col. Harry Long, Nat Wolf, Nat Holt, or then again it may be because the boys happen to like having each other around. But whatever the reason, the answer is Cleveland theatres and theatremen stand high in public opinion, which means plenty of business at the ticket window.

The guy who devotes his energies to running down the abilities of brother-managers wouldn't do so well in Cleveland. The chances are he'd be leading with his chin.

IT'S NO PRISON OFFENSE

This department would be the last to say there are no exploitation slants or advertising angles now being created that are different or unusual. But we'd be an awful sucker to stamp an idea or ad as definitely original. That's a good word to stay away from in this end of the business.

If a man cares to dig down deep enough he no doubt will discover that P. T. Barnum got his stuff from someone else and mebbe the earliest display ad lettered on papyrus was just a takeoff on another chiseled out of rock in the Stone Age. In fact, wouldn't be at all surprised if back in the time of Creation, some mugg claimed the Ark was just another bally and that Noah got the idea from an earlier campaign.

What in hell's name is the difference where a showman gets his stuff just so long as it works?

A Round Tabler puts over a drive and if he likes it well enough, sends along the details for publication in these pages. No one around here asks where the ideas came from, whether they came from his files, press books, out of a hat or from his grandfather's attic. The fact that the contribution is the result of a lot of honest sweat and the sender feels there may be something in it to generate a boxoffice impulse elsewhere is Okay with us.

Your Round Table is first and last a clearing house of ideas forwarded by the man in the field and never a Judging Committee to seek out the sources of these ideas, whether or not they have been used before.

If it were a prison offense to be caught using anything but original ideas in showbusiness, we'd all be doing "20 to life" in the clink.

SHOULD BE MORE OF THEM

To the rapidly increasing number of pert and readable circuit house organs deposited regularly upon this desk, is now added "Ohio Mouthpiece," published for the benefit of the theatremen in Nat Wolf's Ohio Warner Theatres zone and edited ably by Manny Pearlstein. Running some 25 meaty pages, "Mouthpiece" details stand out stunts from the men in the field, timely messages from division and district heads, articles of boxoffice significance from such seasoned campaigners as Round Tablers Sid Dannenberg, Dick Wright, Mort Goodman, Ed Miller, et al.

Next to meeting up and discussing matters of mutual theatre interest with brother showmen, there can be nothing as valuable to the morale and for general dissemination of worthwhile information than the meritorious house publication of the fine standard established by showmen-editors in various parts.

There should be more of them.

What with Yuletide in the air, Arthur Swanke, Malco Theatres City Manager, in Hope, Ark., endeavoring to be the first in with his annual Season's Greetings, jumped the field with a novelty folder which is duly and appreciatively recorded. However, Art will still have to take second place by a full year to the Round Tabler who last December forwarded his wishes on a very pretty card reading:

"Merry Christmas and Happy New Year for 1936 and 1937."

Dummy Horse, Riders, Live Mike, Makes Ace Flash for "Three Men"

For the bally on "Three Men On A Horse" at the Chicago Theatre, in Chicago, Roy Bruder and Archie Herzoff dug up a wooden horse, planted three dummy riders atop the steed, and set the gag up in the lobby two weeks ahead. To the horse was hooked a microphone and an invisible speaker to broadcast bits of dialogue from the picture. On the street, same idea with live nag and men was used, plus bannered cow with "this is no bull" copy.

RKO Radio Announces Winners In Packard 'Swing Time' Contest

First prizes of Packard cars in the recent "Swing Time" contest have been voted to John Barcroft, RKO Palace, Columbus, Ohio; C. G. Keeney, Park, Reading, Pa., and to Paul Ellis, Robbins, Warren, Ohio, winners in the three classes; cities in excess of 150,000, those between 50,000 and 150,000 and those in cities of less population than 50,000.

In addition, the Packard company gave cash prizes to runners-up which were voted as follows: First class, E. E. Whitaker, Fox, Atlanta, Ga., $200 and prizes of $100 to Jack Gross, RKO Hillstreet, Los Angeles; Louis E. Mayer, Mainstreet, Kansas City, and I. M. Rappaport, Baltimore, Md. In the second class, $200 went to Mickey Gross, RKO Orpheum, Sioux City, Ia., and $100 to Guy Martin, Colfax, South Bend; Ray Holloway, Ellenay, El Paso and E. A. Patchen, Stuart, Lincoln, Neb.

Five competitors in the third class cities were given the same final rating and awarded $100 prizes. They were: Sid Holland, Elco, Elkhart, Ind.; Vernon S. Denson, Albany, Albany, Ga.; Joe Floyd, New Granada, Sioux Falls, S. D.; C. R. Lindblad, Iowa, Atlantic, Ia., and to R. A. Gillespie, Capitol, Yakima, Wash.

Various Stunts Sell "Broadcast" for Suggs

M. S. Suggs, Alabama Theatre, Birmingham, Ala., arranged a complete campaign for "The Big Broadcast of 1937," including co-op ads, merchant tieups, window displays, radio and other angles. Full page co-op was promoted to break opening day in the Birmingham Post. Gotham Hosiery tieups accounted for 30-inch ads in local papers.

Grocery stores used the Jello-Benny window streamers and lamppost cards were tacked in downtown area. Western Union got out jumbo telegraph blanks and local cab company used bumper strips. The special radio transcription was used over station WBRC and other local outlets mentioned the film on various programs.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"

Ellis' Unusual "Gold" Display

C. Frank Ellis, Del Rio Theatre, Los Banos, Cal., designed an unusual display for "Sutter's Gold" which was planted in local drug store showing numerous specimens of gold and other ores, which were Ellis' private collection. For background of display, Ellis used the press book cover with theatre and playdates added.

Chairman Visits Cleveland; Will Never Forget It

Every Cleveland Round Tabler carries a key-to-the-city for visiting firemen. That's the opinion of your Chairman who, dropping in last week via United Airlines, found himself engulfed in a tidal wave of welcome that swept away a carefully prearranged schedule. In her article on the Ohio metropolis, Elsie Loeb spoke of how the theatremen worked together on civic drives and suchlike. Elsie forgot to mention how they work together on greeting out-o-towners. What a gang of Indians!

From the Airport, the wagon-train proceeded safely to the Carter Hotel, where the trail was picked up by the Redskins, Warnerite Mort Goodman sounding the alarm to Always-On-Deck Eddie Miller at the Hipp. It was curtains after that, with Euclid Avenue echoing to the war cries of Jack Lykes and Ev Steinbuch as they ran their prey to cover. Then to the tepee of Col. Harry Long, Loew Big Chief and known in the Six Nations as Chief How-He-Can-Tell-Heap-Funny-Story. Big Chief adjourned council of war to wigwam of Phil Selznick, where in the dawn's early light the prisoner was paroled for breakfast with Mort Goodman and Fay Thomas, skipper of the Carter Reservation.

Attends Tribal Ceremonies

Away next on Goodman's skidding mustangs to the Warner offices to be once-overed by Headman Nat Wolf, district chief Dick Wright, Round Tabler Julius Lamm, Manny Pearlstein and others. After another pow-wow and his fate still in the balance, the prisoner was hurried back to the council chambers of Col. Long and with all the Loew braves, including Milt Harris and Arnold Gates carried to the Eat House for the tribal elbowbending. Then horses again and with Ev Steinbuch to the Granada and Johnny Newkirk.

In an unguarded moment your Chairman was able to escape but not for long, and as the twilight fell behind the barricades the war-whoops of the infuriated Redskins foretold what was to come during the night hours. Then followed the tribal ritual called "Can-He-Take-It," and frankly, your Chairman just could not. So it was decided in view of the uprising of hostile tribes in Canton and Akron that the journey to these dangerous parts be canceled. Until darkness the next day there were skirmishes on all sides but under the cover of night and with the aid of those friendly Indians, Goodman, Miller and tribe mascot Princess Dorothy, your tottering scribe was brought in one piece to the Airport, receipted for by the hostess on United's 11:45 flight to New York, deposited very carefully onto a soft and so welcome seat.

And all through the journey your Chairman's sleep was disturbed by dreams of wild Indians whooping down Euclid Avenue whirling lassos made up of keys-to-the-city with which they deftly roped unwary and unsuspecting visiting Round Tablers.

BARCROFT AND MEIKLE TOP NOVEMBER VOTES

Silver Plaque Is Voted to RKO Ohioan; New Zealand Manager Takes the Bronze

Distinguished for establishing two new "firsts," the results in the November Quigley Awards widen the horizon of these Competitions with the voting of the Silver Plaque to John Barcroft, of the RKO Palace, in Columbus, Ohio, and the Bronze Plaque to Ross Meikle, manager, Regent Theatre, Wanganui, New Zealand. Barcroft's winning on "Swingtime" makes this entrant the first RKO theatreman to earn Plaque honors and Meikle brings this distinction to New Zealand with his excellent entry on "Desire."

Separated by some 8000 miles, there was little to choose, in the opinions of the judges, between the two entries. The margin of voting was extremely narrow and the final decisions as difficult to make as any in the history of the Awards. However, there is glory enough for both especially since Barcroft's campaign was also rewarded just recently with one of the first prizes in the recent Packard car contest.

Interesting also is that the three entries selected for First Mentions finished neck and neck, so to speak and did so on three entirely different types of campaigns. Ben Cohen, of the College, New Haven, was voted his win on a road-show engagement of "Romeo and Juliet"; Matt Saunders, at the Poli, Bridgeport, on a first-run date for "Tarzan Escapes" and last but far from least, John F. Burhorn at the second-run Gayety, in Chicago, on "And Sudden Death."

Australasia registers again signally in the Honorable Mentions divisions with four ratings awarded for three campaigns. These go to first-timers in the Competitions and include, Mel Lawton, and Hermann Flynn, of Sydney; Horrie Peverill, of Launceston, Tasmania; Eric Wahlquist, of Melbourne. Canadian winners in November include Ernie Petch repeating and Mort Margolius registering for his first win.

The November results as in previous months show a growing number of names new to the Competitions with 14 showmen topping the listing including the two Plaque winners.

Thus, 22 theatremen are now eligible for the 1936 Grand Awards and only December remains to choose the final entrants. The two men selected for the year's Top Prizes will as announced be transported to Hollywood as guests of MOTION PICTURE HERALD via United Airlines and above is reproduced the newest type of transport called the most powerful in this country and one of the fleet of 21 passenger Douglases now being delivered to United for regular service. Delivery is to include 10 super de luxe transports, with 14 seats to be installed in the 21-type passenger type cabin to provide spaciousness and comfort for long distance travel.

Looks like the winners will travel in top style. Are you acomin'?

Wire Steel Mills On "Magnificent Brute"

In order to stress the particular appeal of "Magnificent Brute" to the "steel" workers of Syracuse, N. Y., David Freeman, manager, and Joseph Ott, publicist of the Schine Eckel Theatre, arranged with the local Postal Telegraph office to send special wires to all the steel mills and metal fabricating plants. The wires were preceded by explanatory telephone calls to the plant managers which assured their placement on the bulletin boards. Wire copy was: "Out of The Roaring Steel Furnaces Leaps This Blazing Drama of Untameable Men 'Magnificent Brute' with Victor McLaglen and Binnie Barnes—One of The Greatest Pictures of The Year!"

A scene from New York's lower East Side was reconstructed in front of the Lyric Theatre, Bisbee, Ariz., by Ted De Grazia for "The Devil Is a Sissy" (see photo). High board fence was erected, overturned garbage can and two small boys posed in marble game to lend color. Printed title and cast in kid writing, together with cartoons, completed the effect.

Cohen's Cinema Column Sells "Sing Baby Sing"

Under the nom de plume of "Movie Guyed," Ben Cohen, College Theatre, New Haven, Conn., conducting a weekly chatter column in the local papers, managed to get in a few extra plugs for "Sing Baby Sing." Paragraphs were planted in sports column of both the Register and Journal Courier on the Yale-Cornell football shots as an added attraction and stories were also landed on the attendance of the Yale team opening night.

Lobby star contest was conducted five weeks ahead, with entire inside lobby wall covered with star stills to be identified, winners received tickets to see "Sing" and all music stories featured window and counter displays, distributing photos of Alice Faye. Announcements of the show were made at all football games, auto races, fights, etc., and singing usher was sent to all social functions, singing hits from the picture.

Furniture Store Kiddie Club Aids Van Meter on "Dimples"

Local furniture store cooperated with Dwight Van Meter, Astor Theatre, Reading, Pa., sponsoring a "Dimples" coloring contest, through their daily Uncle Ed radio program in connection with store's kiddie club which has a reported membership of 13,000 children.

Announcements over air invited kids to store to pick up the guide-line pictures of Temple and picture, theatre and playdate plugs were included in their daily broadcasts one week ahead of opening. Prizes, including large Temple doll and theatre passes, were given by the store to the winners. Accompanying photo shows attractive window display.

Dwight made a city-wide canvass of all local merchants handling Shirley merchandise in an effort to put over his "Dimples Week," all stores devoting window to display of the starlets' goods, which were installed five days in advance and remained during run of picture. Opening night Junior Naval Drum and Bugle Corps marched to the theatre and gave a half-hour concert in front of house, and bannered sound truck covered neighborhood sections.

Tiein McLaglen Interview

Dave Idzal and George Mitchell, at the Fox, Detroit, spotted an exploitation angle in the Woman's Home Companion interview of Victor McLaglen and made the most of it by selling the local magazine distributor on a cooperative tie-up stunt. Special cards were prepared for window and newsstand use. The dealer's fleet of delivery trucks were bannered. Tie-up copy used was along the following line: Read The Biography of Victor McLaglen in Woman's Home Companion—See Victor McLaglen in "The Magnificent Brute"—Fox Theatre.

"Brute" Radio Contest

Full week of free radio contest plugging for "Magnificent Brute" was one of the smart showmanship stunts Manager H. A. Sefton lined-up for his campaign at the Orpheum Theatre, Wichita, Kans. Radio break came in the form of a contest based on the question: "What Would You Have Titled 'Magnificent Brute'?" Cash and ticket prizes were awarded for the best answers. In addition to playing up contest on the air, the new title quest was plugged through the Liberty Magazine tie-up, with the delivery boys distributing heralds announcing the contests.

30' Burning Candle Plugs "Mary of Scotland"

Accompanying photo shows one of two 30-foot Gothic candles with real burning flames which were planted by A. Herman, RKO publicity manager for Poland, as a publicity stunt for "Mary of Scotland," opening at the Europa Theatre in Warsaw. This is a reported first time that city ordinances permitted picture advertising on the streets.

A cavalcade of "Mary of Scotland" on horseback followed by her guards, also on horseback, rode through the streets three days ahead. Extensive window displays were planted in leading merchants' windows in connection with a fashion show of modern versions of the "Mary of Scotland" dresses.

Torgan's Prizes to Liberty Boys

To the local Liberty boys who were successful in having largest number of "Magnificent Brute" heralds with their names on them turned into the box office of the Keith Theatre, Lowell, Mass., Samuel Torgan offered prizes. To encourage good distribution of the specially imprinted heralds, 150 of the kids made a house-to-house tour.

High-Power Exploitation Finds Favor in Tokyo

Distributors Cooperate With Japanese Theatremen to Put Over Strong Campaigns

by H. TOMINAGA

in Tokyo

Tokyo, the capitol of Japan, now counts a population of 5,875,000 odd on its colossal area of 550 square kilom. Its adjoining suburbs are becoming citified with tremendous rapidity with a network of tram and bus lines stretching outward on to tap the rurality of pedestrian traffic. Yokohama, lying just beyond Kawasaki, Japan's major industrial center, is within easy reach of the Capital. So much now has the communication been facilitated in its encircling outskirts that, including the suburbs, the population probably exceeding six millions would account for such extensive area from which the city's leading cinemas draw their attendance.

Tokyo at present has totally 254 movie theatres, of which 202 play Japanese pictures, 24 the foreign only, and 28 show mixed Japanese and foreign programs; the foreign product being shown by a bit less than one-fourth of the total number of Tokyo cinema houses. Of this total, special mention must be made of 228 sound theatres which indicate the absolute majority of cinemas the Capital has. The remaining 16 silent houses, however, will soon have to show sound programs, according as the producers are made to convert into supplying talkies in order to go with the stream.

These theatres, counting 254, are subject to the cinema regulations of Metropolitan Police Board, while they are controlled by Toyko municipality insofar as taxation is concerned.

Going into particulars, the movie theatres in Tokyo are required to submit applications for exhibition with an attached copy of plain figure of auditorium, censor certificate and speaker's license to the competent chief of police station. On the other hand, the exhibitors are in duty bound to render to the competent ward offices duplicates of play notice and plain figure of auditoriums, these for the necessity of various taxes to be rated on exhibition, seating capacity, admission prices, etc.

Being a major commercial and industrial center, besides a seat of central government, Tokyo is inhabited chiefly by its residents engaged in commerce, industry and in governmental service: the number of them put together covering 79 per cent of the entire employed population, of which each 33 per cent accounts for those in the former two callings. In further classification of those residents into laboring class and "intellectual," it will be interesting to find that Tokyo has had an increasing number of factory workers particularly in these few years due to recent ascendency of munition industry in and around the city. The number of the city's laborers in this field now amounts to 60 per cent of its total number of various factory workers showing 160,000, whereas the "intellectuals," including the employed and unemployed, representing a high standard of education will be roughly estimated at 25 per cent of the city's entire population. The average daily wage of the laborers is reported round yen 1.—, while that of skilled workers at big factories employing over one hundred is yen 2.30 on an average except remunerations for extra work; this indicating that the general laboring class, not to mention the technical and skilled workers, have had their day, gaining generally more than educated office workers would draw. It is a natural indication, therefore, that as compared with a few years ago, not only small theatres, but the major first-run houses, are drawing at present a fairly larger proportion of attendance from laborers' quarters than previous.

From what is set down on these pages, it appears that the theatremen of Tokyo must be placed in the top brackets in any listing of advertising and exploitation-minded cities throughout the world. Accounts from the Japanese metropolis of individual campaigns and photos have been reported frequently in the Round Table and the current article in the Showman's Travelogue series, which treats of the local conditions as affecting the showbusiness and the status of the theatre in Tokyo, includes the ways and means employed by these overseas theatremen in selling their attractions, Japanese, American and otherwise. —A-MIKE.

In treating of this item, it will be necessary, first of all, to give what is the transportation situation of the city's various houses. On the whole, the Tokyo houses, with some exceptions, are located at parts of the city where the inhabitants can avail themselves of some means of communication or another. They make good use of street or suburban trams, city or private firms' buses, and recently of subway service which is being extended still further to connect the central part of the city with various suburban districts. Now that the extention work of subway is in fast progress to connect Shimbashi with Shinjuku to tap further the city's key points, on its completion, propably in a year's time more, the periurban Shinjuku and Shibuya, having 25 movie-houses will doubtlessly come to draw more larger attendance who are liable to frequent the houses at Marunouchi, Asakusa and other fashionable quarters of the city.

CARRILLO PETS. Manager Henry Sommers and U. A. exploiteer Warren Slee promoted this pet shop window display of Siamese kittens purported pets of star in "Desperado" at the Akron Palace.

Parking Called Problem

Talk of Marunouchi, Asakusa and Shinjuku, we have in the Capital two different areas; the so-called "Yamanote," or the periurban upland district and "Shitamachi" or downtowns. Until some years ago the city's amusement center was represented by Asakusa, the most fashionable resort of the downtown districts. Later with the appearance of Marunouchi as another show area of Tokyo, the thrivingness of Asakusa partly moved to this zone. Now that Asakusa is not what it was, and there looms a possibility of bustling "Yamanote" attracting the freakish modern much more than Asakusa in the near future, Tokyo will witness more clear distinctions in its movie houses as located at these three different busy quarters with the extension of subway completely reaching to such periurban districts. At Asakusa there are some twenty cinemas, and their patrons use, for the greater part, street cars and buses, or often trip by subway. Most of them being located at one side of a narrow street, motorists proceeding to these houses are not allowed to ride into the pedestrian traffic near by, thus parking of cars presents more of a problem at Asakusa, which still now is a representative show town of the city.

Marunouchi District Outstanding

As another downtown amusement area of Tokyo, there is Marunouchi, which is not only a noted business center, but is now the finest and most modernized show town, dotted with six outstanding first-run cinemas, play and opera houses. Among them, Imperial Theatre, Nippon Gekijo, Hibiya Eiga Gekijo and Marunouchi Shochiku are the first-rate cinemas representing Shochiku and Takarazuka, the two big theatrical interests of Japan. The former three are for first-run of foreign pictures and the last one releases Shochiku productions, each having from 1,300 to 3,000 seating capacity; the Nippon Gekijo, the most capacious with approximately 3,000, Hibiya with 1,870 and the Imperial with 1,315. As for the admission prices, the highest is that of the Imperial, accounting for yet 1.00 (about 30 cents), yen .70 for second and yen .50 for third class seat, whereas at Nippon Gekijo and Hibiya, belonging to Takarazuka interest, the admission charge is on the uniform rate system of yen .50, this presenting an interesting contrast against the Imperial and Marunouchi Shochiku, which are under the management of Shochiku Company. Viewed from this angle, some say that in the Imperial there is a tincture of something aristocratic in that it is not open to general low-earning classes because of the comparatively high admission prices. On the contrary, the flat rate of the two Takarazuka houses is significant in itself of their being open to all classes of attendances, and that accounts for the difference of policies between the two companies. For majority of weeks, the Imperial included in its programs European pictures which sometimes are so high-toned that they are likely thought to be for "intellectuals," whereas programs of Nippon Gekijo are usually so arranged to cover all the possible assortments of pictures chiefly on an entertaining basis.

DE LUXE HOUSES WELL APPOINTED

In the case of Hibiya, a companion house of Nippon Gekijo, high standard is often the element of their programs, as they apparently aim to hit popular fancy of the intellectual clientele.

The admission fees at the city's second and third runs as a whole are: yen .50 and yen .30 at the second, and yen .30 and yen .20 at the third, while many houses run subordinate to the third show triple programs for yen .20 and yen .10. As, however, they are apt to reduce their nominal rates, sometimes as low down as to yen .05, exhibitors' guilds are put under the necessity of keeping in check the deterioration of the admission by means, for example, of a counter-measure of making their distributors not to provide such theatres with the pictures.

Nippon Gekijo, nearly comparable with the de luxe cinemas of the American key cities, situated at Sukiyabashi, the city's bustling area is within easy reach of the electric railway station, tram and bus stops and subway stations. There a number of attendances, sometimes two to three hundreds, are seen standing in a row close to the entrances of those Marunouchi houses from early in the morning before they are open—sometimes the row extending as far as a quarter of a mile away. We generally call this situation "Uchikomi," or "rush-in," which the theatres if actually visited by such attendances, would lose no time to splurge by way of a publicity stuff available for the rest of the week for second and third runs of the same pictures which drew such "rush-in" attendances.

Generally speaking, as those theatres at Marunouchi are visited very conveniently by any means of communication, people even in the remote suburbs can reach them in about half an hour or so. In point of the parking situation, because of its wide compound in front and at both sides of the theatre, the Imperial probably will provide the best parking accommodation for motoring attendances as compared to the rest of Marunouchi theatres.

At Shinjuku there are six major theatres including second-runs, among which Musashino-Kan, Shochiku's first-run for foreign pictures, Showa-Kan, second-run for same, Teito-za, first-run for Nikkatsu productions, Daitokyo, first-run for Shinko's are outstanding.

Midnight Shows Inaugurated

Though lying somewhat scattered as compared with theatres at Asakusa, it may be said that those Shinjuku houses are operating on definitely progressive and up-to-date basis, as well as Marunouchi theatres; some inaugurating such novelties of idea as midnight show, special show of outstanding pictures and the like. Being located at the northwest periurban center of railway and tram communications, also adjacent to suburban residential quarters, Shinjuku is not only a fashionable and holiday resort, but its importance is added more by the ever-improving citified appointment in keeping with an increase of the office-working and intellectual population in its vicinity stretching to distant outskirts. Indeed, the traffic on its main street is reported as large as 600,000 a day. Thus people find in Shinjuku even more freshness and vivacity than witnessed at Ginza and Asakusa, and the theatres at Marunouchi will soon have to think out some counter-measure whereby to catch nice and fast hold of such type of filmgoers who would be tempted to go straight from their offices at Marunouchi to Shinjuku houses. In addition, due to violent competition, the taxi fare in Tokyo being awfully cheap, many cinema patrons run up to their first-run theatre in family or "Dutch treat" groups and dividing their taxi fare equally, find the transportation but a slight addition to, or sometimes a few cents reduction, from the nominal charge, to become equivalent to the city tram fare.

Few Managers' Associations

Plainly speaking, most of the theatre proprietors and managers of this city are isolated, having little opportunity to dabble in outside activities, probably because of the fact that apart from those of major first and second run houses, they have to do almost everything by themselves covering all phases of theatre operation. Although we have had a few managers' societies constituted by the managers of some houses at Kanda and Shinjuku, no standing club, e. g., for lunch or similar sort, of theatremen's group worth mentioning has so far been formed. Viewed in this light, what we call the Syndicate Chain of Six Theatres of the city may be akin in some degree to the managers' friendly society going in for the furtherance of their business objectives through social intercourse. This Syndicate Chain composed of six managers of third-run houses, independent and not belonging to any big circuits, makes it a chief object that they identify themselves with one another to make cooperative negotiation with distributors for purchase of pictures on block booking arrangement, but apparently has no further end.

Apparently taking a cue from the Takarazuka system, or rather to confront it, the Imperial has initiated the flat admission price of 50 sen for students and the military only. It also gives early morning show, special family and children's weeks, while at first and second-run houses at Asakusa, the so-called midnight-show (practically opening at 9:30 and ending at 11 P. M.), which was initiated by Musashino-Kan, has been in vogue with considerable sensation among various houses of the city since a few months past. They are following these novelties by way of service to their patrons, particularly to the laboring class living in their neighborhood.

Many of the city's first and second run theatres send letters of invitation to their clienteles. They also issue tickets with prizes to be distributed by lottery, dispatch greeting cards regularly every season and try to do everything possible to improve their way of handling patrons by various available means of listening to their patrons' opinions, demands and criticism.

The city's de luxe first-run houses, numbering 10, headed by Nippon Gekijo, are very nicely appointed, leaving almost nothing to be desired, insofar as sound-projection equipment, ventilation and cleanliness are concerned, though their heating and cooling accommodations are not complete yet. Fifteen of the first and second runs are equipped with Western Electric and 14 with RCA Photophone sound and projection system, while the remaining 200 houses of lesser category are the users of Rola, Tobis and various home-made systems.

Although the major proportion—to the scale of 228 against 254—of the city's cinemas are aready sound-equipped, it is still more of a problem that with a few exceptions, such as Nippon Gekijo and some of the Shochiku and Takarazuka's first-run houses, the rest of the leading theatres have no perfect refrigeration in the hot summer. This situation, which is more particular the case with second and subsequent runs of lesser rank, is what their so-called summer slump is attributed to, let their business policies be what they will. To speak plainly, the theatre arrangements in Tokyo, particularly in regard to refrigeration now need the quickest possible improvement; otherwise those with poor accommodations will have to helplessly see the lion's share taken away by better equipped houses in the hot season.

Heavy Newspaper Campaigns

Of the current publicity trend common with the city's first and second-run houses, newspaper exploitation covers major proportion. So much so that very few of Tokyo dailies and commercial and industrial periodicals, not to mention those on sports, traveling and other amusements than movies,

MANY TIEUPS MADE

do not feature the motion picture. Until last fall, there was a limitation on newspaper advertisings for Japanese pictures agreed upon by our five leading producing companies. Now that, however, the limitation has been replaced with a neutralized agreement allowing their newspaper advertisements to cover up to five columns per one insertion, the Japanese product has since been enabled to go on the same footing with foreign pictures, in so far as this field of publicity is concerned.

Apart from the special full one- or half-page advertising for super-special productions, the city's first-runs would usually give three- to five-column advertisings for ordinary programs on every Wednesday evening issue of our leading papers, such as Tokyo Asahi, Yomiuri, Tokyo Nichi-nichi, Hochi, Jiji, etc.

These Tokyo newspapers are definitely cooperative with the theatres, each carrying a special movie section in the Saturday editions devoted exclusively to the announcement and review on the pictures coming and being released, feature stories, gossips on screen writers, directors and stars both in Japan and Hollywood. Reviews on motion pictures of such papers being considerably effective and credited as a whole with a cardinal factor of draw indispensable to the publicity for first-run releases, filmfans to the first-run cinemas are very mindful of the press critique (not necessarily syndicated), as much as are attentive to the write-ups and reviews in various popular magazines, of which publications for ladies feature the motion picture most. For the newspaper advertising for first-run releases, the distributor cooperates in exploitation with the exhibitor, lending himself much to go in for merchants' tie-ups, e. g., the tie-ups with dealers in toilet goods, provisions and drugs, dance-hall, cabaret, tea-booth, etc. Besides, conducive as much to the publicity of pictures for first and all subsequent runs in this city will be the shop window display, not only at important municipal areas, but in the remote suburbs. Other publicity stunts available are by and through airplane, ad balloon, city and periurban trams and buses, not to speak of handbills, leaflets, posters, bookmarks, signboards, slides, inner curtains, etc.

It is very seldom the case with subordinate runs below the third that newspaper advertising is exploited. They rather prefer the issuing of discount or free coupons with new programs inserted in the newspapers.

Much Outside Competition

As impediments to the movieshow, the Tokyo cinemaman are afraid of horse-race, wrestling and baseball matches and other seasonal tournaments which draw away a pretty considerable number of their patrons. The semi-annual baseball matches held at Jingu Gaiyen and the noted wrestling matches in January and May are the attractions, possibly so much outweighing the movies that the bigger the seating capacity is, the more affected such theatre is.

Because of the fact that movie-fans agree in their liking to baseball fans in whom is included a large number of young girls, it often happens that even strong programs of the week would prove unworthy of keeeping the clientele of the first-run from running up to the Jingu Gaiyen ground. Horse-races given occasionally in the neighborhood of Toyko are among other distractions existent to the extent of being serious opposition to the city's movie-houses. As another opposition to the movies, there is the legitimate show. This is not, however, so serious as a whole, while the city's first-run cinemas possibly have some fear of being hit by a spectacular drama, attraction or review.

At Marunouchi, there are Yuraku-za and Takarazuka Opera House, both controlled by I. Kobayashi, the proprietor of Nippon Gekijo and Higiya Eiga Gekijo. Half a mile beyond, Kabuki-za, the Japan's representative "kabuki" theatre, Tokyo Gekijo, Shimbashi Embu Gekijo, etc., constitute a legitimate show quarter. Considering in their bearing on the geographical status, it may be said that these playhouses are capable enough of making inroads upon the cinema patrons of Imperial, Nippon Gekijo, Hibiya and Marunouchi Shochiku. This is, however, but one-sided view, because the clientele to the cinema is not always the regular attendance to the drama as a whole, as far as Tokyo is concerned.

800 Pictures Released Yearly

To summarize in closing: the cinema business in Tokyo, as a whole, is elastic and done without much difficulty, which accounts even for the fact that approximately 800 motion pictures, to the scale of four Japanese against three foreign, are released yearly through Tokyo's first-run houses numbering some 20 odds. Since in the life of the Tokyo residents, the movies have now been closed up as major items of their cultural pursuit and entertainment, there is every indication that Tokyo is mirrored as the best show town in Japan in the eyes of anybody setting his first foot in the capital. They are having bigger and nicer cinemas at various quarters of the city encouraged by the appearance of one modern style house after another belonging to Takarazuka interest controlled by I. Kobayashi, the leading business magnate of the contemporary Japan. The theatres in Tokyo, on the whole, are segregated as belonging to the five major theatrical circuits, directed by Shochiku, Nikkatsu, Shinko, P. C. L. (now affiliated with the Toho Film Distributing Co.), and Daito (producer of silent pictures only). Due to, however, the poor supply of pictures by these producers-distributors, the distribution of foreign pictures are given wide scope of inroad to make into the Japanese film markets, with the result that the city's filmgoing public are having more opportunity to enjoy the foreign picture. Thus the filmdom of Japan, rather than being confined to Japan only, is open to all pictures, both home-made and foreign, to sell so well that most of the producing companies, with a few exceptions, have been doing considerably better business than a year or two previous.

THE DISPLAY ADS ON THE NEXT PAGE

The newspaper layout on page to right by E. V. ("Dinny") Dinerman, RKO Midwest ad and publicity chief, is the second in the Round Table series which presents the individual work of outstanding admen from different parts of the country. "Dinny" of course needs little introduction to students of smart advertising. He does a right smart job of work for 20 houses in Cincinnati, Dayton and Louisville and the ads reproduced here follow out his general purpose, that "each ad shall function as a complete unit by itself." All art work, layout and type used in the ads originate in the division's Cincinnati office.

Further Reports on Yuletide Activities

Arrived too late for publication in last week's issue the following are further reports from members on what they are planning for pre-Christmas and the Holiday season. From Oklahoma City, George H. Henger, city manager, Standard Theatres is figuring on a repeat of idea used successfully last year. With thousands of shoppers downtown at night, admission prices will be reduced after nine o'clock, making these late prices as much a bargain as the early bird matinee scale.

Added attraction for Christmas week at Loew's Syracuse, will be prologue arranged by Ed McBride with popular local singer. Scene will be church window with falling snow effect as background and singer seated at small portable organ on stage surrounded by group of altar boys singing Christmas hymns and carols. Regular organist concealed will play accompaniment. The singer, Jack Shannon, being a local boy, McBride figures his appearance will help build the grosses.

Another stunt Ed is putting over is tieup with local Rotary Club, of which he is the chairman of the publicity committee, to give two special morning shows for orphans at which local baker is giving ice cream and cookies to each kiddie attending.

Sid Dannenberg, Warner Cleveland zone ad chief, reports basket benefit as has been put on successfully by Julius Lamm with business men in the neighborhood of the Uptown Theatre. Tickets are sold widely for the benefit show with various committees appointed to follow through. Prizes are given for most tickets sold and tieups made with radio station, newspapers, etc. Sid reports that 30 per cent of the gross on the show is given to the benefit committee which compensates both sides for the efforts.

Frank Boucher at the Metropolitan, Baltimore, favors Empty Stocking Parties and appropriate lobby and theatre decoration. He reports the sale of scrip books in the past as unsatisfactory and does not recommend them as a business-builder.

H. H. Maloney at the Poli in Worcester, Mass., has laid plans to tie up with the Worcester Telegram and Gazette for a kiddie show. Admission will be a toy which will be handed over to an orphanage a week ahead of Christmas.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 48

Bluebook School Question No. 48 was: (A) Assuming your feed circuit from main board to projection room switchboard to be No. 4 rubber-covered commercial copper, length 98 feet, load under normal conditions 70 amperes; circuit in use nine years and never overloaded—what is its rated capacity, what is its voltage drop at full load, and with current a. c., four cents per K. W. hour, hours of operation six per day, seven days per week, what is the loss due to voltage drop? Also, would you advise installation of larger wires?

The following made acceptable answers: S. Evans and S. Rau; D. Danielson; B. DeVietti; H. B. Smith; G. E. Doe; C. Oldham; W. Edmonds; M. and J. Devoy; C. L. Loft; W. C. Brown; L. Cimikoski; A. L. This question has had me worried a bit because of the fact that through it I have discovered in the Bluebook that certain matter must have been omitted during the mechanical processes of publication, confusing the discussion of voltage drop, pages 66-67. The answer of J. R. Prater is selected out of the many excellent replies. He says:

"Table 2, page 63, of the Bluebook, sets the allowable capacity of a R. C. copper wire at 70 amperes. Formula No. 3, page 67, tells us the voltage drop is equal to 21 times amperage used times length of the circuit, this result to be divided by the cross-section area of the wire in circular mils.

"Referring again to table No. 2, we find that a No. 4 wire has 41.740 C. M. cross-section area. Substituting figures contained in the formula and those thus obtained, we have: Voltage drop equals $21 \times 70 \times 98$, the whole divided by 41.740, which final result gives us 3.453+ volts drop for our No. 4 wire circuit carrying 70 amperes.

"With a. c. costing 4 cents per K. W. hour, and 70 amperes used $(6 \times 7) \times 42$ hours per week, the loss would amount to a little less than 41 cents per week, or approximately $41 \times 52 =$ 2132 cents ($21.32) per year.

"As to installing larger wires, it is quite true that the present ones would carry 70 amperes without injury. Also, nine years use without overload at any time should leave them uninjured in good operating condition and good for many more years of service, provided there be no future abuse. However, I would advise installing larger wires, even though it also meant new conduit. A local electrician advises that under average conditions he would install a new circuit 98 feet long, consisting of two No. 0 R. C. wires in 1.5-inch conduit for a total cost of $70.00, including conduit, wires and labor.

"This would provide a 125-ampere capacity and at 70 amperes would have a voltage drop of only 1.3655 volts, which under the conditions set forth would mean a voltage drop loss of only about $8.35. Subtracting this from the above loss of $21.32 shows a yearly saving of almost $13, which would be equal to more than 18 per cent interest upon the required investment of $70. Certainly this should be sufficiently high interest to attract the attention of good business men, even though the investment be small.

"In case the original No. 4 wires were in 1.5-inch conduit, the installation cost would be lowered, so much that the interest would be almost doubled. Moreover, the abandoned material of the old circuit should have some salvage value, or possibly might be used to advantage in another part of the theatres."

I have not checked all the calculations, but aside from these, note the completeness of the answer and how thoroughly Brother Prater—a Washington State man—has gone into the matter. Space prevented printing all details of his reply, which included all his calculations. It will be observed from this that circuits that operate within permissible N. E. code load do not necessarily operate at high efficiency.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 52

(A) What is inter-electrode capacitance? Feed back? Oscillation?

(B) List roughly the varieties of electric power needed to operate the average sound system.

(C) What is meant by "mil foot" and how is it used in calculating resistance of conductors?

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

B. De Vietti says:

"Rated capacity of No. 4 wire is 70 amperes; this is the National Board of Fire Underwriters specification. The voltage drop of the circuit, at full load, would be 3.4519 volts. Loss, due to voltage drop, would amount to .0579 cents per day, .4053 cents per week, and $21.1335 per year. Nine years (plus two days for leap years), $190.3179.

"My advice as to larger wire would be a most emphatic yes, based on the following reason: In so far as the circuit is concerned, it meets the requirements with regard to the wire (No. 4) being of the proper size and capacity for its load, but by using a larger wire a very decided saving can be effected due to the fact that it will have a smaller voltage drop loss.

"Based on local wire prices, I have taken a No. 2 wire for comparison, with the No. 4 used in the circuit, and have arrived at the following figures:

"Cost of No. 2 wire (196 feet), $19.60; cost of No. 4 wire (196 feet), $13.72; difference in cost, $5.88; loss due to voltage drop (No. 4 wire), $21.13 (one year); loss due to voltage drop (No. 2 wire), $13.28 (one year); difference in loss amounts to $7.85.

"It is evident, therefore, that the larger wire is by far the cheapest to use as it gets cheaper with use, while just the opposite is true of the smaller wire."

Many made the error of not carrying their calculations on to include the matter of interest upon the investment of installing larger wires, which, after all, is the real answer and one far, far too frequently overlooked.

H. B. Smith ends his correct answer with, "Two or three years at the present hours per day of operation would repay the whole cost of installing larger wires. The loss in nine years has been a total of almost $200."

Might I suggest that some of the men who don't bother cyphering out wire circuit losses take a good look at this. Then get busy, holding conference with friend manager if losses are found. That is the kind of work that causes employers to respect employes. As I have many times advised you, National Electrical Code ratings are based upon safety from fire, not on economy in operation.

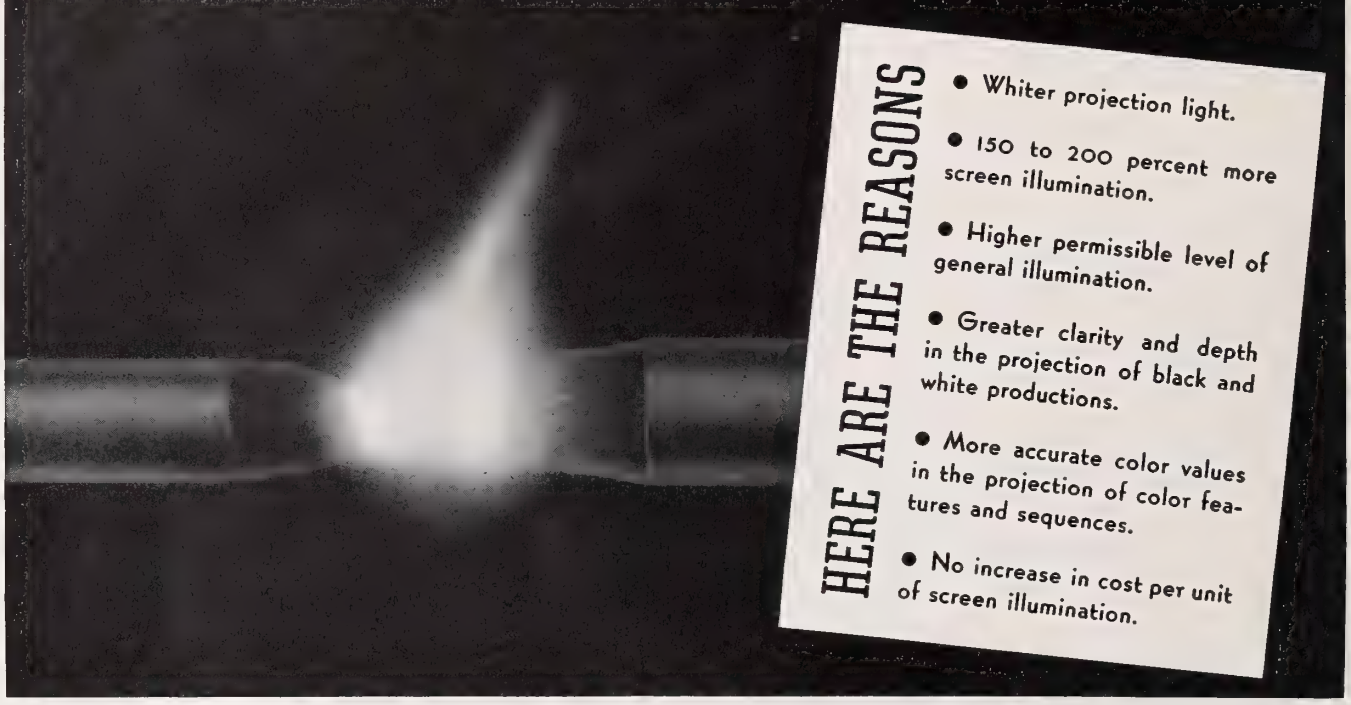
NATIONAL SUPREX CARBONS

ARE RAPIDLY REPLACING LOW INTENSITY ARCS IN THEATRES OF SMALL AND INTERMEDIATE SIZE



HERE ARE THE REASONS

- Whiter projection light.
- 150 to 200 percent more screen illumination.
- Higher permissible level of general illumination.
- Greater clarity and depth in the projection of black and white productions.
- More accurate color values in the projection of color features and sequences.
- No increase in cost per unit of screen illumination.

The SUPREX ARC is a high intensity arc, using a new type of carbon developed by the National Carbon Company Research Laboratories. New lamps, of high efficiency and simplified design, have been produced by projection lamp manufacturers for use with this new carbon.

In comparison with the low intensity arc, the SUPREX ARC has the inherent advantages of higher intrinsic brilliancy, whiter light, and greater efficiency in light production. The improved quality of screen illumination it provides and the higher level of general illumination, from supplementary sources, which it permits are advantages which strongly appeal to the theatre-going public. The SUPREX ARC has been acclaimed as the "outstanding achievement of years" in the field of motion picture projection.

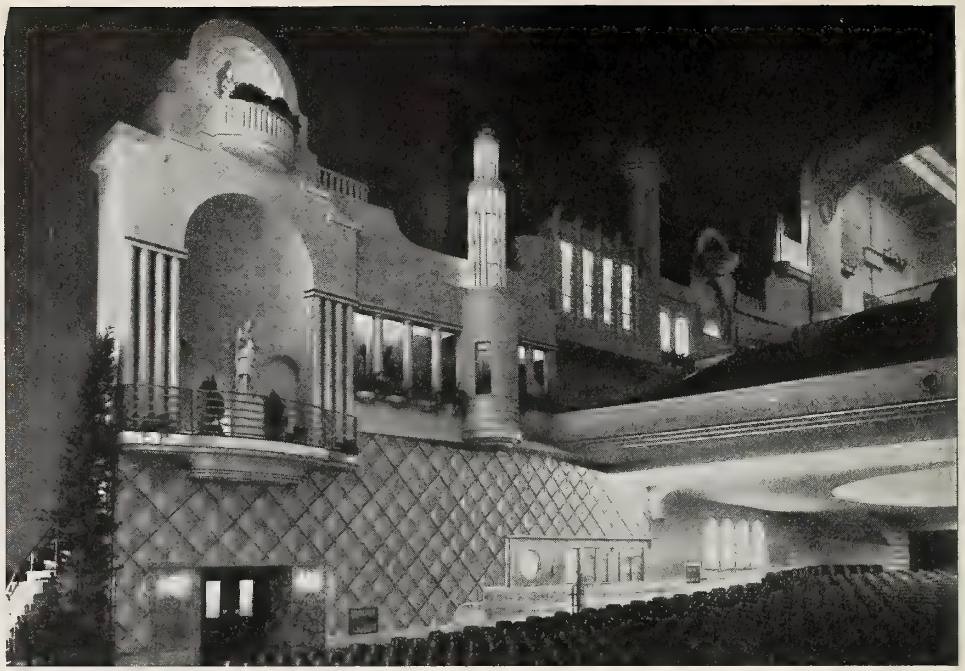
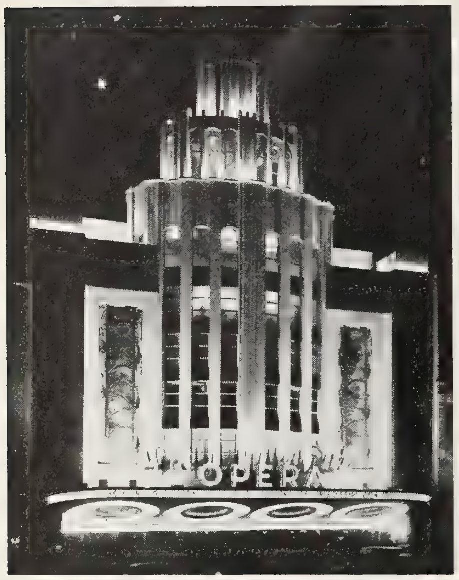
Atmospheric Design Set in Modern Forms

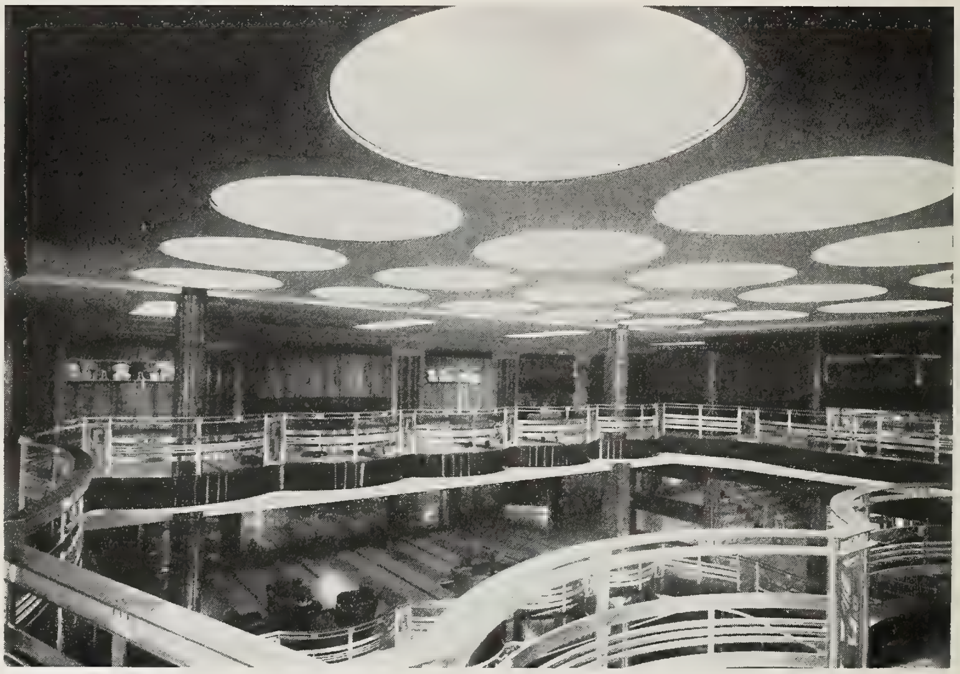


The "atmospheric" auditorium, in a modernized classical design.

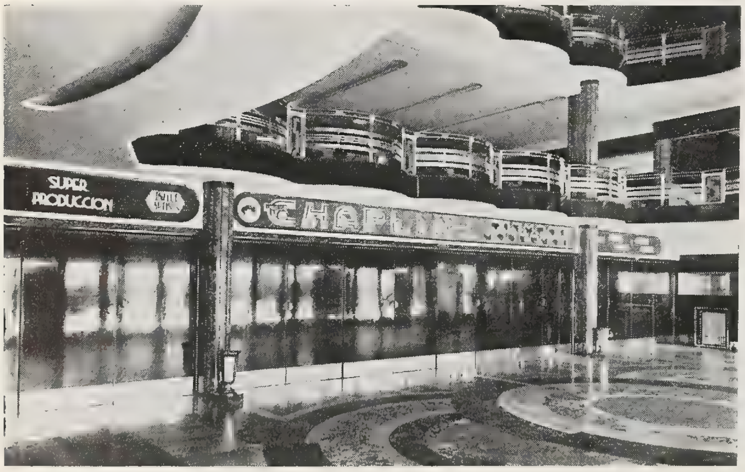


Night view of the front.

Proscenium arch, with concealed lighting.



Promenade area occupying third balcony of lobby.



Main and second level of the lobby.

■ Following a definitely modern pattern on both the exterior and interior, with liberal application of the newer materials and lighting schemes, the new 2500-seat Opera theatre in Buenos Aires seats its audiences in an auditorium of the atmospheric type, the design of which would seem to represent an attempt to adjust that style of auditorium to modern forms. The general character of the auditorium decoratively is classical, instead of employing the Mediterranean theme usually associated with atmospheric theatres; at the same time, one may note, particularly in the lighting and toward the rear of the auditorium, much of the simplicity of line and abstraction of idea characterizing modern decorative conceptions. The facade is modern classical with "grano-art" stone, facing and floodlighting provisions for outlining the architectural forms. The lobby is a huge room extending upward three levels, each upper level forming a promenade and lounge balcony above the lobby proper. The Opera is owned by Clemente Lococo. The architect was Alberto Bourdon.

Flutter Asserted To Be Controllable

WITH EQUIPMENT now available, flutter, the distortion caused by variations of film speed and density, can be measured with great accuracy, and as a result, further strides will be made in the improvement of sound motion picture quality, V. Subrizi of the special sound motion picture research staff of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, told ERPI technicians at a special demonstration in New York.

The new apparatus is a further development of the "flutter bridge" which Erpi announced last year. It makes use of the "filter" principle to separate the sound frequencies and permanent records of the measured data are recorded on a moving paper tape.

Mr. Subrizi's talk was accompanied by a series of slides illustrating the more technical aspects of his subject and closed with a practical demonstration of various flutter recordings made for the purpose of instructing service men in the art of detecting and identifying various types and degrees of flutter as experienced in the theatre.

Drive-In Theatres For New England

THE NEXT THREE years will see five more drive-in theatres built in New England, according to a program announced by P. E. Comi of Boston. The Drive-In theatre in Weymouth, Mass., has been so successful that two more are planned for next spring in Providence and the North Shore.

Prices Reduced on Mazda Projection Lamps

PRICE REDUCTIONS on incandescent projection lamps have been announced by General Electric and Westinghouse. The new prices average 10% below previous prices.

The lamps and classes of service affected include Standard voltage 100-watt and 200-watt T-8 bulb lamps with bayonet base, for 8 mm. and slide film projectors; standard voltage 400-watt and 500-watt T-10 bulb and 750-watt T-12 bulb biplane-filament lamps with medium base, for 16-mm. projectors; and standard voltage 1000-watt short T-20 bulb biplane-filament lamp with medium base, for 35-mm. projectors.

The reductions are said to have been made possible by the concentration of demand on fewer types of lamps.

Late 1936 Plans Boom 1937 Theatre Building

PLANS FOR NEW theatres reported during the past few weeks definitely point to maintenance during the first half of 1937 of the level in construction reached by the middle of the present year. For 1936, construction of new theatres is estimated to have been 15% greater than in 1935, and may have been substantially higher, since the estimate does not include independent houses located in the smaller towns. Practically all sections of the country are represented in the following reports of projects developed during the last few weeks.

Gregory Enterprises of Chicago, announce plans are being completed for a new 1100-seat theatre to be erected in Ottawa, Ill.

A. J. Bianchi and associates will erect a new $100,000 theatre on West Market Street in Akron, Ohio.

P. & G. Corporation will construct a $25,000 theatre at 418-420 North 25th Street in Richmond, Va.

Arthur Rapf and Mike Rudin have filed plans for a new $35,000 theatre to be constructed on 23rd Street between Third and Lexington Avenues, New York City.

Paramount Enterprises is building a $250,000 house at Miami Beach, Fla., with construction being rushed for completion and opening on January 15. Sparks is planning a 500-seater at Bradentown. A new house has just been opened at Vero Beach by Clinton Ezell and R. N. Koblegaurd, Jr.

Palmetto Amusements, Inc., are spending $100,000 on a new building in Columbia, S. C., to replace the Imperial. Another house is being erected at Newberry to be owned by T. E. Davis and managed by Mrs. C. H. Albrecht. A third, to be built by Greenville Enterprises, will be at Greenville. A new house will be built at Spruce Pine, N. C., by Cherokee Amusement.

W. H. Furlong, a newcomer to the theatre business, is completing a new house in Windsor, Ont., which will be called the Vanity. The Capitol is under construction in Sarnia, Ont., and work is proceeding on a new theatre in Hull, Quebec, by Famous Players Canadian Corporation.

Four other new houses are being built in

LET'S GET INTERESTED IN FLUTTER

● In discussions of sound reproduction in theatres, emphasis has been placed, particularly during the last year or two, on frequency range and volume-without-distortion. Developments in equipment have sought extension of both in the interests of greater naturalness and conviction.

Today, with general appreciation of the deficiencies of older equipments, theatres have installed or are rapidly installing the newer apparatus, bringing a new maturity to motion picture entertainment.

But an important defect quite generally characteristic of theatre sound is not permanently eliminated by the installation of the newer reproduction equipment. That defect is "flutter."

The picture, let us say, is a musical. The star is a phenomenal attraction whom Hollywood has paid a fabulous salary. A woman who thrills Metropolitan Opera musical sophisticates. Now the motion picture brings her great gifts to every community. Or does it? In how many theatres is she other than a honky-tonk vocalist? A cigarette soprano! And when the singer is a man, most audiences get a whiskey-tenor despite his fame and the pretty fortune that the producer has paid him.

The importance of music in motion pictures cannot be minimized. Flutter is its foe. And flutter in some degree is the rule rather than the exception.

And it can be substantially eliminated—by constant and consistent maintenance, according to the highest standards, of the entire projection-sound system—the projector mechanism and drive elements as well as the sound apparatus. The newer sound reproduction equipment definitely refines the motion picture art. But it cannot mean what it should mean in regular theatre operation unless exacting maintenance of the entire projection-sound system is pursued.—An Editorial.

Ohio. John Robertson expects to complete a new one at Blanchester by the first of the year. Earl Seitz and John Damon are to build at Sandusky. C. A. MacDonald has started a downtown 1000-seater at Columbus. Chakeres Theatres, Inc., plan an 800-seat house at Springfield.

Three new theatres are under construction in Connecticut: Hamden, 944-seater for Bailey Brothers; Bridgeport, new house on Park Ave. for Antham Prakas; and Fairfield, 500-seater for John Dombi.

E. M. Loew has started a $125,000 house in Winchester, Mass., which had banned films for 20 years. Albert Locatelli, denied a license to build by the selectmen, led the successful fight during the past few years to induce residents to allow a theatre within the town limits.

Fred and Charles Middleburg will build a $150,000 house at Logan, W. Va. It will seat 1000 and will be equipped for stage shows.

D. R. Bly, who operates a theatre at Conneaut, Ohio, has announced plans for a 700-seat house to be built in Ashtabula, at an estimated cost of $30,000.

Erection of a new 1500-seat, $200,000 house at Campbell Avenue and Devon will give Balaban and Katz Circuit its second theatre in the Edgewater district of Chicago. Two other theatres are projected for this district by other interests. The site next to the Nortown theatre was purchased recently by Ellis Lazear, who is having plans drawn by Rissman and Hirshfield for a 1200-seat theatre. Sam C. Meyers, operator of the Theatre De Lago on the North Shore, has announced plans drawn by C. W. and George L. Rapp for a 1200-seat house at Devon and Maplewood Ave.

Plans are nearing completion in the office of Blum E. Hester, Houston, Tex., architect, for the construction of a negro theatre and store building at 907 West Dallas at a cost of approximately $30,000. The theatre auditorium will seat 1000.

Construction of a new theatre in the first block of Fayetteville Street, Raleigh, N. C., will begin January 1. This location was occupied by the Grand, old-time vaudeville house, and the Gaity, one of the city's first motion picture houses. North Carolina Theatres, Inc., are building the new theatre.

Construction of an ultra-modern theatre and store building at Broadway and State Street, Salt Lake City, will be started immediately by the Auerbach Company of that city. Costing $180,000, the building will cover the largest business corner in Salt Lake City and will have a seating capacity of 1400.

Plans are being considered for rebuilding the Lee theatre in South Boston, Va., recently destroyed by fire.

Plans have been completed for a new 700-seat theatre to be built at Mingo, near Steubenville, Ohio, by the Albomac Realty Co. The house is expected to be ready for opening in February.

Joseph Reed of the Washington Theatre Corporation has purchased a site for a 500-seat house in Ridgefield, Conn., to be built in the spring.

Winchester Square Associates are planning to rebuild the huge block at Winchester Square into a motion picture theatre. Western Massachusetts Theatres, Inc., has acquired land in the Forest Park section and will probably start in March on a new building.

A 600-seat theatre building, with nine stores, is to be erected at 73rd Street, and Albermarle Terrace in the Winfield section of Queens, New York City, by Samuel Minskoff.

The Tower Theatre Company is to build a new theatre in Bremerton, Wash., at a cost of $200,000. It will be added to the B. F. Shearer group and will be managed by Col. D. Dow.

Bonuses to Be Given by Wisconsin Theatres

A PLAN embracing $15,000 in bonuses, and prize money totaling $19,000, payable each quarter to managers and their assistants, has been established by H. J. Fitzgerald, general manager of Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises. The plan was announced at a meeting early in December attended by 44 of the circuit's managers from Wisconsin and upper Michigan.

Mr. Fitzgerald also said that cashiers, formerly receiving $10.50 weekly minimum salary, and $15 maximum, will be increased to $12.50 and $18. Distribution of the bonus and prize money, it was explained, will be based on business increases over a certain expectancy in each situation.

The circuit plans to spend $191,000 in improvements during the coming year.

Bausch & Lomb Reject War Goods Contracts

CONTRACTS FOR several million dollars' worth of artillery fire-control instruments for the use of foreign governments were rejected by Bausch & Lomb, according to Carl Hallauer, vice president of the company. With all Europe rearming, frequent requests for military instruments have been received, Mr. Hallauer explained.

"While this is our present policy," said Mr. Hallauer, "I cannot answer for the future."

He intimated that his company does not wish to be put in the position of selling to a foreign government war instruments which might conceivably be used against this country in the event of war.

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers this month awarded to Edward Bausch, head of Bausch & Lomb, a medal "for meritorious mechanical developments in the field of optics."

34 Warner Theatres Now Have RCA Sound

TO DATE 34 installations of RCA sound equipment have been made for Warner Brothers since the first trial installation in the Philadelphia Stanley, a few months ago. Included are contracts just announced by Edwin M. Hartley, RCA Photophone sales head, for the Colonial, Atlantic City; the Stanley, Jersey City; the Liberty, New Kensington, Pa.; and the Astor, Reading, Pa.

Eliminate Perforations In New Types of Screen

ONE TYPE of sound screen without any perforations in the screen itself, has been developed by the Hurley Screen Company of Long Island City, while the same manufacturer has another type now under development which would have perforations only in the central area, directly in front of the speakers.

The former is expected to be ready for the market soon. It is learned that this type is mounted in connection with a masking strip across the top that is perforated for the high-frequency speakers, and it is said that the fabric of the screen proper passes the low frequencies with little or no attenuation.

In the perforated type, the holes would be as at present in sound screens throughout the speaker area, but would become less and less toward the edges and be entirely eliminated from the outer areas, thus compensating to some degree for the light loss there.

Causes of Theatre Accidents And How to Avoid Many of Them

● Injuries to patrons cause repeated losses of substantial amounts. Yet more than 92% are preventable. Here is actual experience data

EXHIBITORS WHO ease their minds with the assurance that "there's only one chance in a million" for an accident occurring in their theatres, will not be comforted, but may be forewarned, by the figures of L. O. Honig, head of the insurance department of Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., which show that:

One severe injury will occur in every 230,000 admissions. . . . One painful injury in every 98,000 admissions. . . . One slight injury in every 33,000 admissions. . . . One near accident in every 1,600 admissions.

Drawing liberally upon the experience, observations and knowledge of Irving Epsteen, director of insurance for Fox West Coast Theatres, Mr. Honig has prepared a comprehensive and analytical study of theatre accidents, their cause and prevention. This study has gone out to Fox Midwest managers as an accident prevention guidebook.

Significant is Mr. Honig's statement, after the survey was completed, that "we found no reason to change our opinion as to the cause of accidents. In fact, it is now possible to localize the danger spots more closely and in a few cases point out the exact spot (in any theatre) at which most accidents will occur. And our insurance engineers can predict how many accidents will occur at this point in a given period."

The entire cost of accidents is paid by the exhibitor, either indirectly through insurance premiums, or directly, out of his own pocket.

"You obtain the lowest possible insurance rate in keeping with the property covered," Mr. Honig commented, "by cooperating with your insurance carriers in minimizing losses. Accident prevention more quickly reflects itself in rates and thereby offers the theatre man more of a chance to do something about it, than is true of plate glass, surety, robbery, compensation and other types of coverage. Since rates now are based on the per hundred of annual attendance, with increased business both premiums and the chances of accident increase."

More important, however, is that "you avoid bad advertising of your theatre. When people are hurt, even though it may be their own fault, they say they'll never enter that theatre again. They not only keep the promise themselves, but induce a certain number of others to keep away by telling their friends. We never know how many children are being kept out of our theatres because of an accident that occurred to their mother, or to a friend of hers, or to a friend of a friend of hers."

It is hard to believe a theatre manager, thinks Mr. Honig, who says that over a year's time and with 1,264,000 admissions he had only one accident. The fact is, he only reported accidents he thought might result in a claim. Exhibitors should report every accident, no matter how minor; then the insurance company has a record. Without it, should the accident later become the basis of a claim, the insurance carrier might very possibly deny liability.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION

Mr. Honig finds no regular rule that can be followed in the prevention of accidents. Over certain causes, even the exhibitor has little control: structural defects, for instance; or, more particularly, carelessness of patrons, who—because they come to a theatre to relax and have a good time—pay little attention to where they are going. Also, exhibitors have no way of telling how many of their patrons are subject to heart ailments, to fainting, etc.

Yet 92.5 per cent of all accidents can be prevented. Torn or loose carpets, wet floors, broken seats, defective steps, slippery pavement, misplaced display signs, running in aisles, bumping against ornaments, raised floors at rear seats—these cause most accidents and are generally due to inattention. The exhibitor can train employes to be constantly on the alert and teach them the fundamental things to look for in handling patrons.

The modification of lighting in localized danger spots has greatly decreased, though it has not eliminated, accidents, Mr. Honig finds. For example, in one theatre five severe accidents occurred in the early fifteen months of the policy period. The subsequent fifteen months developed but one accident, an improvement which must be credited to the installation of an aisle light at every loge seat instead of the previous staggered system of lights.

Accident prevention ideas are constantly being presented Fox Midwest managers in short, pithy paragraphs published in Contact, the circuit's weekly house organ; in special bulletins, in letters and in personal interviews. The best recommendation of these ideas is the improving accident experience of the circuit. Ten, or approximately 10%, of the circuit's theatres have not had an accident in two years. Forty-six, or almost half, have had but one accident so far this year.

The growing safety consciousness of theatre managers and employees and other members of Fox Midwest is indicated by their increasing contribution of ideas on the elimination of accidents. Mr. Honig has called on these ideas, as he has the accident experience of many theatres other than those in the Fox Midwest organization, in preparing his bulletin, of which the following is a digest. Most of this accident experience has taken place during the past three years.

EMPLOYE TRAINING

Disintegration of a ventilating fan clutch filled one theatre with flying particles of steel, and caused eye injuries to seventeen persons. The ventilating system of two theatres drew in contaminated air: one, gas and smoke from an improperly operated furnace; the other, carbon dioxide gas from a defective refrigeration unit which had been thrown in the alley. These instances illustrate the need for ventilating system inlets installed at locations where there is no possibility of air contamination, and for readily accessible location of controls.

The danger of personal injury in addition to fire makes necessary continuous practice of panic drills. In two instances of fire, panics occurred. Fire in both cases broke out in the portion of the loges reserved for smoking and was due to careless disposal of cigarettes. The smouldering characteristics of these fires make them more apt to cause panics. The solution is the placing of trays between or on the back of seats. Fires occurred in 30 theatres while audiences were in them; four panics resulted, or in 13.5% of the cases. The public liability losses from panics are always many times the fire losses.

Patrons should not be allowed to stand in line in unrestricted portions of the lobby and mezzanine, and sometimes even in the aisles that are not separated by a substantial barrier, or encroach on the same exits as seated persons. Panics under such circumstances may be disastrous.

Accidents increase extremely rapidly with crowds. Personal injuries are approximately three times as numerous on "bank nights" as on other nights due largely to overtaxing of usher facilities and loss of control, which increases rowdyism among standing patrons. For instance, in one theatre, the crowd shoved several persons into a radiator, and the result was the payment of several hundred dollars in personal injury claims. In another instance a boy was pushed into the side of an automobile.

The safety valve blew out on the cooling plant compressor at the Fox Palace in Wichita some time ago, releasing about 1500 pounds of gas with a roar like an oil field gusher coming in. The accident occurred at the supper hour when only two usherettes were on duty. But when the girls heard the rush of gas, they guessed the cause, walked calmly down the two center aisles, and announced that there was no cause for alarm. A panic was averted.

One of the two important things required of Fox Midwest managers and regarded by Mr. Honig and insurance engineers as the irreducible minimum in accident prevention, is the panic drill, held every two weeks, and in some theatres every week. The theatre staff never knows when. The traveling auditor may call for one. Members of the staff even demonstrate how they handle people in such drills. Every employe participates and has a station to which he is assigned. The theatre uses a system of signals which mean nothing to the audience, everything to employees. Those who handle fire extinguishers are trained by members of the fire department.

ACCIDENTS DUE TO LACK OF INSPECTION

LACK OF PROPER inspection accounts for many preventable accidents. A rough bolt on a seat, the back falling from a seat, a faulty guard rail—such things may be the cause. They occur outside the theatre, too. Among accidents noted by Mr. Honig was one in which a person stumbled over an unguarded trestle. Another struck his head against a fire escape. Falling on an icy sidewalk, one man continued down the basement stairs and into an open coal chute. These accidents cost the theatres involved several thousand dollars.

Sign changing trestles and ladders should be properly stowed away when not in use. Careless stowage leads to accidents. Marquee roofs should be kept cleaned off to avoid stoppage of downspouts causing water leaks to short circuit the wiring. Marquee banners and outside set pieces should be anchored securely so that a gust of wind won't take them over and injure a pedestrian. Ladders should be in excellent condition—and one employe should hold it while another uses it, if it is a tall one.

CARPETING

Accidents caused by rugs that have holes in them, are loose, or are defective in other ways, are preventable by proper inspection. Many carpets are held by nails driven into pegs inserted in the concrete. These can easily be pulled out. Wooden strips are much safer. Tack at more frequent intervals. Relay the carpet if necessary.

One theatre glued the carpet to concrete. In about 30 months the glue disintegrated. Women began to stumble on the carpet, but nothing was done about it. Then several serious accidents occurred.

DEFECTIVE LIGHTS

Defective lights cause accidents. The apparatus may be defective, the globe burned out. If lights are so placed they can be broken or stolen or turned off, they should be changed. Occasionally aisle lights are put out by persons leaning on the seat. This caused one accident.

Before the box office is opened for business or the front door thrown open to receive patrons, thorough inspections should be made of all entrances, aisles, exits and rest rooms as assurance that janitor or maintenance man hasn't left a broom, mop, bucket or other working tools laying in the way of people entering the theatre. Aisle and sidewall lights should be checked at the same time.

Each Fox Midwest manager makes a daily inspection report as the janitor cleans the theatre. In this the manager notes everything that could cause an accident. If the matter is one calling for repairs, he reports when these are made. The manager requires an inspection by the staff again before the theatre is opened to the public.

Several accidents have been due to closed, unlighted balconies. In spite of signs, people have gone there and fallen. A chain across the openings is the remedy for this.

Most slippery tile accidents are due to the use of soap for cleaning; and slippery linoleum accidents to waxing. Use non-slip wax if wax is necessary.

Painted sidewalks are dangerous. There is always less friction when they are wet, and there may be slick spots in the paint.

Poor barricades—a ladder, for instance, without danger flags during the day or lanterns at night; or a row of palms from the lobby; or a row of one-gallon paint tins—all are dangerous and can cause serious injury. Use waist-high barriers.

The location of doors is important. If they block the sidewalk when open, they

ACCIDENTS AND THEATRE DESIGN

By BEN SCHLANGER

Architect and Consultant on Theatre Design

THE CAUSES of accidents associated with the physical theatre can be listed under three headings: faulty planning, poor maintenance and inadequate lighting. The maintenance problem becomes more difficult according to the extent the original planning is faulty. It is therefore obvious that one of the best kinds of accident insurance can be derived from proper theatre planning.

Important danger spots in theatres are improperly designed steppings and excessive floor pitches. Very few accidents occur on regular stairways consisting of at least three risers or more, with each riser and tread of the stair of uniform size. When steps are used singly, or even in pairs, they prove dangerous, chiefly because they do not constitute an apparent drop or change in levels. These occasional steps, especially those used to elevate the rear rows of an orchestra floor, can and should be eliminated in all new theatre planning.

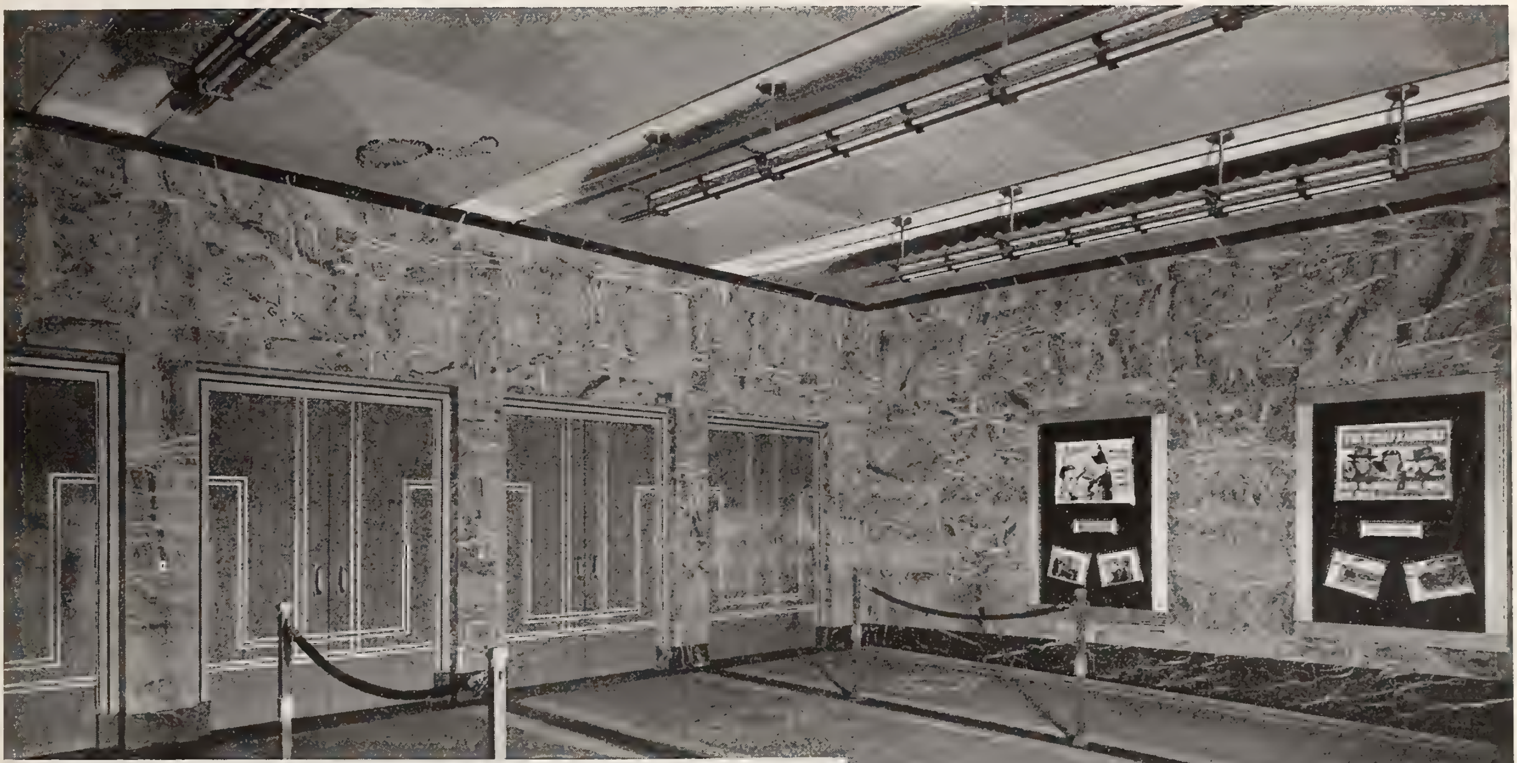
Another hazardous condition is caused by the use of alternating widths in stair treads, as is found in balcony construction. This condition is caused by steeply pitched balcony design, necessitating an intermediate additional small step in addition to the large step marking each level of seating. This intermediate step is most hazardous and should be avoided in every case.

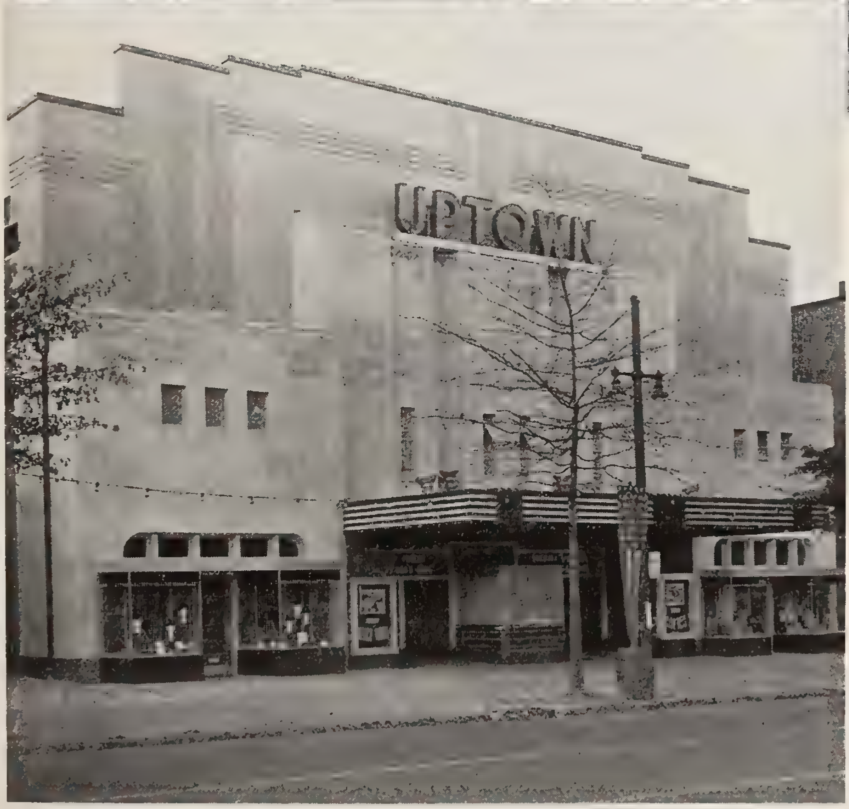
Proper design for vision requirements eliminates steep pitches and the intermediate step in balcony step. The chief cause of undesirable steppings at the rear of the orchestra floor seating levels and the steeply pitched balconies is attributable to the relatively low placing of the screen, a custom which has been blindly followed in the past. Probably the influence of the stage theatre and stage floor prompted this low placing of the screen. By adjusting the level of the screen to a properly determined height, the pitches of the orchestra floor and the balcony level can be moderated, thereby eliminating the most hazardous points in theatre design.

Even with good original design in a theatre, proper lighting is still important. A generous amount of aisle lights attached to the seats is desirable, but more effective than this would be a higher general level of illumination in the auditorium. It is an entirely mistaken notion that a motion picture auditorium must be kept dark to make the action on the screen properly visible to the viewer. With indirect illumination, evenly lighted wall and ceiling surfaces, avoiding alternate areas of dark and light (a lighting condition which is most common and disturbing for comfortable screen vision), a very satisfactory interior lighting scheme can be achieved which in no way detracts from the screen.

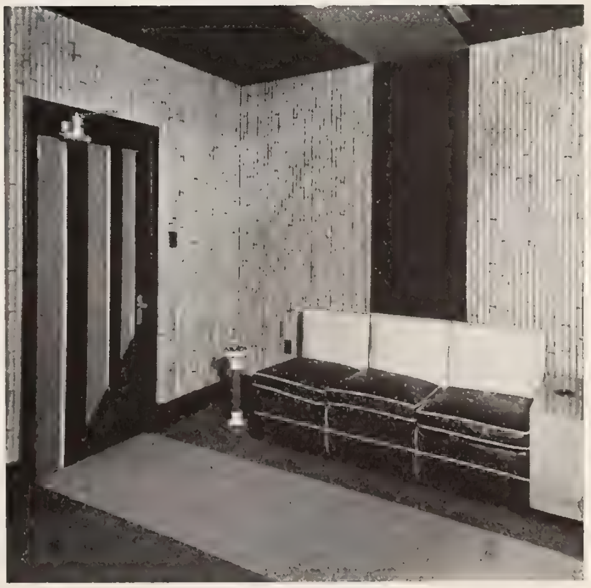
Where theatres are being designed, there is also the factor of extra current consumption needed for indirect lighting which becomes an important consideration where lighting rates are relatively high. However, the tendency is towards lower rates, especially for theatres, therefore this type of lighting should be strongly encouraged as a means of eliminating the causes of many accidents.

A Modern Design Stressing Functional Form and Lighting

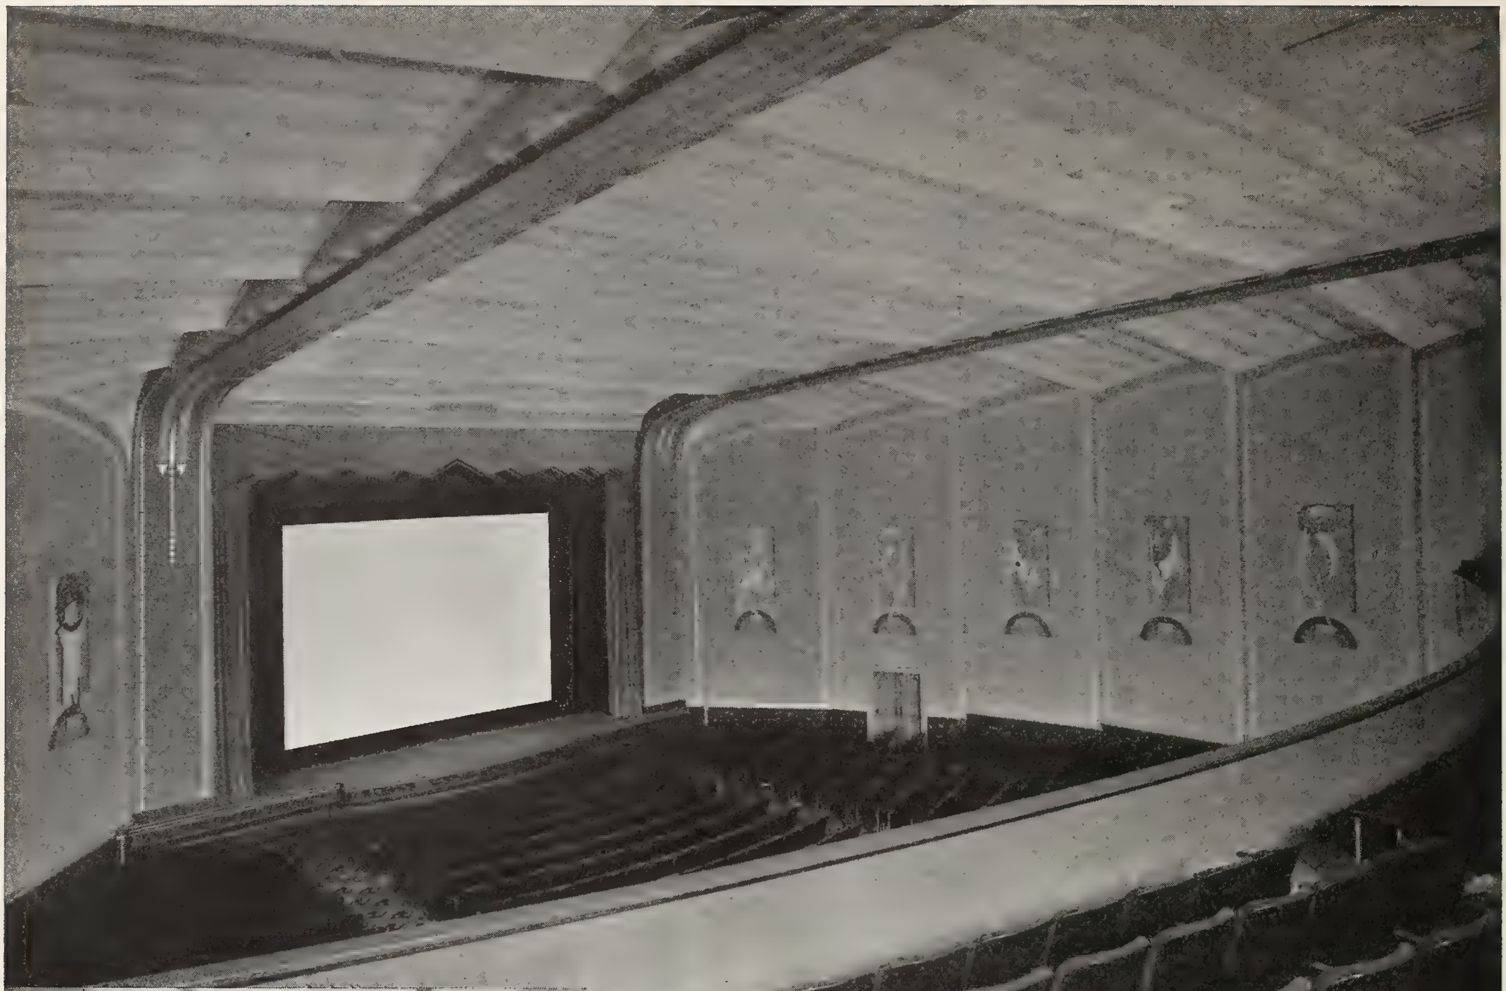


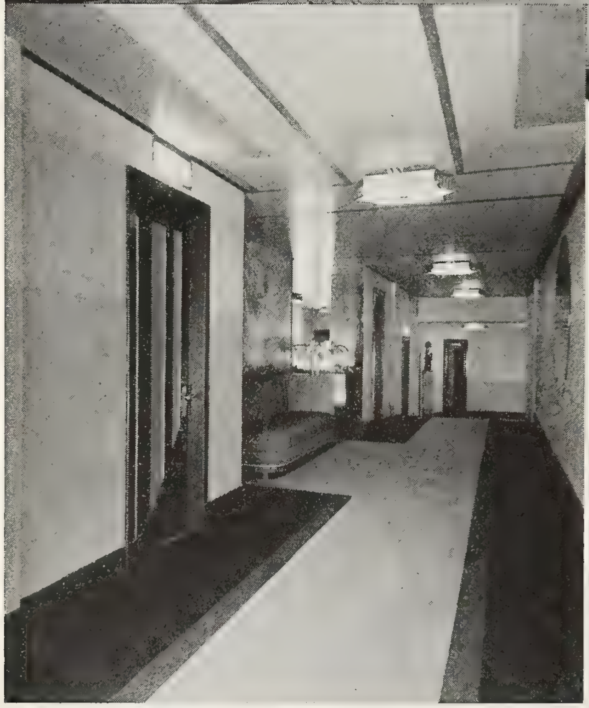


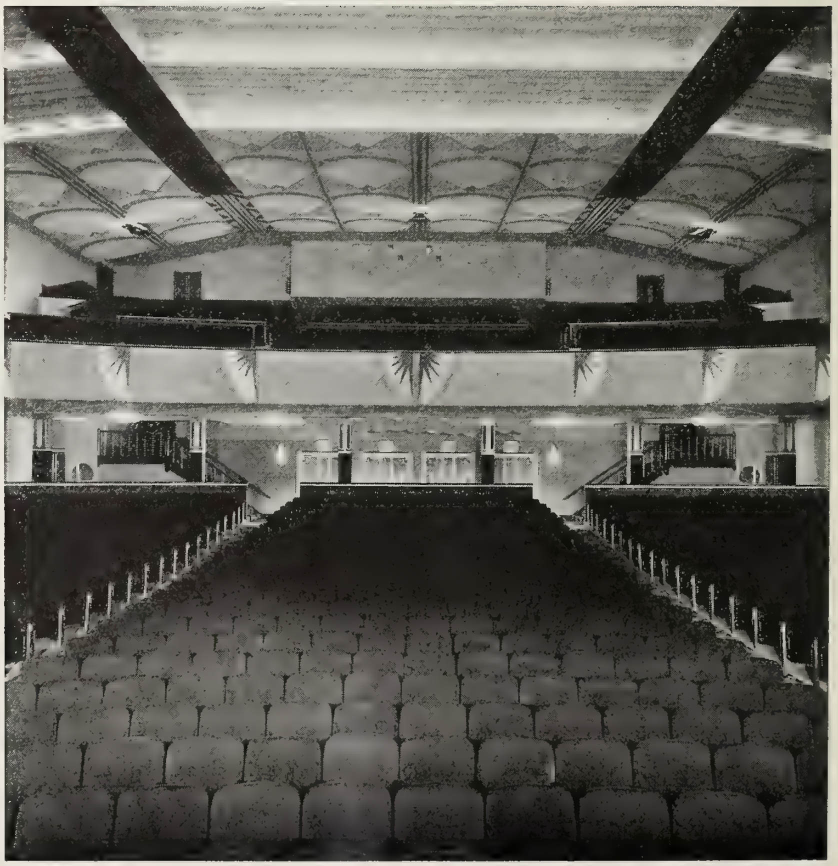
Pictured above is the capacious lobby which opens directly into the standee area of the auditorium, on either side of which are stairs to the upper levels. Walls are finished in marble having veins of rose and mauve. The floor is laid with rubber mats set in recesses bordered by black and white marble. The ceiling is a plain plaster surface interrupted by lighting troughs which incorporate air inlets. The exterior, shown at right, is done principally in limestone. A corner of the men's lounge is pictured below. Walls are of split bamboo poles.



- Describing Warners' new Uptown theatre in the nation's capital, a two-floor house seating 1400. Specifications appear on page 11







Forward and rear views of the auditorium, and (immediately above) the mezzanine corridor off which are located men's and women's lounges and other rooms (see floor plan, page 10). The auditorium walls play out from the screen opening in a series of panels, each slightly stepped for acoustical reasons, and identified with a similar formation in the ceiling. Wall surfaces are of plaster, painted in a silver tone with each panel bearing an allegorical figure. The ceiling consists in acoustic plaster panels enclosing, in a stepped formation, six lighting troughs with lumiline lamping. Light is also supplied at the fascia of the balcony by means of illuminated decorative figures. Of the 1400 seats, 900 are on the main floor.

MATERIALS AND EQUIPMENT

UPTOWN THEATRE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Owner: Warner Brothers. Architect: John J. Zink.

Construction and Plan: This is a one story and balcony theatre with a mezzanine. It covers a ground area of 84 feet by 140 feet. There are two small shops in the building proper and four additional stores on the lot adjoining, which is of irregular shape. Construction is skeleton steel frame with brick curtain walls backed up with hollow terra cotta tile and faced with limestone. It is fireproofed throughout.

Front: Design of the exterior is a conservative modern front with limestone as the predominating material. The marquee is of porcelain enameled iron in various colors and was made and erected by the Continental Sign Company of New York City. Due to the law in Washington, no sign is provided around the edges of the marquee. The attraction sign space is merely some plain frames into which painted signs are placed.

Lobby: Conservatively designed, the floor is of rubber mats, perforated, and in colors around which is a black marble border. The walls are lined with marble from floor to ceiling and the ceiling is plastered. The four poster frames are of solid aluminum finished in aluminite. The rubber mats were made by the Puritan Rubber Company. The lighting fixtures were specially designed and made by the Rambusch Decorating Company of New York City, and they also combine the outlets for the heating and cooling of the room.

Lounges: Located on the mezzanine floor. Women's rest room, men's smoking room, etc., are all modernistic as to floor covering, walls, ceiling, lighting fixtures, furniture, etc., the men's room having walls made of split bamboo rods.

Auditorium: The auditorium is 82 feet wide inside at its widest point and 100 feet long from screen to rear wall. Height at stage is 34 feet, ten feet six inches under balcony, and 12 feet over rear of balcony. Design and decoration of the auditorium is modernistic with silver tones for the side walls and buffs for the ceiling in various shades, all being enriched by stencil and raised figure ornamentation. Illumination is similar to that of lobby. Side wall brackets have not been used, the lighting being from concealed sources in the main ceiling formed by a series of six troughs running from side wall to side wall about 12 feet apart. Lumilines have bee nused for the lighting in these places. The auditorium beginning at the stage takes the shape of a larg horn. Material used to complete the acoustical results was "Kalite" acoustical plaster. The stage is merely a screen and horn platform. The proscenium opening is 44 feet wied and 26 feet high. Maximum size of picture which can be shown is 38 feet wide by 26 feet high, although the picture at present is not this large. There are two curtains, the main and screen curtain, and each is controlled by motors on the staged controlled by switches in the projection booth.

Corner of women's lounge.

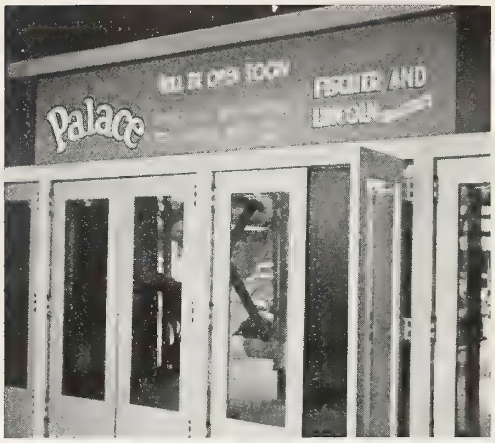
Seating: There are approximately 900 seats on the first floor and 450 in the balcony. The first floor has 26 rows and the balcony 11 rows. There are four aisles, two against the walls and two toward the center. The first row is 20 feet from the screen. Seats have been spaced 34 inches from back to back and are of spring seat and back type covered with velour. Chairs were manufactured and installed by the Ideal Seating Company of Grand Rapids.

Projection: Projection room proper is 12 feet deep and 32 feet wide, with separate rooms for motor generators, rewind and repairs, on same floor level. Toilet and wash room facilities are also provided. Keene's cement forms the wainscot in the room up to 4 feet, 6 inches, and above this acoustical plaster has been used. Distance of projection throw is 115 feet, and the projection angle about 10°. Screen is 25 feet by 18 feet. Projectors are Simplex; sound is by RCA system. Projection lamps are Peerless, supplied from a Robbins-Imperial motor generator.

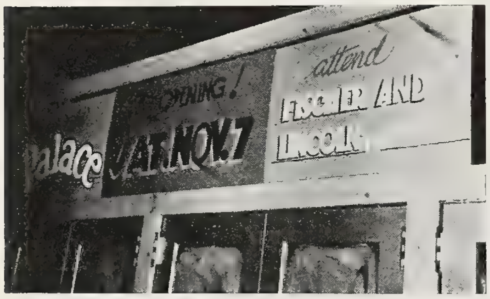
Air-Conditioning: Complete automatic air-conditioning system under thermostatic control. Frick compressors were used—2 fifty ton machines. Condenser is of evaporative type. Entire theatre and all rooms including the two stores in the building proper are heated from this plant. The various parts of the heating system are by different manufacturers, but the plant was assembled and installed by the Pennsylvania Engineering Co. of Philadelphia. Oil is used for fuel.

How Mr. Crabtree "Sold" the Palace in Danville

- An unusual pictorial history of a campaign on a modernized theatre, presenting the camera record kept by E. E. Crabtree, Publix-Great States city manager in Danville, Ill., on his exploitation of the Palace, which after remodeling made really a new house.



1. Advance announcement over the entrance doors of the existing theatre. Besides advertising that a new theatre was in the making, the placard directed attention to newspapers for opening date.



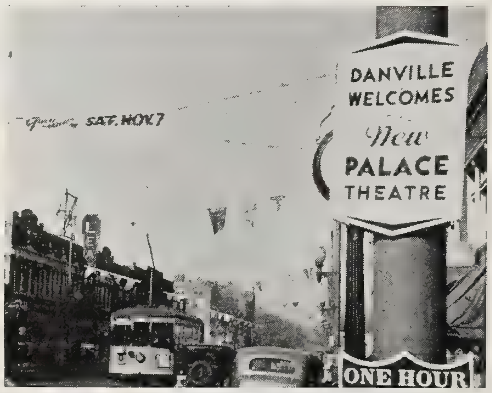
2. Announcement of the opening date was made just seven days prior to the first performance, and this placard over the doors opened the campaign.

3. On the same day that the opening date placard went up, the legend "Palace Opens Sat.—Nov. 7" was stenciled on business section sidewalks.

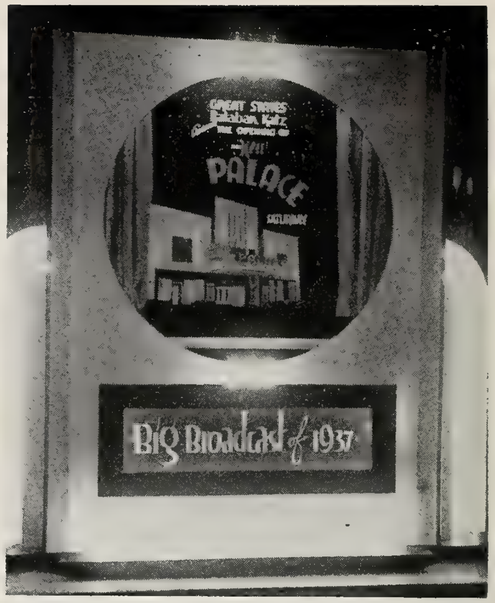
4. At the beginning of the week prior to opening stickers bearing the message "New Palace opens Sat. Nov. 7" were placed on the windows and doors of almost every store in business section.

5. Getting the friendly co-operation of hundreds of automobile owners, Mr. Crabtree had opening date stickers placed on the windshields and the side and back windows, thus acquiring moving billboards throughout the drawing area.

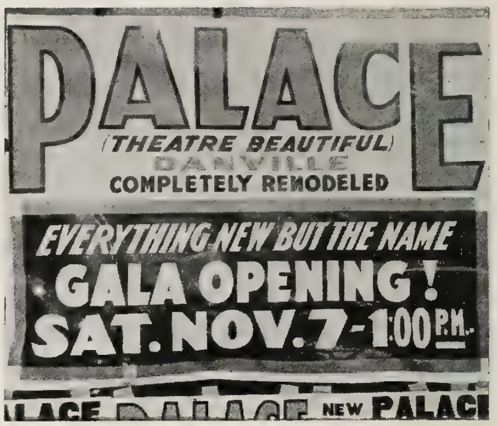
6. Every available spot was used for posting announcement of the opening date, even the backs of barber chairs that were not regularly needed by the shop for trade during most of the week.



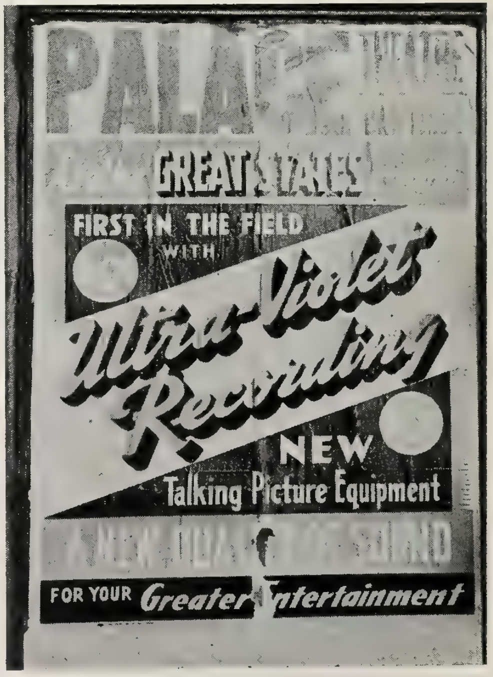
7. Welcome placards were attached to light posts, while an opening date banner was stretched across the street in front of the theatre.



8. A painted poster depicting the front of the remodeled theatre and announcing the opening feature was placed in a large neon display in the foyer of the Fischer, another Great States house.



9. For billing the entire drawing area of Danville outside the city, 300 two-sheets were posted on the opening date and hour.



10. Billing posted throughout the city and countryside included 200 two-sheets supplied at no cost by RCA, advertising the use of RCA equipment.

11. Between programs of the radio station WDZ in Tuscala, near Danville, spot announcements were made on Thursday and Friday before opening.

12. During the entire week preceding the opening of the Palace, trailers were run at the other Great States theatres, the Fischer and Lincoln.

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

C. R. Carson has purchased the Independence theatre in Independence, Va.

Paul Short, manager of the Majestic in Dallas, Tex., has resigned to become division director of the Dallas area for the National Screen Service. He has been succeeded at the Majestic by Edward J. Sullivan, formerly of the Paramount theatre in New York.

Solomon Brothers have opened their theatre in Baldwyn, Miss. Formerly the Lyric, the house has been extensively remodeled and renamed the Baldwyn.

J. A. Malmuth has joined the Hurley Screen Company organization as sales engineer. He formerly was with Dictograph Products Company, Inc.

The Falls City Theatre Equipment Company of Louisville, Ky., has leased the Burdorf Building in that city and will remodel it for use as an equipment store.

The seating capacity of the Alcazar theatre in St. Petersburg, Fla., is being increased and the interior generally remodeled at a cost of $30,000.

W. R. Hart, manager of the Edwards theatre in Sarasota, Fla., is supervising modernization of the house which is expected to cost $16,000.

The Lyndhurst Development Company of Lyndhurst, N. J., has purchased the Lyndhurst theatre and will remodel the house at a cost of $20,000. A lease on the building is held by Max Cohen, who operates the Ritz theatre in Lyndhurst.

Front of the new Ray theatre in Bells, Tenn., erected at a cost of $25,000 by Dr. S. E. McDonald. The building is of brick and concrete construction. The seating capacity is 500.

Harry Smith, formerly manager of the Strand in Portland, Me., has been named manager of the new Waldo theatre in Waldoboro, Me., new house owned and operated by Carrol T. Cooney. The theatre is of Colonial architecture with a simple interior depending principally on illumination for decorative effect. Ben Schlanger of New York was the architect.

S. T. Lyles, Jr., and H. W. Roberts compose the management of the new Ritz theatre in Oxford, Miss. The house is owned by a company formed by Bramlett Roberts, R. L. Smallwood, C. S. Haney and S. T. Lyles, Jr.

A theatre servicing company has been organized by Elmer H. Brient, president of the New Dominion Amusement Corporation, with headquarters in Richmond, Va.

J. F. Shields and J. H. Evans have become partners in a $50,000 theatre project in Ellensburg, Wash. Mr. Shields formerly operated the Ellensburg theatre there.

Floyd E. Droz and Charles H. Barron have opened their new Anthony theatre in Anthony, Kan.

Oscar Montgomery, assistant manager of the Carolina theatre in Charlotte, S. C., has been transferred to Hendersonville, N. C., as manager of the State, and assistant manager of the Carolina, in that city.

Mrs. M. Rihacek has installed new type RCA sound equipment in her Tivoli theatre in Toledo, Ohio.

Joe English recently opened his new Anaconda theatre in Anaconda, Mont.

Lester Neely has opened his new Strand theatre in Greensboro, Ala. The theatre is reported to have been erected at a cost of $20,000.

Five theatres have been opened in as many cities by the Consolidated Coal Company of Fairmont, W. Va. The towns are Acosta, Jenners, Ida May, Gray and Carolina, all in West Virginia. The company theatre operations are managed by Fred A. Kraft, while Miss Catherine Hawley is booker.

The Rialto theatre in Beatrice, Neb., operated by Frank Hollingsworth, was badly damaged late last month by fire. No one was in the theatre when the fire broke out. Mr. Hollingsworth expects to reopen the house some time in December.

Lewis Rosenbaum, manager of the Princess in Florence, Ala., has completed modernization of the house involving construction of a new balcony and a new front.

E. L. Johnson is installing new heating, ventilating and cooling equipment in his Roxie theatre in Shelton, Neb.

Seth Simpson has reopened the Tina theatre at Tina, Mo., which has been closed for many months. The house seats 220.

Frank Wilke has installed Western Electric "Mirrophonic" sound equipment in his Boulevard theatre in Houston, Tex.

The Otoe, a new theatre of Indian architecture, has been opened in Scottsbluff, Neb. The house is owned and operated by the Midwest Amusement and Realty Company.

L. W. Conrow, general operating manager of Erpi, has been traveling through the South on his first business trip in that area since his appointment to his present post.

Harry T. Nolan of Denver has opened his new Colonial theatre in Pueblo, Colo.

Edgar F. Boyd, who has operated the Majestic in Adel, Ga., for the past sixteen years, has sold the house to the Stein Amusement Company, who plan extensive improvements.

A. J. Swanton is erecting a new theatre to be called the Iowa in Emmetsburg, Ia. The house, which is estimated to cost $75,000, will have a cry-room for babies. The theatre replaces one destroyed by fire a year ago.

Modernization of Loew's State theatre in Memphis, Tenn., is underway. The improvements will include general interior redecoration and a new marquee and sign. Cecil Vogel is the manager.

The Colonial theatre in Atlantic City has been closed for remodeling to include modernization of the lobby, new sound equipment, new heating and ventilating system, installation of lounges and new furnishings and lighting fixtures.

Installations of new model sound equipment reported by RCA Photophone include the Strand in Atmore, Ala., operated by R. E. Martin; Joylan, Springville, N. Y., operated by Peter A. Bifarella; the Crown, Lowell, Mass., operated by Milton S. Glickman; J. P. Neist's Elite, James Edwards' Elysian, and C & S Enterprises' Empire, all in Los Angeles; the Lemoore in Lemoore, Cal., operated by Arthur Leino; Jim Nichols' Gridley, Gridley, Cal., the Kuhn in Lebanon, Ore., operated by R. Kuhn, and the Venetian, Hillsboro, Ore., operated by Grange Phelps.

Miss Grace Gannon, for nine years a secretary in the home office organization of the Central States Theatre Corporation, Des Moines, died recently. She was at one time secretary of the Des Moines Film Board of Trade.

H. V. Mullins has opened the Gem theatre, a new house, in Glenwood, Ia.

Eric Wesselman, owner of the Rialto theatre in Pierce, Neb., died at the veterans' hospital in Lincoln, Neb., following a lingering illness.

Paul Swanson has purchased the Plaza in Olin, Ia., from Stingly & Barber.

L. A. Warren has been named manager of the Cherokee theatre in Gaffney, S. C., operated by L. C. Sipe. Mr. Warren formerly managed Sipe house in Spartanburg and Anderson, S. C., and Durham and Burlington, N. C.

Ross D. Dixon, who operates the Ritz in Colorado, Tex., has installed late model RCA sound equipment.

Albert A. Galston has reopened the Colony theatre in Hollywood, Cal., following extensive remodeling. The new policy calls for single features and one "re-

I take this opportunity to thank my many friends among the exhibitors for the wonderful support given me during the past three years in the interests of International Seat Corporation, which I organized.

The success of International Seats has far exceeded my fondest expectations and I want you all to know that my judgment in selecting the International Chair with its exclusive patented basic advantages of no bolts, nuts, screws or tacks in the upholstering has proved to be the correct principle of seat construction.

Nearly 250,000 "floating comfort" chairs installed in this short time speak for deserved popularity. Among the quantity users you will find the Who's Who of America's circuits and exhibitors.

My many thanks to Paramount, RKO, and their partners for the tremendous business given me and their loyal support.

In January, I will introduce to you a new theatre chair — a symphony in comfort, attractiveness and durability. Watch for it!

My associates at the factory and the boys in the field join me in wishing you a Merry Christmas.

Getting the Most for Your Money In Using Well Water for Cooling

● Tapping the good earth may prove cheaper for you than mechanical refrigeration—and it may not. Offered here is counsel to guide you

IN THE ISSUE of BETTER THEATRES of February 8, 1936, the problem and the hazards of digging wells were discussed to some extent. During the past year, no developments have taken place in engineering technique to minimize the hazards in digging successful wells. However, perhaps the most reliable data available has been collected by the United States Government, and is available at reasonable prices from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C. Most of the information available has been gathered by engineers of the U. S. Geological Survey, an activity of the Department of the Interior. It is urgently recommended that where wells are contemplated that theatre operators avail themselves of this source of information.

The temperature of water in the ground at any place is in general about the same as, or slightly above, the mean or average annual air temperature. Depending upon its nearness to the surface, the temperature of the water follows more nearly the changes of the air temperature. At greater depths the water has an increasingly higher temperature; this is because of the increase of the earth temperature with increasing depth. An approximate average for this increase in temperature with depth is about 1°F. for each 64 feet of depth.

As has been pointed out frequently, water is a very important element in air-conditioning, primarily as a heat transfer or exchange medium. For the purpose of heat exchange, it may be used in the well-known air-washer, or it may be used through finned-type (surface cooling) coils in the stream of air flow. Each of these methods has its staunch advocates and each method has its proper application.

In Canada and in many parts of the United States, cold well water is available. When such water is available in sufficient quantity at a temperature of 52°F. or below, a considerable amount of cooling and dehumidifying can be done, at relatively small cost, as compared with mechanical refrigeration. Should the temperature of the well water be above 52°F., the amount of dehumidification which can be done will decrease with the rise in the water temperature. However, the removal of the sensible heat of the air by the water, will continue just as long as the temperature of the water does not exceed the wet bulb of air.

Should well water at any time be contaminated with gases or objectionable odors, it becomes impossible to use it in an open air washer, and at such times the use of surface type coils becomes imperative. If the water is such that it contains solids

HOW STAIRS WERE MADE SAFE

THERE HAD BEEN A great number of accidents in a certain theatre during this past summer to patrons descending a stairway. They especially involved women. The steps were of reinforced concrete with treads 10½ inches wide and risers of 7 inches. These steps were no different from hundreds of other steps in other theatres. The steps were carpeted, and due to the traffic up the steps, the carpet padding worked back into the crotch of the step, thereby causing the carpeted surface of the step to pitch forward towards the edge. When the patron descended the heel of the foot came to rest as much as half an inch higher than the ball of the foot, throwing the person forward.

During the past year styles in women's footwear have leaned so much towards the sandal type, which gives no support whatever to the foot, that there have been many accidents in theatres on stairways and heavily padded carpeted floors. In consequence it has almost seemed advisable to adopt thinner carpet padding. Certainly we should give most careful attention to steppings.

With reference to the steps in this theatre, it was finally decided that if the tread of the step slanted or pitched backward from the edge or nose to the crotch, it would make a much safer step. The fact that the steps were of concrete presented the next problem. It was solved in this manner:

Pieces of hard pine wood were made up by a wood-working plant in the vicinity. These pieces of wood were the exact width of the tread of the step and the length of the carpet runner on the steps. The front edge was thick and tapered to ⅛-inch at the rear edge. For experimental purposes, some of the pieces of wood were ¼-inch thick on the front edge, and others were ⅜-, ½, ⅝- and ¾-inch and tapered back to ⅛-inch at the crotch of the step.

These pieces of wood were secured to the tread of the steps by drilling the concrete for three expansion shields and using three flat-head screws. Over these new wood treads, new carpet padding of 46-ounce weight was installed and the carpet was relaid. This definitely improved the safety of the steps.

After close observation it was decided that the tread ⅝-inch thick at the front edge was the most satisfactory. Then all treads were installed alike.

Since the completion of this work there has not been a single accident or fall on that set of steps. During the same period in the same theatre and an identical flight of steps, but used somewhat less frequently, there have been six falls.—J.T.K.

or material that would be deposited in the coils, then the air washer is the best proposition, or else select a pump of sufficient capacity to force the water through the coils at a velocity sufficiently high so that such materials cannot or will not be deposited. This, of course, means that the well must produce more water.

METHODS OF USING WELL WATER FOR COOLING

BEFORE DISCUSSING in detail problems in well water cooling, it is desirable to consider some of the several ways that use can be made of well water in air-conditioning. Let us assume that a particular theatre is so located that after investigation, it is determined that an 8-inch well should produce the requisite quantity of water at, say, 52°F. It is assumed that some engineer has made the calculations, and for this theatre we need 250 gallons of water per minute.

WASHER OR COILS

The first assumption is that after sinking the well it will produce 250 gallons per minute of 52°F. water. So we have the choice of either the use of a properly selected air washer or the use of surface cooling coils. If enough space is available, the decision will probably be in favor of the air washer. If the space available is small, the surface cooling coils will probably be the right selection for the theatre owner to make.

With the surface coils it is generally necessary to install a dry type of filter to prevent the accumulation of dirt on the coils, and also the installation of eliminator plates to prevent entrained condensation in the air from being carried into the conditioned area. In the final analysis, the air washer installation will probably be less expensive than the surface cooling coil job. The cost of operating either of the systems will be about the same.

RATIO ADJUSTMENTS

Now, secondly, let us assume that instead of getting 52°F. water the temperature is 62 F., and the quantity is 350 gallons per minute, instead of 250 g.p.m. Depending upon the load conditions, the excess in quantity of water might balance, or nearly balance, the increased temperature, and by the use of a larger pump handling the greater quantity of water, the desired results might be obtained.

On the other hand, there are some changes in setting up the equipment that should be considered. For instance, a multiple spray bank washer might be chosen to do the job more efficiently. A multiple spray bank washer is one containing two or more spray banks in separate cabinets, each bank being connected to the source of water supply. That is, the spray banks would be connected in parallel. In this case the ratio of water to air is increased, and consequently the lowest possible leaving air temperature would be obtained. The same parallel connection can be used with surface cooling coils.

The third assumed condition is that in which only 150 g.p.m. of water at 52°F. is obtained from the well. In this case there definitely is not sufficient "capacity" in that quantity of water to absorb the necessary quantity of heat. In this instance the water could be used in either a pre-cooling washer or surface cooler and then piped through the condenser of the mechanical refrigeration. Mechanical re-

HEATING COSTS: Really, the general principles to be followed in keeping heating costs at a minimum are few and very simple. Probably in no other controllable theatre expense has there been so little effort expended to minimize waste. To fully appreciate the principles of heat conservation, it is necessary to understand just what takes place in heating a theatre.

The process is easily understandable and consists in supplying a sufficient quantity of heat to warm the building initially to the desired temperature, and from that point on to just supply enough heat to compensate for the constant loss or dissipation of heat from the theatre. In order to do this efficiently (at the lowest cost), three requirements must be met:

1. Reduce the amount of heat losses from the theatre to a minimum.
2. Limit the hours of heating to those in which the required temperature is necessary.
3. Regulate the amount of heat so as to prevent overheating during the hours when the theatre is in operation.

METAL CORROSION: The application and maintenance of paint coatings is by far the most generally used method of preventing the corrosion of exposed metals, such as exit doors, fire escapes, structural members of signs, etc.

The best authorities state that the essential properties of protective coatings depend upon the nature of the coating and its effect upon the corrosion rate, the permanence and impermeability of the vehicle, and the general durability and appearance of the paint film after subjected to long exposure.

Basic substances in sufficient concentration retard or practically stop the corrosion of iron. Basic pigments that to date have proved their effectiveness are litharge, red lead, blue lead, white lead, zinc oxide, aluminum, or a compound of zinc and aluminum.

frigeration would be necessary to take most of the latent (moisture or dehumidifying) load. The pre-cooling step is for reducing the sensible temperature of the air.

Such a condition would definitely reduce the cost of air-conditioning over a complete mechanical job, and most certainly would reduce the cost of operation, for during many hours with only a partially filled theatre, the pre-cooling would be all that would be required. In such a case the savings in initial cost would be indicated by the difference between the cost of city water for condensing purposes or for evaporative condensers or for cooling tower, and the amount of tonnage represented by the pre-cooling effect, less the cost of the well and pump.

OTHER USES OF WATER

The fourth assumed condition is that in which the amount of water obtained is only a small percentage of the water originally anticipated, and the temperature is less than 75°F. In this case, provided the horsepower on the pump is not too great, the water can be used as make-up water in a washer; then only evaporative cooling can be used; or the water can be used as condenser water, with the balance needed obtained from the city water mains or from a cooling tower; or it may be used in an evaporative condenser.

WATER SUITABILITY; DRIVING THE WELL

ABOUT THIRTY or forty per cent of all rainfall is dissipated through the ground and becomes subterranean water; the balance is carried away by streams and rivers. The exact amount depends, naturally, upon the make-up of the soil in a particular locality and its imperviousness to water. Subterranean waters available for wells occur in three principle formations: first, in buried river beds and ancient lake beds; second, extensive sedimentary deposits; and third, in deep porous strata underlying impervious strata. Sand and gravel in rather large particles form the best medium for water supply.

The size and number of wells in any locality and the records kept during the sinking of such wells probably form the best and most authentic data available for deciding the question as to whether or not a well should be dug. The concentration of wells in any one locality very frequently changes (sometimes quickly and sometimes over a period of time) the characteristics of water from those wells, that is, with regard to temperature and quantity. This is especially true where local ordinances prohibit the discharge of well water into the storm sewer system and demand that well water be disposed of through another well. Interference results when the circle of influence of two or more wells overlap. The proper spacing of wells can be determined only by the analysis of data collected on all the other wells in that particular locality, or by experiment.

Driven wells are constructed by driving specially pointed and perforated pipes into the water bearing formation. The section of pipes is from four to six feet long and is added to from time to time, as the driving progresses. Drilled wells are constructed by boring with augers. Standard well drilling methods are described in U. S. Geological Survey paper "Water Supply Papers" No. 46 and 257.

CASING AND SCREENS

The casing of a well is used to prevent material or foreign matter from falling into the hole and thereby stopping or retarding the flow of water. The casing also prevents the water from the well from becoming contaminated by surface water seeping in at shallow depths. At the bottom of each well there is a screen. Well screens are made of brass, galvanized iron, or bronze. There are even concrete screens.

Screens are usually set by first being placed inside the casing, and when, at the proper depth, the casing is pulled up, the screen is exposed. Frequently, after a shut down season, a well will show a marked decrease in water quantity when started or put into operation. This condition can frequently be improved or brought back to normal by cealing the well screen, or it may be necessary to deepen the well provided it has not already penetrated through the water bearing strata.

The well screen can sometimes be cleaned, or at least the condition improved, by pumping air, water, or steam back through the well. The stoppage of well screens is just another hazard in air-conditioning with well water. It is a rather expensive situation if it becomes necessary to remove the screen for cleaning, or to replace it each year or two.

COST FACTORS IN WELL WATER COOLING

ONE OF THE nationally known companies that has been in the front rank of those advocating well water cooling by using surface cooling coils, has compiled and issued in bulletin form a mass of data on such cooling system. From practical experience this data has been found to be accurate and dependable.

The quantity of cooling water required to be circulated for any calculated heat gain depends entirely upon the allowable temperature rise of the water during the process of heat exchange. The allowable temperature rise cannot be determined exactly until the well is dug or drilled and the the temperature of the well water is exactly determined. The greater the allowable temperature rise of the water, the smaller the quantity of water which must be circulated; or, from another point of view, the colder the well water temperature, the smaller the quantity of water which must be circulated. However, with the counter flow method, earlier briefly described, the allowable temperature rise is strictly limited by the difference between the initial temperature of the air and the final temperature of the leaving water. This difference is usually calculated at about 15°F.

This nationally known company mentioned above has compiled some very interesting charts showing comparative cooling costs with well water and with mechanical refrigeration, using the direct expansion principle. There are three charts which show the approximate savings in operating costs after knowing the temperature rise of the water, the cost of producing the water per 1,000 gallons, and the local electrical rate. If we assume that water comes from the well at 54° and enters the air-conditioning process at that temperature, and the rise is 10°, or a leaving water temperature of 64°, and that it costs 6c to pump 1,000 gallons from the well, including fixed charges on the investment represented by the well, and electric power costs 3c per kilowatt hour, a saving of 70 per cent in favor of the well as against mechanical refrigeration, is indicated.

In the same problem, if we have an allowable rise of 20°F. or a leaving water of 74°F., then the saving would be 85 per cent in favor of the well; or, in other words, your air-conditioning would cost only 15 per cent of the cost of operating mechanical refrigeration.

No one can deny the savings in operation with well water air-conditioning as compared with mechanical air-conditioning, but it all depends upon the temperature and quantity of that water under the ground. And that really cannot be determined until the well has been sunk.

Here's luck—if you decide on digging that well!—J. T. K.

Eliminating the Human Element In Determining Sound Quality

IN AN EFFORT to make the determination of sound quality in the theatre independent of the hearing peculiarities of the individual theatre owner, manager, projectionist and service inspector, Erpi has developed a "theatre transmission test" for application to Western Electric installations. The responsibility has been transferred, so to speak, to electrical instruments, formulas and established standards.

The frequency response is measured by a power level meter (see page 22) calibrated in decibels, which is connected to the output of the sound system while a laboratory-calibrated multi-frequency test film is running through the reproducer set. Frequency measurements are made at 55, 130, 300, 1000, 3000, 5000, 7000 and 8000 cycles, providing data which show whether the sound system is reproducing faithfully the entire frequency range for which it was designed—that is, whether the base and the treble notes and all the notes in between are being reproduced in the proper proportions.

In measuring the gain of the system the power level meter and calibrated frequency film are again utilized. In this case a measurement is made at 1000 cycles only and corrected for the losses which have been inserted into the system in the form of faders, gain controls, attenuators, etc. The gain measurement determines whether the system is providing the total amount of amplification for which it was designed.

The overload measurement determines whether the sound system can provide the entire output power capacity for which it was designed without causing harmonic distortion. This type of distortion can be described broadly as a harshness, chattering or a breaking up of the sound which is sometimes observable when a system is operated at very high volume. The overload point is checked by determining the maximum power level which can be obtained at the output of the system without reaching that point where the output level fails to increase in step with the input level.

Net gain is a calculation to determine

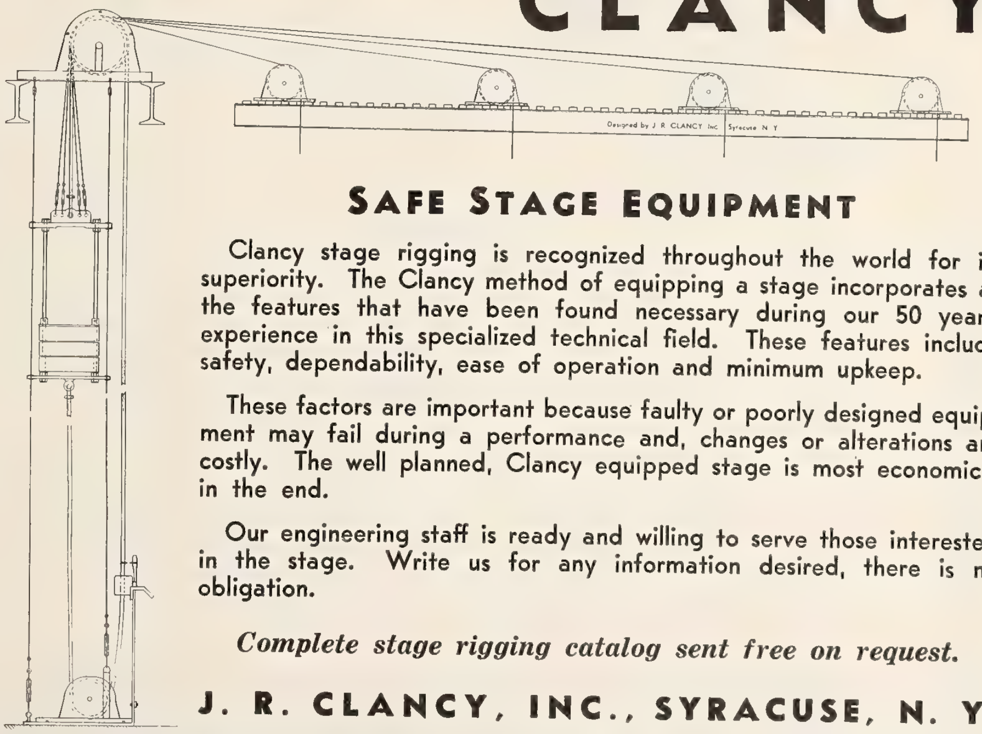
CLANCY



SAFE STAGE EQUIPMENT

Clancy stage rigging is recognized throughout the world for its superiority. The Clancy method of equipping a stage incorporates all the features that have been found necessary during our 50 years' experience in this specialized technical field. These features include safety, dependability, ease of operation and minimum upkeep.

These factors are important because faulty or poorly designed equipment may fail during a performance and, changes or alterations are costly. The well planned, Clancy equipped stage is most economical in the end.

Our engineering staff is ready and willing to serve those interested in the stage. Write us for any information desired, there is no obligation.

whether the electrical system is being overworked to make up for excessive loss of power in such things as defective speakers, a poor screen which may have clogged sound pores, poor sound distribution throughout the auditorium, or excessive auditorium noise caused by ventilating equipment, lack of carpet, squeaky seats, etc. This type of test for detecting the above defects shows whether additional power amplifiers is necessary. The net gain measurement consists of determining the amount of amplifier gain normally used in reproducing the sound of the ordinary run of film used at the theatre.

Standard values of frequency response, gain, overload, and net gain have been established in the laboratory for each component unit of any Western Electric system and for each size of theatre. These values are entered on a special analysis sheet (Figure 2), which the person uses as a guide in making the transmission test

Microphone Boom for Stage

A MICROPHONE boom stand which, by merely a slight pressure of the hand, is silently adjustable in a vertical or horizontal position, has been designed by the Amperite Company of New York. The microphone can therefore be placed at any height and at any angle desired. No adjusting screws are required.

Silent action is obtained by using a ball clutch for the horizontal adjustment, and a friction clutch for the vertical adjustment. This type of stand is for placing microphones in unusual positions such as for soloists playing at the piano, or whenever quick change in the microphone position is required. It is obtainable in chrome or gun-metal finish.

In stage work, the boom lends itself to various applications, such as small orchestras having various members taking up certain passages for solos. It is similarly convenient for group vocal numbers and is especially indicated for acts in which performers are seated.

Care of Fire Extinguishers

MORE THAN one small blaze or merely smouldering heap of waste has become a fire that brought the engines simply because the fire extinguisher placed in a convenient place for just such an occasion was not in effective working order. In the theatre especially must fire extinguishers, like all other apparatus for minimizing the proportions of a blaze, be in perfect working order at all times, since mere smoke can bring disaster. An unusually comprehensive discussion of fire extinguisher maintenance is therefore quoted below. It was, in fact, prepared for theatre managers by the Wil-Kin Theatre Supply Company of Atlanta. The instructions given follow:

"Carbon Tetrachloride. These extinguishers should be be tested at least every six months, preferably more often. The test consists first of pumping the extinguisher five or six strokes into a glass vessel to see that it actually operates. The liquid should then be poured back into the extinguisher and the extinguisher rechecked to see that it is full.

"Extinguishers of this type are particularly adapted for electrical fires and should be used almost entirely for fires of this nature. The liquid is non-conducting and forms a gas which blankets out the fire by eliminating oxygen in the air. . . .

"They are installed to best advantage at main switchboards, around motors and other electrical apparatus, and in the projection room near each projector.

"Soda and Acid. Extinguishers of this type should be examined at least every three or four months. They should be recharged every year. There is no advantage in charging them more frequently, however. When they are to be recharged, it is a good plan to employ them by having various employees actually invert them so that they may become familiar with their method of operation.

"The examination of these extinguishers should consist of partly lifting them from their supports in order to judge by their weight whether or not they are full and of closely examining the nozzle to be certain that it has not been clogged up with crystals from the extinguisher or foreign materials from outside. The nozzles have a great tendency to clog and the clogging may result in dangerously high pressures if the extinguisher is operated. At the same time the hose should be flexed to be certain that the rubber has not dried out and become brittle. New hose is inexpensive and should be substituted when the old hose gets in bad condition.

"At least once, and preferably twice during the year, the extinguisher should be taken down from the hook and the top unscrewed. Examine the condition of the gasket. Replacement of gaskets is very inexpensive and should be made where there is any doubt whether or not the gasket is tight and will withstand pressure. Graphite (not graphite and oil) is an excellent lubricant for the thread of the extinguisher top and tends to preserve the gasket.

"The lead cage, which holds the bottle, should next be lifted out of the extinguisher and its condition noted. The acid bottle should then be lifted out of the cage. The lead stopped should be lifted from the bottle to be sure that it fits closely but nevertheless keeps the bottle sealed.

"If the extinguisher is properly charged the acid level will be at the level shown by the mark on the bottle. If the acid level is lower than the mark, it may indicate that the acid has absorbed moisture and has therefore been weakened. In case the acid does not come up to this line, the bottle should be refilled to the proper level or a new bottle inserted.

"Next examine the interior of the extinguisher itself. Note the condition of the lead lining and the condition of the bicarbonate of soda solution. If the solution has settled out and is deposited on the bottom of the extinguisher it should be stirred. If it has become caked on the bottom, observe caution in removing the caked soda, so as to avoid injury to the lead lining. Under no conditions should metal rods or tools be used to stir the solution. Soft wood paddles should be used.

"If there is any doubt in your mind as to the condition of either the acid or soda, throw away both and use a fresh solution.

"The solution should be prepared separately outside the extinguisher. Do not mix the soda and water in the extinguisher.

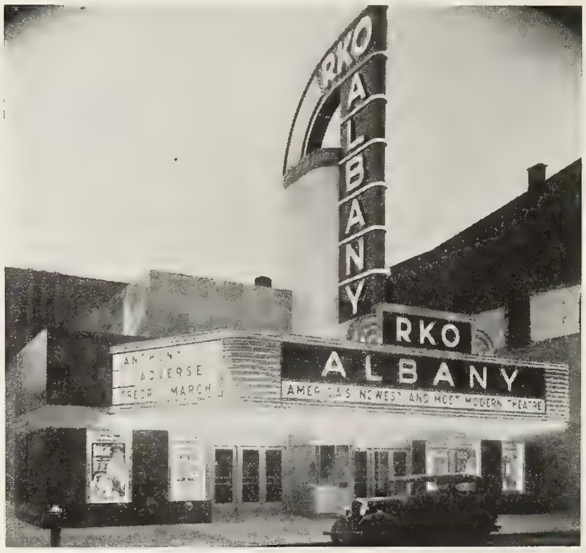
guisher should keep on hand a quantity of chemical charges so that each extinguisher may be recharged immediately after use. Only foam type recharges should be used in foam type extinguishers. These recharges come put up in handy containers marked with plain directions for recharging, and since these charges are scientifically and accurately compounded, the solutions should be thoroughly mixed in exact accordance with the instructions given on the recharge container.

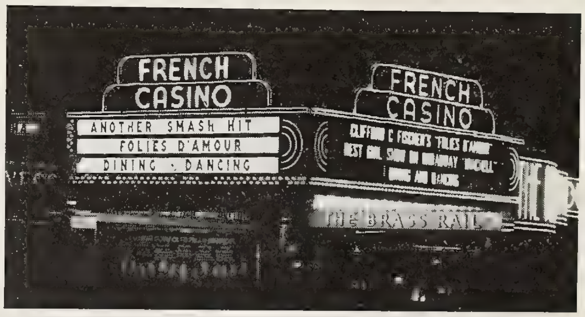
"Foam type extinguishers should be recharged annually as well as immediately after use. In recharging, all parts should be washed thoroughly with water and the water drained thru the hose. It is good practice to examine the extinguishers frequently to make sure that they have not been tampered with or removed from their designated places, to look for any injuries and to see that the hose and nozzle are not clogged. At any rate, once yearly, after emptying and discharging, the extinguisher and all the parts (including hose and cap gasket) should be examined for injuries due to misuse. Parts which are not in good condition should be replaced. Insofar as is practicable, at the time of these yearly inspections and recharging, it is desirable to empty the extinguishers just as though discharging on a fire before an assembly of employees. Such exhibitions are valuable because they thoroughly acquaint employees with the proper operation of the extinguisher.

"To recharge, the extinguisher should be placed upright on the floor, the cap unscrewed, the inner tube removed. All parts should be thoroughly washed. The extinguisher should be partly filled with water and then inverted enough to drain through the hose. If any obstructions are apparent, the hose and nozzle should be cleaned. Threads in the cap and collar should be kept clean and greased with plain vaseline. If the hose is old, brittle, or damaged, it should be replaced.

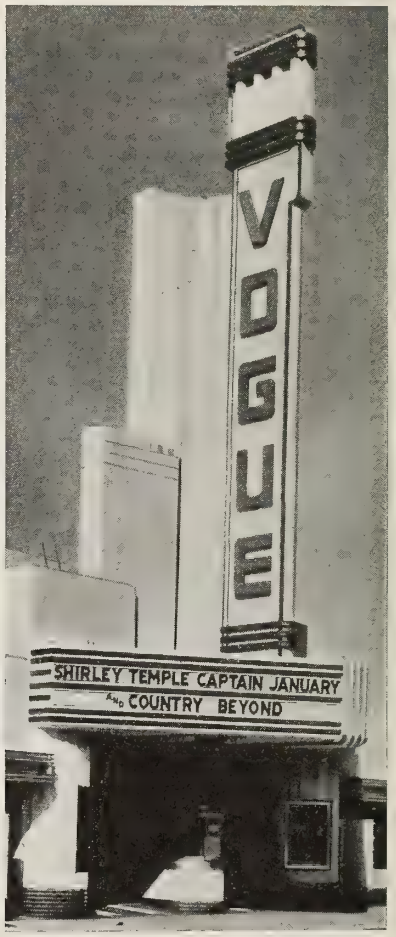
"After extinguisher has been thoroughly cleaned it is ready for recharging in accordance with instructions printed on the container of each foam type refill."



Albany theatre, Brunswick, N. J.



French Casino, New York



Vogue theatre, Alameda, Cal.

A group of modern marquees showing, in addition to the newer styles in front treatment and sign patterns, the effectiveness of the silhouette-letter type of attraction board. Introduced more than two years ago, silhouette lettering for the marquee advertising has now become generally adopted because of its greater legibility while at the same permitting reduced wattage. All of the attraction board installations illustrated are by the Adler Sign Letter Company, Chicago. The Albany theatre in Brunswick, N. J., is a new house operated by RKO. It was designed by Thomas W. Lamb. The marquee and sign are by Artcraft-Strauss, New York. The picture of the French Casino was taken from a distance before the recent revision of this marquee was completed—the obscure letters at the front are flashed opal, those at the side silhouette. The Vogue theatre, employing the triangular-shaped marquee, is a new theatre designed by Charles W. Lee for Leven & Opper. The marquee is by Electrical Products Corporation, Los Angeles.

News Notes on the • THEATRE EQUIPMENT MARKET •

• Changeable attraction board letters of all types heretofore manufactured are being retained in the line of the Wagner Sign Service, Inc., along with the new letter recently introduced. The new letter is of partial-bevel silhouette type, and is available in both 8-inch and 10-inch sizes. This letter is not stocked in the crackle-finish, but is regularly obtainable only in a smooth front surface with aluminum-finished bevel.

• The Brown Instrument Company of Philadelphia has just issued a broadside entitled, "Here's the Answer to Your Temperature Problem," featuring Brown thermometer controllers, both air-operated and electric types.

• The "Sealtite" film cabinet, recently added to the line of Neumade Products Corporation, New York, has been officially approved by the Bureau of Electrical Inspection of Chicago. With fixed capacities for five, six, eight, ten and twelve reels, the "Sealtite" cabinet is of heavy metal construction, with a double-walled compartment for each reel. The compartments are closed by gravity, the reel being about half surrounded with a permanent metal container attached to the vertical door, which has a full-hand grip.

• Rosco Laboratories, Brooklyn, N. Y., have issued a new 16-page catalog setting forth their complete line of accessories for the theatre, film exchange, laboratory and studio. Practically all the items are illustrated.

• Muller & Phipps (Asia) Ltd. has been appointed by S. O. S. Corporation, New York, as exclusive distributors for all S. O. Phone Booth with Sound-Absorbing Interior, No Door

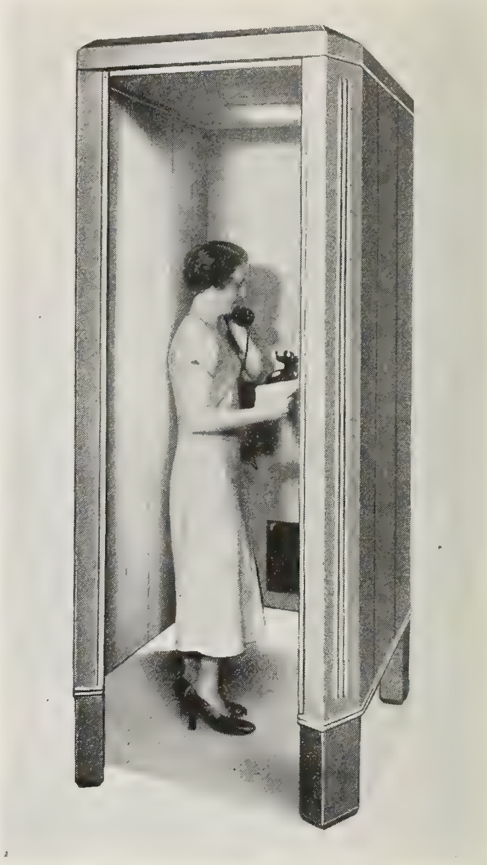
A PHONE booth suitable to theatre lobby and lounges, utilizing sound absorbent lining instead of glass or wood panels, has been developed by the Burgess Battery Company, Chicago.

Styled by Alfonso Iannelli, well known architectural sculptor and product designer, it is open around the base, and, due to absorption of its acoustical lining, it requires no door. Noises which enter the booth are instantly absorbed. Sounds, from within can only be picked up by the telephone transmitter.

The booth is constructed of steel and furnished in three standard exterior colors—gray, mahogany brown, and flat white for any subsequent finishing by interior decorators. The interior wall finish is a warm cream color with white ceiling. The over-all height is 85 inches; width 32 inches; depth 42½ inches. A concealed ceiling light is provided with pull chain socket. Two shelves are provided for holding the telephone instrument and directories.



The booth may be grouped or ganged for multiple installations. When so arranged, the advantage of the doorless design makes entry more convenient and also reduces space problems. The open construction also eliminates stuffiness and greatly promotes the sanitary condition of the booth interior.

Protecting Sound Equipment Against Line Voltage Damage

By H. C. ROLLS

THE INTRICATE and costly sound equipment of the modern theatre is more subject to damage through improper line voltage than from any other cause. Aside from sound equipment, other electrical appliances used in the theatre are likely to be injured if power line voltage is not what it should be. For example, high line voltage will decidedly shorten the life of incandescent lamp bulbs. Over a period of time the cost of excessive bulb replacements may equal or exceed the cost of repairing damage done to the sound system, but the one expense goes unnoticed, while the other, coming in a lump sum and perhaps accompanied by a stoppage of the show, attracts attention to a condition that in many theatres needs attention very urgently. Some remedies are indicated here.

Wherever possible, line voltage troubles should of course be corrected by the power company, which will cooperate as far as their equipment and conditions of operation allow. In a rather large number of communities, unfortunately, the power equipment, power lines and nature of public demand are such that it is economically impracticable for the power company to keep line voltage as steady as it should be. In such cases the user must take proper precautions to protect his equipment.

Sound equipment is subject to direct breakdown when the driving voltage becomes too high. Tubes, especially rectifier tubes, may flash over, burning out the power transformer and sometimes the filter choke coils and filter condensers. But power transformers may burn out, or filter condensers puncture, without flashover in a rectifier tube. These failures are encountered, when line voltage rises too high, with the best and most costly sound apparatus, unless special precautions are taken.

Direct breakdown is, however, less likely and actually less important than the indirect effects of exposure of sound apparatus to high voltage over long periods of time. Tube life, in the case of some types of tubes, is materially shortened. Insulating compound leaks or boils out of transformers, coils or condensers, depriving them of the protection given them in the factory and resulting ultimately in direct breakdown.

The common cotton-and-wax insulation used on the internal connecting wires of most amplifiers and other sound parts likewise suffers from prolonged exposure to overheating. The wax is dried out, and the cotton slowly chars to carbon. The sound troubles that may result vary from direct breakdown to the presence in the sound of scratchy, irritating noises caused by defective insulation, and they are extremely hard to cure unless all the equipment is re-wired internally. (The usual remedy is to replace an amplifier or other part as "defective.")

Rubber insulation also may deteriorate as a result of continued exposure to overheating, and a short circuit may result when the rubber cracks. Rheostats and potentiometers are damaged, sometimes by warping of the forms on which the resistance wire is wound, making for noisy sound whenever the control in question is adjusted, and ultimately requiring its replacement.

Bad line voltage regulation is not confined, as some may too hastily assume, to smaller communities with small power plants. The writer has encountered very large variations in voltage in the course of a single evening in a city of half a million.

PERIODIC READINGS

A simple way to determine whether this trouble exists in your own theatre is to take periodic readings of the line voltmeter with which most projection rooms are equipped. As a matter of simple routine, the projectionist may arrange to jot down the meter reading just after he has finished threading each projector. This procedure will give, at the end of the day, a series of readings at fairly short intervals. It is not able to show up temporary but very damaging peaks of voltage that may occur, which are found by another method described below, but reveals the trend and whether further steps will have to be taken.

The nature of one elementary precaution is indicated by the causes of unsteady voltage. When consumer demand is heavy, the power house generator, or the connecting lines, or both, may be unable to maintain the voltage at proper value. But generators are driven to their maximum output and, if not watched carefully, may deliver excessive voltage when the demand slacks off. Also, the theatre may suffer because it is connected to low-drain line while the generators are driven to their peak output to maintain voltage on another and more heavily loaded line. The theatre voltage then may be far too high.

VARIATION PERIODS

Since line fluctuations are caused, ultimately, by changes in consumer demand, they follow daily cycles that vary with seasonal and weather conditions (dark afternoons, for example) and with special conditions such as holidays. On a week-day afternoon, with factory machinery running, voltage may be low, rising when factories close down, dropping again with early evening demands for domestic light, and rising again around 9 o'clock in the evening.

CONTROL METHODS

With these considerations in mind, simple manual voltage controls can be operated successfully without demanding too much attention. It will be less costly to install such a control for the sound system than to buy a larger amplifier to take care of Saturday night demand for high volume at a time when line voltage is low. But some systems already have such controls—tapped input transformers are installed in many amplifiers. The addition of a tap switch to such amplifiers is inexpensive and provides voltage adjustment.

Tapped transformers, or auto-transformers, can also be installed to take care of the light bulb load, and of other electrical equipment in the theatre that requires protection. Automatic control devices are also available for the same purpose.

Upon proper representation, the power company will install temporarily a recording voltmeter, which takes a continuous record over a period of a week. There is usually no charge for this service, which records all peaks and dips that occur and provides an accurate indication of the voltage extremes to be overcome. Such records should always be made before protective apparatus is purchased, in order that it may be purchased intelligently.

F. H. RICHARDSON'S COMMENT

• • AND ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES •

F H Richardson

LET THE PRODUCERS TELL 'EM: MEDIOCRITY ISN'T GOOD ENOUGH!

IN A RECENT circular letter, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences announced the formation of two committees "to study and make recommendations for standardization of picture and sound projection equipment characteristics as part of the Council's general program to improve the quality of Hollywood's product reaching the screen." This is followed by names of the committee members, with no indication that any one of them is in any direct way affiliated with projection.

Now when the product of Hollywood goes to theatres, it is placed in the hands of some 20,000 projectionists for presentation to the public. Whether or not it will be displayed at its full value in entertainment, is dependent directly upon two things: First, is the theatre equipment itself capable of high-quality projection and reproduction, and is it in an excellent state of repair? Second, is the theatre equipment in charge of thoroughly competent projectionists?

I believe that the Academy Research Council would be more likely to get substantial results did it broaden the scope of the work of these committees and give very grave consideration to the factors cited above. Certainly, no one at all familiar with the situation would deny that great damage is done to Hollywood product by theatre projection equipments in a poor (in some cases an impossible) state of repair, and by incompetent or careless projectionists.

Unquestionably, the production branch of the industry could give effective aid to efforts made by other branches to educate theatre owners and managers concerning the absolute necessity of maintaining properly all equipment involved in projection, and concerning the wisdom of placing the equipment in charge of projectionists who thoroughly understand projection and allied processes. The step taken by the Academy Research Council is probably in that direction. We have our doubts, however, about the effectiveness of mere committees, gathering data and pondering upon it in the usual committee fashion. What the matter really needs is publicity, plenty of it, with the most convincing authority behind it.

For 30 years I have tried earnestly to impress upon minds of exhibitors and projectionists the same necessity that the Research Council now seeks to point out. During that period I never received any help whatever from producers—in fact, I had got the idea that they weren't interested in what happened to their product after it reached the theatre. Naturally, therefore, I am happy to see the present display of interest ("better late than never"). But I think this interest can most effectively express itself by repeated demonstrations in the trade press of the urgency of practices which can assure the product of the studios proper presentation in the theatre.

I know I should welcome statements from the heads of the producing companies on the subject, protesting against the damage done to the motion picture performance by inadequate maintenance and operation of equipment. And it should be remembered that the conditions for proper projection and reproduction of the film extend beyond the projection room, that they involve the form of the auditorium and the screen as well.

The problem that the Research Council now considers is by no means a new one. It has always been there. The trouble has been that only a few have troubled themselves with it. These few have been able to achieve much improvement, but as the Academy's action shows, it is still one of the more important problems, fundamentally, that now confronts the industry. I have been investigating, pointing out, shouting about it for years. I should like to see the producers themselves do some of the same thing.

The collection of technical data can be useful—in fact, our technical organizations have been too slow in attempting to provide data upon which suitable standards could be based, with the result that loose practices have been permitted to continue. However, we see the general problem as one less of technical procedure than of business procedure. If a theatre owner really wants to do justice to the product that Hollywood makes, he can get the equipment he needs, and it is perfectly possible for men to learn how to operate that equipment properly. Thus far, however, too many theatre owners and managers have thought mediocrity good enough. I'd like to see the producers begin telling them that it isn't.

CAUSE OF OUT-OF-FOCUS EFFECT ON ONE SIDE

J. L. JONES, of Denver, writes, "I would appreciate information as to the various reasons that would cause a picture to go out of focus on one side (not very much, but some) and yet remain sharp on the other. The effect may be moved from one side of the screen to the other by moving the lens in or out. Will you also please advise why the cartridge fuse of a certain circuit goes haywire every few days when no fault can be found anywhere in the circuit the set controls. It is always the left-hand fuse that blows."

There are several things that might cause the screen image to be out of focus on one side and sharp on the other—for example, a faint finger mark, or marks, wholly invisible when the lens is looked through, but usually visible when the element upon which it is located is viewed obliquely; the aperture plate tracks worn more on one side than the other; the aperture plate itself not precisely square with the optical system, due usually to a bit of dirt lodged under one side when the plate was mounted; a bit of oil on one side of the lens; the rear lens assembly loose in its mount.

However, it is extremely unlikely that in any such case the effect would be duplicated in the lens or aperture plate of the other projector, and nothing in your letter indicates that the effect is present in only one projector. Moreover, in any such case the effect could not be moved to the opposite side of the screen merely by moving the lens. It seems likely, under the circumstances, that your lenses are at too sharp an angle with the screen, due probably to a short projection distance and a wide screen image, possibly aggravated by a too-wide spacing of the projectors. Projection lens gives critically sharp focus only at one, exact distance from its optical center. It is quite true that lenses, particularly highly corrected ones, will provide an acceptably sharp focus over a relatively considerable distance, but the fact remains that the focus is only critically sharp at one exact distance. One must perforce place each projector somewhat to one side of the screen center. If you lay the scheme out on paper, you will see that each lens will be farther from one side of the screen than the other, hence even though the lenses be of good quality and give acceptable sharpness at each side of the screen when the center is critically sharp, still the fact remains that on either side the focus is not critically so.

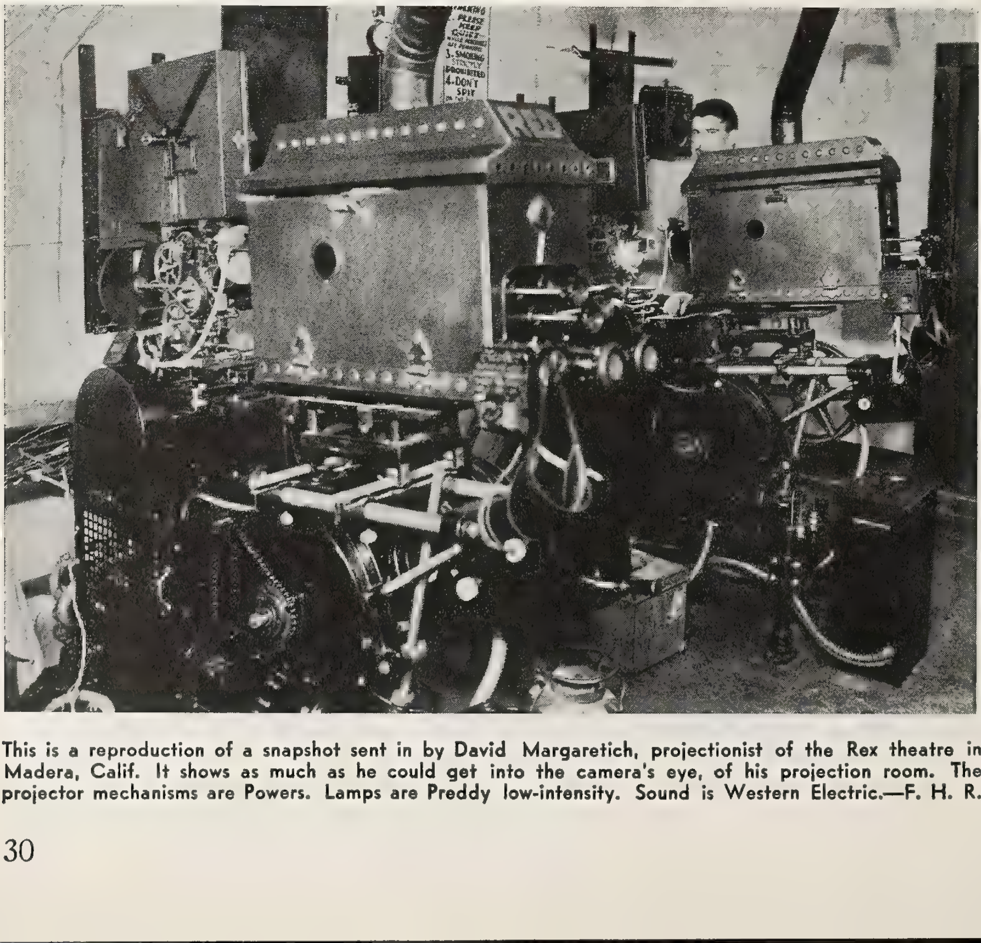
By laying it out on paper, you will see that, with a given width of screen image and equal projector spacing, the longer the projection distance the less will be the difference between lens-to-screen center and to either side of the screen, hence the less will be the effect above described. Inversely, the larger the screen image or the shorter the projection distance, the greater will be the effect.

It seems to me from where I sit that you would do well to reduce both the spacing of your projectors and the width of your screen image. Since it is possible you have poorly corrected, short focal length lenses it would be well to correspond with the lens manufacturer, setting forth the exact projection distance and exact screen image width, asking whether or not he can supply lenses sufficiently highly corrected to provide acceptable focus over the entire screen.

As to the fuses, it is almost certain there is something wrong with the contact or contacts of that particular fuse. Examine the contacts carefully. If you are unable to locate dirt, roughness or looseness, install a different fuse block, for there most certainly is where your trouble lies. It should be visible upon critical examination, but queer things sometimes happen. I remember that many years ago I had exactly the same trouble. I was unable to find anything wrong, yet one of the fuses would blow, sometimes in an hour, sometimes in six hours. But it always blew. I was running the machinery in a light plant in Palestine, Tex., then, and neither myself nor the electricians were able to find any fault in the contacts of that fuse. Finally I told them to tear the whole thing out and put in a new block. They did and there was no further trouble.

SUGGESTING CAUSE OF "IMAGE JITTERS"

IN THESE columns, in the October 17th issue, I published details of a puzzling case of "image jitters." It seems the screen image would start moving up and down slightly, but only after the projector had warmed up. While cold everything was okay. I asked for suggestions as to the possible cause and several readers have answered. S. D. Mayo of the Keith theatre in Portland, Me., says:



This is a reproduction of a snapshot sent in by David Margaretich, projectionist of the Rex theatre in Madera, Calif. It shows as much as he could get into the camera's eye, of his projection room. The projector mechanisms are Powers. Lamps are Preddy low-intensity. Sound is Western Electric.—F. H. R.

"An intermittent movement that produced the same effect only when warm was disassembled and upon measuring the star with a micrometer it was found that one of its portions was 5/10,000 smaller in diameter, viewing the star as a whole, than the others. It seems logical that it had worn faster than the rest, and that while cold the oil served to take up the excess wear. This may not be the trouble in this case, but it is worth looking into.

"And while I am at it, I might add that the Peerless hi-low reflector lamp positive contact castings may easily be repaired by acetylene, should one be broken. We have repaired several in this manner, and though of cast iron, they have given extended and perfect service.

"We have a projection angle of 39° and were troubled with light on the sides of the masking. This we cured by securing under-size aperture plates and filling them until the light on the screen fit the perpendicular masking sides. I hope these items, or some of them, may be of assistance and that I may be able to give aid some time in the future."

Many thanks, Brother Mayo. Such an uneven wear as you describe is quite unusual, but conceivably it might occur through some freak in a piece of metal or some variation in manufacture. I can also see that the explanation of the oil serving to absorb the excess might occur where the excess is so slight and cold oil a rather heavy mixture.

As to the welding, it could of course be done, but only with great care to so do it that the carbons will be in perfect alignment and the carbon contact perfect. Aperture filing is the usual procedure but a 39° projection angle is far, far above any reasonable maximum.

From Elbert F. Sanford of the Navajo theatre in Gallup, N. Mex., comes this explanation of "image jitters":

"I had the same trouble some while ago. From the description of the trouble I am quite sure, though not positive, that I can offer a helpful suggestion. California says the jumps do not start until the mechanism has warmed up. Heat expands metal, and in my opinion one of the star slots that fits snugly, starts binding on the pin after expansion has taken place. This might be tested by removing the movement when hot and turning the flywheel slowly to determine whether and where binding takes place. This proved to be my trouble. I hope it helps in this case."

J. R. Prater of Palouse, Wash., responds, "While I must admit my attempt at solution is nothing more than a guess, still it seems reasonable. The screen image becomes unsteady only after the projector has warmed up. Is it then not possible that one element of the star, due to some possible fault in the metal or its treatment, has worn slightly more than have the other three? Under such a condition is it not wholly possible that the oil, when cold, forms a sufficiently heavy film to cause steady movement, whereas after it is warmed up it has insufficient body to do so?

"This is my guess. I would be much interested in knowing the results of a careful micrometer check-up of the star in question. I also am anxious to know the answer of the projector manufacturer to whom you referred it."

The projector manufacturer did not even trouble to answer, and no report at all has come in from the California man who sent in the puzzle. Your guess is not at all unreasonable.

FILM DAMAGE AND SOFT EMULSION

AT THE LAST meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers the question of film buckling under heat at the projector aperture was up for discussion. I took the stand that inasmuch as almost invariably it was new film which sustained this injury, it was apparently due to excess moisture in new prints, the same being present because of rush work in the drying rooms of producers.

During the discussion an engineer connected with Eastman Kodak Research Laboratories, made this statement:

"This is not so much due to lack of drying as to too much speed in drying, resulting in a thin 'skin' of dry emulsion upon the surface, with a layer beneath in which excess moisture remains." The words are as I recall them.

Now I have a letter from Bert Murdock, projectionist of Orem, Utah, saying, "Please find attached clipping from a reel of film that has suffered injury in a peculiar manner. Examined under a magnifying glass, a small, comma-shaped mark is found in the picture side of the dark area of the variable density sound track. This mark appears opposite each frame line, as also does a tiny dot opposite it, on the other side of the sound track, also in its dark area. The subject is a short. It was new at the time we ran it. The projectors are Holmes, with Western Electric sound.

"This is the first time in my three years of projection work that any complaint has been made of film being injured while in my possession. I use all possible care and this occurrence makes me feel badly. I would appreciate an expression of your opinion as to the cause of the damage. A very careful examination of both projectors has disclosed no cause for it. So far as we know no damage occurred to the other shorts or the feature on that program."

Analyzing such damage so as really to determine the cause is very often a task of extreme difficulty. Sometimes it is impossible. This, however, seems a case in which examination under a powerful microscope enables me to come to a definite conclusion. Under powerful magnification, though the marks are tiny, the emulsion of the sound track appears to have adhered to something on which it remained stationary for the fraction of a second; in pulling away, the emulsion has been broken, though not wholly so, for in three of the four marks (the sample has two frame lines) tiny threads of emulsion still remain across the exposed white space. At one mark the tiny bit of emulsion torn off is folded back upon the untorn surface.

This indicates to me that the emulsion upon this film carried excessive moisture. It had not been properly dried. The drying was slow enough so that no "skin" of dry film had formed, unless it had been afterward softened by the excess moisture beneath, which seems rather improbable to believe.

How then might a bit of emulsion be pulled loose at exactly the same point in every frame? Not by a sprocket, since it does not rotate once to each frame. It seems to me, then, it could be done only by some tiny bit of emulsion having adhered to something between the upper and lower sprockets where the film remains stationary for a time at each frame—probably an edge of the aperture plate opening. One side must have had high power of adhesion; the other less, but sufficient to tear the soft emulsion as it pulled away. The bit of emulsion adhering would be dislodged when a dry film was projected.

But this is only incidental to the really important point I wish to bring out, which is that when film received by a projectionist appears to contain excessive moisture, to have emulsion so soft that damage may result from its projection (assuming there to be no excess aperture tension), the projectionist should report the condition to the manager and decline to assume responsibility if damage occurs in projection. No reasonable manager can object to that procedure. He can then examine the film himself, if he so elects, assuming responsibility, or he can, after examination, report the matter by wire or phone to the exchange.

It is the duty of producers and of exchanges to send out new film with emulsion sufficiently hardened by drying to be immune from damage in normal projection. If this be not done, then there exists no right to hold the projectionist responsible if damage does occur. But in protecting the theatre, it most emphatically is the duty of projectionists to report such condition to the theatre manager before projecting soft prints.

However, it is necessary for projectionists to be very sure that the aperture tension of his motion picture projectors be at the minimum permissible, since excess tension is a standing invitation to damage of soft film in more ways than one.

QUESTION: SHOULD HE JOIN THE UNION?

FROM A western New York town comes this letter:

"I am writing you for the advice I think you can and will supply. It is concerning joining the union. To begin with I live in a town of about 5000, in which are two theatres, one owned by a theatre circuit, and one independent. In the latter I am projectionist, assistant manager, advertising man, caretaker and about everything else. The manager owns the business. When I asked him about joining the union he replied that the union might be all right, but if I joined one he would employ another man. In other words I would promptly be out of a job. I had partly decided to join, but decided to ask your advice upon the matter.

"First, if I do join, would there be any advantage? If I do not join, what chance would there be to advance in the field of projection? I now receive $16.50, and must work an average of ten to twelve hours per day. The union says they will help me, but as I have a family to support I feel a little nervous. The question therefore is: Should or should I not join "

Well, brother, it is not either my part or the part of this paper to engage in labor disputes, but were I in your place, before I submitted to that sort of dictation, especially on a ten-to-twelve-hour-a-day basis, I would confer with friend wife. If she is a regular fellow (and I'll bet she is), she will say something like this: "My dear husband, you are a man! We won't starve! Before you stand for that sort of treatment, scrub floors, if you have to, until you get another job."

Exhibitors and managers have rights as against both individual men and unions. But the men have rights, too! And unions are perfectly legal in their functions.

Whether or not joining a union will present added opportunities, that is as may be. Practically all cities in the United States and Canada are unionized. If this man wishes ever to work in one of them he must join, and he cannot wait until ready to go to work—he must already be a member.

AN UNECONOMICAL PROJECTION POLICY

FROM A projectionist of long experience whom I have known for many years has come a letter from which I quote as follows:

"I wonder what has gone wrong in this circuit of theatres. It is very, very different than it was when controlled by other interests. The theatre managers seem much more arrogant. Requests for supplies are often laughed at. They dish out carbons each day. Some of them almost bite the head off the projectionist who dares to ask for an extra carbon with which to finish the day's run, which forces the taking of chances with short carbons that may or may not last through a reel.

"In this theatre the lamps are six years old. They have never had a general overhauling. They are Peerless high-intensity, reflector type. The rheostats also are six years old and have never had any attention whatsoever, save what we have given them. The motor-generators are Westinghouse, 80 volts, 80 amperes; rheostats switch type with 50-, 15-, 10- and 5-ampere divisions. When on full, 65 amperes is the limit. The projector mechanisms have not been overhauled in three years. The amount of play in the gear trains is awful, to say nothing of the noise.

"One day I let one of the projectors run, without film, and went down into the auditorium. The variety and volume of noise audible was pretty terrible, considering that audiences are presumed to hear sound from the loudspeakers. I reported this condition and for my pains was laughed at.

"One day the manager, to whom every noise is a hum, complained of a 'hum.' Investigation disclosed the fact that the mechanism vibration was so great that one of the photocells had dropped down and was picking up the noise of the mechanism vibration!

"The man in charge of projection for this circuit has no real knowledge of projection. When complaint is lodged with him concerning some fault, his stock answer is: "Well, it's running ain't it? When it stops, fix it."

Imagine, if you can, a man of that type in charge of projection in a large theatre circuit! Most of the projectionists under him have lost heart. He who complains is a pest, so everyone just sits tight and keeps quiet. And what results we get—lack of them rather! Seems to be an exaggerated case of pinch-penny policy."

This is printed as illustrative of the damage done to this great industry by certain circuit policies. It would seem that the higher-ups in theatre circuits might better understand the necessity of placing a thoroughly competent man in charge of so important a division of their business as projection; yet in some circuits I have found men in charge of projection affairs (so far as anyone was in charge) who, while apparently well posted on sound, knew next to nothing about visual projection. I have found technical arrangements that the supervisor of projection had himself installed, and when the matter was brought to the attention of his superior, the latter was offended. Yet he was a man of fine intelligence and extensive experience. He simply had placed his trust in one who did not deserve it and resented any reflection on his judgment. Of course, I was endeavoring to act in the general interests of the motion picture industry, not on behalf of any one theatre circuit.

What qualifications should a supervisor of projection have? Well, one very necessary qualification—one that cannot be dispensed with—is that he shall have had at least two to four years practical projection work, meaning work in a theatre projection room. This is vitally essential for several reasons, which may be summed up by saying that only by such experience is it possible for him to understand the 'language" of projection. That is to say, by this process he will acquire actual first-hand knowledge of its innermost needs and the needs, feelings and viewpoints of the men over whom he will have authority. He will know what is of practical value and what is inadvisable or injurious. Do not discount the high importance of this phase of the matter when selecting a man to fill the position of supervisor of projection.

Having by this practical process acquired a full store of experience in projection work, he must be fully equipped with technical knowledge of both sound and visual projection matters. It is a very grave mistake to think visual projection does not have just as many and just as difficult problems as sound reproduction. If that attitude is taken, rest assured the box offices will know of it and to their grief.

In the case in point we have a condition (assuming what has been said to be true, and knowing the man, I am very certain it is) in which the product of the producers is abused, the patrons of the theatres of that circuit are abused, the artists who appear upon its screens are outraged. In fact everything is outraged, including the projectionists themselves. In fact, the circuit is outraging itself by cutting down its box office income, as time will show that it is doing.

And not the least of the damage done is that upon the projectionists' morale, by destroying all pride in results, discouraging them from seeking to do good work and in general making them shirkers and loafers in the field of projection.

GREAT INTEREST IN PROJECTION GROUPS

THAT THE meetings of SMPE Projection Practice Committee are regarded as of very real importance, is shown by the attendance. For example, present at the last meeting were Harry Rubin, chairman; Jessie Hopkin, secretary; J. O. Baker and Adolph Goodman, representing RCA; T. H. Carpenter, representing Erpi; J. K. Elderkin of the Forest Manufacturing Corporation (Forest rectifiers); Earl R. Morin of the Connecticut State Police, which department has general charge of motion picture theatre affairs in that state; Percy Bugbee, assistant managing director National Fire Protection Association, Boston, Mass.; Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect; Dr. A. M. Goldsmith, past president of the SMPE; Arthur S. Dickinson of the Hays Organization; Sylvan Harris, assistant to the president of the SMPE, in addition to a few others who are committee members.

A SWAPPERS' CLUB THAT'S WHAT WE ARE!

J. LYDON, projectionist of the Hamilton theatre, Dorchester, Mass., writes, "Like so many others I follow your Comments in BETTER THEATRES; also, I read of the honor paid you recently in just recognition of your efforts during years past and gone. I feel personally indebted to you, BETTER THEATRES and MOTION PICTURE HERALD for your help, and am very sure a great number of others feel the same way. I am a 'silent student' of your 'Bluebook School' and have your Bluebooks. BETTER THEATRES interests me because of the problems it presents that come from East, West, North and South.

"And now may I suggest that you form a 'Swappers' Club,' meaning a club of projectionists, each of whom has an idea or ideas he would like to swap to another for his own idea or ideas. I have several ideas I believe to be of value which I would like to 'trade' for other useful ideas. For example, a hook-up that would instantly and automatically light up the house should the power fail. That is one of them and I have others. If I were able to contact other men who have worked something out, it should be mutually beneficial.

"Just received my first feature mounted upon 2000-foot reels. Blessings upon you, Dad! They are a great big step forward in the correct direction, believe you me.

"Most of my film reaches me after a run up New Hampshire way. No kidding, Dad, I often wonder if the theatres handling it employ plumbers in lieu of projectionists! One bird up that way has a great big diamond punch and, believe it or not, I have counted fifteen holes he has punched in the film for just one change-over!"

As to the help we have been able to give you, brother, that is what we are for. But the 2000-foot reel should be credited to the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. It worked long and hard to bring about the improvement. All I did was to help publicize the idea, which I did gladly for the reason that the change was needed and, despite the honest views of some to the contrary, would work, I was and am very certain, no appreciable harm to labor. And do not forget, labor itself brought about the one-man rooms by literally educating managers and exhibitors that two men were unnecessary. I warned men and unions many, many times what the result of letting projectors project shows unattended would be. It had no effect, so finally the inevitable happened, whereupon there immediately was a rush to lock the stable door—after the nag had been kidnapped.

As to the proposed club idea, I don't believe it would work out as you think it would. When you get an idea pertaining to projection, may I suggest that you send it in? Projectionists are doing that very thing right along, of course, and what ideas you thus get from them may repay you for your trouble. These columns really constitute a "Swappers' Club," after all.

PROPER PROCEDURE IN CASE OF FIRE

THERE IS considerable discussion just now regarding appropriate procedure in case of fire at the projector aperture. I had not intended taking part in it for the reason that aside from certain fundamental acts that are always in order, proper action is so very much dependent upon many different things, any one or all of which may vary in different cases. However, receipt of an insistent request from E. Elwin Branscome of the Branscome Circuit Theatres, Mt. Airy, N. C., seems to oblige me to discuss the matter.

First of all, there are three or four acts that come first in all cases of aperture fire. They are, in the order named, (a) drop the port fire shutters instantly, since audience safety is paramount to everything else; (b) close the dowser and pull the switch (which two acts may be done simultaneously), (c) by whatever means available, stop the projector just as quickly as possible (this last is important in the event the film is piling up inside the mechanism casing, as may well be the case, though of course not necessarily so).

And now we are at a standstill for the reason that the next action depends wholly upon circumstances, though ordinarily notifying the manager would follow. However, important as that is, it might not be advisable, since that takes time and he may not be in the office.

Treatment of an aperture fire when using a Powers 6 or other of the older types of projector mechanism, and when using the newer types, present two very different problems. With the older types, the gate incloses the film rather closely, and fire mounts away from the aperture much more slowly than is the case with the newer mechanisms. With the old type mechanism and an aperture not guarded by an outer cone, it may be possible to extinguish an aperture fire by blowing instantly and strongly into the aperture. With the newer type projector, or with the older types and a cone-guarded aperture, such action is impossible.

One safety element is a fire extinguisher hung on the wall beside the lens port of each projector. I am not certain about other makes of projector, but the Simplex mechanism casing has a thin slot right beside the fire valve of the upper magazine. Through this slot it may be possible to squirt sufficient chemical to very much retard the burning of piled-up film inside the casing, if any there be. In fact, I am not at all certain it would not be an excellent plan to drill a hole in the upper part of the projector casing just large enough to permit insertion of the nozzle of an extinguisher, the same to be normally stopped by means of a metal plug.

As to a suggestion made some while since that if the fire gets into a magazine and the door be opened and instantly slammed violently shut again, it will extinguish the fire, I would regard the experiment as distinctly dangerous. It might possibly work successfully once in a while, but should not be tried in practice until it has been approved by fire authorities, and that it ever would be I regard as extremely doubtful. Once fire has started the only right thing to do, insofar as has to do with projector magazines, is let them alone. Under no circumstances open them until the fire has burned out.

In this connection I might add that one fire extinguisher I know of has an attachment for projectors that I have myself watched extinguish a fire started in loose film packed into a projector mechanism. Automatically the thing worked so swiftly that only about half of the loose film was burned.

Closing this discussion, here is the dope: Drop the port shutters ahead of everything else. Next drop the dowser, pull the switch and stop the projector as quickly as possible. After that, specific instructions are rather useless. It all depends upon circumstances. As a last word, I would advise Friend Branscome to examine his projectors to make sure the magazine doors are in good condition and that they close tightly.

DISTANCE AND SOUND; LIGHT'S CRITICAL ANGLE

LEONARD GALLIGER of St. Louis, asks, "Will you kindly explain exactly what action causes sound to decrease in volume, loudness or what have you, with distance? By that it is meant to ask in just what way the sound energy is absorbed or dispersed. May I also ask what is meant by the 'critical angle' at which light is wholly reflected and how this angle may be determined otherwise than by experiment?"

As to your first question, there is no motion without resistance; water moving through a pipe or along the ground must overcome the resistance offered by friction between its own particles and that offered by the surface along which it flows; electricity passing through a wire or other conducting medium encounters resistance proportional to the conductivity, or perhaps I might better say lack of conductivity of the medium; and sound is no different in this respect.

As sound moves through its conducting medium, usually the air, it meets resistance. In overcoming the opposition thus offered to movement it uses up its motive power. Were you to make an oscillograph record of the same sound wave at different distances from its source, you would discover that as distance increases the undulations of the wave become smaller and smaller, until finally, its power being totally expended, no record would appear.

But that is only part of the story when we consider the theatre, since there sound energy is absorbed by walls, clothing, etc., which loss must be added to that already described, though I think its effect is now too well understood to need description.

As to the second question, I referred the matter to the Bausch and Lomb Optical Company Scientific Department, headed by Dr. W. B. Rayton, whose answer follows:

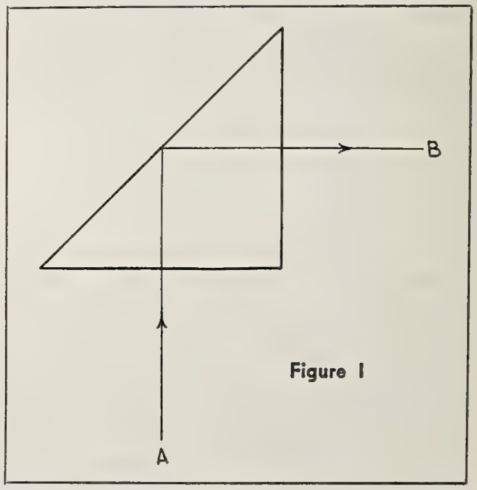

Figure I

"Dear Mr. Richardson: You have described the experiment of holding a light over a glass of water, looking upward through the water and failing to discover any angle of the light to the water at which total reflection takes place.

"That is for the reason that it does not take place, since total reflection cannot occur when light passes from a medium of low density (low refractive index) into a medium of greater density (higher refractive index). There can be, therefore, no total reflection involved in the transmission of light from air into water. If you could insert your source of light into the water and move it freely about, you would find conditions under which no light emerged from the surface of the water into the air. I do not at this moment think of any simple experiment that shows the existence of total reflection without optical accessories.

"An unsilvered right-angle prism used as a reflector illustrates the phenomenon. In the sketch (Fig. 1) that I will enclose, all of the light originating at point A, traveling in the direction towards the prism that is incident on the reflecting face, is reflected toward the eye of the observer at B. If a surface is totally reflecting when viewed from a certain angle, it is completely opaque insofar as transmitted light is concerned. Therefore, even though the reflecting face (the hypotenuse face) of such a prism is unsilvered and completely clean, an observer looking at it from point B in a direction perpendicular to the prism face, can see no trace of light transmitted through this surface from the strongest source of light.

"I will enclose, also, another sketch (Fig. 2) that illustrates the general law of refraction. Your correspondent wishes to know how the critical angle can be determined other than by experiment. In the sketch a ray of light is indicated by 1-1. It is shown moving through the lower medium, which we will take to be the one of higher refractive power, toward the upper medium which is the one of lower refractive power. The line N-N is the perpendicular to the interface. The angle i, the angle between the direction of the light in the first medium and the normal, is called the angle of incidence. The angle i^1 is the angle of refraction. The index of refraction of the first medium we will call n, and of the second medium n^1. Now, the general law of refraction is stated thus:

$$n \sin i = n^1 \sin i^1$$

Unfortunately, comprehension of this law as thus stated involves enough knowledge of trigonometry to know what is meant by the sine of an angle. As a matter of fact, an ordinary dictionary will define it. If, turning again to the figure, the angle i is increased, the angle i^1 will increase also, but at a faster rate, and eventually an angle will be reached represented by i_c such that the corresponding angle i^1 becomes equal to 90°, indicated by i^1_c in the sketch. The angle i_c is the critical angle. Its value can be determined from the equation for any two values of refractive indices, n and n^1. The sine of the angle 90° is equal to 1; therefore, if we substitute the figure 1 for sin i^1 in the equation, we will have:

$$n \sin i = n^1$$

or,

$$\sin i = n^1/n$$

The angle whose sine is equal to the ratio of n^1 to n, or the ratio of the lower index of refraction to the higher index, is the critical angle for that pair of materials.

"To make use of this involves the ability merely to use a table of functions of angles.

Having divided n^1 by n, one turns to a table of sines and finds the angle corresponding to that value. For example, if the upper medium is air, for which the index of refraction is 1, and the lower medium is glass with an index of 1.5, the ratio would be equal to 1/1.5, or .6666. The angle whose sine is .6666 is 41° 48′. This is the critical angle for this condition.

Any ray traveling through the medium of high refractive index and making an angle less than this amount will emerge into the air. Any light making an angle with the perpendicular greater than this amount will be totally reflected at the surface and will not emerge into the upper medium. It follows that no light that enters the lower medium from the upper one through the surface can ever occupy the space between the ray (marked 2-2 in the sketch) and the surface. This can be deduced from the fact that the path of any ray of light is reversible."

CONDITIONS UNSUITED TO GOOD PROJECTION

FROM Ted Walz of Quincy, Ill., comes a letter saying, "You are recommended to me as the most competent available man from whom unbiased advice may be had concerning projection problems. I am contemplating opening a small neighborhood theatre in a location where the only available building that can be made to serve has only 12 feet, 6 inches clearance, floor to ceiling. Under this condition I would like your advice as to what size screen image would be best.

"Front to rear, the building measures 102 feet. On the right side at the front is an offset 483 inches wide by 22 feet long, so that at the front there would only be a width of 18 feet, 3 inches, the room itself being 22 feet, 6 inches wide back of the offset. I expect to be able to seat about 300. Projection distance will be approximately 78 feet. I shall appreciate your advice as to general lay-out of projection room and lobby."

CORRECTION

The projector bases installed in the Criterion theatre in New York, were manufactured by Edward H. Wolk of Chicago. These were shown in a photograph of the Criterion projection room, published in the November 14th issue, and in a caption accompanying the picture the bases were accredited to another manufacturer.—F. H. R.

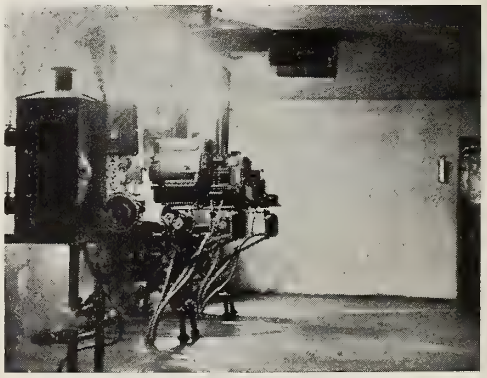
Friend Walz, there is but one honest thing I can say, and that is don't attempt to construct a theatre with such conditions. First of all, your ceiling height, 12 feet, 6 inches, would make even the smallest screen image unacceptable. The heads of patrons down front would be silhouetted upon the screen both upon entering and leaving. That alone should be sufficient to condemn the proposition.

SOME WISDOM FROM AN OPTIMIST

RECENTLY IN a conversation with a projectionist, a friend of his remarked, "Gee, Bill, you're an optimist!" To which Bill replied:

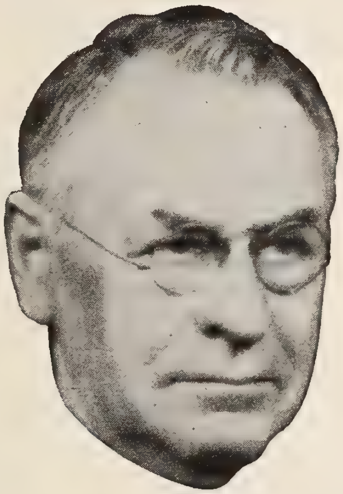
"Yep! I've been bawled out, balled up, held up, bulldozed, walked on, cheated, stuck for war tax, state tax, dog tax, income tax, federal tax, tax on my home, liberty bonds, baby bonds, bonds of matrimony, Red Cross, double cross, unemployment relief and stomach relief. I have been asked to help society, bums, my local union, my lodge and hospitals. I have worked like hell, did other people's work, worked for other people and have lost money I loaned to help others. I've been cussed, discussed, boycotted, lied to and about. I've been held up and stuck up. The only reason I'm sticking around is that I'm an optimist and want to see what they'll pull on me next."

And so it is with most of us—but it's interesting, isn't it?



A bit of amateur photography by A. Starbird, showing his projection room at the State theatre in Owatonna, Minn. The room is 35 feet wide and 15 feet deep. Equipment includes Powers 6B projector mechanisms, Jewell lamps and Ultraphone soundheads.—F. H. R.

A practical working tool for every projectionist



F. H. Richardson's Bluebook of Projection is a practical working tool for every projectionist. His expert knowledge of the craft he has taught and followed for more than 30 years makes this book, in the opinion of leading authorities, the most useful projection manual ever published.

This book is new—714 pages of up-to-the-minute text, charts and data with detailed description of assembly, wiring and functioning of all sound and projection apparatus. It may best be described as a practical "trouble shooter," for it is cross indexed for immediate reference when the projectionist is confronted with those breakdowns that are the nightmare of every projection room.

Our supply of Richardson's Bluebook is limited to less than 200 copies and of necessity we must accept orders on the basis of first come—first served.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE DEPARTMENT DEALING WITH ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN AND MATERIALS, DECORATION AND FURNISHINGS

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES: One of the principal functions of this department is to answer inquiries pertaining to preliminary considerations in the planning of a new theatre or the remodeling of an existing one. All questions receive the personal attention of Peter M. Hulsken, A.I.A., contributing editor of this department and a practicing architect who long has specialized in theatre design. He will be glad to offer advice, suggestions and criticism. Working plans, hoever, cannot be supplied. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Better Theatres, Rockefeller Center, New York. In publishing replies, only initials are used for identification.

THE QUESTION:

ENCLOSED IS a rough sketch of a building that I have purchased and wish to remodel. In discussing the remodeling job to several persons, I find that the views are each different from mine. For that reason I wish to have suggestions or plans from someone who understands theatre planning.

I am making plans to start on this job in two or three years—that is, on the foundation for the addition to be added—so any suggestions or information on any part of the theatre will be greatly appreciated.—H. A. H.

THE ANSWER:

AFTER GIVING your sketches study I find that you have solved your problem quite satisfactorily, with the exception of a few minor changes. I suggest that you arrange for a double set of entrance doors, which should have glass panels, in front; and the other set (which you planned at the auditorium side and which should have solid panels) to be placed in the lobby wall opposite the entrance; then the space between offices and rest rooms could become the foyer, from which the rest rooms and office could be entered.

The maximum of seats can be obtained by the use of a center aisle. The 4-foot, 6-inch slope in the auditorium floor is not quite sufficient, but it can be increased by sloping the floor in the lobby and the foyer upward from the sidewalk to the auditorium 1 foot, 6 inches The stage floor, being 5 feet above the low part of the auditorium floor, is also too high—it should be 3 feet, 6 inches; but I do not think this can be remedied on account of the boiler room, so the projection screen will have to be set as close to the proscenium arch as possible, and the bottom of the picture will have to be very close to the stage floor.

I do not notice any provisions made for ticket office. It would be nice if it could be placed between the entrance doors; if that is not possible, it could be placed in the office or along one side wall of the lobby. Plan for poster cabinets on each side of entrance doors and provide for shadow boxes in the lobby. The front may be covered with structural glass, Formica or porcelain enamel; and, of course, you will want a marquee.

Use sound-absorbing tiles or boards for the ceiling of the auditorium. The side walls could be treated with drape panels. By the installation of modern light fixtures you should be able to achieve an attractive interior at moderate cost.

THE QUESTION:

I AM PLANNING a new theatre and I would appreciate it very much if you would please give me the answers to the few questions quoted below. My auditorium is 25 feet wide and 75 feet deep to the screen. Will you please advise me the best seating arrangement and how many seats?

Would you advise curtain panels backed with ozite or some other sound material, or would you advise sound board? Would you advise the box office at the sidewalk or set back some 7 or 8 feet?—L. B. I.

THE ANSWER:

THE BEST seating arrangement of an auditorium 25 feet wide is a center bank of eleven 20-inch seats across with wall aisle on each side. The depth of the auditorium will allow for 25 rows of seats, spaced 2 feet, 6 inches back-to-back; so the total seating capacity will be 275 seats. By the use of a center aisle 25 seats or 50 seats (provided some 19-inch seats are used) may be gained.

If curtain panels are provided with back drape, no ozite will be necessary. Use sound absorbing tiles or boards for ceiling and rear wall.

I advise you to place the ticket office at the sidewalk between the entrance doors. Set the doors back flush with the back of the ticket office so that they will not project beyond the building when open.

THE QUESTION:

PLEASE FIND attached a crude drawing of the theatre front that I now have. You cannot tell it is a theatre unless you know that one is there. The writer's thought is to put my box office on the exterior instead of in the lobby. My lobby is 6 feet long and extends the width of the theatre, 25 feet. Seating capacity 406. Any suggestions that you may have to offer will be appreciated.—V. K.

THE ANSWER:

YOU MAY utilize the 18-foot space now occupied by two large panes of glass for a ticket booth with one double entrance door on each side; but in this case the depth of the lobby will have to be increased at least 4 feet, unless it is possible to project the ticket booth beyond the surface of the building.

The single doors may be converted into poster frames. Cover the wall spaces now used for shadow boxes, with Formica, structural glass or porcelain enamel. This change will produce quite a modern front, provided it is properly designed.

THE QUESTION:

AS I AM planning on a connection with some small theatre I will appreciate some information from you in regard to the erection and arrangements of same, along lines which are as follows:

Arrangements of seats, pitch of floor, floor space required, best size for building, best size for lobby, best size for stage, height of ceiling, size of booth.

Building should accommodate from four to six hundred seats. In one town the size of lot which can be had is 30x120, or 60x120. In another town the size of lot is 40 feet by any depth needed, or another lot can be had that will accommodate any size of building desired.—D. C. C.

THE ANSWER:

I WILL answer your questions in the following order, as they appear in your inquiry.

Arrangement of Seats: For a theatre 30 feet wide, a center bank of thirteen 20-inch seats across with wall aisle on each side. For a 60-foot theatre, a center bank of fourteen 20-inch seats across with aisle on each side, and two wall banks each of seven 20-inch seats across.

Pitch of Floor: First 20 feet from curtain line to be level; from there, divide floor depth into sections of six rows. The minimum slope of floor for first section, 10 inches, next section 14 inches, next section 18 inches, and so on, increasing slope for each section by 4 inches.

Floor space required: For a 400-seat theatre, the auditorium floor space should be 30x90 feet—this is for one center bank without wall banks; for a 600-seat theatre, 56x70 feet—this is for a center section of fourteen seats and two wall sections of seven seats each.

Best size for building: For a 400-seat theatre, 32x125 feet. For a 600-seat theatre, 58x115 feet.

Best size for lobby: For a 400-seat theatre, 12x15 feet minimum. For a 600-seat theatre, 12x18 feet minimum. These dimensions include location of ticket office between entrance doors.

Best size for stage: This depends entirely upon the requirements for stage shows. For pictures alone, the depth does not have to exceed 12 feet. For acts, such as vaudeville, a minimum depth of 20 feet; for productions, a minimum depth of 30 feet. Make proscenium arch as wide as possible, after allowing space for exits and curtain space.

Height of ceiling: For a one-floor theatre, the ceiling heights at the high point of auditorium floor should not be less than 18 feet.

Size of booth: The minimum dimensions for a projection room are 10x20 feet, but plan it as large as possible so provisions can be made for generator room and toilet.

Causes of Theatre Accidents and How to Avoid Many of Them

are dangerous. One struck a pedestrian. Another poorly located door was on steps which changed pace at the door. There is a definite hazard resulting from placing advertising pictures on the back side of doors. This possibly led indirectly to a death in one case. In another instance a man watching a picture on a door suffered severe injury when it was suddenly opened. These things constitute distinct traps.

Where exit doors are at the rear, sometimes back of a dark stage, a white stripe painted on the floor leading to the exit prevents accidents.

A loge steel supporting post, a sharp bolt on a seat, a fan, a stoop at a drinking fountain, a make-up shelf breaking, a smooth brass strip holding the carpet to a step, plaster from the ceiling, a glass rod at a drinking fountain—these caused accidents in Fox Midwest theatres and all cost money—some of them a lot of money.

EMPLOYE NEGLIGENCE; PATRON MISCONDUCT

THE CAUSES OF other accidents noted may be classified as: (1) negligence of employes in their duties, and (2) misconduct of patrons.

Inattention or careless acts of employes are inexcusable. An increasing number of plantiffs' attorneys are alleging this cause in their actions at law, which is reflected in claim costs. They are difficult cases to combat. For instance, an usher turned out his flashlight and departed before persons were seated, leaving them to find their own way. The neglectful usher is worse than none because he gives a false sense of security. Ushers should be instructed to remain until the patrons are in their seats. A large portion of this type of accident, the record shows, occur while persons are seating themselves without usher guidance.

In another instance a can was allowed to remain on a balcony rail where it had been hung by a patron. It fell to the main floor and injured a patron.

ROWDYISM

Theatres are required to control crowds. Although rowdyism is not as costly as in the past, frequency of losses hasn't abated. The duty of the assured legally extends beyond that of using ordinary care to see that the theatre premises are free from physical defects, particularly when children are involved.

STRUCTURAL CONDITIONS

PATRONS MAY trip or fall over irregularities which they have passed over safely many times before. Paths for patrons should be constructed so as to be passed automatically. No hazards which require mental concentration should be allowed to exist. Hidden steps, rear seat platforms, irregular steps to loges, monumental stairways, other stairways, and optical illusions each caused from 22 to 125 accidents in Fox Midwest theatres.

Hidden steps—those which descend behind drapes or doors in unexpected places—by court decision are considered negligence if illumination is judged insufficient. In one such case alone, 56 law citations were given pertaining to this type of accident. A door opening inward to a theatre office, tempting one to enter without looking, causes accidents, even though there be signs and lights. Lock the door and use another entrance if possible.

In 20 theatres falls have occurred when it was necessary to enter and leave a rear main floor seat by descending or ascending steps. All accidents occur while descending. Frequency of accidents are high considering the small exposure. Generally the seats are about 6 inches above the aisle, and the raise looks like an uncarpeted border and not a step at all, though this is not commonly true of newer theatres.

LOGE SECTIONS

In balcony loge aisles, theatres have exceptionally high accident frequency in a relatively small section of the entire theatre. The price differential of loges thus goes to pay losses! A typical loge section has a staggered stair—three narrow steps followed by a broad step. The lighting usually is dimmer than in other sections. Falls occur when entering these sections. This type of construction frequently is alleged as the cause of action by the plaintiff. Aisle lights in this section usually are at every third row, with no lights adjacent to the intermediate landings. Lights should cover these landings. Lights of course will not eliminate, but they will reduce, the number of accidents here.

BALCONIES

Sixteen theatres with irregular type balcony aisle construction (one wide and two narrow steps) make up only 4.2% of the number of a certain group of theatres, but they are responsible for 53% of all the balcony aisle accidents reported by the group. Balcony aisles should be of regular step construction. It is advisable to widen the narrow steps of existing installations to give the same result. Accident reports frequently state that the patron caught herself on the handrail, or was prevented from falling down the entire flight of stairs because of the handrail. Many accidents can be prevented, and 75% of all stairway accidents have been rendered less serious by the handrail. Two rails should be installed on staircases.—KENNETH FORCE.

National Theatre Supply Co.
2112 Payne Avenue
Cleveland, Ohio

Gentlemen:

I am writing this letter to express my feelings regarding the installation of your new Simplex Acme sound projectors, with your new amplifier system.

This is the first time since this theatre was built, that I have actually had persons come up to me, and tell me how wonderful the sound is, and how well lighted the picture is. I, too, must say, that I am more than satisfied, and that this equipment has performed better than any equipment I have ever owned. It is indeed, very hard to find words to say how thankful I am that I purchased this equipment.

Very truly yours,

MT. PLEASANT THEATRE

Two famous names joined...giving Warner patrons RCA High Fidelity Sound!

WARNER BROS. COMPLETES PERFECT SOUND REPRODUCTION CHAIN . . . GETS NEW RCA CELLULAR SPEAKERS!

Besides installing RCA Photophone equipment in all its Chicago Theatres, Warner Brothers has also added the link that completes the chain of perfect sound reproduction. New RCA Cellular Speakers have been installed! These are the first speakers to evenly distribute all higher frequencies throughout a theatre. They have greater power capacity and provide undistorted reproduction of all notes—from lowest to highest. They require less room backstage.

RCA Photophone, the only motion picture sound apparatus offering the Rotary Stabilizer in every unit, is chosen for all Warner Brothers Theatres in Chicago!

THE sensational swing to RCA Photophone continues! And the newest member of this big parade is the pioneer of motion picture sound—Warner Brothers. The entire group of Warner Brothers houses in the large Chicago area is now included in the rapidly increasing number of motion picture exhibitors to select this superior equipment.

Offering progressive theatre owners 7 great proofs of its superiority, RCA Photophone is available at very moderate cost to houses of every size. It stands alone as a big profit builder. Let it build box office profits for YOU!

RCA presents Metropolitan Opera beginning Thurs. Dec. 24 and Sat. afternoons thereafter. Also "The Magic Key of RCA" Sundays 2 to 3 P. M., E. S. T. Both via NBC Blue Network.

CAVALCADE 1936

NO matter what may be the immediate outcome of today's gestative opportunist fevers in Hollywood about what and how and if anything is to be done about the great British story, certain it is that Edward VIII has cast himself in the amber of romantic tradition and the title role of many a screen story to come, sometime.

Regardless of the abrupt dismissal of the hasty script entitled "I Gave My Wife to the King" by the Hollywood office of the American industry's trade association, it is inevitable that in some guise and fashion the screen will take cognizance of, make box office material of, this "the story that has everything."

The less that picture and its successors partake of the press phrase of "l'affaire Simpson" and the more it sees the larger story the better.

And while sympathy inevitably pertains to individuals, the human participant in every play of great forces, in this amazing drama, fair perspective must see, too, the cause of empire, the unwritten articles of faith of a great people, crystalized in the convictions of their leaders. The saner England will be found to see David Windsor, the man, and Edward VIII, King and Emperor, in different lights, facing very different responsibilities.

MEANWHILE if it is to be admitted that there were perils of policy in such relatively remote matters as "Forty Days of Musa Dagh" or such adjacent material as "It Can't Happen Here," for the international interests of the cinema, what must be calculated of the risks and problems that torture today's story conferences in Hollywood?

Probably not even an approximation can be contemplated or achieved now, but there is inherent, in the history made last week, a mighty sequel to the incomparable "Cavalcade." Mr. Baldwin is Victoria's vicar on earth moving in this twilight of the kings.

By sacrifice and a certain humility, Edward VIII has ordained for himself greatness among the proud Kings of England, Emperors of Britain. In plain truth it seems he would rather be a man than a personified reliquary, a walking reminiscence of that which lies in the dreamless sleep of Westminster.

Presently it may be discovered that Edward VIII quit being the King of England because he was not. And that will be the greater story, the twentieth century contrast with the kingship of Henry VIII, who, to borrow a title from Mr. Wells, was "A King Who Was a King."

MEANWHILE to our contemporary medium, perhaps art, of the radio has come an hour of the great drama of the world—Edward VIII, standing by his mother and brother, telling the world—one man standing there before a microphone to drain a flagon of political hemlock in which was dissolved the crown of the greatest empire of earth.

The cause of romance, the eternal authority of love of man for woman, is here asserted in terms for which history finds no parallel. To half the human race, to all of womankind, this will ever have a meaning beyond the interpretation of words.

To the few, the very few however, the great significant words of Edward VIII's farewell will always be his opening sentence:

"At last I am able to say a few words of my own."

He had to give up a kingdom for exactly that—which is too abstract to photograph.

THE STERLING IDEA

THE sturdy but not flamboyant announcements of plan and program from Mr. Ray Johnston and his Sterling Pictures Corporation convey pleasantly reassuring affirmation of the inherent vigour of this industrious industry. The structure taking the form in Sterling is a basic pattern on which some of the motion picture's most conspicuous successes have been erected. Examination of the array of material listed for Sterling also discovers an indication of a definite address to a definite box office stratum of large mass buying power. There is perhaps here an inkling of the budding evolution of production policy in something akin to the terms that publishers of the printed word address themselves to a certain public, or a certain category of public tastes. For many a year a lack of such policy of address has been a conspicuous negative factor of motion picture production and distribution.

RADIO CAN HAVE 'EM

WITH a certain unholy glee we can discover that Radio is in for some of the annoyances that have beset the screen these many years, as evidenced by the declaration of Professor Kenneth G. Bartlett at Syracuse University that radio scripts offer the big, new and uncrowded opportunity for novice writers. Radio will now get a big mail and some lovely material that the motion picture can well spare.

This Week

36,000 Playdates

Large circuits of the country have completed their product buying for the 1936-37 season. Several factors have combined to extend the season to a later date than usual this year. A survey conducted early in October showed that 95 circuits had signed 346 franchises at that time and in the intervening two months the number of product deals completed by the same circuits has more than doubled. At the conclusion of the season sales managers for the large distributors report that their total sales are from 20 to 30 per cent better, on the average, than last year.

A story on the purchases is on page 13 and a table showing the product contracted for by the circuit starts on page 14.

First Conciliation Board

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois met at the Coronado hotel in St. Louis last week and reelected president Fred Wehrenberg and all other officers. The convention was addressed by Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and by Charles C. Pettijohn of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. The first local conciliation board, in line with Mr. Kuykendall's 10-point fair trade practice program, also was tentatively organized.

Details of the convention and the speeches are found on page 16.

WPA Theatre Protests

Theatrical unions and recently formed WPA workers organizations are strongly protesting the dismissal of workers for participation in sit-down strikes in the Federal Theatre and other projects in spite of announcements from Washington that scheduled cuts in the WPA rolls are to be greatly modified. A meeting of protesting workers and sympathizers in New York last week led to a near-riot.

The story is on page 50.

Lottie Pickford Dies

Lottie Pickford, sister of Mary Pickford, and at one time prominent on screen and stage in her own right, died at her home in Hollywood this week following a heart attack. She had been inactive in pictures for many years, as the wife of John Locke, character actor. She was a stage player with her sister when they both were children, graduating to pictures with her under Paramount, for whom she played her last important role in "The Diamond in the Sky" in the early 1920's.

French Confederation

Although the General Confederation of the French Cinema was formed recently in Paris, not all the important branches of the industry have yet joined. It is expected they will shortly, however, for agreements are now being drawn up between the Confederation group and the few remaining members of Charles Delac's former Syndical Chamber.

Ostrers and Schencks

Half of the 49 per cent interest held by 20th Century-Fox in Metropolis and Bradford Trust, holding company for Gaumont British, has been purchased by Loew's, it has been announced by Nicholas M. Schenck and Louis B. Mayer. The sale, pending since July 20th, was at that time announced as the first step in the plan for a triple ownership of GB by the Schenck brothers and the Ostrer brothers, a plan which has since been abrogated. No decision was reached at conferences held by Isidore and Maurice Ostrer, Joseph and Nicholas Schenck and Sidney R. Kent in Hollywood last week.

Developments in the situation are on page 30.

Bank Night and Bingo

The second legal blow to be dealt Bank Night and chance games in general, which may be expected to set a precedent, came this week from the Kansas supreme court which ruled that Bank Night constitutes a lottery within the meaning of the state's anti-lottery law. Two other court decisions, in Louisiana and Denver, adversely affected the giveaway practice. Bingo, achieving great popularity in certain parts of the country, is worrying exhibitors as a new source of competition.

These and other reports on chance games are on page 17.

Sunday Laws

Legislation concerning the showing of motion pictures on Sundays developed in four communities this week, while taxes were the chief concern of exhibitors in other territories. In New York, Syracuse is considering a "curfew" to prevent unaccompanied minors remaining in theatres after nine o'clock, and New York City aldermen still are trying to block the erection of theatres in the Park and Madison avenue district.

Details are found on page 34.

Up to the Congress

The future of industrial control will be left in the lap of Congress, it was indicated last week when the National Council for Industrial Progress, meeting in Washington, urged the enactment of legislation prohibiting unfair competition either in trade practices or by the maintenance of unjust wage or hour standards or by monopolistic efforts. Business men and industrialists on the whole refused to attend the conference or did so only as observers. A motion picture conference, scheduled by Major George L. Berry, Administration coordinator, to precede the meeting was cancelled.

The complete story of the conference is reviewed on page 76.

Orpheum Circuit's Claim

Developments in the RKO reorganization this week were featured by the possibility of a settlement of the complex claim of Orpheum Circuit against the corporation and its subsidiary companies. The settlement was proposed in a petition drawn up by the Irving Trust Company and presented to the courts and would entail the payment of some $700,000 in cash for the abandonment of all cases by Orpheum against RKO.

This and other developments in the reorganization proceedings are on page 32.

Company Control

Control of the Keller-Dorian Color Film Corporation is to pass to a group of British and French figures, it was revealed in New York this week by George Quigley, attorney, who is acting as the fiscal agent for those purchasing control through the 350,000 shares of stock now owned by William Celestin and Henry Colgate.

See page 60.

Vice-Presidents

Al Lichtman and Sam Katz, long connected with Loew's, Inc., apparently without official title, were named vice-presidents of the corporation some time ago, it was officially learned in New York recently following the annual meeting of the corporation's stockholders when they were reelected officers of the organization. The corporation now has seven vice-presidents, instead of four as last year.

See the story on page 30.

Score Charge Retained

Reconsideration by 20th Century-Fox of its reply to the trade practice program proposed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is impossible, John D. Clark, sales chief, said this week.

The company, in its reply to the proposal, refused to discontinue score charges and consented to grant a ten per cent cancellation privilege only when an exhibitor buys all the product offered at one time. Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, had asked the company to reconsider its stand on score charges and to grant the cancellation privilege under more liberal conditions.

Taboo as Film Theme

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America will not approve of the production of any motion picture based on the recent British crisis over the friendship of former King Edward VIII and Mrs. Wallis Simpson, according to word received in New York from Hollywood Wednesday.

Exhibitor Meetings

Exhibitor groups in several cities in the east are planning meetings and elections next month. The sessions include the annual meeting and election of officers of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors to be held in Washington.

The meetings are listed on page 18, and the decisions of the convention at Oklahoma City this week are recorded on page 16.

Silver Jubilee

Preparations and developments in the plans for the celebration by Paramount of the Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee, marking Mr. Zukor's 25 years in the film industry include the printing of an exploitation manual for theatre managers and the presentation of a collection of still photographs showing the development of motion pictures since 1912, to the Harvard College Library.

The story is on page 32.

Attack Sales Policies

New York Independent Theatre Owners Association on Wednesday joined the Independent Theatre Owners of Philadelphia in its fight against socalled "obnoxious sales policies of major distributors."

The New York group will call a mass meeting to be attended by 50 theatre owners from Philadelphia and other Eastern exhibitor organizations to decide on the action to be taken. Philadelphia exhibitors have been talking of "boycotts."

Individual Profits

Profits of individuals engaged in the amusement industry, and the motion picture in particular, for the year 1934 were revealed by the Internal Revenue Bureau in Washington this week. The total profits of some 773 individuals amounted to $6,145,519, as compared with 413 individuals reporting $4,146,964 in 1933. At the same time, 170 individuals reported losses, as compared to 155 persons the year before.

Highlights of the bureau's report are found on page 48.

Hungarian Restrictions

Hungarian producing companies, with their decision to increase their output, have challenged American distributors to limit their imports to product of only the highest production standards. At the same time, American concerns will benefit from the lower charge for permits.

Details of the situation in Hungary as it affects American product appear on page 33.

Illegal Exhibition Reduced

Distributors in six years have reduced illegal exhibitions of films by some 35 per cent, their Copyright Protection Bureau cutting "bicycling" and unauthorized exhibitions from 44 per cent in 1930 to 9 per cent in 1936.

The Bureau's annual report on unlawful exhibitions, both theatrically and non-theatrically, appears on page 32.

Fight Moyne Report

Evidence is piling up in England that exhibitors and distributors will cooperate in opposition to the socalled Moyne Report, calling for an official Film Commission to supervise the industry, a variable quota rising to 50 per cent in 10 years, and the establishment of a quality test for British films.

Further details on page 49.

Manchukuo Film Control

A national film company to control all branches of the industry is being organized in Manchukuo, half of the capital of five million yen to come from the state, the other half from the South Manchuria Railway. The Kwantung Army will enforce the decisions of the Eiga Kyokai, or Cinema Association of Manchukuo.

These and other Japanese film developments are recorded on page 80.

Studios Stepped Up

Studio activity was stepped up for a net gain of five pictures in work during a week which saw twelve productions started as seven were taken to the cutting room.

Titles and personnel of pictures started and finished are given on page 27.

Bell Monopoly Charged

Charges that the Bell telephone system has a virtual monopoly in the provision of wire channels to radio stations and chains were made Tuesday by the Federal Communications Commission as it delved into the radio policies and practices of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in its investigation now being conducted in Washington.

N. R. Danniellian, commission economist, began reading a 300-page report on the subject, going back to the early '20's. In 1926 a contract was made with RCA providing for an exchange of patent licenses, the telephone company to sell its interest in radio and receive an exclusive service contract from RCA. The telephone company, the report charged, then developed its long line monopoly.

This Week in Pictures

Expansion of Double Feature Policy Is Indicated in Contracts for Product of Seven Companies; Business Gains

A table showing what product 97 of the larger circuits of the country have contracted to show this season starts on page 14. The deals, except in a few indicated instances, are for the entire product of the companies listed, only this type of contract having been considered for purposes of the survey. The circuits listed represent 3,700 theatres, about 25 per cent of the total number in the country. Distributors whose sales are covered in the study are Columbia, Gaumont British, Grand National, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, RKO Radio, Republic, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal, and Warner Brothers.

Ninety-seven circuits, representing the most important buyers of the product of 11 large distributors, have signed 702 franchises covering approximately 36,000 playdates for the 1936-37 product, a survey conducted by MOTION PICTURE HERALD discloses. The circuits covered in the canvass include 3,700 theatres, only 25 per cent of the country's total but because of their buying power the primary goals of the distributor sales forces. The independent and subsequent-run exhibitors are signed only after the first-run deals are concluded.

The season, virtually ended as far as circuit buying is concerned, in general has shown improvement over last year in spite of increased production schedules. Although definite figures were not available, sales managers said that an average of from 20 to 30 per cent more accounts was being sold this year than last. These estimates were based on the contracts signed to date and expectations of the results from the independent and subsequent-run fields on which salesmen now are concentrating.

Continuation and expansion of the double feature policy in most sections is indicated by the fact that nearly all the circuits surveyed have contracted for the product of seven or more companies. All but four of the large distributors have eliminated double featuring restrictions from their 1936-37 contracts and, inasmuch as three of these — Paramount, Warner Brothers, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer — are on a double feature policy in most of their affiliated theatres, it is evidenced that no serious effort to enforce the clause will be made by these companies.

The product of the 11 distributors totals 566 features, divided as follows: Columbia, 58; Gaumont British, 24; Grand National, 52; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, 48; Paramount, 78; RKO Radio, 54; Republic, 52; 20th Century-Fox; 69; United Artists, 29; Universal, 42, and Warner Brothers, 60.

Season Delayed

Several factors combined to slow up buying this season and account for the late conclusion of deals with the larger circuits, which usually are completed by early fall. A survey of the same circuits included in the present study, published in the issue of October 10th, showed only 346 contracts signed, less than half the total number now listed as concluded. The deals signed in the intervening two months include those for Grand National product, a new competitor in the distribution field, and many new ones signed by United Artists and Republic, normally late in their selling activity, but these were not sufficiently numerous to account for the difference.

The delay of sales was attributed chiefly to attempts by distributors to increase rentals or to extend the number of percentage pictures. These attempts were responsible for long delays, especially in the south and southwest territories, where distributors only recently completed their circuit deals. A dispute over clearance in Chicago, settled late in October, and minor issues in other territories, since ironed out for the most part, over sales policies of various companies, also contributed to extend the season to a later date than usual.

Exhibition sources report that all companies made strong efforts for increased terms, basing their demands on the greatly improved business conditions and the reasonable expectancy of better product from all companies. In addition to stepping up rentals everywhere, the distributors were reported to be pressing for more percentage deals, and where these were sought, the guarantees were more strict and the percentage higher than in previous years. The demands were predicated on the showing made by pictures during the last year either on a flat rental or percentage basis.

Independent circuit operators have complained heatedly about the level of rentals demanded but they have signed for product on the new terms. The independents realize that major producer-distributors are getting higher rentals from their own theatres, but they are reported to have resented the use of this fact as a selling point by some distributors. Sales managers who are demanding more and higher percentage deals claim to see, through the spread of this policy, the solution for the problems engendered by unreasonably low admissions and, in some instances, unnecessary double featuring.

Circuit Deals Concluded

With these difficulties and delays met and overcome, exchange executives and sales managers of the distributing companies now report that the major circuit buying has been completed except in a very few scattered instances. Sales chiefs of the companies this month have made their final field trips to conclude circuit deals and are preparing to concentrate on the sales of individual accounts and subsequent runs after the Christmas holidays.

In spite of the late season, these reports also indicate that the total number of accounts sold by most of the distributors is substantially greater than last year, and predictions are that new highs will be reached when the accounts are closed for the season.

Revisions of the sales policies of the major distributors in accordance with the ten point trade practice program drawn up by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America was the outstanding feature of the season. Important points in the program have been conceded by three companies, Universal, Twentieth Century-Fox and United Artists and similar acceptance by the other distributors is expected within the next month.

Conciliation Boards Planned

Cooperation in establishment of local conciliation boards, through which exhibitors hope that other trade practice reforms can be effected and disputes arising from sales policies amicably settled, was promised by the three companies, and further conferences to determine the rules and procedure under which such boards will operate are scheduled to be held in New York in January. Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA has called a meeting of his trade practice committee for that purpose.

All three companies agreed with the justice of most of the other points in the MPTOA program and offered to cooperate in working out plans for their establishment, but noted that in some cases legal obstacles will have to be overcome. The points include the creation of fair and reasonable uniform clearance and zoning; elimination of unfair overbuying that reduces the product supply of a competitive owner; abolition of cut rate competition in the form of premiums, giveaways, lotteries, contests and unreasonably low admission prices; control of non-theatrical exhibitions; creation of a standard form of exhibition contract reduced to essentials in language and text; discontinuance of arbitrarily designated play dates, and elimination of the practice of forcing short subjects with features.

PRODUCT BOUGHT BY LARGE CIRCUITS

The following table shows the product purchased by the larger circuits of the country, long term franchise deals being indicated where such information is available. Many circuits affiliated with distributors have long term franchise contracts, but under arrangements which provide for negotiation each year, the contracts thus amounting to continuing options. Under such deals both parties are obliged to confer annually on rentals. This type of contract is especially true of Paramount with its circuit partnerships. Several major distributors, as a matter of policy, refuse information on long term franchise deals, particularly with their affiliated circuits. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, RKO Radio, Warner Brothers and 20th Century-Fox product will be played by these companies' affiliated circuits but terms of the contracts are withheld. Similarly Columbia and Universal are officially silent on long term franchises.

EXHIBITORS ASK FIRST TRADE PRACTICE BOARD

Convention at St. Louis Projects Local Arbitration Plan; Also Hears Pettijohn, Kuykendall

Responding to the plea of Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to protect their industry from outside "meddling" and governmental regulation, the annual meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois at the Coronado hotel in St. Louis last weekend went on record as unanimously approving Mr. Kuykendall's 10-point fair trade practice program.

The organization also petitioned distributors to establish a local conciliation board there to settle any trade differences that may arise between owners and exchanges. This board, the first of its kind in the country under the new arrangement, will be composed of three exhibitors and three representatives of the distributors. The six will elect the seventh member, and this impartial man or woman will serve as the chairman.

The meeting, presided over by Fred Wehrenberg, was perhaps the largest and most representative in the 15 years that the organization has been functioning. At the conclusion of the gatherings, all officers were reelected as follows: Mr. Wehrenberg, president; vice-presidents, S. N. Pirtle, Jerseyville, Ill.; I. W. Rodgers, Cairo, Ill.; J. C. Hewitt, Robinson, Ill., and A. M. Beare, Chester, Ill.; secretary-treasurer, Louis C. Hehl, St. Louis, and sergeant-at-arms, W. W. Kieselhorst, Clayton, Mo.

Two changes were made in the board of directors, Clarence Kaimann and Harry C. Arthur, Jr., succeeding Mr. Hewitt and Oscar C. Lehr, who is no longer in the industry. Others on the boards are: Louis J. Menges, East St. Louis, Ill.; Mr. Rodgers, Harry N. Miller, Festus, Mo.; Victor B. Thien, Chester, Ill., and Louis K. Ansell, Charles Goldman, Harold W. Evans, David L. Nelson, Frank Speros, Bess Schulter and Mr. Wehrenberg, all of St. Louis.

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., gave his first address before an exhibitor convention since 1929. It was his initial appearance in public since his illness.

Kuykendall Cites Opportunities

Mr. Kuykendall said that he knew of no business that had made more "successes out of dumbbells than the motion picture industry," and he took issue with those who contend that there no longer is an opportunity for an individual to make a success as an exhibitor.

However, he emphasized the interdependence of those in the film business, saying that in a strict interpretation of the word there is no such thing as "an independent theatre owner."

At this point, Mr. Kuykendall paid tribute to the work of the Better Films Councils of the country and especially to the women present who represented the Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis, the first of its kind in the country, an organization "that has led the fight to save the industry from the meddlesome interference of the professional reformers who, with the defeat of national prohibition, had turned to the motion picture business as a fertile field to exploit their reforms at so much per year.

Any theatre owners who refuse to cooperate with their local Better Films Council, he said, are not worthy to represent the business as an exhibitor of pictures.

It is increasingly difficult, he continued, to operate a theatre profitably because of discriminatory taxation and other unfair burdens placed upon the industry by public officials who do not have a proper understanding of the problems. He said that while the responsible men in the industry are willing to pay their pro-rata share of the cost of good government they are opposed to being discriminated against in excessive special taxes and unfair regulatory laws.

Touching upon the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers and the operations of the copyright as imposed by the organization, he said that all exhibitors should get behind the Duffy Bill which, he said, was prepared by the State Department and has the united support of the three greatest users of music, the radio broadcasters, the theatres and the hotels. He added that while this bill does not give the exhibitors all that they want, it is a step in the right direction.

Mr. Kuykendall urged the members present to join others in attending the national convention of the MPTOA to be held in Miami, Fla,. in March, 1937.

Pettijohn Attacks Chance Games

Mr. Pettijohn opposed on chance games as box-office stimulants and expressed the hope that the St. Louis exhibitors would steer clear of them, for soon churches, legion organizations and various fraternal groups will take them out and the final results would be that theatre crowds would dwindle. He said that the system is a "hot potato" and emphasized that exhibitors are essentially in the business of giving wholesome entertainment and they should stay away from "filth" on the screen and various "gambling" devices to boost business.

He deplored the fact there is not more good straight program feature production, saying that the double feature policy has encouraged big producers to make "cheap" pictures to run with their Class "A" product on double bills to prevent other makers of such pictures from "cashing in on the popularity of outstanding productions."

Cancellations and "Morals"

Mr. Pettijohn commented that exhibitors are falsely tying the moral issue to the cancellation clause when they "intend to use this privilege to drop non-profitable pictures of good moral quality." President Wehrenberg disagreed with this contention, saying it is no longer true, but Mr. Kuykendall said there has been a lot of camouflage with the moral issue and that some exhibitors have built up a false situation. He pointed out that this was especially true in the support for the Pettengill Bill on the "false" issue that it would better the moral standards of motion pictures. However, in St. Louis there is close cooperation between the theatres and the various women organizations, community support being created for high quality pictures that have proved box-office failures in other territories. This was cited to reconcile the divergent views of Mr. Wehrenberg and Mr. Kuykendall regarding the point raised by Mr. Pettijohn.

Others who were heard briefly included: David Palfreyman, exhibitor contact for the MPPDA; Mr. Arthur, vice-president and general manager for Fanchon and Marco; Building Commissioner Welsch of St. Louis, women officers of the Better Films Council and of the Child's Conservation Conference.

Taxes Studied at Exhibitor Session In Oklahoma City

The threat of adverse legislation, the attraction of balmy weather and improved business conditions combined to more than double this year's attendance at the annual convention of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma at Oklahoma City Monday and Tuesday at the Biltmore Hotel. The registration figures showed a total of 170 present, the highest figure in years.

Legislation vitally affecting exhibitors is expected when the state legislature convenes in January, it was pointed out, with sales tax measures prominent on the list of bills almost certain to pass.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, spoke on the 10-point fair trade practice program and urged exhibitors not to fight civic groups but to seek closer relations with them and to open theatres to community benefits. The people who make up these civic groups, said Mr. Kuykendall, are of a high type and while their schemes may cost exhibitors money at times, the exhibitor will be amply repaid for his cooperation through the good will and understanding established.

It was also brought out at the meeting that theatres are losing child patronage because of the sophistication of product. Delegates were urged to plan suitable programs for children.

David Palfreyman, exhibitor contact for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., explained the workings of the conciliation boards sponsored by the MPTOA, which will begin January 1. He said that the boards will have no authority to make decisions, but will seek only to bring about mutual agreement between the parties concerned and that contractual matters will not be handled. Rather, the boards will give their attention to over-buying of product, settling of clearance disputes between prior and subsequent runs and designation of playdates for pictures unsuited for Sunday exhibition. While the exact procedure has not been determined, Mr. Palfreyman said, the work of the boards will need the cooperation of all to be successful.

M. A. Lightman, president of Tri-States Theatres of Memphis, and past president of the MPTOA, attacked the policy of selling double feature pictures at retail prices, only to have a block of pictures at wholesale prices handed the exhibitor later.

Morris Lowenstein, operator of the Majestic in Oklahoma City and secretary of the MPTOA was elected to serve his third term as president of the organization. He was also presented with a gold watch.

Leonard White of Weatherford was named vice-president and O. E. Enloe of El Reno, secretary. All directors were reelected by acclamation. Fred B. Pickrell of Ponca City was chosen as a new director for the northeast district. The others are: L. C. Griffith of Oklahoma City for the metropolitan section with J. C. Hunter of Tulsa as an alternate; Max Brock of Lawton, southwestern section; Homer Jones of Alva, northwestern district, and Harry Lowenstein of Ardmore, southeastern.

KANSAS AND LOUISIANA COURTS DECLARE BANK NIGHTS ILLEGAL

Chicago Attorney Seeks Injunction to Bar Chance Game from Balaban & Katz Theatre on Lottery Charge

Bank Night and other forms of chance games, after a serious setback by a federal court in Denver, which ruled that Bank Night is so closely akin to a lottery that it is not entitled to protection under the copyright law, this week was declared illegal by courts in Kansas and Louisiana. Another development was the increasing competition of Bingo, another chance game, in charity and church activities.

Court rulings and developments in relation to chance games which made news this week were:

The Kansas supreme court ruled that Bank Night constitutes a lottery within the meaning of the state's anti-lottery statute.

A Chicago attorney is seeking an injunction restraining Balaban & Katz from conducting prize nights at one of their theatres, alleging that the games are lotteries.

A Louisiana theatre operating company lost a suit brought by a patron when the state court of appeals ruled that chance games are illegal.

Four theatre managers in Denver were fined $50 each for violation of the city lottery ordinance.

The increasing popularity of Bingo, a chance game with cash prizes, usually played at charity bazaars and church fairs but now spreading to taverns and roadhouses, is affecting theatre business, according to exhibitors in Connecticut and Ohio.

The second court blow in two weeks to affect Bank Night was struck in the Kansas Supreme court when it decided that the game constitutes a lottery. The decision was handed down in the case of a mandamus suit brought against Fox-Kansas Theatre Company, a Fox Midwest subsidiary, and was written by Justice William E. Hutchinson.

"Prize, chance and consideration," the three elements considered essential to a lottery by the courts, were held by the Kansas justice to be present in Bank Night. There is involved in the game, the opinion said, "consideration sufficient to make it a policy or scheme of drawing in the nature of a lottery as prohibited . . . by the Kansas constitution."

Attorneys for Fox-Kansas said they would contest the decision.

Editorial Upholds Ruling

Commenting editorially on the decision the Kansas City Journal Post said:

"In holding that 'bank nights' are lotteries and therefore illegal in this state, the Kansas supreme court did no more than make an obvious statement of fact. Everyone knows that these schemes are lotteries. The only way to legalize them is to repeal the law forbidding them.

"Some states have forbidden these drawings.

"'Bank nights' were instituted to draw patronage but better entertainment is the proper solution of the theatre owners' problem. Really good movies drew profitable crowds in the depths of the depression.

TRUANCY BLAMED UPON BANK NIGHT

Bank Night and proxy afternoon are seriously affecting the work of the public schools in Beloit, Wis., on Fridays, according to a report by Superintendent of Schools D. F. R. Rice to the city board of education.

Mr. Rice charged that parents are sending their children to the theatres to register for them and that as a result the schools have had an increasing number of absences every Friday afternoon.

District Attorney John H. Matheson has warned Rock County exhibitors to discontinue Bank Nights and similar games.

In Chicago, suit was filed by Thomas J. McCormick in superior court asking an injunction to restrain Balaban and Katz from conducting prize nights at its Will Rogers theatre. The suit alleged that the games were a violation of the state and city lottery laws. The attorney further charged that they were dangerous to the morals of his four children.

The moves of the Better Business Bureau to eliminate prize games from Chicago's theatres are temporarily at a standstill as the organization awaits a reply from Mayor John Kelly to its demand for action in the matter.

Chance games offered by theatres as an attendance inducement are illegal, according to a decision of Judge W. W. Westerfield of the Louisiana court of appeals. The ruling was the result of a suit filed by Charles G. Schanchell on behalf of his minor son, Joseph, against the Lewis Amusement Company, operator of the Florito, New Orleans.

The suit charged that the boy was refused admission to the theatre during Bank Night drawings but that his name was drawn as winner of $105. The plaintiff demanded that the theatre be compelled to pay the boy $105 since the management excluded him from winning. The court ruled that Bank Night is based on a gambling contract. The decision said, in part:

"There is no difference in principle between a chance in Sweepstakes Night or Bank Night to each purchaser of a ticket of admission to a theatre, as is done, and granting the privilege to a customer of a cigar store to participate in a punchboard scheme."

Exchange men in New Orleans were noncommittal on the decision. Henry Lazarus, operator of the Center and Coliseum, said that the ruling might mean ruin to the small exhibitor.

Managers Fined

In Denver, scene of the federal court ruling last week which barred Bank Night from copyright protection, a fine of $50 was assessed against each of four theatre managers for violation of the city lottery ordinance by operating matinee registration for Bank Night. The police court judge held that because registration cards were given only to those purchasing tickets of admission the practice constituted a lottery. The managers hope to work out a plan for matinee registration that will conform with city laws.

Exhibitors Finding Competition in Bingo, Another Chance Game Spreading from Charity Bazaars to Roadhouses

The convicted managers were Dave Cockrill of the Denham, Harry Goodridge of the Ogen, Lou Williams of the Mayan and Roy Notheis of the Webber. The case may be appealed.

The decision is expected to end grocery night and similar games where only those who buy tickets have a chance at the prizes.

In spite of adverse decisions in some courts, the use of Bank Night and other games is reported still to be spreading rapidly. In New York, to combat the attendance slump which precedes Christmas, the RKO circuit has instituted Bank Night in 14 Brooklyn theatres, with $1,500 to be awarded on the night of December 22d to a patron of one of the theatres. Loew's has undertaken similar action and the Century circuit will offer a prize of $1,500 in its Brooklyn theatres and $1,000 in its Long Island houses.

Harry Goldstein, manager of the Shawmut theatre in Roxbury, Mass., has initiated "Rent Night." The patron holding the winning ticket gets his rent paid for a month.

Bingo Spreading

Exhibitors in Connecticut and Ohio are experiencing competition from the spread of Bingo games, which are said to be drawing patrons away from motion picture box offices. In New Haven, spread of the game from fraternal and social organizations to commercial establishments has been barred by Chief of Police Philip E. Smith. There has been a movement to extend the ban but action, it is believed, will depend on the fate of bills pending before the state legislature.

Bridgeport authorities have ordered cessation of the games before the first of the year, and those operating in taverns must stop immediately by order of Prosecuting Attorney D. Harold Cotter. Charitable organizations are planning to appeal to the legislature for permission to continue operation of the chance game.

The playing of Bingo on church-owned property in the Albany diocese is barred after December 31st under an order issued by the Rt. Rev. Edmund F. Gibbons, Roman Catholic bishop of Albany. Parishes are forbidden to sponsor Bingo on church property or to lease their property to outsiders for Bingo parties.

The order points out that while the game started as a harmless pastime it has grown to be an outright gambling venture for which Catholics who sponsor it cannot hope to escape censure.

Operators of motion picture theatres in the district claim that Bingo parties have constituted a serious competitor for several months.

Theatre attendance in the Cincinnati area is being affected by the use of bingo, wheels of fortune, raffles and similar activities, advertised to raise funds for charity, according to a member of the Greater Cincinnati Independent Exhibitors' Association.

Churches in Detroit using bingo, keno or similar games to promote Christmas activities will be subject to prosecution, Fred W. Frahm, superintendent of police has announced. Practically all cash giveaways have been stopped in theatres by police order.

PARAMOUNT PAYING $12; $2,000,000 WARNER NET

Dividends Also Declared by Technicolor, National Theatres and Famous Players Canadian

Paramount's declaration of a $12 first preferred stock dividend, and Warner Brothers' estimate of a $2,000,000 net profit for the third quarter, were the outstanding highlights of the week in motion picture financial news. Dividends also were declared by Technicolor, National Theatres and by Famous Players Canadian Corporation, the largest theatre circuit in the Dominion.

Paramount Arrears Cleared

At a meeting held December 10th, the board of directors of Paramount Pictures, Inc., declared not only an initial dividend of $12 a share on the first preferred, but also 60 cents a share on the second preferred stock. They are both payable December 26th, to first preferred stockholders of record at the close of business December 15th, and to second preferred stockholders of record at the close on December 17th. The $12 dividend cleared up all the arrears that had accumulated on that six per cent first preferred issue, while the 60-cent payment reduced the dividend arrears on that stock to 60 cents a share.

The dividends on the two issues will require distribution by Paramount of $3,386,000.

Although Paramount's plan of reorganization was approved by the federal court in New York in April, 1935, dividends were made cumulative on the first and second preferred issues from January 1, 1935. The payments now ordered on the first preferred represents two years' dividend requirements and on the second preferred one year's dividend requirements.

Warner Brothers Shows Gain

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and its subsidiaries showed a net profit of more than $2,000,000 for the quarter ended Nov. 28, 1936, Ivan Culbertson, Delaware attorney for the company, told approximately 100 stockholders in Wilmington Monday at the annual stockholders meeting. After being introduced by Robert W. Perkins, secretary, Mr. Culbertson took over the chairmanship.

The $2,000,000 figure compares with a profit of $1,031,315.96 for the corresponding period last year, and is after federal income tax and other expenses, but before the new undistributed profit tax.

In view of negotiations for refinancing and because the net covered a three-month period, Mr. Culbertson said there would be no dividend at this time. Several weeks ago the company announced a profit for the year ended August 29, last, of $3,177,312.73.

Directors reelected for two-year terms were Samuel Carlisle, Stanleigh P. Friedman, Charles S. Guggenheimer, Sam E. Morris and Morris S. Wolf. The board then met in New York Tuesday and reelected the following officers: Harry M. Warner, president; Albert Warner, Jack L. Warner, Sam E. Morris, Herman Starr and Stanleigh P. Friedman, vice-presidents; Albert Warner, treasurer; Samuel Carlisle, Stewart McDonald, Paul A. Chase, assistant treasurers; Robert W. Perkins, secretary and general counsel; Harold S. Bareford, Edward K. Hessberg, Cyril H. Wilder, Herbert Freston, assistant secretaries; Mr. Carlisle, comptroller; Thomas J. Martin, auditor.

Albert Warner presided Tuesday in the absence of Harry M. Warner, who is now on the coast for a lengthy stay.

A second dividend of 75 cents a share was declared this week by National Theatres, operating 400 theatres in the west and midwest. National, which is owned by Chase National Bank and Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, had declared a 75-cent dividend last October, and on the new declaration will disburse some $567,000.

Famous Players Canadian Corporation has declared a dividend of 60 cents a share on the common stock, payable December 22nd. It represents the first dividend payment to be made since April, 1935, when a 50-cent declaration was made.

Technicolor directors declared a 50-cent dividend to common share stockholders, also salary bonuses to employees.

Exhibitor Groups Schedule Meetings

Many exhibitor groups in the east are planning meetings and elections for next month.

The board of directors of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors will meet in Washington, D. C., in January to elect officers. Nathan Yamins, current president, has said that he hopes he will not be reelected. The board will discuss its legislative program and plans for its annual convention.

The Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina will observe their Silver Jubilee at the next convention for which no date has been set. The organization claims to be the oldest of its type in the country.

Leo F. Wolcott, president of the Iowa-Nebraska unit of Allied has announced that the annual meeting of the group will be held in Des Moines in January.

Under their new president, Morris Rosenberg, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania is planning a drive for new members. Every independent exhibitor in the territory will be contacted by a committee headed by Bennett Amdur, manager of the Garden, Pittsburgh.

Samuel Pinanski of M. & P. theatres, Boston, has been elected president of the Allied Theatres of Massachusetts. Other officers are John H. Devlin, vice-president; Stanley Sumner, treasurer; Joseph H. Brennan, secretary, and Charles W. Koerner, Max Mellincoff, M. J. Mullin, E. A. Cuddy, H. M. Addison, V. J. Morris, B. E. Hoffman, George E. French, John J. Ford, Al Somerby, James H. Doyle, John S. Giles, and George V. Brown, directors.

The Connecticut MPTO held its regular meeting in New Haven on Tuesday.

French Dual Bill Measure Threatens

by PIERRE AUTRE

in Paris

A definite threat to the distribution of American produced motion pictures in France is seen in a new law which has just been proposed by the French government, which it will bring to a vote in the Chamber of Deputies, and which provides that only one feature length picture may be shown on a theatre program. Almost all of the French theatres, with the exception of Paris first runs, use double features and would be affected by the measure.

The threat to American pictures lies in the fact that in a great many places dubbed American versions are used as supporting pictures on double bills, or two American films make up the dual program. The passage of such a measure is seen as curtailing American business in France by as much as 80 per cent, but it is not expected that the measure will be brought before the Chamber of Deputies for some time to come.

In view of the fact, especially, that such a decree would tend to contravene the recently enacted Franco-American trade treaty, strong opposition from American interests is certain to follow the attempt to enact such legislation.

It is understood that the government's plan, which would spur the production and exhibition of short subjects, includes a requirement that government-sponsored propaganda subjects be shown on each program.

Current political complications are seen as causing the delay in the introduction of the measure.

Despite the formation recently of the General Confederation of the French Cinema in Paris, all important branches of the industry have not as yet subscribed to the organization. By degrees, however, agreements are being concluded between the Confederation group and the few remaining members of Charles Delac's former Syndical Chamber, which some months ago became the Federation of the French Cinema, supposedly including none but French companies, and having no connection with the Confederation.

At a meeting last week, the Union of the French Film was formed as a unit of the Confederation, or major body, to represent the purely French interests of the industry. The syndicates of producers, distributors, newsreels and French exporters will be included in this most recent organization.

Warner Motion Is Denied

Judge Knox in the United States district court in New York Tuesday denied a motion by Warners to prevent Beckman Film Corporation from giving evidence at the trial of its injunction and damage suit against them for alleged infringement of Beekman's picture, "This Is America," in Warners' "The Yanks Are Coming." Warners, in its application, had declared the plaintiff had failed to furnish a bill of particulars as ordered by Judge Knox. Beekman has asked damages of $200,000.

Production Impetus

Coming into the stretch run of 1936, twelve productions were started during the past week and seven completed. The trend of work, both old and new, with one or two exceptions, is towards average attractions. It is noted that general activities of the past several weeks have been directed toward cleaning up the class B product on seasonal schedules.

Included in the new work is MGM's restarted "A Day at the Races." One of the films which suffered postponement due to reorganization subsequent to Irving Thalberg's death, it now goes to the post under the production guidance of Lawrence Weingarten. Starring the Marx Brothers, it will also present Allan Jones, Margaret Dumont, Esther Muir, and Maureen O'Sullivan. Sam Wood is directing. The studio also put "Dangerous Number," a drama, in the work. Robert Young and Ann Sothern are the leads supported by Reginald Owen, Cora Witherspoon and Barnett Parker. Richard Thorpe is the director.

Warners also started two pictures. "Marked Woman," a subject of more than usual topical interest because it stars Bette Davis, went into work. Other names in the cast are Humphrey Bogart, Isabel Jewell, Henry O'Neill, Mayo Methot, Lola Lane, Raymond Hatton, Teddy Hart, Rosalind Marquis, John Litel and Eduardo Cianelli. Direction is by Lloyd Bacon. The second picture, "The Go Getter," is a comedy romance features George Brent with Anita Louise. Busby Berkeley directs.

Two pictures likewise were started by Republic. Under its own auspices the company put "Hit the Saddle" before the cameras. A member of the "Three Mesquiteer" series, it features Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune with J. P. McGowan, Yakima Canutt, Harry Tenbrook and Sammy McKim. Mack Wright is directing. "Bar Z Bad Men," similarly a western, also started. An A. W. Hackel production, being directed by Sam Newfield, it will present Lois January, Tom London, Frank LaRue and Ernie Adams in the principal parts.

Chesterfield's contribution to the new work is "Red Lights Ahead." Leading players who will be seen are Lucille Gleason, Roger Imhoff, Andy Clyde, Paula Stone and Junior Coghlan. Roland Reed was assigned to direct.

At Radio "Miss Customs Agent" started. Featuring a group of promising new comers in the main parts, Walter Coy, Dianna Gibson, Gordon Jones and Vinton Haworth, it also includes George Irving, Frank M. Thomas and Constance Waith in the cast. Edward Killy is directing.

Number two in the series of P. G. Wodehouse story adaptations, "Step Lively, Jeeves," was started by Twentieth Century-Fox. With Arthur Treacher again in the title role, the support lists Patricia Ellis, George Givot, Alan Dinehart, Helen Flint and John Harrington. Eugene Forde is directing.

LOS ANGELES POLICE PRODUCING OWN FILMS

The Los Angeles Police Department has set up its own production department under Lieutenant H. A. Doyle, superintendent of the division of records and identification, who now has a studio at police headquarters to photograph, with sound, suspected drunken drivers, murderers dictating confessions and veteran officers showing their rookie colleagues the correct way to solve a mystery.

The camera men will be Ray Pinker, department chemist, and his assistant, Leland V. Jones. Their chief aim, however, is to make it possible, when the sobered motorist denies he was tipsy, to flash him on the screen before his own eyes.

"Silks and Saddles" was started by Victory Pictures. With Robert Hill directing the film features Herman Brix, Toby Wing, Trixie Friganza, Frank Melton and Robert McClung.

Columbia started activities on "Freedom For Sale," Paul Kelly and Rosalind Keith head the cast, which lists Thurston Hall, John Spacey, Leona Maricle, Arthur Loft, Jean O'Donovan, Jack Daley, Raymond Brown, Howard Hickman, Edward Earle, Ed Le Saint, Lloyd Whitlock and Gene Morgan. C. C. Coleman is the director.

For Universal release, Buck Jones started "Left Handed Law" in which he himself is starred. Les Selander is directing.

Of the seven completed pictures, Warners was the only studio to complete two. In "Cherokee Strip," which Noel Smith directed, Dick Foran, Jane Bryan, Tommy Buff, Tom Browner, Ed Cobb, Frank Faylen, David Carlyle, Helen Valkis and Walter Sonderling will be seen. "Love Begins" will present Tom Brown, Mary Maguire, Hugh Herbert, Teddy Hart, Joseph King, Dorothy Vaughan and Arthur Aylesworth. Louis King directed.

Republic finished "Join the Marines." The cast lists Paul Kelly, June Travis, Purnell Pratt, Reginald Denny, Warren Hymer, Sterling Holloway, Ray Corrigan, John Holland, Carleton Young, John Sheehan, Arthur Hoyt, Richard Beach, Howard Hickman, Val Duren and Landers Stevens. Ralph Staub directed.

"Coast Patrol" was finished by Radio. Victor McLaglen and Preston Foster are featured, supported by Donald Woods, Ida Lupino, Helen Flint, Pierre Watkin, Alan Curtis and William Corson. Ben Stoloff directed.

Universal finished "Secret Agent X-9," a serial. It will present Scott Kolk, Jean Rogers, Monte Blue, David Oliver, Henry Hunter, George Skelly and Lynn Gilbert. Ford Beebe and Cliff Smith share the directing credits.

With Loretta Young, Tyrone Power and Dom Ameche in the leads, Twentieth Century-Fox finished "Love Is News." The supporting names are Slim Summerville, Dudley Digges, Walter Catlett, Pauline Moore, Jane Darwell, Stepin Fetchit, George Sanders, Elisha Cook, Jr., Frank Conroy, Edwin Maxwell, Charles Williams, Julius Tannen, George Humbert, Frederick Burton, Charles Coleman, Paul McVey, Carol Tevis and Ed Deering. Tay Garnett directed.

MGM completed and gave an immediate preview to "Sinner Take All." Names in the cast are Bruce Cabot, Margaret Lindsay, Joseph Calleia, Stanley Ridges, Vivian Osborne, Charley Grapewin, Edward Pawley, George Lynn, Theodore von Eltz, Eadie Adams, George Zucco and Dorothy Kilgallen. Errol Taggart directed.

Preview Closeup

Standing around at previews gives one a pretty good idea of how those who ride the gravy train feel towards those who pay the freight.

Occasionally a big time star will go about the business of signing autographs with pleasure. An instance happened a short time ago. Lionel Barrymore had just got out of a sick bed. When he arrived at the theatre the kids descended on him. MGM's publicity boys tried to rush him into the theatre. But the actor stopped them with, "If these boys and girls think enough of me to want to stand around and get my autograph, I certainly think enough of them to sign my name." Weak as he was, he stood around until every youngster had been accommodated.

The reverse happened down at Long Beach one night recently. Another star, surrounded by autograph seekers, elected to force his way out. Becoming excited he did a thing he is never called upon to do in pictures. He swung on a boy and knocked him down. The incident was reported to the studio by the boy's parents. When he was called upon for an explanation, the star countered with, "What am I supposed to do around here—make pictures or make a monkey of myself?" The reprimand closed with "That's exactly what you're supposed to do—make pictures—not make a monkey of yourself."

Nicholas Schenck Buys Half of GB Stock Held by Fox

Although no conclusion was reached in the recent discussions in Hollywood in which Isidore Ostrer, of Gaumont British, and Joseph M. Schenck and Sidney R. Kent of Twentieth Century-Fox participated, the American portion of the three-way agreement entered into last summer by Mr. Ostrer, Mr. Schenck and Nicholas M. Schenck of Loew's has been completed, it was revealed this week. The purchase of half of the Twentieth Century-Fox interest in Metropolis and Bradford Trust, holding company for GB, by Loew's was disclosed in a joint statement by Nicholas Schenck and Louis B. Mayer, which said:

"It is true that Loew's owns half of Twentieth Century-Fox's interest in GB."

Completion of the sale to Loew's of half of the Fox 49 per cent interest in M. & B. has been pending since July 20th when it was announced as one of the steps in the agreement under which the Ostrers and the Schencks were to set up a tripartite ownership of GB.

Isidore and Maurice Ostrer were in New York this week where it was reported that the discussions they began with the Schenck brothers and Mr. Kent in Hollywood might be continued. Nicholas Schenck was scheduled to arrive in New York on Monday and Mr. Kent, it is reported will arrive before the Christmas holidays. At the conclusion of the meetings on the coast Mr. Kent said:

"The status of the GB deal remains precisely as it was before the arrival of the Ostrers. Our discussions were friendly and they departed without any decision being reached. We shall hold our stock in GB. It is not for sale. Further than that we have absolutely nothing to state."

Isidore Ostrer refused to make any statement to reporters. His brother Maurice, who said on his arrival from London two weeks ago that he was here on a talent hunt, said that he had not taken part in the Hollywood discussions and that he had not signed any talent. It has been reported that the purpose of the Ostrers' visit was to persuade Mr. Schenck and Mr. Kent to sell the Twentieth Century-Fox holdings to them or to John Maxwell of Associated British Pictures, who now has a minority interest in GB.

Margolies Goes to GB

Albert Margolies, who has been with the United Artists publicity department in New York for the past few years, this week resigned to join the home office staff of Gaumont British to handle publicity starting January 1. Meyer Beck has been named Mr. Margolies' successor at UA.

Four Canadian Openings Set

Boxing Day, the day after Christmas, looms as "opening day" in western Ontario with four new theatres scheduled to open then. They are the Royal at Woodstock and the Capitol at Sarnia, both Famous Players Canadian houses; the Princess at Chatham by Hanson Theatres Corporation and the Palace at Essex by the Hogarth interests.

Salesmen to Reelect J. J. Lee as President

Joseph J. Lee of Twentieth Century-Fox on Thursday was to be reelected president of the Motion Picture Salesmen, Inc., in New York at the annual election. He, as well as Matty Cahan, second vice-president; Morris Sanders, treasurer; Charles Penser, financial secretary, and Jacob Hartman, historian, have no opposition.

Up for vice-president were Saul Trauner and Jerry Wilson. Irving Landes and Morris Fraum were vieing for recording secretary and Louis Kutinsky and Anthony Ricci were running for sergeant-at-arms.

Two trustees were to be elected from the following: Mr. Trauner, John Benas and S. R. Schussell.

Five members of the board were to be selected from a list of 12 nominees, which included Arthur Greenblatt, Harry H. Buxbaum, Joe Felder, Loe Abrams, Lew Preston, Mike Rudin, Max Fellerman, Mr. Schussell, Bernard Kranze, Jack Ellis, Abe Leff and Richard Gledhill.

IATSE Discusses Unionization of Theatre Staffs

Complete unionization of motion picture theatre employees, including service classifications of ushers, porters, doormen and cashiers, is believed to be impending under an International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees move to assert its jurisdiction over all theatre workers from the front to the rear of the house.

The move has been considered by the IATSE on several occasions in the past year, but only recently has it been felt within the organization that industry and public circumstances were propitious, according to reports. The move presumably would be started in New York and other large cities first with the organization of non-union employee classifications and extended to the smaller centers later. If successful, the policy would result in a closed shop for every important theatre in the country.

No problem of jurisdiction over the unorganized employee classifications is likely to trouble or complicate the IATSE move, when and if it is started. The American Federation of Labor at its Atlantic City convention two years ago delivered complete jurisdiction over all theatre employees, including the service classifications, to the IATSE, and, in so far as official labor circles are concerned, a closed shop move would be dependent for its start solely upon IATSE's decision to assert the jurisdiction which has been granted it.

Theatre service employees in New York and most other large cities are unorganized at present.

George Brantley Dead

George S. Brantley, 59, said to have been the first motion picture man in Charleston, S. C., died last weekend at Durham, N. C. He opened the Theatorium in Charleston in 1906, and later the Majestic and Victoria.

Lichtman, Katz Named Lowe Vice-Presidents

Al Lichtman and Sam Katz were officially named vice-presidents of Loew's, Inc., last week following the annual stockholders' meeting during which the new contract for Nicholas M. Schenck, as president, was approved. Although Mr. Lichtman and Mr. Katz have both been without official appearance in the corporation, they were appointed to the posts some weeks ago when plans progressed for the elimination of various Loew-controlled subsidiaries and the concentration of various phases of the company's business under the parent and holding corporation.

It was not until the Loew financial statement for the year ending August 31, 1936, was made public a few days ago that their appointments became known publicly. Their presence in the roster of officers furthermore, was generally overlooked and first attracted attention when they and others of the Loew officers were reelected.

Whereas Loew's had four vice-presidents last year, the company now has seven. Arthur M. Loew, first vice-president; David Bernstein, who is also treasurer, and E. A. Schiller are reelected. In addition to Mr. Lichtman and Mr. Katz, however, new vice-presidents include E. J. Mannix, former general manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio and now an associate producer, and J. Robert Rubin, long a vice-president of MGM. Mr. Bernstein and Mr. Mannix, likewise, had been directors of the producing company.

Catholics Renew Pledge to Legion

Millions of Catholics the country over last Sunday renewed their pledge with the Legion of Decency "to refrain from attendance at immoral and indecent motion pictures."

Of 17 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its list for the current week, 11 were approved for general patronage, four were noted as unobjectionable for adults, one was cited as objectionable in part and one was condemned. The new pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Cavalcade of the West," "Charlie Chan at the Opera," "Cowbow Star," "Fugitive in the Sky," "The Glory Trail," "First Mein Mann Nicht Fabelhaft" (German), "Pilot X," "The Plainsman," "Rainbow on the River," "Rio Grande Ranger," "We're in the Legion Now." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Demon's Island," "Stutzen Der Gessellschaft" (German), "What Becomes of the Children," "The Plough and the Stars." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Die Privat Sekrtarin Heiratet." Class C, Condemned: "Living Dangerously."

ILLEGAL EXHIBITIONS CUT 35 PER CENT IN 6 YEARS

Copyrighters Cite Distributors' Fight for Protection Against Non-Theatrical Infringements

A decade of organized distributor effort to stamp out illegal exhibition of motion pictures was concluded this week. In each of the past six years of a concentrated campaign against the practice the distributors' Copyright Protection Bureau has investigated the same number of theatres, located in practically every state. In 1930 and 1931, irregularities in the form of one or more violations, says the Bureau, were found in 44.6 per cent of the theatres investigated. By 1935 this was reduced to 17.4 per cent, and in 1936 to 9.3 per cent, with comparatively the same number of theatre investigations. The principal means of violation are "bicycling" of film from one theatre to another on a single purchase, and unauthorized holdovers.

The reduced percentage of violations, said the Bureau, "is further evidence of the continuously progressive deterring effect in keeping available for normal licensing the upward of 15,000,000 annual exhibition (booking) transactions of the motion picture industry." The rampant unauthorized exhibitions in the early days of the business are a matter of motion picture history.

Discussing non-theatrical exhibitors, the Copyright Bureau in its annual report, issued Wednesday morning, told of the distributors' vigorous legislative fight made during the past year for adequate protection in the United States Copyright Law against non-theatrical infringing exhibitors. Representatives of the distributors testified at the hearings of the House Patents Committee in Washington during consideration of proposals to revise the copyright laws.

In this connection the Bureau's report said:

"Under proposals of the Duffy Bill (Senate Bill No. 3047, 74th Congress), which had previously passed the Senate, but did not pass the House, the distributors would have been denied the right under their copyrights to protect their theatrical customers against the unfair competition of 'semi-public' exhibitions in schools, churches, camps, hotels, fraternal halls, factories, etc., to which there is only restricted 'public' access, as well as against 'public' exhibition to advertise automobiles, beer, store sales, etc., where no admission fees are charged.

"During the past summer the Bureau commenced an intensive investigation of motion pictures shown under non-theatrical auspices, to determine the source from which the prints are obtained. Between July 1st and October 31st, 1936, 1,010 non-theatrical places of exhibition were investigated, in 520 towns and villages to determine if non-theatrical exhibitions were being given therein. Where suspicious circumstances were indicated, an investigation was made to ascertain whether proper bookings were made by the respective exchanges. Many cases of bicycling and sub-renting were disclosed. In these cases, the source of the prints was usually a theatrical exhibitor in the locality. In some instances, the audience was 'bicycled,' so to speak, to the infringing performances."

Of an investigation of a particular instance of bicycling, for exhibition purposes, of prints from a theatre in the United States to a theatre in Mexico, the report said:

"The matter was taken up not only with the Mexican authorities, but is now pending with the Customs Enforcement Service of the United States Treasury Department, in Washington, D. C., with a view to a general order to Customs Agents at all border points of entry carefully to scrutinize all films, as well as film containers."

A meeting of the distributors to discuss the work of the Bureau for the coming year was held Wednesday at the Hotel Astor, New York.

The distributors, through the Copyright Protection Bureau, act against illegal film exhibitions through the rights granted them under the copyright law. The Bureau is headed by Jack L. Levin, director, and Gabriel L. Hess, attorney, Mr. Hess also serving as attorney with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Manual Published For Jubilee Shows

A promotion manual containing information of value to theatre managers has been published and sent to exhibitors throughout the country by the Paramount advertising department in connection with its Silver Jubilee sales drive commemorating Adolph Zukor's 25 years in the film industry.

The manual, printed in silver, contains exploitation suggestions to theatre managers for promoting Paramount pictures during the Silver Jubilee period.

A collection of 1,500 still photographs from screen plays produced by Paramount during the last 25 years has been presented to Harvard College Library by officials of the company. The collection covers the progress of motion pictures from Sarah Bernhardt's "Queen Elizabeth" and Dustin Farnum's "The Squaw Man" made in 1912 and 1913, down to "Champagne Waltz."

Sixteen employees in the Minneapolis Paramount exchange have been with the company 10 years or more, a checkup in connection with the Jubilee has disclosed. The two oldest in point of service are E. J. Hurley, chief accountant, and Dora Udell, head inspectress, each with 18 years. Next are Ben Blotcky, district manager; Stella Lettus, cashier, and Lenora Gabriel, inspectress, 16 years. A. Selby Carr, as sales head, has been with the company 15 years. George Hinton, sales manager; Hilda Nelson, bookkeeper, and Charles Jackson, salesman, each have 13 years, and J. J. Donahue, John Fritcher, Frank Anderson, Gib Esterly and Ruth Heins, 12 years. Dorothy Roy and Ernie Lund have been with the company 10 years.

RKO Moves to Settle Claim of Orpheum Circuit

The possibility of a settlement of the complex claim of Orpheum Circuit against RKO and its subsidiary companies, the unsecured creditors' committee's withholding the making of any recommendations, the authorization of Price Waterhouse and Company, accountants, to make a consolidated audit of RKO Pictures for 1936 and a speeding up of production plans in the Hollywood studios, were the developments in RKO this week.

The settlement of the Orpheum Circuit claim was disclosed with the filing of a petition in the United States district court in New York to authorize Stadium Theatres Corporation, an RKO subsidiary, to offer to the Orpheum trustee $700,000 in cash for abandonment of all cases of action against RKO. The offer, if accepted by the trustee and creditors of Orpheum, would result in delivering to Stadium the entire and uncontested equity in all of the principal going assets of Orpheum and would make possible the liquidation of Orpheum's affairs with estimated benefit to creditors of about 30 cents on the dollar. A hearing on the petition, which was drawn up by Irving Trust Company, trustee in reorganization for RKO, was set for December 21 by Federal Judge William Bondy.

Pending further discussions with the proponents of the RKO plan of reorganization on certain features of the fairness and equity of the plan's treatment of general creditors, the unsecured creditors' committee, of which William V. Hodges is chairman, withholds the making of any recommendation to creditors with respect to the plan, it was stated in a letter distributed by the committee.

The letter declared that the committee believes that the proponents of the plan "directly control or represent sufficient percentage of the unsecured claims and of the present common stock of RKO practically to assure the consents required of those classes under Section 77-B of the Bankruptcy Act" for the confirmation of the plan by the court.

Federal Judge William Bondy has authorized the Irving Trust Company to employ Price Waterhouse and Company to make a consolidated audit of RKO Pictures for the year ending Dec. 31, 1936, for fees not to exceed $3,500. The reason for this, the Irving Trust states, is the anticipation of numerous requests by creditors and other parties interested in the plan of reorganization for a consolidated statement of assets, liabilities, profits and losses of RKO for the year.

After two weeks of conferences with New York officials of the company, Samuel J. Briskin, vice-president in charge of production at RKO Radio, has returned to Hollywood with plans completed for unusual activity at the studio during the next month. During this period, nine features are scheduled to go into production besides the four that are now being shot and the eight in the cutting room.

Hartley F. Alley, formerly with RKO in Boston, dropped dead in Lynn, Mass., Monday as the result of a heart attack. He was 55. A widow and three children survive.

HUNGARIANS' RESTRICTED IMPORTS CALL FOR HIGH CLASS U.S. PICTURES

Increased Domestic Production Means Lower Cost for Permits, but Program Pictures Face Strong Competition

by ENDRE HEVESI
in Budapest

The status of the Hungarian film trade will be entirely transformed by the decision of a few Hungarian distributing companies to give up or reduce the importation of foreign productions and make their profits through locally made films alone.

Phoebus and Ciné-Alliance, each of which has made one film a year up to now, will produce three films each in 1937. Two other companies, Harmonia and Hirsch & Tsuk, will produce two pictures each in 1937 instead of one film as hitherto. Other companies probably will follow their example.

This will bring about vital changes in the trade. Phoebus and Ciné-Alliance already have hired the Magyar Film Iroda Studios for six months, each to occupy them for three months. They have decided not to import any foreign films in 1937 but to use their entire capital for the production of local-made films. The two other firms, Harmonia and Hirsch & Tsuk, also plan to import foreign films in very reduced numbers only, and they hope to do as good or better business with their two local-made films than they did when they made one Hungarian film only but imported four to five foreign ones.

A few years ago, when Hungarian-speaking films were made in small numbers only, distributors could dictate their own terms, because exhibitors were compelled to buy the Hungarian-speaking pictures which the public was eager to see, even though they had to buy several second-rate foreign imported products along with the local-made picture. But in the past few years, with 15 Hungarian films made every season, the supply in Hungarian pictures was too big for this system to be kept up. Distributors no longer could force their imported pictures upon exhibitors along with the Hungarian films and very often they suffered great losses because they could not sell well the imported products for which they paid high prices.

See Increasing Risks

This new situation induced the aforementioned distributing companies to try this new system of stopping or reducing the import of the foreign films. They can earn 25 to 30 per cent of the invested capital through three good local-made pictures every year. Furthermore, the import of foreign films involves increasing risk, and difficulties every year.

Independent Hungarian distributors could buy German, Austrian and French films only, since American products were and are distributed by the local branches of the companies and so these films do not come into consideration from the independent distributors' point of view. British films, on the other hand, are not very popular in Hungary.

But the interest of the Hungarian public for German-made films has greatly decreased the last years owing to the inferior quality of the German product. Austrian films are not of a high standard, either, and only a few are suitable for Hungarian theatres. From the Hungarian point of view, there are only eight or 10 good films a year among the French-made pictures. Accordingly, there is only a very limited choice in good pictures for the 20 to 25 independent Hungarian distributors. Owing to the small number of the first-class German, Austrian and French products, distributors have to pay very high prices for films which have chances of being successful in Hungary. The possibility for fair profits are small, but in case of a failure the loss suffered may be quite considerable.

EXHIBITOR ESTABLISHES POSTOFFICE IN LOBBY

A decidedly unusual and effective service is being offered to patrons of the Fifth Avenue theatre in Seattle by manager Andrew Saso, who has established a branch United States Postoffice in the foyer of his theatre.

The postoffice is open daily from morning until late at night and is under the management of the Postoffice Department. Here the patrons may have their Christmas packages weighed, insured and stamped. Regular mail pickup service calls for the packages three times daily.

Furthermore, it is increasingly difficult for distributors to obtain the necessary foreign currency for the purchase of imported films from the National Bank. All these reasons induced the mentioned four companies to go over to local-made production and to invest all their capital into the making of local pictures.

Advantages, Too

From the point of view of American film companies the new situation has advantages as well as disadvantages. If the four big distributing concerns stop entirely or reduce their import of foreign films to Hungary, this means that fewer German, Austrian and French films will be for sale on the market and the demand for American pictures will be greater. On the other hand, instead of the previous 15 local-made films, 20 or even 25 Hungarian-speaking films will be produced and this will mean a great damage to the business of American companies. Most provincial theatres play on Saturdays and Sundays only. In case of 20 Hungarian pictures a year, these theatres would show nothing but Hungarian pictures for at least six months. This would hardly leave 20 or 25 Saturdays and Sundays for all the other foreign films.

In the cities, too, Hungarian films have gained an increasing popularity the last two seasons. Every class and social stratum is now able to find films suitable for its taste. The intelligentsia, in former years antagonistic against local-made products, prefers them now to foreign films. Several Hungarian films have yielded considerable profits in the last months and this success increases the spirit for undertaking of Hungarian producers.

A completely new situation arises owing to the increasing production and decreasing import. The producer of every local-made film received a premium of eight permit tickets from the government, entitling him for importation of eight foreign films. If the producer imported less than eight films, he was free to sell the rest of the permit tickets to other firms and received about 2,000 pengoes for each ticket. The eight tickets meant about 16,000 pengoes of governmental aid to the producer of Hungarian films.

Owing to the increasing number of local products, a much larger amount of permit tickets will be issued in the next year. For instance, the Phoebus company, which received eight permit tickets for one Hungarian picture in the past, will now receive 24 tickets for its three Hungarian pictures. In the past the firm used six tickets out of the eight for the import of six foreign films and sold two tickets. Now the companies will not import any foreign products at all and will be compelled to sell all 24 tickets.

Local Producers Face Reduction in Government Aid and May Seek Another Form

Lower Permit Charges

This will be the case with the other companies also. There will be such a great supply in permit tickets that the price of 2,000 pengoes will be sure to be considerably reduced. This will be advantageous for the American film companies because they will get at much lower prices the permit tickets which they need in order to be able to import their product to Hungary.

But to the local producer this reduction in the price of permit tickets will mean a 40 to 50 per cent reduction in the governmental aid. Instead of getting 2,000 pengoes for a ticket they probably will not receive more than 1,000 to 1,200, and this fact will upset the calculation of a film considerably.

See New Aid Plea

Very likely these distributors will have to apply to the government for another form of financial help because the system of governmental aid through permit tickets will not do in the new circumstances. Nobody knows yet how this problem will be solved, but for Hungarian producers an urgent and satisfactory solution is necessary. They work with so limited financial sources that it makes a great difference to them whether they receive 16,000 pengoes governmental help when producing a picture or only eight or 10 thousand.

In the face of this new situation the American film companies will have to revise their present business policies. Average products will not have a chance here because they will not stand the competition of local-made films. Only super-productions, starring popular actors and actresses, should be imported into Hungary, or those which are so luxuriously and richly equipped that they surpass all Continental films. The big feature films, revues, exotic films, in short, pictures in which much money and much care has been invested, are sure to interest the Hungarian public. But instead of going to see second-rate American products with unknown actors, audiences will prefer to see Hungarian-speaking films.

Seattle Gets Foreign Films

Seattle's first foreign picture theatre, the Montlake, has been opened under the management of Herbert Rosener, who operates similar houses in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Oakland.

Blue Laws, Taxes, Curfews Are in Legislative Basket

Legislation concerning the showing of motion pictures on Sundays sprang up in four states this week while taxes were the concern of exhibitors in three others. In New York state, Syracuse proposed a "curfew" for minors and in New York City the banning of theatres along Park Avenue is now being considered by the Board of Aldermen.

It is expected that the city council in Grundy Center, Iowa, will repeal the ordinance prohibiting the showing of motion pictures on Sunday following the recent municipal election at which the shows were favored by a majority of 130 votes. The question had been voted upon four times in the last five years and always defeated by a small majority.

In Greenwood, Miss., petitions are being circulated asking for Sunday shows and will be presented to the city council at its next meeting. The Junior Chamber of Commerce has indorsed the repeal of the blue law now prohibiting the operation of theatres.

The Board of Aldermen in Greenville, N. C., this week, acting on the petition of Ty Walker, manager of two theatres there, sanctioned Sunday shows while the city council at Waynesboro, Va., is scheduled to consider a proposed ordinance this week to block the operation of local theatres on Sundays.

At Buena Vista, Va., the city's tax ordinance adopted December 13, 1934, has been renewed for 1937 with the following amendment: for motion picture theatres, $150 per annum, $40 per quarter and $2 per day.

Proposals placed before the city council to tax gross receipts of all Omaha business firms 50 cents per $1,000 on the first $50,000 of annual income and $1 per $1,000 over that would affect Omaha exhibitors. The city needs $211,000 more revenue than it can obtain now through present levies. The gross receipts tax would raise $300,000 a year if put into effect, it is estimated.

In Springfield, Ill., court action is threatened to test the extension of the state's three per cent sales tax. Two members of the House have raised a formal protest to the recording of three absentee votes in favor of the measure. The record shows 105 for and 23 against. The bill is now pending in the Senate and quick action is looked for. The supreme court has never passed on the question of absentee votes in either the House or the Senate.

A nine o'clock "curfew" for Syracuse juveniles attending motion picture theatres unaccompanied is favored by Bertram R. Davis, chairman of the aldermanic committee on police and licenses now considering proposals for segregation of children along the lines of the so-called New York plan. Mr. Davis thinks the ushers could keep tabs on the children and have them leave at nine o'clock. The committee is scheduled to confer with Syracuse exhibitors some time in the near future.

Following a discussion on an ordinance introduced by Alderman Thomas J. Curran and Newbold Morris to prohibit new theatres in the midtown area of Fifth, Park and Madison avenues in New York, as well as on 34th and 57th streets, a report on the bill is expected at the next meeting of the Board of Aldermen. Among those supporting the ordinance were a group of executives affiliated with important stores on Fifth and Madison avenues. The consensus was that the valuation of the property on these thoroughfares would drop appreciably if theatres were permitted.

UA Financing Deals in Mexico and Argentine

United Artists probably is the first American motion picture company to finance production in the Argentine and Mexico. Two deals were recently signed by Walter Gould, assistant to Arthur W. Kelly, foreign sales manager, on his recent five-month trip to these countries.

The first provides for six pictures to be produced by Portena Films of Buenos Aires; the second is with Exito Films of Mexico and calls for three features and an option on as many more. In addition, a separate deal was arranged with Exito for distribution of two pictures already completed without United Artists sponsorship. All contracts call for the handling of pictures in Latin American countries and the United States and Spain.

Paramount Closes Partnership Deals

Paramount officials have approved the renewal of an operating agreement with Karl Hoblitzelle for the Interstate circuit and Texas Consolidated Theatres on a permanent partnership basis, and the extension for three months of a similar operating agreement with A. H. Blank for the Tri-States circuit.

Mr. Blank and Paramount each hold a 50 per cent stock interest in the operation of the circuit which includes about 40 theatres in Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois, but the agreement includes an option under which Paramount may repurchase Mr. Blank's half interest. The extension will expire March 6th.

The stock repurchase agreement was eliminated in the permanent agreement reached with Mr. Hoblitzelle. It is reported that the two Texas circuits which operate approximately 110 houses in the southwest, will be merged into a single operating company in the future if obstacles in the way of consolidation can be removed.

Exhibitors Reject Argentine Proposal

by ENDRE HEVESI

in Buenos Aires

The Exhibitors' Association in Buenos Aires, in a reply to a note accompanying a modification of the existing exhibition system, as proposed by the Argentine Film Distributors' Association, virtually has rejected the new proposals. It is claimed the distributors have failed to take into account the public attitude toward the motion picture theatres, which was the basis of the exhibitors' original request for the modification.

At the same time, it was pointed out in the exhibitor reply, innovations are suggested which would be highly dangerous in view of the economic situation and its effect on the theatre business.

Two Sales Staffs Confer as Others Plan Conventions

Columbia and Universal each completed another of their series of regional sales conventions this week. William R. Ferguson, of MGM, will conduct a session of his field men in Cleveland. RKO sales and theatre executives will meet in Hollywood.

Columbia completed its third regional sales meeting last weekend at the Jung Hotel in New Orleans with Abe Montague, general sales manager, presiding. Two previous sessions were held in Chicago and San Francisco, and a fourth is scheduled for New York, January 8 and 9.

From the home office, in addition to Mr. Montague, Joe McConville, Lou Weinberg, Rube Jackter, Leo Jaffee and Nat Shiren were in the Crescent City. The staffs of the six exchanges which were represented and which are headed by Sam Moscow, southern division manager, included: Atlanta, Walter Anderson, manager; S. T. Wilson, B. A. Wallace, U. T. Koch, E. B. Foster and J. S. Laird; Charlotte, R. J. Ingram, manager; George Roscow, R. D. Williamson; Dallas, J. B. Underwood, manager; W. C. Williamson, W. L. Penn, J. L. McKinney, W. S. Hurst and A. M. Whitcher; Memphis, J. J. Rogers, manager; Herbert Kohn and T. B. Haynes; Oklahoma City, C. A. Gibbs, manager; J. A. Smith, Sidney Gibbs; New Orleans, Houston Duvall, manager; John Winberry and J. J. Fabacher.

James R. Grainger, general sales manager, presided at the Universal regional sales meeting of exchange managers at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago. Mr. Grainger was the only home office executive attending the session, which lasted only one day. In an address, he pointed out that sales at the present time are 30 per cent ahead of last year and that 80 per cent of all availabilities have been closed.

Present at the meeting were E. T. Gomersall, western sales manager, and the following branch managers: Henry Herbel, Chicago; Paul Krieger, Cincinnati; J. J. Spandau, Des Moines; L. J. Miller, Omaha; William Benjamin, Kansas City; F. J. Camp, Milwaukee; Floyd Brown, Indianapolis; Manny Gottlieb, Detroit, and Frank Mantzke, Minneapolis.

William R. Ferguson, head of exploitation for MGM, will hold a one-day meeting with 25 of his field men in Cleveland this week.

Home office, theatre and sales executives of RKO will hold a week's conferences in Hollywood with Samuel J. Briskin, production head, Pandro S. Berman and other producers on forthcoming product, starting January 15. Among those planning to attend are Leo Spitz, president; Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Distributing Corporation, and Nate Blumberg.

Nine Paramount home office officials are scheduled to go to Hollywood for the company's annual product conference to be held at the Hotel Ambassador in Los Angeles January 8-10. They are Barney Balaban, president; John Balaban, John W. Hicks, Y. Frank Freeman, Neil F. Agnew, Stanton Griffis, Russell Holman, Robert M. Gillham and Lou Diamond.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Love Is News

(20th Century - Fox)

Comedy-Romance

The cast chosen for this production is one that seems deserving of a lot of attention. It stars Tyrone Power, who got his first big break in the current "Lloyds of London," and Loretta Young and Don Ameche, the Ramona and Alessandro of "Ramona." It backs up these younger but now well known folk with a batch of prominent notables, who includes Slim Summerville, Dudley Digges, Walter Catlett, presently featured in "Banjo on My Knee," Jane Darwell, Stepin Fetchit, George Sanders, another newcomer who indicated by his performance in "Lloyds" that he is going places, Stepin Fetchit and Elisha Cook, Jr. It also includes the newcoming Pauline Moore, who has the secondary romantic role, Frank Conroy, Paul Stanton, Julius Tannen, Carol Tevis, the voice of Minnie Mouse, Charles Williams, George Humbert, Ed Deering and Charles Coleman.

The story is gay comedy romance. Modern in theme and atmosphere, the locales are New York of the present day, an airport, a swank society home and city backgrounds that range from homes of the middle classes to the mansions of the upper crust, and a newspaper office. It concerns a young lady, the richest girl in the world, who just can't keep out of the headlines any more than she can help keeping out of the clutches of newspaper men and fortune hunters. It's also the story of a girl so accustomed to being lied about that she has no difficulty in concocting a whopper when it is necessary to assure her own romantic bliss.

William Lipman and Frederick Stephani authored the original. Harry Tugent and Jack Yellen did the screen play.

Direction is by Tay Garnett, who was the man at the helm on "China Seas," and it is his first domestic effort since completing his round the world cruise.

Michael Strogoff

(RKO Radio)

Drama

The story being told in this film is one of the greatest adventure tales ever written. As a stage presentation, it was the supreme thriller of two and three generations ago. It is being produced on a plan and scope and with a cast that promises to elevate it to rank as one of the outstanding dramatic thrill action photoplays of the moment. It was made as a silent by Universal about 20 years ago. Last year, featuring Anton Walbrook, celebrated Austrian artist, modern versions of the famous Jules Verne epic appeared in Europe. There is no record of any general American presentation.

With Walbrook again starred, the time being 1870, the locale St. Petersburg and the vast Siberian steppes, "Michael Strogoff" is the story of Tsar Alexander II's courier, who has been entrusted to carry a message to Russian Armies besieged at Irkutsk by savage Tartars which would deliver the harried armies. As Strogoff is trailed by spies, captured by the enemy who consider no devilish torture too bestial to apply, the story builds to powerful dramatic heights. The quality of this is rivaled by that of two tremendous battle scenes; one in which the Russians are trapped by the Tartars; the second when the Russians emerge from their siege to drive the Tartars out of Siberia. Action and spectacle have been combined in the story to result in thrilling realism.

In keeping with the importance of the production, an accomplished cast of known players has been selected to support Walbrook. Margot Grahame and Elizabeth Allan have the leading feminine roles. Miss Grahame is a spy who seeks the hero's destruction; Miss Allan is a young Russian girl who shares with Walbrook the meager but important romantic contrast of the story. Akim Tamiroff, outstanding in "The General Died at Dawn," is the treacherous and cruel master mind of the spy ring, and Fay Bainter, noted stage actress, who most likely will be seen in "Quality Street" before this is released, has the role of Wallbrook's mother. Other players of note are Eric Blore, Paul Guilfoyle, whose performance in "Winterset" won favorable comment, Paul Harvey, Murray Kinnell, Edward Brophy, Frank M. Thomas, Doris Lloyd, Michael Visaroff, Francis McDonald and Oscar Apfel.

A Pandro S. Berman production, adaptation from Jules Verne was effected by Mortimer Offner, whose screen credits include participation in the preparation of "Quality Street," "Sylvia Scarlett" and "The Little Minister," and Anthony Veiller, who figured in the current "Winterset," "A Woman Rebels," "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford" and "Star of Midnight."

Direction was assigned to George Nicholls, Jr., who made "The Big Game," "M'liss" and "Chatterbox."

Bring Me His Ears

(Paramount)

Action, Adventure, Drama

A new twist of the familiar Hopalong Cassidy stories is to be essayed in this production. In order to permit the hero to account for the villain, he is stripped of his badge as a Texas Ranger, comes into open conflict with his pals, and seemingly endures disgrace before attaining his objective. Where in earlier stories Hopalong relied upon his own personal courage and resourcefulness to emerge victorious no matter what kind of foe he was up against as long as his pals were in his corner, this time he has to depend upon the cooperation of the Texas Rangers and Mexican Secret Service for assistance. Meanwhile he must establish himself as a cohort of the desperado he is assigned to round up.

The familiar trio of William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison and George Hayes again will be seen in the principal roles. No only should the prestige that the Hopalong have established in their own right at the box office stand this production in good stead, but the fact that Ellison had a prominent role in "The Plainsman" should be relied upon to arouse attention of persons who are not ordinarily susceptible to western entertainment.

As Stephen Morris is featured in the role of Boyd's prey, the supporting cast includes Charlene Wyatt, Nora Lane, Trevor Bardette, Al Bridge and George Chesebro.

Adapted from a Clarence E. Mulford story, as have been all the others. The screen play is by Harrison Jacobs and direction is in the hands of Nate Watt, who was at the helm in two or three of the most recent productions.

Captains Courageous

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Drama

More than usual interest attaches itself to this because it is the first modern production of a Rudyard Kipling story. In its own right as exciting literary entertainment it ranks with the highest quality of Kipling's prolific output. Kipling, himself, is an exploitation asset that should not be ignored in connection with the presentation of the film. His name should make possible beneficial tieups with libraries, book stores and the like.

"Captains Courageous" is a story of wooden ships and iron men. It is being produced on a scope similar to that of "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Captain Blood." It boasts an impressive list of wellknown screen names. It is not a war tinged historical, nor is it a love story, unless the great affection a boy has for a man and the great devotion which men have for a boy can be interpreted as a love story. Yet it is full of those elements that stir the deepest and most tender emotions in the minds of men, women and children.

It's the story of a spoiled wealthy boy who thinks the world is his oyster. Rescued from death in the ocean, he is taken aboard a North Atlantic fishing schooner. Living with the deep sea cod fishers, resentful at first but eventually becoming attached to an ace fisherman and the ship's captain, a regeneration works within the boy that sets him on the right track. Though tragedy strikes him when his fisherman pal is lost in the sea during a roaring race to Gloucester, he finds an understanding and happiness with his father.

Freddie Bartholomew is the boy. Lionel Barrymore is the iron-willed captain with a tender heart. At the Portuguese fisherman, who saves the boy from death and from the life of his own choosing, Spencer Tracy has a role that should enable him to give a performance fully matching his role in "San Francisco." Other players who will be seen are Melvyn Douglass, the boy's father; Charley Grapewin, Mickey Rooney, Harry Carey, Jack LaRue and John Carradine as fisherfolk.

A Slug for Cleopatra

(Columbia)

Comedy-Mystery

A temperamental opera star, who walks out on her performance because her magician husband walks out on her, involves with him a frantic secretary and a go-gettem newspaper man in this baffling mystery.

That the magician happens to be a fakir who earns a living by submerging himself under water for hours at a time in a sealed coffin; that the newspaper man and the secretary fall in love for practically no reason at all, that the diva is so unfortunate as to be murdered, and that the secretary has the misfortune to be chosen as the principal suspect, all this sets the stage for an intriguing crime story that entails the full quota of comedy and love interest.

The rather exotic sound of the title keys the production as something that includes the tried and true commercial elements, and as they have been freshly applied, with much that is new tossed in for good measure, it also gives an inkling of its entertainment content.

Essentially something for the mystery addicts, it may be expected that the film will not be lacking in thrill action. Yet as these are the media that provoke comedy and romance, it looks to be one of those odd attractions that may be labeled either a mystery or a comedy romance.

The picture features Charles Quigley, who made his debut in "Lady from Nowhere," and Rosalind Keith. Henry Mollison is the wife-deserting magician, and the woman who pays with her life because she is determined to hold him to his marital vows is Rita LeRoy. Other principals are James Conlin, Frederick Vogeding and Harry Depp.

The story is an original by Richard Save. The screen play is credited to Grace Neville and Fred Niblo, Jr. Dave Selman is directing.

Woman Wise

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy-Romance

Authored by newspaper men, the story told in this production has two angles. One is an exposure of the prize fight racket, detailing how titles are passed around and poor pugs are made the victims of all kinds of graft and double-crossing. The other is a straightaway comedy romance told against the exciting background of newspaperdom's sports departments. That details how a smart girl outsmarts a lot of smarties.

Rochelle Hudson, currently in "Reunion," is the heroine. Michael Whalen, remembered for his roles in "Career Woman" and "Poor Little Rich Girl," is the eventual hero, but not before he is given a lusty run for his money for that status, as well as favor in Miss Hudson's eyes, by Thomas Beck, who has been seen in several recent Charlie Chans and "Can This be Dixie." The balance of the rather small supporting cast, all of whom, however, are active principals, includes Alan Dinehart, now in "Born to Dance," Douglas Fowley, George Hassell, Astrid Allwyn, Chick Chandler and Pat Flaherty.

Naturally, as it is somewhat a prize fight picture, production details incorporate some quite exciting fistic action. Outstanding in this feature is a wild battle between Whalen and Dinehart, another involving Whalen and Flaherty, and the latter in a sort of battle royal. Additionally there are picturizations of other sporting events, notably hockey games and other features on the Madison Square Garden programs.

Join the Marines

(Republic)

Romance-Drama

Although this production starts off with a situation that is somewhat reminiscent of a scandal that rocked the recent American Olympic expedition to Berlin, it actually is, as the title indicates, the dramatic romantic story of a U. S. Marine.

Fired from the Olympic team, a javelin throwing champion falls in love with an ousted girl competitor and joins the Marines. His troubles begin when he learns that the girl he loves has little regard for any kind of discipline and bears an especial hatred for that to which Marines are subjected; also he is disappointed to learn that no Marine below the officer grade can marry. In the service, following the trail of the Marines from the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli, he gradually works his way up the ladder. Deeds of valor on a plague infested island win him a commission. He wants to resign immediately, but the girl, who now has come to admire the service, insists he remain. Embittered, he is ordered to another island where an uprising menaces the safety of the post commanded by the girl's father and where she is residing. By wit of mind and demonstration of oldtime athletic ability in hurling dynamite laden spears, he's the hero in putting down the insurrection. Winning the girl, he remains in the service.

Built of popular stuff, the story is an original by Earl Brown which was adapted by Joseph Krumgold and Olive Cooper. Under Ralph Staub's direction it concentrates on balancing love interest with thrill action.

It features Paul Kelly and June Travis in the lead roles, supported principally by Purnell Pratt, Reginald Denny and Warren Hymer. The cast further includes Sterling Holloway, Irving Pichel, Ray Corrigan, Carleton Young, John Sheehan, Arthur Hoyt and Howard Hickman.

Larceny on the Air

(Republic)

Drama

A topical subject has been chosen as the basis of this production. It deals with the dramatic, and romantic counterpart—experiences of a young doctor who embarks upon a crusade to break up a clique devoting its activities to radio broadcasting of fake medical cures. As many radio stations are littered up with similar stunts and, as they occasionally are exposed as cruel frauds, there is naturally a public interest in the theme, which under careful exploitation can be made of commercial advantage to the picture.

Of course, the doctor's warfare leads him into conflict with powerful forces which result in great personal danger to himself and the girl he loves. In a logical and well developed manner, he succeeds in breaking up the ring and ridding the air of the medical charlatans.

Robert Livingston is the crusading doctor. The girl is Grace Bradley. Their romance is complicated by the fact that the girl's father is implicated with the ring as a shakedown artist who makes legitimate medical concerns his prey. Pierre Watkin is the radioing quack and Smiley Burnette is a hypocritical pal of the doctor. As these carry the brunt of the story, atmospheric and character roles are played by William Newell, Byron Folger, Wilbur Mack, Matty Fain, Josephin Whittell and De Wolf Hopper.

Richard English is the story's author, and credit for the screen play is shared by Mr. English and Endre Boehm. Irving Pichel, an actor in many pictures, "General Spanky" and "Join the Marines" currently, and also director of many others, is directing the film.

On the Avenue

(20th Century-Fox)

Musical Comedy-Romance

The cast for this production stars Dick Powell, now in "Golddiggers of 1937" and Madeleine Carroll, featured in "Lloyds of London." Listed in support are such screen notables as Alice Faye, the Ritz Brothers who will be remembered for their performances in "Sing, Baby, Sing," Alan Mowbray, George Barbier, Shirley Deane, Cora Witherspoon and Stepin Fetchit. Additionally, it includes Siegfried Rumann, Douglas Wood, Alex Pollard and William Eddritt.

Music and lyrics, as well as accompanying score, are by Irving Berlin, probably the best known of song writers. He turns in seven songs. It will be recalled that Berlin prepared all the music and lyrics for "Top Hat" and "Follow the Fleet."

The screen play is credited to Gene Markey and William Conselman. Dances were staged by Seymour Felix, who directed the dance numbers in "The Great Zeigfeld."

Reversing the customary procedure in stage atmosphered production, "On the Avenue" is a front-stage production. As it unfolds, the story within the story takes persons from the audience witnessing the stage story and makes them part and parcel of the screen plot development.

A girl from Park Avenue, a blue blood of blue bloods, and her aristocratic family become involved with a musical comedy star, a graduate of Avenue A, as he goes through his specialty, which ridicules the snooty swank. The antagonism that first develops between the boy and the girl causes her to buy the whole show and endeavor to make her derider the laughing stock of Broadway, but when love sticks its head in the door, things change in amazing fashion, and when the erstwhile derider subsequently saves her from a bad marriage the whole atmosphere changes.

As in Powell's previous engagement for Twentieth Century-Fox, "Thanks a Million," he is being directed by Roy Del Ruth, whose reputation for turning out superlative entertainment is indication of the character which the producing company believes this effort will attain.

Maid of Salem

(Paramount)

Historical Romance-Drama

The Salem Village of 1692, in Massachusetts Bay Colony, was the scene of one of the most interesting and stirring chapters in colonial American history. Although historians and fictionists have delved deeply into the facts which surrounded the witchcraft hysteria that reigned there at the time, few in this modern age are aware of what actually happened.

While the main purposes of "Maid of Salem" is to reveal the lighter and more romantic side of Puritan days, habits, customs and beliefs, the production nevertheless moves against a dramatic background of witchcraft frenzy. Substantially the primary motivating theme is a dramatic love story told against a welter of religious bigotry, superstition, fear, and what in this modern day would be called terrorism.

The picture is produced and directed by Frank Lloyd, maker of "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Uner Two Flags" and many other important pictures. The writing staff engaged in story prepartion resorted to considerable research for authenticity and accuracy in all the story and production phases.

The film will star Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray. The lengthy supporting cast is laden with well known screen personalities. Among the many are Harvey Stephens, Gale Sondergaard, Louise Dresser, Halliwell Hobbes, Edward Ellis, Beulah Bondi, Donald Meek, E. E. Clive, Zeffie Tilbury, Bonita Granville, Bennie Bartlett, Virginia Weidler, Sterling Holloway, Brandon Hurst and Russell Simpson.

While the film has been in production, a serious and sincere effort has been made to incorporate those elements that lift film attrac-

Paramount Pictures

CECIL B. DeMILLE'S

1 has tremendous Star Power

A picture is only as great as its stars. "The Plainsman" has one of the most powerful star teams in pictures leading its huge cast. Gary Cooper's name on any marquee is pure box-office gold, as has been proved time and time again. And it would take a mighty absent-minded exhibitor to forget how Gary scored with Jean Arthur in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town". Here we have those two stars in what those who have seen the previews insist are by far their grandest roles. Gary tops anything he has done, even "The Virginian" and "Lives of a Bengal Lancer". And Jean reaches heights seldom attained by any actress in her delineation of that whirlwind heroine, Calamity Jane. These two could make any picture successful. They place this picture in a class by itself.

2 has tremendous Story Power

The U. S. Cavalry charges in . . too late . . a gal gets her man but she gets him too late. DeMille has had the courage to make this story real... the hero dies in the end, as he did in history... but when he dies he makes "The Plainsman" one of the grandest thrills the moving picture audiences have ever seen. In other words, the writers of "The Plainsman" have been given free rein to drive a great story right through to its logical ending... and the result is a series of sock episodes ending up with the most terrific sock of all. Without sacrificing... yes... in fact, adding to the box-office of the yarn, they have made the feud between Wild Bill Hickok and Lattimer, gun running self appointed lord of the plains, so real you want to get in there alongside Bill and fight it out with Lattimer yourself. They have made the love story of Wild Bill and Calamity so real you walk out of the theatre feeling as if you knew them both. It makes the fight between the white settlers and the Indians so real you wake up at night and see Yellow Hand's men thundering right over the bed post. But you get the idea... IT'S SOME STORY...

"THE PLAINSMAN"

3 has tremendous Production Power

Cecil B. DeMille productions have always been big . . . the biggest in the industry. "The Plainsman" is, in this sense, a typical DeMille production. It has a cast of thousands (ninety-three players actually have speaking parts). Replicas of old Civil war St. Louis, of Deadwood, have the accuracy in detail, the historical reality for which the master showman is noted. And when a whole tribe of Indians charge a whole regiment of cavalrymen . . . they charge. The battle scenes are among the most spectacular ever filmed. This picture, in every sense, is the kind that fills the screen . . . that has people talking about a big show. It took months of preparation and study before De Mille started the cameras grinding. And it looks it. "The Plainsman" is in the same class as "Cimarron" and "The Covered Wagon".

4 has tremendous Exploitation Power

Cecil B. De Mille has recently become as great a name in radio as in pictures. His Lux hour broadcasts have established him as a power in radio. And, of course, he has thus been able to sell "The Plainsman" for you to millions of radio listeners. Key city newspapers are carrying Lux ads featuring "The Plainsman". Paramount has prepared a cooperative newspaper campaign for the key cities. But the grandest exploitation stunt of all is the great Boy Scout tieup for "The Plainsman". For the first time a complete 100 per cent tieup between the Boy Scouts of America and a motion picture company insures you the biggest youth backing for this picture of any picture ever released. Advertisements in Boys Life, official Scout magazine, tell the story. Simply it is this: Paramount has offered grand prizes of two trips to Europe and 12 trips to the National Scout Jamboree in Washington to the Boy Scouts who turn in the best 100-word review of a character or episode in "The Plainsman". This means 2,500,000 Scouts are backing "The Plainsman" for you!

WHAT KEY EXHIBITORS SAY:

JOHN BALABAN, Balaban and Katz Theatres, Chicago. Paramount has another epoch making picture in "The Plainsman". At a midnight preview at the Roosevelt Theatre a housefull of men and women repeatedly applauded and cheered its suspenseful thrills. It has the scope of "The Covered Wagon" and the dramatic intensity and romantic appeal of "The Virginian" and possesses an absorbing American background of interest to men, women and children. All praise to De Mille who has given the industry a real red blooded American drama and a positive box-office smash.

M. J. MULLINS and SAM PINANSKI, M. and P. Theatres, Boston. All our district managers, managers of greater Botson, and members of the home office had the pleasure of seeing "The Plainsman" at the Fenway Theatre, Tuesday. They were unanimous in their opinion the picture is one of the finest that ever came off the Paramount lot and in the same class with "The Virginian". Exhibitors I talked with are of the same opionin, believing unanimously Paramount has a great picture which should smash box-office records. We have booked "The Plainsman" in all our important stations for New Year's week.

BOB O'DONNELL, Interstate Theatres, Dallas. "The Plainsman" sets a new pace for outdoor epics. Cecil B. De Mille has given the screen another masterpiece."

BOB WILBY, Wilby and Kincey Theatres, Birmingham. "The Plainsman" is a real money picture. I have had it screened for all my managers and they concur with me on this statement.

B. D. COCKRILL, Denham Theatre, Denver. We cannot hold our enthusiasms in check any longer. Hats off to Paramount and De Mille. "Plainsman" preview audience held spellbound. "The Plainsman" takes its place at the head of all outdoor romances in the opinion of Denham staff and of myself. Top grosses for 1937 is our prediction for "The Plainsman".

E. R. CUMMINGS, Tri-States Theatres, Omaha. Our Omaha Theatre previewed "The Plainsman" last night with Cecil B. De Mille in person. A large audience applauded and cheered the picture and De Mille was showered with congratulations. My entire staff joins me in congratulating De Mille and Paramount for producing not only the finest picture of the season but what will prove the biggest grosser. Add together "The Virginian", "Trail of the Lonesome Pine", and "Covered Wagon" and you have "The Plainsman".

tions out of the rut. Although there have been other previous colonial pictures, this is endeavoring to approach its historical and romantic content from a new angle.

Trial Horse

(Warner Brothers)

Drama

Not a racetrack story, but a prizefight yarn, this has to do with an old pug, a trial horse, who blasts the championship hopes of many a bruiser but finally has to fight and beat his own protege to win the world's heavyweight championship. As it will roll on the screen, it's exciting thrill action, human interest drama and appealing love interest combined.

Belting out contented Maxey Rosenbloom, trial horse Barton MacLane, who often has been to the pugilistic wars, takes Wayne Morris (community theatre graduate) under his wing after the young fellow has walloped Rosenbloom for picking on his newsboy pal, Dickie Jones. Training Morris for the ring in his gymnasium, the pupil falls in love with his mentor's sister, June Travis. Inspired by both, he makes short of all ring opponents as he climbs the ladder to the status of contender. When the champ retires, a dramatic situation is created. The public is led to insist, via crooked ring politics and the propaganda of a conniving newspaper sports editor, that pupil and teacher meet for the title. Neither they nor the girl want to have anything to do with it, but they can't resist pressure. In the fight the rising youngster is besting the fading trial horse until the oldtimer lets go his potent right. Champ though he never wanted it this way, MacLane, Morris, Miss Travis and Jones retire to ranching in Texas.

The story is by an erstwhile newspaper man, E. J. Flanagan. Another from sports writer, George Bricker, did the screen play. B. Reeves (Breezy) Eason, noted for the manner in which he includes thrill action in productions, is the director.

Her Husband's Secretary

(Warner Brothers)

Drama

The story told in this production is a frank and entirely modern treatment of a problem that grows more and more acute with the increasing invasion of women into the world of business. The relationship of men and women in private offices gives an intriguing appeal to this exposition of conflict between wives and their husband's secretaries.

While the theme is not new, the manner in which it is presented in this case, as incorporated into Crane Wilbur's original and Lillie Howard's scenario, and the situations that have been contrived by director Frank McDonald, combine to create a fresh and intensely interesting approach to the subject.

Actually the story takes on a "how the tables were turned" trend. Jean Muir, secretary to a married business tycoon, is advised by her friend, Beverly Roberts, to make a play for her boss. Before she can get very far, she falls in love with a young steel worker, Warren Hull. His father dies and he inherits the business. He has married Miss Muir and must have a secretary of his own. His wife recommends her chum, Miss Roberts. Under the lash of Clara Blandick's catty remarks, Miss Muir, who doesn't believe that such a thing could be possible, is convinced that the relationship between Hull and Miss Roberts is more than that of boss and secretary. A plot is concocted to trap them. All the wife's suspicions are confirmed. But as the secretary flees to save her own life, when that of the man she accompanied to a rendezvous is in danger, it's the wife who saves the husband.

Prosaic in all incidents leading up to the dramatic denouement, the story takes on an intense dramatic power at that moment with a raging forest fire forming the background of the action where the wife goes to the rescue of her husband.

Bulldog Drummond's Escape

(Paramount)

Mystery-Drama

When Philo Vance, Perry Mason, Charlie Chan, Oscar Piper, Hildegarde Withers et al. go to work, there's always an assurance of action, excitement, thrills, mystery and romance. There are not as many pictures produced featuring the redoubtable Bulldog Drummond as starring the other notable detectives, but when one comes along, there is reason for a similar expectancy.

Those elements are what Paramount is counting upon for the success of this production. Bulldog, answering a call from Scotland Yard, is traveling across a foggy moor, hears a scream, finds a dead body, and sees a beautiful girl flee in his car. From then on Bulldog is involved in one of the most colorful adventures of his career. In it he saves a life, solves two murders, upsets a ring of forgers, confounds Scotland Yard and finds romance. All that befalls him happens within the space of eight hours.

As were its predecessors, this is from the pen of H. C. McNeile and Gerard Fairlie. Originally it was a stage play. The screen version is credited to Edward T. Lowe. James Hogan is the director.

The important matter of cast seems to have been well attended to. Ray Milland, featured in "Big Broadcast of 1937" and "Jungle Princess," is Bulldog. Guy Standing, now in "Lloyds of London," and Heather Angel, recently in "Last of the Mohicans," are prominent in the action. The principal support features Reginald Denny, Porter Hall, Fay Holden, E. E. Clive, Walter Kingsford and Charles McNaughton. Other players to be seen are Patrick Kelly, Clyde Cook, Frank Elliott, David Clyde, Doris Lloyd, Zeffie Tilbury and Barry Macollum.

The Holy Terror

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy with Music

Looked upon as the most promising entertainment and commercial feature in which Jane Withers has appeared, this is the story of a naval officer's daughter who always happens to be around when trouble starts, or vice versa. Motherless daughter of a tradition-encrusted commander, she's the pal of all the sailors; sings and dances at their shows, mixes into grownup romances and generally is regarded as a holy terror by all, even a group of foreign spies whom she prevents from swiping Uncle Sam's secrets in an exciting climax.

Romance is shared by Anthony Martin and newcomer Leah Ray. The menace, brought in by roughneck Fred Kohler, Jr., is routed by Jane. She is an important part in the comedy that concerns El Brendel and Joe Lewis, and she's pretty much of a pain to the spies, Gloria Roy and Victor Adams. Jane has one solo of her own, music and lyrics which were prepared by Harry Akst and Sidney Clare, and there are two other songs sung by Martin and Miss Ray, also contributed by the same team. Dances were created and staged by Jack Haskell.

The motivating story is an original written by Lou Breslow and John Patrick. Modern in atmosphere and treatment, it majors in that comedy quality that generally provokes spontaneous and enthusiastic laughter. Considering the popularity that laugh pictures are presently enjoying, together with the number of them that are listed for the present and future market, it is quite evident that the public is in a receptive mood for merry amusement. As comedy keynotes the production, it should also key publicity campaigns.

Midnight Court

(Warner Brothers)

Drama

With racketeerdom, that specializes in the business of stealing automobiles, as the background the story told in this production is that of a man who beat his way back to respectability. A courtroom story, it further promises to be human interest drama. It takes a man who, though he once was a distinct attorney, is framed out of his job down to the gutter. Picked up as a vagrant and tried in night court, he denounces judge, prosecutor, political collusion with crime, and the man behind the car stealing racket in particular. Bailed out by his most severely castigated victim, he becomes his attorney, and through his wit, ability and resourcefulness again becomes a defender feared by all prosecutors. As romance with his ex-wife is renewed and he sees how his client is wrecking the lives of youths by making thieves of them, he turns on his employer, breaks up his racket, puts him in jail and takes up a new career with his wife.

Based on a factual story by Don Ryan and under the direction of Frank McDonald, John Litel, a newcomer with quite a stage reputation, will be seen in the leading role. Ann Dvorak, as the ex-wife, accounts for the romantic contrast which regenerates Litel. William Davidson is the racketeer, Stanley Fields and John Sheehan, are two of his henchmen, and Joseph Crehan is the judge. Carlyle Moore, Jr., is the victimized boy whose case in court turns Litel from the mouthpiece of crooks to defender of the people's rights.

The material being incorporated into the film is popular stuff. The cast, with the exception of Litel, are well known.

C. C. Lindsey Dies in Texas

C. C. Lindsey, 42, secretary-treasurer of the Lindsey Theatres, Inc., Lubbock, Texas, and associated with the Griffith Amusement Company of Oklahoma City, died in Lubbock last week of pneumonia and heart complications. His mother, Mrs. J. D. Lindsay, and a brother, Ralph, both of Lubbock, survive.

Individual Profits In Films Increase

Profits of individuals engaged in the amusement industries increased by more than 50 per cent in 1934 as compared with 1933, while losses were cut more than 10 per cent, it was disclosed Monday by the Internal Revenue Bureau in Washington in making public statistics of income for 1934.

The bureau's records showed that 773 individuals returned profits of $6,145,519 in 1934, as compared with 413 individuals reporting $4,046,964 in 1933. At the same time, 170 individuals reported their 1934 losses from amusement industries to have been $1,004,676, compared with 155 persons reporting losses of $1,138,304 the preceding year. These figures, it was stated, do not include salaries, commissions or other remuneration of like nature received by the reporting individuals, nor do they cover the financial experience of any corporations with which they have been connected.

The highest profit reported in 1934 was $85,660, which was $20 less than the top in 1933. The greatest loss was something over $50,000, four persons reporting losses between $50,000 and $75,000 for a total of $224,075; the top loss in 1933 was also in the same bracket, four persons reporting a total of $269,419.

Walter Wanger Speeds Production Schedule

Despite the fact that his current contract with United Artists calls for the delivery of only six pictures, Walter Wanger plans to complete eight films before his departure for Italy June 1 and he has speeded up his production schedule to finish the two extra productions by that date. The uncertainty of the present European conditions prompted the producer to enlarge his list, he said, and in the event war did break out by spring he wanted to be protected.

Cuban Officials Consider Board to Aid Film Industry

A bill has been introduced in the Cuban Senate which provides for the creation of an organization to be known as the Patronato de la Cinematografia Nacional (National Motion Picture Board), to supervise and assist the development of a domestic film industry. The proposed legislation would also create a Motion Picture Academy to engage the services of cameramen, makeup artists, electricians and other technicians. Under the bill the Board would lend financial assistance to Cuban individuals or companies for the production of films.

Young Reviewers Select Pictures

The young Reviewers and 4-Star Clubs of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, comprising some 300 boys and girls ranging from eight to 17 years of age and representing every state in the country, have voted the following pictures the year's outstanding productions in the order named:

"The Great Ziegfeld," "Anthony Adverse," "San Francisco," "Romeo and Juliet,' "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "Story of Louis Pasteur," "The Devil Is a Sissy," "The Last of the Mohicans" and "Mary of Scotland."

Phoenix Officers Plan New Kentucky Circuit

John B. Elliott, president and general manager, and Miss Anna Bell Ward, second vice-president and assistant manager of the Phoenix Amusement Company of Kentucky, recently taken over by the Schine circuit, are planning the formation of a new theatre circuit with headquarters in Lexington. Mr. Elliott's son, Morgan W. Elliott, who was associated with the Phoenix company for 15 years, and Nelson Ward, Miss Ward's brother, who is interested in a number of theatres in Kentucky, also will be members of the new organization.

Lottie Pickford, Actress, Is Dead

Lottie Pickford, sister of Mary Pickford, and a stage and screen actress in her own right, died of a heart attack at her home in Hollywood last Thursday night. She was 41 years old, two years younger than her sister, Mary. Her husband, John Locke, also an actor; her daughter, Gwynne, and Miss Pickford were at her bedside when she died.

Funeral services were held at Wee Kirk of the Heather chapel on Sunday and more than 150 representatives of all branches of the industry were in attendance. Among those were Sid Grauman, Jack Mulhall, Ella Hall, George Schaefer, Robert Fairbanks, his wife and two daughters, Letitia and Lucille.

Lottie Pickford was born in Toronto June 9, 1895, the daughter of John Smith, Great Lakes steamer purser, and Mrs. Charlotte Smith. When her sister Mary went on the stage at the age of five, she soon followed. Later they toured in such roadshows as "Little Red School House" and "The Two Orphans." She entered pictures in 1920 and her last major role was in "The Diamond in the Sky," an early Paramount production.

Nicholas Schenck Heads Bond Committee for Fair

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., and of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been named chairman of the committee for the motion picture industry which will participate in the campaign to sell $27,829,500 of debenture bonds to finance construction of the New York World's Fair. Mr. Schenck's committee is one of 68 volunteer groups representing trade and industry organized by the New York World's Fair Bond Sales Committee. The film group will be concerned with producers, distributors and exhibitors.

Academy Names Committee

Duncan Cramer, Stephen Gooson, John Harkrider, Bernard Herzbrun, Fred Hope, John Hughes, Max Parker, Willy Pogany, Van Nest Polglase, A. Toluboff and Gordon S. Mitchell have been appointed as a committee to study the rules under which nominations for the art direction awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences have been made and recommend any improvements which are developed.

S.O.S. Corporation Moving

The S.O.S. Corporation, of which J. A. Tanney is president, now located at 1600 Broadway in New York, will move to the Film Center at 630 Ninth Ave. in January. Increased space has been found necessary because of expansion plans, Mr. Tanney said.

Forms Theatre Service

Elmer H. Brient, theatre operator at Richmond, Va., has formed Theatre Business Service, which is designed to offer to the theatre owners all types of needed service, including management, advertising and exploitation, financing accountancy, income tax consultation and the like.

EXHIBITORS AND DISTRIBUTORS WILL FIGHT PROPOSALS IN MOYNE REPORT

Government Control Suggestion Causes Alarm; Fifty Per Cent Quota Is Called an Impossibility

Political Support Promised for Action Against Proposed Legislation, Held Unlikely This Year in Any Case

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

Opposition to the chief proposals in the Report of the ("Moyne") Statutory Committee on the Films Act is hardening. It became definite immediately members of the industry had had time to digest that document. In regard to the three main suggestions of the committee:

An official Film Commission to administer a new Films Act and generally to supervise the industry;

The establishment of an annually Variable Quota of British films, based on the previous year's output and planned to rise to 50 per cent in ten years;

Institution of an official Quality Test for British films submitted to registration, there was significant evidence that exhibitors and distributors were likely to come together in a joint campaign of protest.

Envisaged as a possible outcome of the controversy precipitated by the report is the establishment in England of a joint trade body functioning somewhat on the lines of the MPPDA, but including exhibitors as well as distributors and reflecting their common attitude of opposition to the new legislation now suggested.

The first public references to the problems raised by the report were made at the luncheon tendered to Will H. Hays by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association before his return to America, and this occasion was also significant by the public expression of the desire of the Kinematograph Renters Society to cooperate with the CEA.

Urges Intra-Industry Solution

T. H. Fligelstone, president of the CEA, quoted from the report a paragraph suggesting that the trade had been unable to achieve self-government and said: "I wonder whether we require a State commission or Cinema Control Board? I have always advocated that we should solve our problems within the trade. . . . The CEA has always sought the cooperation and assistance of other sections of the trade, but that cooperation and assistance have not always been forthcoming."

He significantly added, referring to the fact that the CEA was left unsupported by distributors in its fight against the original Films Act: "It is to be hoped the same misjudgment will not be made now as was made in 1926."

Pointed references to the appositeness of the visit of Mr. Hays were made by Mr. Fligelstone, who remarked that, whenever we had to face a crisis in England, the cry went up: "We need a Will Hays."

"If you can give the British industry a lead in the direction of self-government," he said, addressing Mr. Hays, "your visit will go down in history as one of the greatest events in the industry."

Mr. Hays did not respond directly to this invitation, refusing to discuss "potentially controversial matters" and confining his speech to the necessity of a spirit of cooperation in maintaining a high level in films, but J. C. Graham of Paramount, proposing the health of the guests, said, as spokesman of the distributors:

"If we have before us any great problem, as seems to be the case, the KRS is ready and willing to stand shoulder to shoulder with the CEA to discuss things for the common good."

REINHARDT PRAISES AMERICAN THEATRE

Max Reinhardt, producer and director of stage and screen plays, in New York this week to supervise "The Eternal Road" rehearsals, observed that "America is fast becoming the sole refuge for the free spirits of humanity" and said that he has detected in Eugene O'Neil's winning of the Nobel Prize "the proof that Europe is revising its attitude and views toward the American stage."

Self-Government Asked

Further references were made to the possibility of the establishment of efficient self-government of the British industry at the dinner tendered Mr. Hays by the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries the following evening. This function at the Mayfair hotel was attended by the principals of most of the leading companies of the industry, and John Maxwell proposed the toast of the guest of honor, whom he described as "a visitor from Olympian heights."

Saying that Mr. Hays had arrived at the important moment of the end of the first act of the British production drama, to which the Moyne Report had provided a dramatic curtain, but that he did not propose to discuss the report, or ask Mr. Hays to discuss it, Mr. Maxwell added:

"The formation of the MPPDA was an inspiration and to put Mr. Hays at the head of it was a masterstroke. Mr. Hays has controlled great forces and achieved great things. England might well broaden her views on that point."

Mr. Maxwell had also some significant things to say about Anglo-American cooperation, which he described as "inevitable and eminently desirable."

"The stage seems set for the next act," he added, "and Will Hays will have a star part."

In his response, Mr. Hays created laughter by referring to "that unmentionable, from my standpoint, document the Moyne Report" only as the cue for a humorous but significant story of a darky who, paying in his savings at a bank, was immediately told that the institution was suspending payment and remarked: "Waal, I've had banks break before, but that the first time a bank bust in my face."

It is an open secret in Wardour Street that, while Mr. Hays preserved an extreme reticence in his public utterances, he was in conference with representatives of American distributors in regard to the special problems raised by the Moyne Report, and great importance is attached to his presence at the present juncture, in view of the open invitation of distributor cooperation made by Mr. Fligelstone.

To the considerable section of the British trade which believes the Films Act to be partly the result of American indifference 10 years ago, particular importance is attached to the fact that the leader of the American industry has, on this occasion, learned the facts at first hand.

Note Exhibitors' Protests

In distribution circles the pronounced hostility on the part of exhibitors to the Moyne suggestions is an encouraging and to some extent a surprising factor. Two proposed changes in the existing law are directly in accord with the suggestions made to the committee by the CEA. These are the "stepping" of the quota in favor of the exhibitor and the institution of a quality clause. The actual distributor-exhibitor quota ratio suggested in the report is 20:15, whereas the CEA asked 20:10, but it is not this discrepancy which has caused the exhibitors' body to regard the report as dangerous. Undoubtedly, the threat of Government control has had the greatest effect on opinion, and the introduction of the principle of variability in the quota, with a 50 per cent maximum envisaged, has intensified the alarm.

It is probable that when the CEA-KRS contact has proceeded to the point of the discussion of details, distributors will present exhibitors with a number of cogent commercial reasons why the quality clause may also work to their detriment. That exhibitors did not want quality to be decided by Government officials was taken for granted.

See Loss of "B" Films

Chief of the business objections to the quality provision is that, if American distributors are forced to make British films on a greatly increased scale of cost, it will not pay them to import their "B" films; the British coverage will cost too much. Unfortunately, whatever the theorists of British production may say, the American "B" film is very often a better picture, from the point of view of audience value, than a British "A" film, and its absence from distributors' schedule would mean a very definite shortage of program material.

After an emergency sitting of the General Purposes Committee of the CEA there was an adjournment with the general expectation that closer contact would be established with the KRS.

General opinion regarding the Moyne Report is undoubtedly increasingly taking the form that the main proposals are unprecedented and that they will so be regarded in Parliament when, or rather if, the Government introduces a new Films Act based on the report.

Law This Session Doubted

Two facts appear to be established. The first is that the Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, consulted the cabinet before he decided to publish the report, owing to its extreme character and the controversy it would be bound to create. The second is that there is no prospect of legislation being introduced during the present overcrowded session.

A third factor which may be taken for granted is that, without any appeal from the trade, there would be determined opposition to a "Moyne" bill from a very large number of M. P.s, of all parties, if it embodied the principle of State control, direct or indirect, of the film industry.

This feeling is regarded as so widespread as, in the opinion of well-informed persons, to make it highly unlikely that the cabinet will eventually accept the principle of the Film Commission, or of the indirect subsidization of the British production industry.

Cite Early Idea

Also certain to be brought forward prominently in Parliament is the consideration that the original act was passed on the understanding that the British production industry needed the support of a quota only during its first years of struggle and that it was intended to end this support in 1938, when studio facilities and actual production experience were expected to be adequate to insure self-support.

Elementary, but entirely disregarded in the report, is the further consideration that the British cinema theatre lives chiefly on the superior quality of American films, that the public wants those films, and that public opinion has it in its power to make a 50 per cent quota not only unworkable but farcical.

With these facts in mind, and with time to formulate a policy, the powerful section of the British trade which regards the report as advocating a disastrous policy is not disposed to panic.

Third of Cost from U. S.

Herbert Wilcox anticipates recovering one-third of the negative cost from the United States market on the five productions he will distribute in America through G-B Pictures, he said on his return from a visit to the United States. He decided to release the five through G-B after considering the offers of several major companies, he indicated.

"The United States is as wide open to British films as England itself," Mr. Wilcox said.

$1,654,210 London Films Loss

London Films showed a loss of £330,842 ($1,654,210) for the year ended May 2, according to the financial statement just issued. The issued share capital was revealed at £428,549; £500,000 in first debenture stock; £453,562 in a loan secured by other debentures, and £549,291 in other secured loans.

The amount due to creditors was listed at £288,892. Assets were valued in the aggregate at £2,229,973, including £751,845 for films completed or in progress and £561,149 for property and equipment. The debtor account listed £41,408 and cash of £5,403. Including £26,967 from the previous year, the total debit balance is £368,973.

London Films is a public company but has made no issue, since the shares have been acquired privately, chiefly by Prudential Assurance Company.

Sam Smith has completed a deal with Alexander Korda of London Films for a Korda subsidiary which will produce inexpensive pictures at Denham to be released through Smith's British Lion. The object of the deal is to employ unoccupied space at the Denham plant without cheapening the London trademark.

The Scripps-Howard chain of 23 newspapers selected Warner's "The Charge of the Light Brigade" as the "Picture of the Month" for November. The selection was based on a vote taken among the motion picture critics of the chain.

Karl Tunberg Promoted

Karl Tunberg, assistant to Gene Markey at Twentieth Century-Fox in Hollywood, has been promoted to the studio writing staff. Ralph Dietrich, cutter, is Mr. Markey's new assistant.

C. C. Burr Opens Offices

C. C. Burr, who will produce six "Crime and Courage" features which he will distribute through the state rights market, has opened offices at the International Studios in Hollywood.

Republic-Philippine Deal

Morris Goodman, vice-president in charge of foreign sales at Republic Pictures, has closed with Acme Films, Inc., of Manila, for distribution in the Philippine Islands.

Louis Lazar has been appointed operating head of seven theatres in Kentucky which the Schine circuit recently acquired from the Phoenix Amusement Company.

Strike Dismissals In WPA Theatre Fought by Unions

Despite announcements from Washington last week that scheduled reductions in the Works Progress Administration rolls would be greatly modified, workers in the Federal Theatre and other projects continued to protest dismissals and to demand the reinstatement of those dropped for insubordination following sit-down strikes in New York.

A meeting of WPA Theatre Project workers and sympathizers in the Manhattan Opera House, New York, on Saturday almost ended in a riot after undercurrent differences between American Federation of Labor unions and work relief organizations of recent origin were partially aired for the first time. The meeting was called by Allied Theatrical Crafts, A. F. of L. affiliate, but a majority of the audience consisted of members of WPA unions.

A resolution, introduced by Heywood Broun, president of the American Newspaper Guild, and unanimously adopted, indorsed the right of labor to strike and demanded the reinstatement of WPA workers dismissed for engaging in sit-down strikes. Insistence by Morris Watson, a leader of the Federation of WPA supervisors, that he be allowed to speak led to the rioting.

Mr. Broun's resolution was supported by Philip Loeb, a leader of the old Actor's Forum, insurgent group within Actors' Equity Association, Paul Dullzell, executive secretary of Equity, and Dorothy Bryant, executive secretary of Chorus Equity. Frank Gillmore, Equity president who left the meeting after a brief speech in which he did not specifically mention WPA but urged jobs for all, said that Equity still stood by its recent ruling against strikes or picketing on WPA. An official of the Allied Theatrical Crafts group described the matter of sit-down strikes as "extraneous."

Besides Mr. Gillmore and Mr. Broun, other speakers at the meeting were William Collins, A. F. of L. organizer for New York City; Lee Simonson, of Local 829 of the Scenic Artists Union; William Feinberg, vice-president of Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians; Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the American Federation of Actors, and John Howard Lawson, of the Authors League of America.

Representatives of ten college dramatic societies in New York City met at the School of Business, Columbia University, last week and formed the Inter-collegiate Council of Federal Theatre Committees. It was understood that the purpose of the Council was to seek continuance and expansion of the Federal Theatre into a national theatre. William Lieberson, of the New York University Hall of Fame players, was elected chairman of the Council.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

Three Victoria Films

Lord Tyrrell of Avon, president of the British Board of Film Censors, announced this week that the ban on films introducing the figure of Queen Victoria would be withdrawn as from June 20th, 1937.

On the following day three British producers had announced plans to make films including the great Queen, Herbert Wilcox leading with the story that he would offer "Victoria the Great," a panorama of the events of the Sixty Years' Reign, that the director would be one of the Hollywood British colony and that work on the floor would begin in February, making the film available immediately after the ban lapsed.

From London Films came the announcement of "Queen Victoria," stated to be actually in preparation by Alexander Korda for a September release.

Michael Balcon, production chief of Gaumont-British, simultaneously said that, as one of its new season's major productions, his company would either adapt the Sil Vara play, "Girlhood of a Queen," which covers Victoria's first three years on the throne, or would use another story ranging over her whole life-story. If "Girlhood of a Queen" is used, this Continental success would be given its first stage production in London under G-B auspices and Nova Pilbeam would play the young Victoria.

Relaxation of the film ban on the Queen's figure followed on an announcement from the Lord Chamberlain's office that the stage prohibition would be lifted. It has kept "Victoria Regina" off the London stage. Officially, since there has been a lapse of two full reigns, Victoria is now an historical figure.

New Hagen Castings

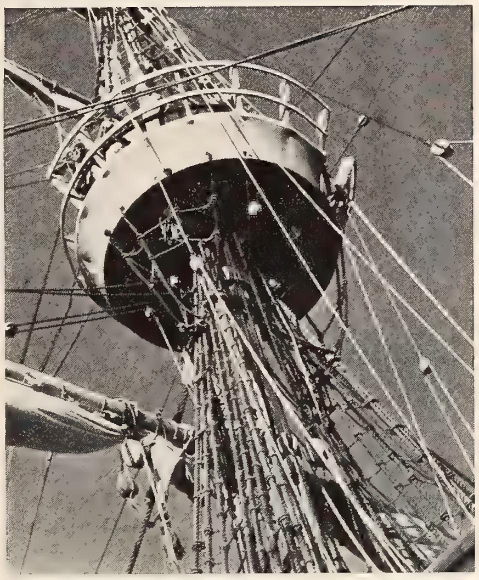
Added to the players in Julius Hagen's "The Vicar of Bray," in its third week at Hammersmith, are Garry Marsh, Fred O'Donovan, George Merritt, Eve Gray and William Caithness, and Keith Hamilton Price, Croydon Repertory player recently signed by Hagen, did his first work for the camera as the young Prince Charles.

Mona Goya, French star who played in Hagen's Boris Karloff "Juggernaut," flew from Paris for three days work in "She Got What She Wanted," at the J. H. studios, Elstree. Rod La Rocque, Tucker McGuire and Constance Collier were in the same scenes. F. McGrew Willis, dialogue author of the film, is back on the job after two weeks' influenza.

Donat Catches Up

Robert Donat, making up arrears of scenes caused by his illness, has done several solus sequences for "Knight without Armour" at Denham; Marlene Dietrich has had her first break from the set since shooting started, while Donat has played episodes of the assassination of a Russian minister during a drive through St. Petersburg. The big Denham exterior lot known as "City Square" was surrounded by realistically snow-covered buildings for these scenes. For later sequences, a tangled Russian forest has been built on one of the covered floors; highlight among a number of scenes scheduled for this setting is one in which Miss Dietrich, bathing in a forest pool, is disturbed by a searching Red patrol.

Also in progress at Denham are "Troopship," directed by Tim Whelan, and Victor Saville's "Storm in a Teacup." Leslie Banks, Flora Robson and Robert Cochrane, last seen in "The Man Who Could Work Miracles," have played scenes for the first named and Patricia Hilliard, after a year's stage work in "Call It a Day," has joined the cast. For the Saville picture current sets represent a Scottish courtroom, with "Scruffy," famous film dog, on trial for his life, Arthur Wontner is playing prosecuting counsel and Sara Allgood, famous repertory player, has a rich old-woman part. Cast in this picture is Violet Hopson, early star of British silent films.



Illustrating the attention paid to detail in a ship of the Armada fleet built for "Fire Over England," London Films production produced by Erich Pommer and directed by William K. Howard. Principal roles are taken by Flora Robson, Leslie Banks, Raymond Massey, Laurence Olivier, Vivien Leigh and Morton Selten.

Signs Prima Donna

Arthur Maude of Morgan Productions and Winwood Pictures has signed Erna Sack, German prima donna, for the leading part in "Prince Otto," adapted from the Robert Louis Stevenson novel, which goes on the floor at the Rock studios in January, for Morgan. He has an option on her services for two further films.

Fraulein Sack recently appeared in Oscar Straus's "Ariadne" at Covent Garden, under the conductorship of the composer, who wrote certain songs for her exceptionally high voice—an octave over high C. She is booked for the Metropolitan Opera.

On the Rock floor at the moment is the first Morgan musical, "Stardust," for which RCA ultra-violet recording is being used for the first time in England. Produced by William Rowland and directed by Melville Brown, the film includes Lupe Velez, Wallace Ford, Ben Lyon, Jean Colin, Harry Langdon, Francis Lister and Cyril Raymond. Lyrics and music are by James Dyrenforth and Kenneth Leslie Smith and John Stumar, late of Columbia, is in charge of cameras and lighting.

Monte Carlo, England

For the Criterion production, "Forever and Forever," at Worton Hall, an exact reproduction of the famous gambling rooms in the Casino at Monte Carlo has been used this week. Roulette and baccarat tables, as used on the spot, caused a considerable transport problem.

Jim Burnett, Canadian champion "all-in" wrestler, played a big fight scene with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and in preparation is a reproduction of the New Orleans water-front covering 50,000 square feet. Before it is reached, Valerie Hobson has to play a scene with Fairbanks in which the latter, is a "cat-burglar."

Fairbanks, Senior, recently visited Worton Hall, watching his son being directed by Raoul Walsh, who many years ago made "The Thief of Baghdad" for the father.

HMS Pinewood

The Herbert Wilcox sea picture, made in cooperation with the Admiralty and the Navy League, which has had the working title of "The Navy Eternal," has been finally titled "The Fighting Navy." Norman Walker, directing, has almost finished shooting.

Trapeze Accident

June Clyde, starring in Standard International's "Make Up" at Sound City, is on "vacation," due to falling from a high trapeze. Production has continued in a circus-ring set in which performing animals have shared the honours with Nils Asther.

Alfred Zeisler is directing the picture, adapted from Hans Possendorfer's "Bux," and Eric Cross is cameraman. In the cast are Judy Kelly, Kenneth Duncan, Lawrence Anderson, Lawrence Grossmith, John Turnbull, Billy Wells, ex-champion heavyweight, and Johnny Schofield.

Itemized

Hans Sonker, Continental star, to play in a second picture for Warner-First National.

Widgey Newman granted Royal permission to film interiors of Westminster Abbey for "Our Royal Heritage," special Coronation feature.

Otto Dyar arrived to take up duty as Director of Still and Portrait Photography to Gaumont-British.

Harold Huth, casting director to G-B, on resigning, took a part in the Hulbert-Courtneidge "Take My Tip."

Gracie Fields started work on "The Show Goes On" at ATP, Ealing.

Zasu Pitts is to start "Wanted" at Sound City, George King directing, on Monday. Claude Dampier is opposite.

Beloved Enemy

(United Artists - Goldwyn)

Romantic Drama

Against the seething dramatic background of the 1921 Irish uprising in Dublin, with all its forceful atmosphere of desperate, daring, personal hatred and national enmity, "Beloved Enemy" tells a heart touching love story. As both qualities finely counterbalance the film is a man's picture with potent appeal for womanhood. In a strict sense, its power amplified by high caliber acting, direction and production support, "Beloved Enemy" is a touching exposition of the sacrifices women make and the prices they pay as the men they love fight and die for a noble ideal.

Drama in which there is considerable comedy content accentuates the first sequences of the story. Dennis Riordan, idealistic leader of the desperate rebels, so brazenly admits his identity to Britain when captured that they refuse to believe him. It's eruptive drama when O'Brien sacrifices his life to prevent the capture of Riordan, which would mean death to the leader of the Cause.

To Dublin comes Lord Athleigh, accompanied by his daughter Helen, an English emissary charged with the responsibility of ascertaining how a centuries long conflict, that has cost two nations millions in treasure and countless lives, can be successfully terminated. The first meeting of Dennis and Helen sews the threads of the appealing love story that is to follow. Admiring this reckless man, her sympathies for Irish womanhood are aroused upon the occasion of her meeting with O'Brien's widow and child. Admiration for Dennis ripening into affection, Helen's hope is to do something to bring the bloody wars to an end. In that intent she almost betrays the man she has grown to love.

Repenting her treachery, and as Riordan's life is again in danger, she pleads with her father, who is convinced that only through the fury of intensive war can peace be attained, to invite Riordan and his compatriots to a round table discussion with the British government, and begs Dennis to accept the invitation. Over the strong objection of his council, headed by dangerous Burke, Dennis leads a delegation into London.

At a reception tendered by Athleigh, the troubled but happy love interest between Helen and Dennis dominates, and that the Irish visitors view with alarm. About the council table both sides make concessions. The British are willing to grant anything but absolute independence. That, the dream of the obdurate Irish for centuries, is what the emissaries hold out for. It is the influence of Helen that causes Dennis to cast his vote that establishes the Irish Free State, a dominion under the English Flag. As he signs the treaty, he announces he is signing his own death warrant.

Back in Dublin, as the English invaders move out, Dennis pleads with the people to accept the new status. In a cellar council chamber, the diehard rebels, succumbing to the forceful power of Burke, decree that Dennis is a traitor to the cause for which thousands of lads gave their lives, and must die. To Cowan, Dennis' companion in many a daring adventure, is assigned the duty of killing him. Even the dramatic plea of Helen, who has learned that her man is doomed, cannot stay their hand. As Dennis addresses the citizenry, a shot rings out and he crumples in a car. His dream of love and happiness with Helen blasted, he dies in Helen's arms.

A powerful and appealing picture, it is acted, directed and produced with sincerity and understanding. Worthy of a prominent place in the list of Samuel Goldwyn pictures, it is desirable entertainment for any kind of audience and a showmanship attraction that exhibitors should heartily welcome.

Previewed in the Warner Hollywood Theatre. Its presentation held the attention of the audience continually. The burst of applause which swept the house upon the film's conclusion is basis for the opinion that "Beloved Enemy" will have no difficulty in making the big profit making picture class.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Camille

(MGM)

Romantic Drama

In the manner in which individuals accept things today, "Camille" is both a dramatic romance and a dramatic tragedy. In both phases, whether the action and dialogue happen to be dealing with its intimate love story or the dramatic disappointment of heartbreak, the film is what is known as a tear jerker. Like "Romeo and Juliet" and "East Lynne" and similar vehicles that have stood the test of time, as well as the changing fancies of successive generations, "Camille" tells a story that continually seeks to touch the deepest emotions. Essentially the show is a woman's picture. Also it is one that with their interests properly aroused should engage the attention of general audiences.

"Camille" is localed in Paris and the French countryside. The time is 1846. Costumes and settings are of the period. Substantiating production detail reflects the habits, characters and modes of life of the social strata with which the story deals. Yet under skillful treatment, directing and acting, the significance of the subject matter in the motivation does not savor of being dated.

A fragile butterfly of the era, antecedent of today's golddiggers, lures an innocent lovesick boy. There is another man, one who bought and paid for his love. Beset by the financial problems that are the lot of all golddiggers, the woman succumbs to the devotion of the boy, accepts his invitation to a rendevous in the peaceful countryside. There their romantic life is lived, beyond the pale. Eventually the relationship becomes known to the boy's father. He pleads with the woman and succeeds in convincing her that she should give him up. The manner in which she elects to do this is one calculated to kill any remaining spark of affection the boy may have for her. It precipitates a duel between the rivals for the woman's love, which causes the boy to flee the country. He returns to find her living the old gay life, but one in which the spark of inspired love is not entirely dead. As the boy returns to her, he finds her suffering from a fatal illness. Begging her to live for him and love, the woman dies in his arms.

As Marguerite, Greta Garbo gives an impressive performance. Robert Taylor is convincingly effective. Yet it takes the best work of which both are capable to prevent Henry Daniell, the other man (Baron de Varville) from stealing the picture. Though the general tone of the picture is serious, it is not without a full quota of comedy relief, a quality which is pleasingly taken care of by Lenore Ulric and Laura Hope Crews, the first a rival of Garbo, the second a passé irascible old dame who can't forget she no longer is young. Lionel Barrymore, Rex O'Malley and Russell Hardie contribute measurably to the film's quality, and the work of the support is high caliber.

The picture is presented in an atmosphere of dignity and good taste. In interpreting the spirit of the Alexandre Dumas novel and play on which it is based, it does so with intelligence and understanding. Primarily the film is an adult attraction. Its topic is too complex for juvenile understanding.

Comedy

Wholesome, amusing, this is not only a substantial attraction for grownups, but of the kind that comes in for more than usual attention from the juveniles. As it heroizes a Boy Scout Troop in a way that undoubtedly will be acceptable to patrons and members of that organization, it is wide open for healthful cooperative contacts.

While there is a lot of youthful atmosphere attached to the film, it is by no means a kid show. The individuals whose troubles precipitate all the fun are grownups. With Charlie Ruggles giving his usual pleasing performance and such players as Lyle Talbot, Alice Brady, Benny Baker, Jack LaRue, Frankie Darro, Lloyd Crane, William Demarest, Gene Lockhart, Charles Wilson, William Davidson and Theodore Von Eltz as well as the Scouts helping him nicely, the comedy of the show is the result of clever story writing and smartly contrived situations.

It's all about a willy nilly newspaper columnist who writes about birds and bees and whose chief hobby is being a Scout leader. Under fire from his boss and ordered to pep up his copy, he takes his problems to his wife, who gives him the idea of writing his material in the most approved keyhole columnist style. The stunt gets him into hot water with gangsters and crooked politicians who kidnap him. But just when it looks as if he's going to get the works, the Scouts come to the rescue. The chase is a wildly hectic affair that can be depended upon to have audiences in stitches.

Previewed in the Alexander theatre, Glendale. The audience was not a bit disappointed in its expectancy of what would happen when Ruggles headed the billing.—G. M.

Sinner Take All

(MGM)

Mystery Drama

Story content, characterizations of the players, quality of directorial technique and application of production detail, plus the manner in which musical accompaniment functions, combine to make this an out-and-out multiple murder mystery drama. Heavily accenting suspense, with a thread of romantic love interest woven in, but without much comedy, the film is pointed directly at the crime solution devotees.

Four members of a wealthy family receive death threats simultaneously. The fears of father Aaron Lampier and those of his two sons, David and Stephen, and his daughter Lorraine bring reporter-lawyer Ernie Hyams into the case. As the mysterious figure of Ernie's editorial boss, MacKelvey, lurks in the background, one by one the three male members of the family are killed. With traces of romantic love interest influencing the activities of Ernie and the surviving Lorraine, the hero, working in conjunction with police investigator Royce, is getting no place fast in solving the identity and motive of the killer. At the same time it doesn't seem that much can be done to save Lorraine from being a victim. Nevertheless in collusion with the sinister night club gambler Penny, who most of the way is looked upon as the principal suspect, Ernie and Royce take up a trail suggested by him that leads to the culprit. His identity (MacKelvey) and the reason for his criminal activities established, he kills himself, and though everything that previously has happened to Ernie and Lorraine is pretty terrible, they happily contemplate marriage.

Acceptable to those who appreciate the chill and thrill brand of entertainment, the film nevertheless is hardly of the amusement quality that can aspire to arouse spontaneous enthusiasm on the part of general audiences.

That Girl from Paris

(RKO Radio)

Musical Romance

This musical romance, presented in the atmosphere of slapstick comedy, offers much for enthusiastic support of public and exhibitor. In all phases the film has but one objective: to provide the maximum amount of good music, airy romance and wholesome fun. Judging from the reactions of the preview audience, which at first seemed to think that it was in for just one more exhibition of a cultured voice but quickly succumbed to the spell of the show's comic mood, "That Girl from Paris" points toward a whetting of interest by initial publicity and by word-of-mouth advertising.

The plot is simple and surprisingly human. Yet it's what is done to it, and how it is done, with smart directorial technique and clever acting, that endows the picture with its unusual entertainment and commercial quality.

In the yarn Lily Pons deserts Gregory Gaye at the altar and becomes attached to Gene Raymond, Jack Oakie, Mischa Auer and Frank Jenks, members of a jazz band skylarking in Paris. Stowing away on a boat bearing the troubadors to America, she gets them in dutch with ship's officers, and in further trouble with immigration officials, by hiding out in their apartment. Singing, music and comedy intermingling Miss Pons becomes romantically interested in Raymond, but not in such a manner as to discourage lady's man Oakie. Eventually through the fast working influence of Lucille Ball, who also has an eye for Raymond, the band gets a job in Herman Bing's roadhouse. When Lily puts the skids under Lucille by soaping her shoes to make her dancing specialty a travesty of slapstick, she replaces her rival as the band's singing star. To save her from the clutches of immigration folk the boys cut cards to see who shall marry her and thus prevent deportation. Oakie wins, as he wins every other cut, but Raymond talks him into letting him sacrifice himself to the girl. As the cops grab her and the boys, she learns about the slick trick, and denounces the lot.

Gaye appears on the scene to bail her out and she in turn, secretly, bails out her benefactors. About to be launched on a Metropolitan Opera career, Oakie, Jenks and Auer plot to wreck her debut. Learning of the dastardly plan from Bing, Raymond rushes to the rescue, arriving in time to see his pals surrender to the charms of Lily's voice. This time it's Oakie who hatches up a hilarious plan to swipe Lily from Gaye and marry her to Raymond.

A combination of fun and music for both the classes and masses, "That Girl from Paris" places something substantial in the hands of exhibitors to sell. The kind of attraction that will not belie one's personal recommendation, the more effort that is put into calling it to public attention the greater the payoff should be.

Pennies from Heaven

(Columbia)

Comedy, Romance

Entertainment values are plentiful in this latest of Bing Crosby's starring roles. It is easily the best material he has had to work with to date. Whether in the fields of comedy and romance or in his favored role of crooner, Crosby here provides an enjoyable production. As is usually the case Crosby dominates the picture, but there is ample opportunity for little Edith Fellows to come close to winning equal attention.

The music of Arthur Johnson and the lyrics by John Burke constitute two of the really catchy numbers of the season in the title song "Pennies from Heaven" and "One, Two, Button Your Shoe." Another song, a romantic ballad, "So Do I," is tuneful. Louis Armstrong sings and plays the trumpet in a novelty number, "Skeleton in the Closet." It is a well balanced selection of songs and musical arrangement.

A human interest story woven around Edith Fellowes as a parentless girl who is dead set against going to an orphan asylum, doesn't neglect the romantic factor as Madge Evans, a social worker, and Crosby fall in love. Donald Meek as Miss Fellowes' grandfather turns in his usual commendable performance of the "Caspar Milquetoast" type.

Crosby, a vagabond with a lute, after completing a questionable prison sentence, travels to a small New Jersey town to deliver a letter from a condemned prisoner to the family of the murderer's victim. The family, composed of Miss Fellowes and Meek, are in difficult straits financially and also with the town's social welfare bureau, which for a long time has been trying to assign Edith to an orphan asylum.

Bequeathed a house in an adjoining town, a legacy of the condemned prisoner, Edith, Meek and Crosby turn the house into a night club. Forced to close the place for lack of enough money to obtain a license, Crosby does a daredevil act in a circus playing the town. He is injured and sent to the hospital. With Crosby in the hospital, Edith is taken to an orphanage.

Crosby blames Miss Evans for the act, but she meanwhile has resigned from the welfare bureau after an argument with its director. Escaping from the hospital, Crosby gathers the circus to play a benefit at the orphanage. An attempt to smuggle Edith out of the orphanage inside a bass drum falls just short of success. Later Miss Evans and Crosby meet in New York. They plan to marry and adopt Edith, who in the meantime has caused the orphanage authorities no end of trouble by going on a hunger strike.

Exploitation angles of the picture are many, but it would appear that the popularity of Bing Crosby coupled with the catchy title should be sufficient drawing power in most cases, not forgetting a word for Edith Fellows.

Great Guy

(Grand National - MacLean)

Drama

Never a screen character who permitted his hands to be idle when there was someone around deserving a sock, James Cagney comes back in a fist swinging topical drama that should please his followers and give others an exciting bit of entertainment. Basically, "Great Guy" is a racketeer expose drama. Sticking to that theme fairly consistently, it is one in which the elements of romance, comedy, intrigue and quite a bit of political skullduggery also have prominent functions.

Based on a series of stories that ran some time ago in Saturday Evening Post, "Great Guy" concerns itself with a one man crusade to protect the public by wiping out the short weight in merchandise packages. His 100 per cent efficient activities arousing the antagonism of petty politicians, Johnny Cave is framed into a fake character-destroying auto accident by ward healer Marty Cavanaugh. Relieved from his predicament and consequently supposed to be under obligations to the worthy Marty, Johnny continues, however, to put the rap on short weighters. Sensing that there's a higher-up master mind, he spurns the Mayor's offer of a soft, well-paying job. Finally he becomes convinced that the supposedly respectable Canning, who, incidentally, is the boss of his sweetheart, Janet Henry, is the big shot. Naturally his suspicions cause her affections for him to take a decided drop, but Johnny, with the aid of his assistant, Haley, gets the goods on Canning, Cavanaugh, et al. Though strong arm man Burton makes a sucker of him, Johnny, aided by his onetime pal Reilly, is able to trap the two big shots in Burton's apartment, where they have found the evidence which was stolen from him. Ensues a hectic sequence in which Cavanaugh quits after a bad beating at the hands of Johnny. The racket broken up therewith, Janet comes to believe with Johnny that he's a great guy in more ways than one.

Of the character that stirs the enthusiasm of those who like to see a lot of action happen on the screen, the picture is also an auspicious reentry for Cagney. In its topical phases, it has elements that can be made the basis for unique exploitation.

Previewed in the Village theatre, Westwood. As the producer has announced that sequences which failed to hold audience attention will be eliminated, it may be expected that the speed of the final picture will be considerably stepped up.—G. M.

The Flying Doctor

(Gaumont-British)

Romantic Drama

Quite apart from any question of merit, "The Flying Doctor" claims international attention. It is the first talking picture made in Australia by an Australian producing organization in association with a British corporation. It is the first film made in the Commonwealth by a British director with British technicians, and its star is the American actor, Charles Farrell. Moreover, its distribution will be handled on the Australian market by Twentieth Century-Fox free of cost as a gesture towards the local producing industry, thereby saving National Productions an estimated sum of £12,000.

Judged on Australian standards, "The Flying Doctor" rates high. While it lacks the production polish of imported product, it nevertheless represents a decided advancement over previous Australian pictures, leading one to believe that, with experience, local studios will deliver something that looks more like the work of professionals and less like the result of an amateur's hobby.

In contrast to the earlier Australian pictures, the players have created an illusion of reality, and that awkward "staginess" which always has been a depressing feature of local product is for the most part absent. Charles Farrell's performance is unquestionably up to the best he has delivered in Hollywood films. The feminine members of the cast are inadequate. Mary McGuire, who since has found a niche for herself in Hollywood with Twentieth Century-Fox, photographs brilliantly but acts with a total lack of animation and imagination. If she has latent talent more strenuous direction should help her considerably. The story is shockingly weak. Had the director and players been given an expertly prepared script, they may have turned out a most praiseworthy venture.

From a technical standpoint, "The Flying Doctor" leaves nothing to be desired. Sound and photography are faultless. Overseas audiences will see typical Australian scenes and landmarks that should interest them greatly. Not only will they see glimpses of out-back station life, but the rush and bustle of Australian cities, the famous Sydney harbor and harbor bridge, Australia's surfing beaches, its night life and other features of a vividly interesting country will help to increase the picture's popularity among audiences that have not yet visited the Commonwealth.

According to official announcements, "The Flying Doctor" cost £40,000 ($200,000) to produce. It will be distributed in the United States and the British Isles.—Cliff Holt, Melbourne.

Produced by National Productions, Ltd. (Australia) in association with Gaumont-British. Distributed by Twentieth Century-Fox. Directed by Miles Mander. Original story by Robert Waldron. Adaption and scenario by J. O. C. Orton. Photography, Derik Williams. Art direction, Richard Ridgway. Sound, Leslie Fry and D. H. Box. Music, Alfred Lawrence and Willy Redstone. A Son of Mongolia

(Amkino)

Russian Melodrama

This is advertised in its New York run as the first Mongolian motion picture and appears to bear out the billing. It was produced in Mongolia by Lenfilm, of Leningrad, and the story deals with the adventures of the Mongol, Tseven, who goes into Manchukuo, experiences adventure, capture, torture and imprisonment, escaping finally to return to Mongolia after many hardships and to tell the home folk, as he has also told the Manchukuoans, that all are free and happy in Mongolia whereas life in Manchukuo under the Japanese is pretty bad. It is this point, of course, which accounts for the Russian sponsorship of the film.

On the plus side, if the film is considered as a commercial product, there is to be seen a good deal of what is presented as life in Mongolia, and likewise much of what is depicted as misery in Manchukuo. Dress, manner, occupation, custom, all are in themselves interesting. Three incidents stand out: a Mongolian wrestling match, a Manchukuoan theatrical entertainment and an episode in which shepherds pursued by militia hide among their flocks. Tavern and street scenes in both territories also possess novelty.

Reviewed at the Cameo theatre, New York, where the less restrained sympathizers with things Russian gave audible approval of the Mongolian hero's heroism.—W. R. W.

Cavalry

(ICI-United Artists)

Romantic Drama

"Cavalry," as did "Cavalcade," has a twofold story. It traces the life of a generation extremely romantic, and the heroism of the Italian cavalry.

The action starts in Turin in 1899, in the middle of the era of the Piedmontese aristocracy. Two sisters, Speranza and Carlotta de Frasseneto, are in love with Lieutenant Solaro, a famous rider, Speranza is secretly engaged to him, but to save the family from a financial crash she marries a very rich German cousin. Lieutenant Solaro, still loving her, dedicates his life to the army, becomes a world renowned horseman and the founder of the Italian Cavalry School at Pinerolo.

Time goes by. Both sisters are now married. The younger is happy, but Speranza still remembers Solaro. The tides of life sweep them together again, but duty triumphs over love. They part again. Solaro enters the aviation and dies in action in the great war.

The picture is spectacular, especially in the elements of riding and horses. Two breathtaking charges of 2,000 cavalry soldiers, loaned by the Italian Ministry of War, and a Fox hunt beautifully depicted, are among the best scenes of the film. Photography is excellent, especially in the open-air scenes.

While critics may complain a little as to lack of plot action, the atmosphere is decidedly refined and gives a correct impression of the European aristocracy before the war.

Nazzari as Solaro gives a very fine performance. His romantic figure should please any feminine audience. Elisa Cegani and Silvana Jacchino as the sisters also evidence the attributes of screen stars.

Production quality, unusually high, places this film as the best Italian offering thus far this year. The mounting, too, is good.

Previewed in Rome in the Studio Projection room.—Vittorio Malpassuti, Rome.

Produced by ICI (Industrie Italiane Cinematografiche). Distributed by United Artists. Producer, Angelo Besozzi. Directed by Alessandrini. Assistant director, Searpelli. Make Way for a Lady

(RKO Radio)

Comedy-Drama

The problems that an adolescent girl faces in trying to marry off her widowed father are here concocted into a light, entertaining production. While in her own mind a martyr to a cause, for the woman she eventually chooses is a person heartily disliked by both father and daughter, the girl personifies the problem child.

The picture is based on the novel "Daddy and I," by Elizabeth Jordan. Anne Shirley, as the ingenue, plays the precocious adolescent with plenty of vigor. Herbert Marshall, as the father; Margot Grahame, as the novelist, and Gertrude Michael, who eventually marries Marshall, round out a cast of usable names. Special mention is due Frank Coghlan, Jr., who is an excellent comedy foil to Miss Shirley's dramatics. Perhaps confusing is the likeness between Miss Michael and Miss Grahame.

Marshall, a New York publisher living in the suburbs, attends his daughter's performance of her school's version of "Romeo and Juliet." While there he meets Miss Michael, the dramatic teacher. Anne overhears a conversation between two women, who deplore the fact that Marshall is throwing his life away on Anne. Anne determines to find her father a wife. When she meets Miss Grahame, who calls on her father to discuss plans for a new book, Anne instinctively dislikes her.

Nevertheless, discovering an inscription in one of Miss Grahame's novels dedicated to Marshall and referring to the blighted romance of the story as "our book," Anne sets about reopening their supposed romance. In the meantime Marshall falls in live with Miss Michael. Upon returning from a vacation in camp Anne discovers Miss Grahame about to leave for the city to remain permanently. After a humiliating scene with Miss Michael, Anne finally realizes the mess she has gotten into. Marshall straightens things out.

The Screen Test

Amusing

Ranking high in the Buster West-Tom Patricola series of comedies, this latest edition of their misadventures follows the nimble-footed young men from understudies in a rural Little Theatre to the stage where West becomes a screen applicant. In order to save the cost of a private screen test, Buster must make his debut before the cameras filming a professional prize fight. Together with the early scenes in the barnyard theatre, the prizefight sequence provides some moments of hilarious fun. The ending is a natural for a comedy smash windup. The entire thing will liven up considerably any program. Running time, 18 minutes.

Dizzy Ducks

(Columbia)

Scrappy Cartoon

Scrappy and Oopy try their hand at duck hunting. Oopy as usual manages to get in the way. After firing several rounds with no casualties noted, the two hunters chase a duck through the woods. The duck, like the worm, turns, gets possession of the gun and with the assistance of others of his ilk retaliates in kind by shooting Scrappy and Oopy. It's all a dream, however, as the two erstwhile duck hunters thankfully awake.

Sus-Ti-Ka

(DuWorld)

Beautiful

Scenic shots in color of the country surrounding the famous Mount Shasta makes an interesting and beautiful short subject. Produced by Bruce Merman and photographed by H. C. Gibbs, the picture conveys the spectator on a tour through the beautiful Trinity Country, known as America's Switzerland, Castle Crag Wilderness Park and Lassen Volcanic National Park. The glimpses of the majestic snow capped mountain ranges and the rapidly flowing hill streams together with the occasional views of animal life make for pleasing entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.

Pathe Topics, No. 3

(RKO Radio)

Interesting

Items of interest in this latest edition of the Topics include the sage and humorous Doctor Rockwell's discourse of the fine art of doing nothing by means of a comfortable rocking chair, all of which is in preparation for the future's more "Abundant Life"; a splendid exhibition of some aerial trapeze work executed with professional skill by an amateur trio called "The Flying Dutchmen" and made additionably remarkable through the medium of slow motion camera technique and for the finale several striking glimpses into the land of winter sports located amid the snow-covered beauty of the Bavarian Alps. Altogether, a combination of information that will interest any average audience. Running time, 10 minutes.

Touring Brazil

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Well Filmed

In keeping with the generally high excellence of this class of travelogues, the latest issue of the Magic Carpet Series is a well filmed pictorial review of the country of Brazil. Superbly photographed are shots of the capital city, Rio de Janeiro, revealed as one of the most beautiful and modern metropolises of the world. Further excursions are made into a gold mine, a jungle swamp to witness an alligator roundup and a rubber plantation. Altogether, the subject is both interesting and educational. Running time, nine minutes.

Yellowstone Park

(MGM)

FitzPatrick Travel Talk

If you have never had the good fortune to feast your eyes on the scenic splendors of Yellowstone National Park, perhaps the next best thing to do would be to see this gorgeously colored and photographed reproduction of this bit of nature's grandeur. In a series of splendid shots of skies, cascades, forests and mountains the spectator visits various places of exquisite beauty. The climax of the short is deservedly devoted to the park's biggest attraction, "Old Faithful." Running time, 9 minutes.

Mixed Magic

Entertaining

The frozen-faced comedian this time becomes assistant to a magician in this passably entertaining short subject. A great deal more of a hindrance than a help, Buster upsets the bag of tricks of the sleight-of-hand artist, gives this poor individual what practically amounts to a good case of nervous prostration, wins the affection of a fair fellow performer, and provides his audience with a lively and amusing time. Running time, 17 minutes.

Merge Hirliman's Production Units

Amedee J. Van Beuren, president of the Van Beuren Corporation, has formed, with George A. Hirliman and Albert H. Lieberman, Condor Pictures, Inc., a Delaware corporation which will have a paid in capital of $1,250,000 for the purpose of joining in one corporation the production activities of Mr.. Hirliman, who is now producing for RKO, MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox, Grand National and other independent producers.

Mr. Lieberman, who negotiated the financial backing, has been associated with the Hirliman company and is a well known Philadelphia financier and real estate operator.

Mr. Van Beuren will be chairman of the board, Mr. Hirliman president, and Mr. Lieberman treasurer.

Mr. Van Beuren will continue as president and general manager of Van Beuren Corporation, and will continue to produce short subjects for RKO as a separate entity.

Condor Pictures will establish separate offices in the RKO Building, Rockefeller Center, New York.

'TRY DIFFERENT BAITS'

ENGLISH DIPLOMACY AND SOUTHERN HOSPITALITY

To the Editor of the Herald:

I recently read an article (November 21st issue) by J. J. Newcomb, which inspired the writer to reply. Mr. Newcomb stated that radios were stopping small town exhibitors from making a livelihood. Not being familiar with his specific situation, it would not be fair to judge these remarks, but from this article I do not believe the present owner puts enough time on his theatre, as he has other interests and cannot give it his whole attention. Realizing that theatre business is a full time job, in order to keep your prestige and the people theatre-minded, unlimited energies in promotion and exploitation must be constantly used.

The writer owns a 500-seat house in a town of 1,800 and has played a fourth of a million paid admissions in 26 months since opening, living 18 miles away in another city. We have made it our policy to be showmen and have put forth every effort in order that we may not miss a chance to make tieups with local merchants and motion picture advertisers.

Last year we had the good fortune to spend three weeks motoring to Florida. Each small town we came to made it a point to visit exhibitors for ideas. The first night out of Cincinnati we called on a theatre. It took a great deal of time to find it on the main street, and when we did find it, a man and woman were sitting in the box office, one had a tooth missing and the other needed a haircut. Inside the lobby at each entrance was badly worn linoleum and cracked rough plaster. We were greeted by a pathetic looking doorman, who managed to get out of a wicker chair and stop looking at the picture long enough to answer a few questions. I ask you, should this theatre do business? Well, they were getting by and that is all they deserved. The sooner small town exhibitors wake up to the fact that they must stop lamenting and excusing themselves, the better for them.

Let me quote some of our small towns in Ontario, which I visited. The owner sells tickets and then closes the box office, goes upstairs to operate the show, and a local boy catches the late comers, keeping most of the money for himself. They play trailers, stop the show and put on a slide with no music. They have no marquee, if so very ancient, two single sheets outside and no merchants' tieups. If they don't do business, it's the picture's fault, dozens of excuses. Yes, they make a good living and are satisfied, but fail to get the maximum out of their situations. Success is attained only by discontent, and most of them seem content. They don't even patronize "What the Picture Did for Me." They should treat the Motion Picture Herald next to the newspaper.

One theatre I visited the man was selling tickets with a pipe in his mouth, sold you a ticket, tore it up in the box office and thumbed you to enter. They failed to use film and poster service, in order to save money, and have no idea as to how a show should be well balanced. Another theatre I attended played Fox News, Newsreel Adventures of a Cameraman, travelogue, with a travel feature. The young folks go to the bigger cities instead of going to their home town theatres whenever they can. Exhibitors ask for these situations and get them.

Another exhibitor has an operator who takes his job lightly and never gets to his work on time and is often a half hour late. No toilets in many instances, no ventilating and a poor heating system. Some time ago I met an exhibitor, in a town of 3,500, who with a long, expressionless face unloaded his tale of woe, that his town was not a show town, and cited his best days, which was only average small town business. He talked himself out of the theatre, and a young, energetic, quick thinking showman took it over, dressed the theatre up, put in ushers, got the whole town talking and is reaping fruits from his efforts. He is a showman, who got business in the town that was so religious and so liked hockey that it never did business. It just took the right man to get the business. We had a show in Tilbury, previous to our own show, that did only 25 per cent the business we enjoy, due to the way it was run.

A year ago a young man wanted our show for two nights. I asked him twice as much as I had figured we would do the week before Christmas. He ran the show until 1 o'clock in the morning, with three shows seating 500 at each performance. It was a good lesson. He showed me what could be done. Since then we have organized essay contests, previews for new cars, courtesy cars for patrons on bad nights, through a car dealer, so that he might demonstrate his new model. Signs were erected in the entrance to the town on every main road, Shirley Temple safety clubs, hypnotizing in a local window, theatre parties in connection with General Motors and Fords. Many of the older exhibitors say our stunts are crazy. Well, just take a tip from me; occasionally we have had disappointments but it has paid us more than you would think.

One thing we don't think showmanship is the giveaway unless competitors do it. Showmanship has unlimited possibilities and has no excuses. When fishing we try different kinds of bait. Some days they bite on one kind and other days on others. Human nature is the same all over, and by continually changing your bait at your theatre, you can't help but be a good fisherman. Spend more time with that Motion Picture Herald and see how the other fellow does it. It's in the books, if you can get your situation analyzed. The man who knows his business will do things.

How many of you small town exhibitors keep records on your films and make reports? How many of your doormen can tell your patron about the complete show? How many exhibitors are on the floor to say goodnight and help on with the odd overcoat, or have Grandma Jones taken home, if it's storming?

I challenge you that you'll find you are not giving attention to these details that go to make up atmosphere. Try English diplomacy with Southern hospitality and you'll get along. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario.

ASKS MORE CANADIANS TO REPORT ON FILMS

To the Editor of the Herald:

Your department has made us many friends. We are sorry to see so few Canadian exhibitors writing in. We just received a letter from Mr. Hefferan of Coopersville, Michigan, commenting on the reports, thanking us for the reports on "The Changing of the Guard." Also one from Donald Rankin of Jamestown, Tennessee.

We wish to thank you exhibitors for your letters and are always glad to hear from you. Keep up the good work.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

A New York exchange is being opened by Imperial Distributing Corporation this month to distribute product in the metropolitan area. The first picture to be handled is "Broken Blossoms."

Keller-Dorian Control Passing To Europeans

Control of the Keller-Dorian Color Film Corporation is being acquired in New York by European interests through a fiscal agent by the purchase of 350,000 shares of stock owned by William Celastin and Henry Colgate. Under the rights to buy control obtained by the foreign syndicate, actual transfer will be made late next January, it was indicated by George Quigley, attorney, who is acting as the fiscal agent for Barclay's Bank of Monte Carlo, Monaco, which, in turn, is representing the European interests, which are predominantly English and French.

Eastman Kodak, at present owner of the exclusive franchise in connection with the color process, has 60 days in which to make a minimum royalty commitment. Otherwise, the exclusive rights of the company expire and will be placed on the open market, it was said.

Keller-Dorian is now negotiating licensing agreements with a number of major producers and at present it is said that five pictures utilizing the process will be made by a major Hollywood studio for release in this country next season.

In discussing the advantages of the Keller-Dorian system, Mr. Quigley said that in production a specially treated lenticulated film is used which has, on the non-emulsion side, a series of minute lines. The picture is photographed through a regular camera on the front of which are attached red, green and blue filters. Ordinary standard studio technique is required, he said, and the prints likewise have the lenticulation and in the projection a filter corresponding to the one attached to the camera is also used and more efficient lighting is needed. If the theatre is not equipped for color projection, the same print may be used for regular black and white projection, it is said.

Rushes are available for viewing as quickly as black and white rushes, it is also claimed, and the printing and developing may be handled in any laboratory, only one extra bath being necessary in using the color process.

Mr. Quigley asserted the comparative costs of using the Keller-Dorian process were one-fifth of those currently in use for negatives and the positive prints approximately one-third of the other color positives.

A NEW FACE IN THE SUN
Deanna Durbin

DEANNA DURBIN ALSO RISES—IN A GOLDEN SPLE

"A lovely youngster, Deanna Durbin serves unmistakable notice that she has it in her to become one of Hollywood's elect...displays an extraordinary singing voice...fresh beauty...poise in her performance ...A charming comedy, one that is sure to enjoy wide box office favor with American audiences."
—Los Angeles Evening Herald and Express.

"Child wonder thrills at two houses! ... A beautiful girl child with a singing voice of rich depth, clear treble tones and maturity such as one has never heard before in pictures."
—Los Angeles Daily News

"Dust off your marquee letters for a new screen star is Universal's Xmas gift to exhibitors! ... Hold your breath, boys, because here comes a bunch of loveliness that will surely take it away! What 20th Century-Fox has in Simone Simon the new Universal has doubled in the dazzling, delicious, devastating, delightful darling—Deanna Durbin. Here is a picture that's going to be a surprise package in many an exhibitor's Xmas stocking. It's all that can be expected of any Santa Claus. The entire story radiates the joyful jingle of lucre at the box office!"
—Showmen's Trade Review

"Deanna Durbin has but one draw-back — anything you say about her would be an understatement!"
—Sam Torgan, R.K.O. Keith Theatre, Lowell, Mass.

NDOR THAT WILL GLORIFY YOUR BOX OFFICE !

"'Three Smart Girls' is the best picture I have seen since 'It Happened One Night'. If you have Koster and Durbin under contract I want to buy some Universal stock because you surely are going to town in a big way. Whoever is responsible for the screen story and dialogue has a gift from heaven. Looks like this picture will pay off the mortgage on the old homestead."
—J. Von Herberg, Seattle, Wash.

"Young diva scores in film debut ... a revel of youth and adolescence ... takes the plum as a very winning sort of tale ... Miss Durbin tops!"
—Los Angeles Times.

"One of the outstanding and surprise pictures of the year ... Will delight any audience and hearten any exhibitor ... picture should roll up handsome grosses ... certainly it will add greatly to the prestige of the new Universal production organization ... sensational is the projection of a new star, Deanna Durbin ... this youngster will quickly reach the film peerage ... she is a natural for the show world ... her voice is comparable to the best on the screen, and she is a delight to the eye ... for comedy and pathos, gaiety and petulance, she shows brilliant diversity!"
—Variety.

"One of the best pieces of entertainment this reviewer has seen in many months ... Miss Durbin is assuredly the greatest find of the year! ... one of the most astonishing personalities to come to the screen in a long time. She can act, sings gloriously and is most pleasant to look at ... A picture exhibitors will be proud to play!"—Hollywood Reporter.

"Put 'Three Smart Girls' right down on your list of pictures not to miss — it sparkles, it scintillates and best of all, it amuses. You have little idea what a honey of a comedy this one is until you see it!"
—Louella Parsons, Los Angeles Examiner.

BERRY TRADE CONFERENCE PASSES NRA LEGISLATION ISSUE TO CONGRESS

Report Roosevelt May Confine Suggestion to Constitutional Amendment Redefining Interstate Commerce

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Enactment of legislation closely paralleling the ill-fated NRA, prohibiting unfair competition either in competitive practices or by the maintenance of unjust or unreasonable wage or hour standards" or by monopolistic efforts, was urged last week by the National Council for Industrial Progress. This move is seen in Washington as throwing into Congress the whole question of industrial control.

That the plans of the council will not have the approval of the Administration is indicated by intimations that the NRA report to go to Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper from the President's interdepartmental committee this month will not recommend revival of the NRA and, by representations from authoritative sources, that President Roosevelt may be expected to confine his recommendations to Congress on the subject to the suggestion for a constitutional amendment redefining interstate commerce so as to give the Government authority to seek legislation on industrial problems.

The council also recommended modification of the anti-trust laws and the granting of financial aid to small enterprises through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Despite a plea for the cooperation of business in a movement which George L. Berry, coordinator for industrial cooperation and head of the council, and his associates denominated as "non-partisan and non-political" and not designed to effect a return of the NRA, business men on the whole refused to join and such representatives of large industries as attended the conference were present merely as "observers."

Offers to Resign

In a last-minute gesture, Major Berry, in a radio address Friday following the close of the conference, offered to resign as coordinator if such action would promote the cooperation of business with the New Deal, and added: "I am no office seeker; I wouldn't take a public office of any kind within the gift of the President that paid a dime." Major Berry long had been considered as a contender for the post of secretary of labor should Miss Frances Perkins resign.

"Of course," Major Berry said in his radio speech, "I fully understand that there are those who previously declined to join us because they disliked the President; and also because they disliked representation of organized labor. * * *

"Now they don't dislike the President, if we are to read the newspapers. They want to cooperate. But in order to cooperate with the Federal Government, the President must get himself a new coordinator.

"Well, if it helps to save their faces, and rather than to abridge the furtherance of this program of national understanding, which means national patriotism and national protection—well, my friends, I am not so vain as to want to be coordinator and thereby abridge progress."

While representatives of some of the groups in the film industry followed the deliberations of the council, neither the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America nor the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America participated, despite assurances up to the last minute by Major Berry's office that they would.

A preliminary motion picture conference, scheduled to precede the general Council meeting, was cancelled when only four persons appeared, Sol Rosenblatt, former administrator of the NRA film code, Nathan Golden of the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce, and two unidentified delegates.

Sullivan Jones, assistant to Major Berry, said after the Council meeting that despite the lack of interest in a motion picture conference under Council auspices he is developing a plan for a permanent film industry committee to function as an advisory body. He indicated that invitations to join would be sent to the major companies.

Also absent were the representatives of the important organizations in the steel, textile, automobile and other industries, as well as the United States Chamber of Commerce, National Association of Manufacturers and other national bodies. Generally speaking, attendance at the conference, placed at around 800, was made up of "observers" and the labor and small industrial groups which make up the organization's membership.

Anti-trust Laws Defined

The interest of many representatives of the smaller industrial units waned rapidly when council leaders, apparently in an effort to influence "big business" to join, made it clear that the meetings would not consider the problems of particular industries, thus eliminating what many had considered an opportunity to focus public attention upon the shortcomings of their large competitors.

The group was given another set-back when Assistant Attorney General John Dickinson said frankly that small business would not be given the support of the Department of Justice in any effort to use the anti-trust laws as a weapon against large competitors unless it could be demonstrated that violations actually have occurred.

Criticizing efforts to invoke these laws against concerns singled out merely because of their size, Mr. Dickinson flatly declared the statutes "do not make mere big business unlawful, nor do they in general place upon the large business concern, because it is large, any special limitations in the competitive struggle which are not placed upon the smaller concerns also."

Simplicity To Be Sought

It is not unlawful, he continued, "for large concerns in the ordinary course of business, and as participants in the competitive struggle, to engage in competitive practices on the same terms as their smaller rivals so long as their conduct is simply directed toward the pursuit of their legitimate business advantage and not directly aimed at the suppression or destruction of competition in an illegitimate manner."

Simplification of the anti-trust statutes was seen by the assistant attorney general as essential if the Government is to enforce them effectively.

The practically exclusive dependence of the department on private complaints for the initiation of anti-trust proceedings is an important factor tending to make enforcement of the laws sporadic and haphazard, the council was told, and frequently abuses which are complained of and stopped in one industry continue unabated in others from which no protests have been received.

Paine Is Speaker

John Gregg Paine, chairman of the board of the Music Publishers' Protective Association, and head of the Council's management group, indicated in an address to the delegates that the Council will recommend modification of the anti-trust laws.

"Basic problems are not fundamentally different in the motion picture, music and other industries with which I have been connected," Mr. Paine said. "We intend to establish a broad, national economic basis upon which can be set up details covering the needs of individual businesses."

Conciliation Boards Approved; Three Companies Cooperating

In spite of its lack of interest in the National Council for Industrial Progress meeting in Washington, the motion picture industry has been proceeding with its adoption of voluntary regulation. Local conciliation boards for the adjustment of trade practice complaints are to be established immediately in all exchange centers petitioning them and moves preliminary to their organization are under way in several cities. The boards are part of the MPTOA's trade practice program and that organization has been prepared to proceed with them as soon as the plan is approved by a minimum of four national distributors.

Universal, 20th Century-Fox and United Artists have offered their cooperation in setting up the boards and it is known that Paramount's reply has been completed and will include an approval of the boards.

St. Louis is believed to be the first city to formally petition for the establishment of a board, the action having been taken last week by the MPTO of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois at its annual meeting.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended December 12, 1936, from 110 theatres in 18 major cities of the country was $1,115,637, a decrease of $250,691 from the total of the preceding week ended December 5, 1936, when 110 theatres in 18 large cities aggregated $1,366,328.

MANCHUKUO LAUNCHES CONTROL OF INDUSTRY

State and South Manchurian Railway Finance New Company to Rule All Branches

by H. TOMINAGA
in Tokyo

The national cinema control initiated early this year by the Manchukuo Government is now about to come into practical operation. A final decision has been made to establish a new national film company with a capital of 5,000,000 yen, half underwritten by Manchukuo and half by South Manchuria Railway Company.

At a meeting of a research committee of the new organization, at Soldiers' Hall, Hsinking, attending were various high officials representing the Kwantung Army, the Foreign, Home and Army departments of Manchukuo, and the executive staff of the Railway. The committee proposal to launch the film company was referred to the National Cinema Control Commission, and won its unanimous consent. Enforcement of the project is to be by the Kwantung Army, with direct supervision and management by Eiga Kyokai (Manchukuo Cinema Association), which was founded at the same time.

The aim of the new company is to exercise full control over all fields of the film business in Manchukuo, including production of motion pictures, distribution at home and exportation of product, control of importation of pictures, promotion of sales in foreign countries, dissemination of propaganda for Manchukuo through the pictures produced, establishment of theatre circuits and utilization of those in existence, guidance of the rising generation and school children, compulsory exhibition of cultural pictures, increase and control of theatres.

Eiga Kyokai includes the Koho, Hoso and Kanko associations, sponsored by Koho Iinkai.

Distribution Is Centralized

An information committee with complete authority to control public addresses and opinions, has been formed to do the publicity work of the new company. This corporation is considered certain to enlist the support of the entire Manchukuoan nation in carrying out the national film policy. It is considered further possible that with Japan's retrocession to Manchukuo of area contiguous to the Southern Manchuria Railway expected before long, Japanese and foreign pictures will find distribution in Manchukuo more difficult and probably impossible. Deals hitherto negotiated directly with theatres now will have to be made with Eiga Kyokai. Every picture will be distributed through this new organization.

Furthermore, a cinema law is being drawn up by the Manchukuo Government to prescribe rules for control of production, distribution, exhibition and import-export. Thus it is expected that all private film companies will be barred from producing after a period of grace.

A high official of the Army Department of Japan said that Japan soon will enact such a cinema law.

New Taxes Protected

While the recent Government taxation reform, abolishing the socalled show tax, in favor of a general business profit tax at lower rates, was credited with lessening the burden on Japanese exhibitors, now comes a proceeds tax and in addition an attendance tax as a local tax.

Exhibitors are raising strong objection. They insist that while the proceeds tax may not necessarily be a serious burden to exhibitors of lesser rank, it will definitely affect big exhibitors to a great extent. As for the attendance tax, they say it will be a heavy burden to all.

Encouraged by the protests of exhibitors, the Japan Association of Motion Pictures has presented a petition to the taxation bureau of the Finance Office urging the Bureau not to approve of the attendance tax, pointing out the important mission of the motion picture.

Though the Shochiku and Takarazuka first-run theatres ostensibly have been little affected by the joint declaration of the two big circuits that they will not purchase productions of poor quality, as a matter of fact they have been pretty much annoyed by the objective of this arrangement.

Since early this fall most of the large foreign productions imported to this country have been released almost without a hitch, but program pictures have received comparatively scant attention.

Naturally, those distributing companies which imported a large number of big productions or made early contracts for the present season have released the greatest number of pictures at the first-runs of the two circuits.

Since the end of August, of a total of 62 releases Paramount tops the list with 13, holding an edge at the Hibiya Eiga Gekijo and the Nippon Gekijo. Next comes Columbia, with 10 releases booked into these two houses and two first-runs in the Shochiku circuit, although most are Western and action pictures played by Tokyo Club, Warner has released six, two of which were booked with Tibiya twice. Twentieth Century-Fox and MGM also have released six each.

Control of the Imperial theatre, leased by Shochiku Company as one of its leading first-run houses of Tokyo playing foreign pictures, has been acquired by Mr. Ichizo Kobayashi, head of the Takarazuka interests, by steady purchasing of the stock. Mr. Kobayashi's purpose is to reconstruct this historic theatre as an uptodate deluxe house before the International Olympic Meeting in 1940. Behind this also is his hope of ultimate control of the industry in Japan.

He recently acquired 25,000 shares, buying them under the names of Messrs. Kobayashi and J. Yoshioka, managing director of Takarazuka Company, and the shareholders approved of Mr. Kobayashi's appointment as director of Imperial Theatre, Ltd., confirming the control.

Bicycling Still a Problem

Despite the strenuous efforts of our foreign film distributors to prevent illegal playing of pictures for which no official contract has been made, their salesmen still report violations. No effective counter-measure of rooting out the practice has been taken by the distributors.

The League of Ten Foreign Film Distributors finally decided to bring the problem before the Home Office. They hope thus to get police cooperation.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN MANHATTAN: Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea—Okay for double billing, but we don't double bill and I wish they would get this practice out of their systems. There is no doubt but what the producers turn out program pictures such as this one with an eye that way. And this type just does not do business.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

END OF THE TRAIL: Jack Holt, Louise Henry—If you haven't played this, send a wire to your exchange and have them book it at once. Here is a picture you can go to town on and don't spare the horses. We packed them in to the doors and they are still talking about it. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 21-22.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MEET NERO WOLFE: Edward Arnold, Lionel Stander—Good mystery story, but below average draw. It's interesting and has some comedy moments.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

First National

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—We really think this is the funniest Joe E. Brown picture we have ever played. Drew above average business. Running time, 69 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

STAGE STRUCK: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell—Good draw the first night. Very poor the second night. The moment was "not as good as I thought it would be." When they compared it to Dick Powell in "Shipmates Forever" and others with Powell, they felt that Blondell and Powell should be in a better picture. Played December 5-6.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

TRAILIN' WEST: Dick Foran, Paula Stone—A fair western and this star has a certain following among the Western fans, but I do wish they wouldn't shoot so many times without reloading their guns. The audience is getting so that hands them a laugh. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—Three grand young troupers. Certainly would be hard to get three boys together with greater or equal talent. The story was fine and it was a grand success from all standpoints. Running time, 92 minutes. Played November 27-28.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

FURY: Spencer Tracy, Sylvia Sidney—A swell show that built up the second day. Drew better than many so called specials. Running time, 97 minutes.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor—Some liked; some did not. Just another average program picture that left us alone in the dark the second night. Metro classes this as a special; maybe I'm wrong.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer—Three very remarkable performances by Powell, Rainer and Loy. And such lavish sets. But it did not do any business. We were very much disappointed in the attendance. Glad to have played it, however, as believe it is one of those so called milestones. Running time, 180 minutes. Played November 22-24.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer—The biggest, most highly advertised box office flop I have ever played. If you haven't bought it, lay off. Played it three nights to the attendance of the ushers and a few passes. Actually could have done more business with an Autry western. This Rainer gal might be okay, but four reels of her making faces is too much.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

LIBELED LADY: Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Excellent comedy drama. William Powell does a fine job.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. General patronage.

LIBELED LADY: William Powell, Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Although the picture pleased generally, was able to do only average business on this one. It seems impossible for me to make any dough on Metro. Pictures are always oversold and fail to do me any good business. They are going to hustle if they are to deliver the thirty (30) specials that I bought.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

PETTICOAT FEVER: Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy—Gave satisfaction and drew better than average. Some said "silly," and in spots it was, but it got over and pleased 90 per cent. Running time, 80 minutes.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

SUZY: Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone—This was well liked; most everyone agreed it was Jean Harlow's best picture. Business is way off in this town for some reason or other, but the picture is all there. —A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

VOICE OF BUGLE ANN, THE: Lionel Barrymore—Pleased Saturday night patrons 100 per cent. Running time, 80 minutes.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—The best box office picture of the new season from any of the majors (and I play them all). The picture itself was disappointing, as the trailer contained more entertainment than the feature. What happened to the song that Martha Raye sings in the trailer? Should have been one of the high-spots of the picture. Not enough Bob Burns and Martha Raye; too much Burns and Allen. Bob Burns and Martha Raye are two of the best bets if given anything to do. Come on, Paramount, give this pair a break and every exhibitor will be happy. Will Rogers grosses will be here again.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS, THE: Fred MacMurray, Jean Parker, Jack Oakie—Played three days to a nice business. The whole cast was swell and everyone was pleased. An "A" picture in every sense of the word. —Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE, THE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda, Fred MacMurray—Good show to good business but watch your percentage contract. Paramount gets it all and you will hold the bag of expense if you don't have the right kind of contract. Don't spend any extra amount for advertising. Just let them know you are running it and they will come. I had a surprise myself. Running time, 11 reels. Played November 29-30.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Republic

HEARTS IN BONDAGE: James Dunn, Mae Clarke —This story of the Merrimac and the Monitor would make a very good tie up with the schools. The part of Lincoln is well done. Played to above average business. Played December 2-3.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

EX-MRS. BRADFORD, THE: William Powell, Jean Arthur—Very good show to small business on a cold night and stormy day. Don't fail to run this one. It is full of action and drama. Running time, 10 reels. Played November 22.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

WALKING ON AIR: Gene Raymond, Ann Sothern —Not as good as "The Bride Walks Out," but still a pretty good show. Gene Raymond has quite a following here and he seems to get better with each show. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 14-15.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WITHOUT ORDERS: Sally Eilers, Robert Armstrong—The same old type of aeroplane stuff with no story and you won't have to get out the SRO sign. I bolstered this up with extra shorts and tried to get by, but that even failed, as the RKO shorts hurt a show instead of helping it. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 28-29.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CAPTAIN JANUARY: Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbee—The first Temple we've played since "Bright Eyes" and it went over just as big, despite the fact that there's no Jane Withers in this one. There's a Jane all right as the "villainess" but this time she's full grown and answers to the name of Darwell and pursues Old Cap' January with all the "wiles of a wicious woman." Shirley naturally predominates in the film but the supporting cast are excellent in their particular parts. One long laugh after another. Running time, 77 minutes. Played December 5.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN: Irvin S. Cobb, Rochelle Hudson—Nice little program picture to average business. Cobb may be a draw when better known, but this younger set do not come for him. Running time, 84 minutes.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, Simone Simon, Constance Bennett—Foreign locale for one thing. The word "Love" in the title, the word that according to an old adage makes the world go round, certainly seems to defeat a picture with the common run of our patrons. It may be obsession with them, but we have not been able to overcome it. The picture is merely a character sketch of four girls' love affairs. Played in the wrong spot for one thing; that may have had something to do with the lack of business.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, Simone Simon, Constance Bennett—Here is one you want to soft pedal if you must play it. There is absolutely nothing to it but star value. People come to see the stars, then wonder what the picture is about. I can't find a single person who liked it, and I'm still cussing because I gave it a Sunday date. Played November 29-30.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly, Jack Haley, Yacht Club Boys—Just the type of comedy drama that my audience eats up. This one went over big and everyone liked it.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. General patronage.

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL, THE: Shirley Temple, Alice Faye—A very good show that brought them out on Thanksgiving night to satisfactory business. Shirley sure gets them in one way or another and they like her. I am for you, Shirley. Running time, nine reels. Played November 25-26.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL, THE: Shirley Temple, Alice Faye—This picture did just 40 per cent of "Curly Top." The handwriting is on the wall. Her pictures are not worth more than program price any more. She was a great little star while she lasted. —Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—Another swell picture. Discussion arose as to which of the stars has the more sex appeal. The men say Loretta and the gals say Taylor, of course. Anyway, both are grand players and we could use a lot more pictures as good as this one. Running time, 79 minutes. Played November 25-26.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Robert Taylor, Loretta Young—This is a very fine picture from every angle. Bad weather, however, ruined our business and we were lucky to break even. The picture should be a strong grosser under normal conditions.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—Fair picture with everyone wondering what the Quins had to do with it. Not the business of "The Country Doctor" by a long way. Too bad they have to grow up.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. General patronage.

United Artists

AMATEUR GENTLEMAN, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Elissa Landi—An English dialect picture that did not please over five per cent. No one appeared to like it and they were not backward about saying so. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 27-28.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

BARBARY COAST: Miriam Hopkins, Edward G. Robinson, Joel McCrea— Quite old, but used to fill in an open date. Found it to be a very interesting story, well presented, but the print showed many signs of old age. That's the trouble with the older pictures. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 2-3. Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

COME AND GET IT: Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer—Well done picture which appealed more to the intelligentsia than the rest. Younger generation probably will not appreciate it as much as the older folks.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. General patronage.

MODERN TIMES: Charlie Chaplin—Fair business first night but a complete washout the second. This is Chaplin's last appearance here. The day of the silent film is past and if Chaplin can't talk he is through. Running time, 100 minutes.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

THESE THREE: Merle Oberon, Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—An excellent picture that pleased practically 100 per cent. Three fine stars with a supporting cast not far behind. Play this on your best nights and don't be afraid to boost it. Running time, 93 minutes. Played November 28-29.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

CRASH DONOVAN: Jack Holt, Nan Gray—This picture did great business the first night but the second day it fell off. The picture was fine, what there was of it. It should have been at least three reels longer. Good print and perfect sound. Five reels. Running time, 54 minutes. Played December 1-2.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

CRASH DONOVAN: Jack Holt, Nan Gray—A picture of the highway patrol that is one of the best action pictures I've ever had on my screen. Even I watched it the second time and several people came back on Saturday after seeing it on Friday night. Business good on it.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

POSTAL INSPECTOR: Ricardo Cortez, Patricia Ellis—Same thing wrong with this picture as there was with "Crash Donovan." Too short. Just as it was getting interesting it ended. The patrons seemed to like it even though I did not care for it. Running time, 59 minutes. Played December 4-5.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

SUTTER'S GOLD: Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes, Lee Tracy—Good enough picture but too draggy and too slow in action for a picture of this kind. Glad it is all over. Did not excite anybody. Running time, 10 reels. Played November 27-28.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

CAIN AND MABEL: Marion Davies, Clark Gable —No stand-out business on this one. It is the usual story, only it is a prize-fighter and the lady this time, with the glamorous Marion in the lead role, only she is not so glamorous any more. She has gone a long way from her role in "Marianne," and that is some time ago. Not the draw she was and I think that Gable was the main pull-in. There were two very elaborate musical numbers and fine chorus work.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CAIN AND MABEL: Marion Davies, Clark Gable —If you can keep the public from knowing that Miss Davies is in this, you will do all right. The picture is very good and will please generally. It was plain to see that Gable was not satisfied with his leading lady.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, S. John, Kan. General patronage.

GIVE ME YOUR HEART: Kay Francis, George Brent—Very fine. Knew it would be. And we did a very nice business on it. Producers harp on the fact that they must make big specials. If they would concentrate on more program pictures like this one, big specials would not be needed. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 29-30.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

DISORDER IN THE COURT: Broadway Comedies —So silly it is a riot. Best slapstick comedies on the market.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FOOTBALL FLASHES: New World of Sport Series—Excellent action shots of a number of famous gridiron battles of 1935, showing how the players work under adverse weather conditions. The highlight is the Notre Dame 18-12 win over the Ohio State Buckeyes by a series of spectacular last minute passes for touchdowns. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

KRAZY'S NEWSREELS: Krazy Kat Cartoons—A good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PAIN IN THE PULLMAN, A: Three Stooges—Plenty of belly-laughs in this one. Fact is we've never seen the Stooges in anything except good ones. The big "sissy" is the local favorite. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SCRAPPY'S PONY: Scrappy Cartoons—A very good cartoon for the kiddies. Running time, 8 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Educational

ALPINE RENDEZVOUS: Song and Comedy Hits —Very interesting, with its beautiful Alpine scenery and good songs. The yodeling song is especially good. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BOOSTING DAD: Frolics of Youth—Real good. Pleased everyone. These children are just as good as the Our Gang. Running time, 21 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

CIRCUS DAYS: Paul Terry-Toons—Liked by the children very much. Play it on a children's picture. Running time, six minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

FARMER ALFALFA'S TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY: Paul Terry-Toons—A very good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FIREMAN'S DAY OFF: Song Hit Stories—Pleased the entire audience. They like these shorts as they are real entertaining and singing is well done. Running time, nine minutes.—Albert Heffernan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

GIFTS IN RHYTHM: Song and Comedy Hits—The Cabin Kids, and as usual they please.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HEY DIDDLE DIDDLE: Paul Terry-Toons—Pleased all. Very well done above average. Running time, six minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

LIGHT FANTASTIC: Ernest Truex—Not so very well done. A little poor in spots. Only pleased about 50 per cent. Running time, 21 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

RAIL BIRDS: Tom Howard, George Shelton—An average two-reel comedy with several good racing shots to round out a bit of snappy repartee by the vaudeville team. Not quite up to the standard we were led to expect by the advance ads. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SEEING EYE, THE: Treasure Chest—A good Educational reel. Shows how the trained dogs protect a blind man from danger and do they do their job. I say they do. A new help to the blind. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

WAY OUT WEST: Song and Comedy Hits—A dandy one-reeler starts out with a rodeo and ends up with songs and music, and, oh boy, do they eat up this sort of entertainment. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BORED OF EDUCATION: Our Gang—An excellent single reel Gang. They liked this.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

EARLY BIRD AND THE WORM, THE: Harman-Ising—These color musical cartoons are class.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

HIT AND RUN DRIVER: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—This is a timely short subject every exhibitor should run. All the "Crime Doesn't Pay" series are good. Running time, two reels.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

LUCKY CORNER, THE: Our Gang—This brought quite a few laughs. Running time, 16 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PUBLIC PAYS, THE: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Another of the "Crime Doesn't Pay" Series, dealing with the milk racketeer. Well done and interest-holding.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. General patronage.

PUPS' PICNIC: Harman-Ising (Happy Harmonies) —Swell cartoon with the expressions on the pups' faces perfect. But we are getting too many cartoons. The people are tiring of them. Running time, 8 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TWO LITTLE PUPS: Harman-Ising (Happy Harmonies)—This is splendid. The expression on the faces of the puppies is very clever, and their antics as they chased the old red hen are as natural as can be. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

YELLOWSTONE PARK: FitzPatrick Travel Talks —A very fine colored travel reel. Very interesting and entertaining and at the same time educational.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

BRIDGE AHOY!: Popeye the Sailor—Another good Popeye keeps 'em on the edge of their seat. When Popeye opens up a can of spinach and swallows it, things begin to happen. Good. Enough said. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

CHIMP CHAMPS: Grantland Rice Sportlights (New Series)—These near humans had the audience in an uproar. The main event of this single was a boxing exhibition between two chimpanzees.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

PLAY, DON: Don Bestor and Orch.—This is a swell little musical number. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PLAY SAFE: Color Classics—Just another colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RIVER: Paragraphics—Colored folks in songs on the water. Just so-so.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

YANKEE DOODLE RHAPSODY: Ferde Grofe and His Orchestra—The singing and playing of songs we all love, such as "Old Black Joe," "Love's Old Sweet Song," "Dixie" and others made a hit with my folks. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

HAPPY THO MARRIED: Edgar Kennedy Comedies —Just a fair filler. Kennedy does better than usually. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LISTEN TO FREEZIN': Superba Comedies—I am unable to find words to express the utter waste of film. The only thing I can say is that I hope the producers are as looney as this picture and they will be taken care of so as to prevent them from ever making another one like this.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FOX MOVIETONE NEWS: Issue No. 14—The Newsreel that excels them all. Fox goes forward. Running time, 12 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

ISLE OF BERMUDA: Magic Carpet Series—Very good. These Magic Carpet Series seem to please as there is really a fine educational value to them. Running time, 10 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

TRACKING THE EXPLORERS: Adventures with the Newsreel Cameraman—Not as good as some of them have been. But they are very good for building up a program.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

United Artists

FUNNY LITTLE BUNNIES: Silly Symphony Series—Beautiful cartoon, or rather it was when it was new. The print showed a lot of wear. Running time, 9 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MICKEY'S CIRCUS: Mickey Mouse—Average Mickey Mouse, not as good as several previous ones, but still good.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. General patronage.

Universal

VAUD-O-MAT, THE: Mentone Musical Comedies—A very good musical comedy. The accordion duet tops the list of the entertainers. Good from the beginning to the end. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CHANGING OF THE GUARD: Sybil Jason—We would like to have more of little Sybil's pictures. She sings and marches in this Broadway Brevity in a very charming way. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

CLYDE McCOY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—One of the best Warner band acts and that is saying something. Will play this back some day. —C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

COLORFUL OCCUPATIONS: Colortour Adventures—OK for a filler.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OUNCE OF INVENTION, AN: Vitaphone Novelties—Just another reel. Will get by as a filler.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SONG OF A NATION, THE: Donald Woods, Claire Dodd—Very fine for its kind but don't believe the people appreciate shorts of this type. Running time, 20 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

VITAPHONE GAIETIES: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—A very fine vaudeville reel with an old fashioned bicycle clown act. Pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 49

Bluebook Question No. 49 was: (A) Give your views as to lubrication of motors and generators. (B) In the event you took charge of a projection room would or would you not deem it your duty to check up and report upon the efficiency of the various projection circuits? Tell us how you would figure the voltage drop.

The following made acceptable answers: Ray E. Adams and L. T. Cheeney made excellent answers to No. 48, but they came too late. Adams is way off in Pendleton, Oregon. No. 49 answers are: C. Rau and S. Evans; D. H. Danielson; B. DeVietti; L. Cimikoski; C. L. Loft; C. Oldham; W. C. Brown; J. R. Prater; W. Limmroth; A. L. Cooper; H. Edwards; G. E. Doe; W. H. Edmonds; H. B. Smith; S. O. QUIGLEY BOOK SHOP

To Section A, G. E. Doe replies, "Consult the manufacturer or his instruction book covering the equipment in use. Use only the grade or kind of oil or grease he recommends. It is the safest plan. Then follow a few simple rules, as follows: First, inspect the bearings at fixed intervals, their length, of course, varying with the equipment and hours of service per day; also somewhat upon the load carried. Second, drain oil out and refill when upon inspection it seems advisable. Conditions vary so widely that no general rule can be laid down as to time.

"Third, maintain proper oil level, neither too high nor too low. In certain types of machines, excess oil works out of the bearings and may damage insulation, besides making a nasty mess. In any event, it advertises the projectionist as a sloppy, careless workman. Fourth, ball-bearing lubricant must be wholly free from acid, hence must contain no animal fat. Fifth, it is best up north to use a different grade of oil in winter and summer—lighter in winter, of course. This is very important if the machine is subject to low temperatures. Sixth, for completeness may I add: Use only oil that is perfectly clean."

From several answers I cull the following:

C. L. Loft, "Use light oil in winter. Oil that is too heavy may prevent the rings from rotating at starting, thus starving the bearings."

L. Cimikoski, "Manufacturers recommend only oils they have tested. . . . If oil the manufacturer recommends is used, it tends to uphold his guarantee of the machine, if any. . . . Excessive oil invites trouble, collects dust, grit and metallic particles that may later cause a short. I have found pure grain alcohol efficient in removing such collections in equipments I have taken charge of."

D. H. Danielson, "I have found the ring-oiled bearing to operate best with an oil of 30 viscosity, provided low temperatures are not encountered. Such oil has sufficient body to follow the ring; also, it is light enough to spread over the bearing perfectly. Cleanliness is important, and excessive lubrication bad."

(B) C. L. Loft says, "It would be the duty of projectionists to check any and everything that is required to run a show. Voltage drop may be calculated by multiplying the one-way length of the circuit by 21, and that product by the number of amperes, dividing the final result by the area of the wire expressed in circular mils."

W. C. Brown says, "In assuming charge of a projection room I would regard it as a part of my duty to check up on every circuit used in projection, making report of conditions found to the management. Such action would be fair to the management and to myself as well, since I would be responsible not only for excellence of results, but for any inefficiency in operation if such inefficiency continue without knowledge of the management."

K. U. Unger replies, "The projectionist failing to check up on all elements of the equipment upon taking charge of same, making report of such faults as will cause poor or inefficient operaion, together with recommendations for remedying such faults, is not really a projectionist. He is an inefficient loafer on the job. He is not living up to the proud title motion picture-sound projectionist. Of course, it must be admitted that an accurate check-up is not always possible, since often circuits are so concealed that their exact length cannot be ascertained. However, it is always possible to make a pretty accurate estimate of the length, and certainly that man who takes charge of a projection room and slides along without as complete knowledge as possible of how efficiently it is operating, needs to hold council with himself. Also, I might remark that the management that permits such obviously careless operation itself stands in need of some fixing."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 53

(A) What are the basic requirements of a projector drive motor?

(B) Just how does the P.E. cell "see" volume?

(C) Describe two methods for adjusting the exciter light.

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

And now, in closing this "lesson," let me first remark that the single voltage drop answer quoted is correct, and quote something culled from the answer of an old and valued Bluebook School student, with which I must take emphatic issue. I am "with" the union in all that is right, fair and just, but there are limitations beyond which common sense, justice and fair dealing tells us unions must not go. I think the correspondent did not give the matter full consideration before saying, "Were I to take charge of a projection room previously under the care of a brother projectionist (Meaning brother union member presumably.—F. H. R.), before checking up and making report as this question suggests, I would apply to the local business agent for permission to do so. Without doubt a progressive business agent would issue the permission."

The quotation infers the right of a business agent to refuse permission to a union member to do his work properly, and surely by every rule of right it is a most important duty, even though too often neglected, of projectionists to ascertain whether or not faults exist in the equipment he has charge of, or in circuits that serve it, and to make report of such faults and recommendation for their remedying.

Incidentally, I have not the slightest doubt but that in a large percentage of theatres there are projection room feeder circuits that might be replaced with larger diameter wires with very substantial profit each year of operation.

Dear Mr. Ramsaye -

For some reason, the September 26th issue of THE MOTION PICTURE HERALD failed to reach me. Inasmuch as the Herald is my principal standby as a source of information about the industry, I wondered whether you could fill this gap in my file. The Herald is not available at newstands here; otherwise, I wouldn't trouble you.

Sincerely,

it's velvet

AS a journal of the show business Motion Picture Herald's obligations are generously discharged by its unparalleled, unapproached circulation* to showmen, the buyers and purveyors of the screen's wares. That is inside the amusement world.

But as an institution of the industry it serves, Motion Picture Herald is the interpreter, the friend, exponent, and press representative, too, of the whole art and all its people. Editors, reporters, syndicates, essayists, magazine writers, radio commentators—all of the many who have things to say about the screen—find the Herald their source and authority. That is the rest of the world.

When he says it in The Herald—whether he is a big distributor in Times Square or a little exhibitor in Wahoo—he tells the world. And that's velvet.

POLAND SEEN AS FIELD DESPITE RESTRICTIONS

Domestic Production Increasing; Cinemas Must Show Two Native Pictures Each Year

by JOSEPH FRYD
in Warsaw

Poland offers a field for American product despite the Qutoa restrictions placed upon foreign pictures in order to develop domestic production.

Poland is a market of the future. With its 35 million population there are only 700 theatres, and local production before this year has not achieved more than 20 pictures annually. As soon as conditions of the pauperized masses improve so that they will have money to spend on amusements, the number of theatres will rise rapidly.

This season opens with domestic production trying to invade the market. Of course these productions are assisted by the government, that is, by such protective legislation as import restrictions and control of foreign exchange.

With cinemas needing several hundred films yearly and domestic production amounting to only 20 productions before this year, with 27 thus far for this season, complete restriction of imports would close up the local cinemas. However, the situation is undergoing a change.

A new regulation has been introduced on the basis of which each cinema must show two Polish films within a year, or suffer the loss of its license. This assures domestic film consumption.

As a result of this, new studios have been built, better equipped, so that they will be able to produce about 40 films yearly. Automatically the increase in the number of Polish films will cause a decline in the number of foreign pictures imported.

At present the level of Polish films is nothing extraordinary. It is not the fault of story ideas or actors, but rather the lack of capital and experienced directors.

In the field of authorship, the writer of "Quo Vadis," Henryk Sienkiewicz, who died in 1916, was a Pole. His literary works constitute a storehouse of ideas. His "Crusades" ("Knights of the Cross") would have made a scenario comparable to the "Crusades" of Cecil B. De Mille.

Some time ago Gasiorowski's "Marie Walewska" was purchased here for $6,500. This story could have been bought for $900 if the buyers had turned directly to the author through a Polish agent. The broker charges cost about $5,000, but even this is not a high sum from American standards.

Outstanding Actors

Four Polish actors who would fit well into productions of an international characters are:

A. Dymsza. He resembles James Cagney but plays comedy, in some respects similar to Buster Keaton and Joe Brown, yet original in his way.

J. Andrzejewska. This dramatic artist now is playing in French films in Paris. The press applauds her as a second Modrzejewska. She can be compared to Katharine Hepburn.

Nora Ney. Another dramatic player, Miss Ney, plays heavy roles. She has appeared in many pictures shown abroad.

J. Stepowski. An older dramatic actor.

And there are many more Polish actors recognized in Europe. Nor do these players' services call for a heavy outlay, in American standards. The average salary paid a star for a chief role is $1,000.

27 Films This Year to Date

This year 27 pictures have been produced to date in Poland. Five of them have been released but only one is making money. It is called "Tredowata" ("The Leper"). The story idea, after changes, could be used in America. The production cost of this picture was $20,000. An earlier picture, "Mlody Las," which also was released in Russia, netted the producers $100,000.

The cost of some pictures is higher, for example, "Amerykanska Awantura," part of which is being produced in America by R. Ordynski.

And in the field of music, Polish composers have much to offer the international screen.

10 Per Cent Quota in Effect

In an effort to further the production of native Polish films, the Government has ordered that at least 10 per cent of all films shown in theatres in Poland must be Polish productions. In addition taxes on admissions have been radically reduced for exhibition of domestic pictures.

Canada Sets Appeal Board on Copyright

Not until the closing date for complaints on fees fixed for the Canadian Performing Society for 1937 did the Canadian Government make known the personnel of the Copyright Appeal Board which was created under the amended Canadian Copyright Act for the hearing of protests by theatres and other amusement operators.

A man of high judicial office has been appointed chairman of the board in Justice A. K. McLean of the Exchequer Court of Canada. The two other members are E. H. Coleman, under Secretary of State, and Paul Fontaine, K.C., of the Federal Department of Justice.

According to Fernand Rinfret, Secretary of State, the office of the board will be maintained in Ottawa, but sittings of the tribunal will be held in the larger centers of Canada. The board will meet whenever complaints are received.

Warners Sponsoring Parties

Harry M., Jack L., and Albert Warner will stage their 11th annual party for the Hebrew Orphan Asylum in New York on December 27 at which time 2,800 gifts will be given the children in addition to a show and special holiday dinner. The Warner brothers will also sponsor for the ninth consecutive year a similar event for the Colored Orphan Asylum at Riverdale, N. Y. This affair will be held Christmas Week. It is also planned to hold a party at the Catholic Day Nursery in the Bronx, but no date has yet been set.

Music League Organized

The International Music League, with headquarters in the Little Building, Boston, has been formed "to effectively introduce record, publish, "plug" and have performed over the radio the best works of those college composers and poets who are enrolled as members. Contracts to be given writers have been approved by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and the Music Publishers Protective Association.

Color in British Film

Trial sequences of the Capitol-Trafalgar film, "I Pagliacci," done in the new British Chemicolour process, will be included in the film as released. The process is available to all producers through British Chemicolour Process, Ltd., of which Karl Grune is managing director.

Hungarians Hold Morvay

The Exhibitors Union as a general meeting in Budapest refused to accept the resignation of Paul Morvay, managing vice-president, which was tendered following protest by some factions to his favorable attitude toward a proposal of Istvan Gero, Hungary's most important circuit operator.

Canada Gets Soviet Shorts

Cosmopolitan Films, Ltd., has begun the release in Canada for the first time of Soviet short subpects, the first two of the series being "U.S.S.R. on the Screen" and "Here and There with a Camera."

Old Herald Tear Sheets Used for Lobby Display

For his "Hollywood Boulevard" lobby display at the Egyptian Theatre, Sioux Falls, S. D., J. B. Clements erected board (see photo) on which tear sheets were posted taken from old copies of Motion Picture Herald featuring old time stars who are appearing in the picture. Copy above display read "Your old time favorite movie stars make a sensational comeback in this thrilling dramatic story of the inside secrets of Hollywood."

As was to be expected the contrast between the old photos and the current ones drew the anticipated attention, reports Clements.

Football Team Guested At "Big Game" Opening

In connection with his "Big Game" opening at the Howard Theatre, Taylor, Texas, Ewell Bingham arranged to dedicate opening night to the high school football team, school band marching to theatre, band giving concert on stage with members of the team guests of the management. Cheer leaders went through their paces which met with enthusiastic response.

Ewell was introduced by principal of city schools to high school assembly, where he made announcement on the picture to several hundred students, football programs at largest game of season bore picture imprint and through tieup with local dance school, two numbers were staged at theatre with dancers dressed in school colors. For sidewalk setpiece two weeks ahead, boards were made in form of football carrying stills, copy, etc., and also decorated with school colors.

Plants "Rembrandt" Section In New Picture Magazine

Unusual publicity sendoff for United Artists' "Rembrandt" was planted by Morris Helprin, Alex Korda publicist on this side, the smash being a seven-page section in "Life," new picture magazine. Entitled the "movie of the week," precede copy had to do with part of Charles Laughton and career of the famed artist.

Photo layout includes scene and star shots plus reproductions of many of the original Rembrandts in color. Coming just in advance of national release date, the break will no doubt be utilized by theatremen playing the date for advance buildup.

Botwick Reports Click of 16 MM Trailer in Lobby

Successful beyond anticipation was the 16 millimeter lobby trailer idea utilized recently by Harry Botwick, at the State, Portland, Me., and, in fact, so well did it go over that Harry intends tying in the slant on other coming attractions. The idea came to the Round Tabler some weeks ago when he had occasion to present a "coming" 20-frame trailer which was also made up in 16 mm. film for possible lobby use. At that time he was playing "Libeled Lady" to standing room and waiting lobby crowd, and, to keep the folks interested, ran the small-film trailer which he reports clicking immediately. It was the most novel stunt he ever used, says Botwick, as it created much profitable word-of-mouth advertising.

Entire cost ran between seven and eight dollars, the machine being borrowed to make the idea quite inexpensive. Department store has been sold on the idea of using the stunt in a main window for an attention-getter which should bring the theatre a lot of good advertising at no extra cost.

The Portland member also details the working of a small stereopticon planted in corner of the lobby with which are projected slides of coming attractions upon small screen. Originally, only regular slides of coming attractions were shown, these obtained from the exchanges, but, during election, progress of voting was noted and on Saturday football scores were run. Slides for these were the usual typewritten type, with the screen set up so as to attract immediate attention of patrons as they arrived.

LAST CALL FOR 1936 AWARDS

At this date, there are exactly three weeks left for theatremen to enter campaigns for the December Quigley Awards, the last month of the 1936 Competitions. Deadline for December is midnight of January 9, which, as usual, means entries must be at this office no later than that time.

The December judges at this listing are Hy Daab, Columbia Pictures Corp.; A. W. Smith, Jr., United Artists Corp., and Gordon White, Educational Pictures.

There is still plenty of time for showmen who have not yet won a monthly Silver or Bronze plaque in 1936 to become eligible for the Grand Awards and the free Hollywood trip via United Airlines.

Prepare now to send in that big campaign.

Prominents Aid Australian Ball For 'White Angel'

What started to be a buildup for the picture at the Regent Theatre, in Brisbane, Australia, but turned out to be one of the most important benefit parties held locally in the City Hall was the "White Angel Ball" for the benefit of local charities. Organized by Dorothy Flukes, Warner Bros. exploitation director in Australia, with the cooperation of the Trained Nurses Association, prominent local women and Manager Beth of the Regent, the event received wide publicity and attention in every quarter.

Much was done to make it a success, the ball coming two days ahead of the opening. Serving as the committee president was the Lady Mayoress, who was aided by other local names and representatives of all important women's organizations. Further aid was given by the Queensland Exhibitors Association with the members agreeing to run slides to help the party and the patronage of the Governor's wife was also secured. Fifty of Brisbane's most prominent society girls were enlisted to sell tickets.

Cooperation of leading church dignitaries was secured after previews of the picture. The Roman Catholic Archbishop, the Rev. Duhig, broadcast an endorsement of the picture and the ball and the Anglican Archbishop expressed his appreciation in an article for the local press. Miss Flukes also made a series of broadcasts stressing the women's angles and the Kay Francis style slants and another program was directed to interest children. Leading Brisbane hospitals were visited and talks made to nurses.

The theatre tied in by running mention of the ball in all ads three weeks ahead and also publicized the event on the radio, in theatre house magazine and on slides. Tram car cards were placed and extra 24's used, cards distributed to all shops and offices. Newspapers gave fine support with daily breaks.

Similar events on "White Angel" dates in other spots were also organized by Miss Flukes with the aid of leading localities. Various additional exploitations were included in the campaigns.

Miniature Gridiron, Teams in Action Make Up Window on "Pigskin Parade"

For his date on "Pigskin Parade," Manager S. Don Sheedy, West Theatre, Trinidad, Colo., struck on the idea of a miniature football field and teams plus officials in action for display in power company window. Players dressed in colored crepe were made with pipe cleaners and corks, with field laid to scale on dark green wall board with bias tape for markings. Sand cinder track circled field and miniature autos were borrowed from toy store. Lettered cutout football was used in background. Stunt rated two page one stories in local papers.

Robert Taylor Scroll Signed by Patrons

A little extra publicity was garnered by Max Kuperstein, Harrowgate Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., for "His Brother's Wife" when he secured local beauty contest winner to be first to sign oversized scroll in lobby reading "To Robert Taylor—in appreciation of the fine entertainment you have brought us, we hope you achieve the ultimate of success with your future productions." Patrons' signatures followed.

Contest was staged in newspaper for which Max offered guest tickets to those submitting best 100-word letter on what they liked about Robert Taylor, jumbo telegrams from the star were distributed and on theatre program, back page carried photo of Taylor with perforated edge so that it could be framed.

Patterson Buys Ball For Local Football Team

A swell good-will builder with its attendant publicity was put over by George Patterson, State Theatre, Paterson, N. J., when he purchased football for local game and presented it to the Mayor and Sheriff, the latter holding the ball while Hizonner kicked it off. P. A. announcement was made before the 15,000 fans.

Another stunt that George is using is an amateur show, promoting band and acts gratis, local talent is invited to participate in these weekly shows and papers came through with some nice publicity.

Tap Dancers Enter "Born To Dance" Contest

Through tieup with Trianon Ballroom in Cleveland, Milt Harris, Loew's State, for "Born to Dance" arranged to put on a tap dancing contest with eighteen promoted and cash prizes going to winners; ducats to runnersup. Accompanying photo shows display announcing contest with lifeside cutout of Eleanor Powell on miniature dance floor shown at the ballroom which attracted plenty of attention.

Another contest was planted in local Adams hat shop, whereby prizes were given to those submitting best parodies to Cole Porter's "Hey, Babe, Hey," one of the hit tunes in the picture. Heralds were also distributed giving lyrics of the number as they were presented on the screen.

LEADING MERCHANTS TIEIN WITH MEIKLE

November Bronze Plaque Winner Plants "Desire" Title In All Ads; Promotes Ace Windows

The city of Wanganui, according to Ross Meikle, is the fifth municipality in New Zealand, but judging from the wide coverage obtained by Meikle in his campaign on "Desire" at the Regent Theatre quite near the top in the attitude displayed by the local business men on picture tieins and theatre cooperation. In the matter of newspaper breaks the theatreman was able to have the title included in most every ad of consequence, succeeded in putting over full co-op pages and included the campaign in a department store birthday cake-cutting ceremony. This was heavily plugged by the store with full page ads crediting the theatre in addition to the manager's photo. Publicity on the date was also generous with the local press running daily stories on the picture spotted with long feature stories. Contests built up further interest.

Regimental Band Parades

Elaborate windows on various style slants suggested by the Dietrich costumes made up another important part of the drive and the two reproduced below are some of the standout showings arranged by the theatreman in the more prominent spots. Further advertising was obtained with shops handling a new hat named after the star and as a further buildup on a silk tiein, fashion show was staged at the theatre.

Other good angles were effective. For instance, due to his fine local stand in, Meikle was offered the services of the Wellington West Coast Regimental Band and had that well-known organization parade to the theatre with banners where a concert was given outside to attract the crowds. The band also played from the stage during the show, selections including the theme song of the picture.

On another occasion, the annual Kaierau Rugby Ball, Meikle served as master of ceremonies singing the picture theme song. Through this connection, he was able to have theatre ad printed on reverse side of all invitations to the party. Additional publicity was garnered by another local ceremony wherein prizes to winning rugby team were presented by high officials from the stage of the theatre and this too was tied into the date.

Letters were forwarded to members of important organizations and to further spread the news, house organs were imprinted a month ahead, napkins distributed in leading tea rooms which also carried theatre ads and cuts on reverse side ot menus. Adhesive labels with picture and date were utilized for pasting on match boxes given by tobacconists and as another thought, Meikle had rolls of adhesive package tape made up with theatre copy for use in stores.

Front was attractively decorated and billing extensive. As the campaign was put on during the celebration of Paramount Week in that sector, the latter was also plugged on taxis, car signs and specially bannered tram car which covered city and suburbs.

'DOUBLE' CONTEST TOPS BARCROFT'S CAMPAIGN

JOHN BARCROFT

November Silver Plaque Winner Uses Local "Ginger Rogers" to Obtain Unusual Publicity

There doesn't seem to be much that John Barcroft missed in his "Swingtime" campaign at the RKO Palace, Columbus, Ohio, and a stunt that clicked soundly and carried through for a lot of smart tieups and publicity was the contest for a local Ginger Rogers "double" with afternoon daily. Winner was taken on a personal appearance tour of night clubs and hotels and introduced by band leaders who explained the tieup. Girl was carried to the ball park, introduced over the p. a. system and also taken to the race track, where she presented trophy to winning jockey in "Swingtime" Handicap, advertised ahead at the track (see photo). Similar stunt was put on at trotting races during state fair and at horse show. During peak hours girl was accompanied by boy dressed as Fred Astaire. For another attention builder airplane bannered as official "Rogers" ship was displayed at airport, where girl was brought to receive print of picture delivered via air.

Capitalizing on the "knock, knock" craze, cards were made up with appropriate copy, the snapper being "Astaire Doctor in the House" distributed by boys in clown suits and makeup. Boys were given wooden hammers, driven to traffic corners, where they did a bit of knocking (see photo) before turning the cards loose and continued this around town. Cards were also passed out by the Astaire double.

Barcroft's cooperation from the dailies was distinctly out of the ordinary, running to pages and pages of advance feature stories, photos and other breaks, including serialization, eight-column streamers, cartoons, etc., and even taking in a biography of producer of the picture, Pandro Berman. Barcroft reports the holdover announcement as headed for four columns with streamer as another slant on how strong the papers went for the date.

A lot of publicity was directed at the midnight Hollywood premiere for the picture, which, besides the usual lights and other props, included a street parade, orchestra and dance team in lobby, attendance of Gov. Davey, introduction of "Miss Rogers" from the stage and over a broadcast, wires from the stars, etc. Loud-speaker was installed at busiest corner, over which the premiere was described and picture plugged and half-hour program was arranged from lobby on WBNS.

Other Ideas Listed

Of course Barcroft tied in with Packard for a lot of stunts in which the cars were used widely. In addition among the hundred and one other slants put over there were, to briefly enumerate, theatre party for the Ohio State football team, invitation presented by theatre ushers and run in the papers. Displays were planted in all windows of dry-cleaning chain, newsboys distributed heralds, music stores carried various advertising of the hit tunes, cards planted in hotel rooms, out of town papers were covered, displays placed in clothing and drug stores, beauty shops supplied with coiffure stills of the Rogers head dress, special front and lobby created, dancing schools hooked in and about every other conceivable angle that was productive of results tied in to this really giant job of work.

Gov. Moeur Attends "Desperado" Premiere

With the Fox Theatre in Tucson, Ariz., getting the world premiere of "Gay Desperado," which was filmed in that sector, Roy Drachman set to work to sell the date, in all copy using the following: "See the beautiful Arizona desert and our own San Xavier Mission serving as the background for a gay, rollicking adventure set to music."

Kleig lights played on front during entire evening, many state and city officials took part in the ceremonies on the stage, including Gov. B. B. Moeur, who made a short talk and then pressed a button that supposedly started the show. A 22-piece Mexican orchestra in full costume (see photo) played in front of theatre, streets were decorated, as was lobby, with shawls, Mexican rugs, cactus, etc.

Immediately following the showing, leading hotel staged a "Gay Desperado Ball," advertising it in papers and over radio. Bars featured a "Desperado" cocktail, Western Union devoted window to display of wires from stars and newspaper sponsored a contest offering prizes to those submitting best amateur photographs taken of the movie company while on location there.

Blotto contest was planted in newspaper with passes going to winners, parade was held with lead truck bearing couple dressed as Rogers and Astaire, stopping at busy intersections while team gave a demonstration of a "Swing Time" waltz and tap. Pianist on truck played numbers from picture throughout the parade.

Announcements were made over p.a. at night football game, various merchants devoting windows to displays and Martin mailed postcards from Houston to selected list, lauding the coming attraction.

News Reader Bally Plugs "Texas Rangers"

Excellent publicity was landed by J. A. Sanders, Westex Theatre, Olney, Texas, on "Texas Rangers" when he ran a news reader three weeks ahead of playdate asking for the longest resident of Young County to be made honorary member of the Texas Rangers by Gov. Allred. Eligible party had lived in that community 77 years and papers again came through with stories.

Mayor Hannis proclaimed a "Texas Rangers' Week" and schools conducted a theme writing contest on the history of the Texas Rangers, students given credits and one theme selected from each class with winners receiving week's pass. Another school tieup was made through cooperation of local high school whereby each student attending the show was given two points on book reports and an extra daily grade for history class.

Entire staff was dressed as Rangers and for lobby display Ewell built a miniature set to portray the state of Texas. In one corner was covered wagon with yoke of oxen and two horses mounted with cowboy riders, Indian tepee with chief and several tribesmen were planted about a camp and in the background was 24-sheet with title, stars and playdates. Wires received from stores were mounted on easel in lobby and front page story was run in paper offering free admission to all boys and girls riding to the theatre on horseback.

Pollock's Co-op Ad Page

Hooded Horsemen Exploit "Terror"

One of the most vigorous campaigns executed in a long time was reported by "Doc" Joe Lee as put over by Teddy Trust of the Brooklyn Strand, in selling "Legion of Terror" in all parts of the borough. Top street stunt had four hooded horsemen (see photo) covering the downtown business sections, shopping centers, colleges and schools. Another snapper was the gag of two men dressed in robes of the hooded legion handing out cards which told of a "meeting tonight of the Legion of Terror at the Strand."

In advance, thousands of the tabloid circulars were distributed house-to-house in specially designated sections and week ahead extra trailer was run showing the terror highlights of the picture. This was tied in with lobby three-sheet boards carrying tear sheets of the recent "Black Legion" trial in Chicago. Also featured in the lobby was showcase with first-aid equipment and nurse in attendance, copy on poster alongside suggesting the emergency aids for "Patrons who faint" during the showing.

Colburn's Unusual Ads Sell His Shows at Bath

Unusual twist to the co-op ad was pulled by Frank F. Colburn, Jr., of the Opera House, Bath, Maine, for "Magnificent Obsession" with cooperating merchant's ad featuring a picture of Irene Dunne in a men's clothing ad with copy "It may be unusual to feature a woman in a man's clothing ad; well, so is our fall display of suits, overcoats," etc., etc.

For one of his theatre ads Frank used the following copy: "Vitamin E stands for Entertainment, the tonic that carries us away fro mthe humdrum life to golden relaxation and forgetfulness. Bath Opera House programs supply you with that certain something that nothing else can offer. The glorious feeling of contentment and happiness. Treat yourself. Treat the family. Our shows bubble over with that precious Vitamin E."

Contests Highlight Van Noy's "Ramona" Date

Addressing his message to the "high school gang, Harry Van Noy, Paramount Theatre, Anderson, Ind., for "Ramona" offered guest tickets to those submitting best 100-word essay on what they considered Don Ameche's most outstanding role in the "First Nighter" radio program. Second contest, through tieup with the Anderson Sunday Herald was an offer of tickets to those turning in best poem in which star's names, picture title and First Nighter were included. Paper ran stories on the contest, running winners' names and poems in subsequent issues.

Entire front was done over with compoboard tepee covering cashier's cage, large cutouts of Ameche were spotted under marquee and various merchants came through with neat window displays.

How to Plan a Nightmare Told by Maine Member

Everything Goes Wrong and Round Tabler Breaks House Record

by F. J. GOOCH
Manager, Columbia, Bath, Maine

If a theatre manager were planning a nightmare he could have secured a lot of material for the plot here all day Saturday, Dec. 5th. A special kiddie show, sponsored by a bakery company which gave away 500 free tickets was held at the Bath Opera House at 9:30 A. M. and my assistant and I were over there to assist in getting the kids in and assisting in giving away the hundred prizes. On returning to our theatre we found that we had received the wrong feature, and this started things off. We called Portland and were unable to get another print of the feature booked, and they rushed a second-run feature which we used for the matinee. This feature arrived 20 minutes late and we ran borrowed shorts while waiting.

Finds Himself In the Dark

After we had definitely found out what we were to play we broke into the show and expressed our regrets to the audience and told them of the change of features, suggesting that they see this picture again (Three on the Trail), but if they did not care to see it they could get a pass to return next week or get a refund. We did not lose a single customer and only issued three passes. In the middle of this announcement every light in the theatre—in fact, in the entire city—went out and the theatre was dark for three minutes with me on the stage in the middle of an announcement. When the power came on we found that there was only 70 volts, not enough to light the arcs.

Imagine our embarrassment when we had invited them to stay for a second-run feature or get their refunds, etc., and then not have power enough to get started again. This situation lasted for five minutes and many went out for a smoke, but all returned. We struggled through the remainder of the afternoon with only 100 volts coming through.

After the matinee (a record breaker for the house) we decided that it would be better to show the feature that had played at the Opera House for the Kiddie Show rather than the feature that we ran for the matinee when the audience was nearly all kids. Therefore we changed the front and marquee during the time between shows and opened the evening show advertising "The Singing Cowboy" as a feature. The doors opened at 6:00 P. M. with the voltage still under 90, but with the assurance of the power company that we would be all right before 6:30. At 6:30 conditions were the same, as far as power went, but the house was filling rapidly and we were forced to announce the change of feature and the fact that we were unable to start the show because of lack of power. At 6:45 we repeated this announcement. By this time the people who had come in around 6:00 were becoming restless. At 6:50 we decided that something must be done or we would have no customers when the show did begin, if ever, so I went on the stage and asked the audience how they would enjoy an "Amateur Show." When they shouted their approval I called for volunteers, offering 10 passes to anyone who would sing, dance or whistle. After much comment and discussion we managed to get two persons who would sing without music of any sort and the audience got a great kick out of it with each of them getting several encores. Meanwhile, since we have no non-sync or other form of mechanical music, we had sought to borrow a phonograph and secured one of uncertain vintage with a supply of records which were as old as the machine itself. This was set up on the stage and the audience got a great many laughs at our selecting records, keeping the thing wound, etc.

And Breaks the House Record

By this time it was after 7:00 and the house was nearly filled, so we borrowed a radio from a nearby store, but after connecting this up on the stage, plugging it into one of the footlights and stringing the antenna we found there was not enough power to run even this. The audience enjoyed our failure, I think, more than they would have the music had we got it working. By the time we were convinced that this venture was a failure the power had come back to 100 volts and we were able to start the show again. By this time the house was filled to capacity and we were forced to issue refunds on account of having no seats. This was at 7:45. We started with the feature picture and before this was over every bit of available standing room was sold and we were forced to sell a wait in the lobby before we finished the showing of the short subjects.

The final result of the day was that we broke the house record, showing two emergency features with no previous advertising. Since Saturday is our normal closing day, with the book work, to keep us busy whenever we have a few minutes from the floor, these hectic happenings made the saying, "Little Man, You've Had a Busy Day," fit very appropriately.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Paris, Texas

Dear Herald:

This town of Paris, Texas, is said to be somewhat different from Paris, France. Here they have the Longhorns, while over there they have the Apaches. Anyhow, this is a pretty good town and we've been in Paris, Michigan, too.

Paris, Michigan, is where the state has a fine fish hatchery and at this hatchery is where we saw the largest sturgeon west of Hoboken. He was ten feet—well, maybe not quite ten feet long, but anyhow he was an awfully big fish. We seldom say anything about fish because nobody would believe it anyhow. But if you ever go to Paris, Michigan, be sure to go to the hatchery and see that sturgeon yourself.

Speaking of Paris, Texas, reminds us of four long days we have waited for Jim Farley to get some mail to us from the boys at Rockefeller Center, New York, and Jim seems to have laid down on the job, for it is not here yet, although we were advised that it was placed in his hands several days ago. But it is a long ways from Rockefeller Center to Paris, Texas. In fact, it is about as far as it is from Tombstone, Arizona, to Grindstone, South Dakota, or to Pipestone, Minnesota, or Sandstone, Michigan. We have been in all of 'em and we know it is a long road, so we are not blaming Jim for not getting our mail to us.

Paris, Texas, is located in what is said to be the best farming country in the state, although we didn't see much farming outside of cotton fields. They certainly grow cotton down here, although the crop was cut very short the last season on account of drouth, the same as the corn was up in the corn belt. When these two crops fail there isn't much left to look forward to except the open season on ducks. But in spite of the failure of the cotton crop Paris seems to be going ahead just like nothing had happened.

Well, sir, don't it beat all the way things happen occasionally? We just got a letter that was forwarded to us and signed by "Charley" and that was all the address there was to it, and who in the —— that "Charley" is we don't know, and it would be simply a guess. But our guess is that it was written by our very good friend Charley Snyder, the RKO booker in our cellmate's office at Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Charley gave us quite a lengthy account of his trip calling on the boys in South Dakota with Ernie Frace, and we are assuming from his report that he and Ernie were sober—part of the time. We hope never to forget those Sioux Falls boys, for they are the ones who took care of us last summer when we were overcome with heat prostration.

Charley mentioned calling at Pierre to see Charles Lee Hyde, but that Charles Lee had gone to Chicago to assist his Alma Mater, Northwestern University, lug the pigskin over the Minnesota goal line, and who could blame Charles Lee for that? Any boy who won't stand up for his Alma don't belong in South Dakota, and Charles Lee lives in South Dakota.

Charley mentioned a lot more of the boys he called on, and bringing these names to our minds caused a feeling of homesickness, for we remember calling on all of them, and a lot more, last summer with Ernie Frace (a film hound turned loose on a suffering public by Sherm Fitch), and we remember what a good time we had and how well treated we were, and this makes us wish to go back again some time.

Then he mentioned a lot more of the boys he called on and each name brought up very pleasant recollections. Bob Hippel of the Bijou theatre at Pierre, Blume of Redfield, Hank Webster at Harrold, B. C. Hoover at Gettysburg (Doggone that Hoover! Why don't he stay at home when we call?) and several more of the boys, not to mention that most excellent guy, Abbott of Arlington. Oh, well, what's the use? All we can do is to think about 'em, and that don't improve our appetite a bit.

But what we'd like to know is, what in thunder would those boys do up in that burned-up grasshopper country without Charley? If any of you know, please inform us. Right now we're bound for McAllen, Texas, where "Shine" Mason operates the Palace theatre and where the sun shines on the luscious grapefruit 365 days each year and where the Mexicans, well, we'll skip that.

But speaking of South Dakota. Did you know that they put South Dakota right between North Dakota and Nebraska? That was done probably to keep John Piller of Valley City, North Dakota, out of Nebraska, a very wise precaution.

It may, or it may not, be of interest to you to know that our mail address for three months will probably be McAllen, Texas, where we hope our Christmas dinner will include turkey and grapefruit, and where you boys can reach us by letter, if you should be so inclined. But, anyhow, don't fail to report your pictures to "What the Picture Did for Me" in the HERALD. You will find it a big help to all.

Interstate Gets Graves Theatres

The Interstate Theatre Corporation of Boston has concluded arrangements whereby it takes over the Graves Theatres in New Hampshire and Vermont. Graves houses are in Plymouth, Bristol, Lancaster and Woodstock, all in New Hampshire, and White River Junction, Vermont. The addition of these eight houses makes a total of 32 now in operation for Interstate.

The Interstate corporation was formed 10 years ago, shortly after its founders and present officers were graduated from Dartmouth College. Edward Ansin is president of the company and E. Harold Stoneman is treasurer. Besides the two states mentioned above, Interstate also operates theatres in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

RKO Far Eastern Sales Force Meets in Calcutta

The Far Eastern sales force of RKO Radio pictures held a three-day meeting in the RKO Building, Calcutta, India, early this month under the supervision of Reginald Armour, far eastern general manager. Among those who attended were G. E. Gregory, Rewashankar Pancholi, Dalsukh Pancholi, N. T. Mudnaney, S. R. Hemmad, R. K. Sharma, B. P. Parekh, S. R. Lewis, J. Remi Grasto, B. C. Ganguly, L. S. Trasy and S. Anant.

The company's 1937 list of product was discussed at the meeting and later full particulars were sent to exhibitors.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 125, No. 13 December 26, 1936

RANCHO LINDA VISTA

Pinal County in Arizona

PATIENT brown Panchito is in with the mail, the first in a week, from Rockefeller Center, a whole saddle bag of it, laden with gossip and hectic tidings of the show world and industry that seem curiously remote up here in the clear still shade of the drouth stunted liveoaks that fringe the Catalinas.

A thumbing over of an armload of Motion Picture Dailies and about three pounds of Motion Picture Herald, in unhurried attention divided with a pot of cafe con leche, brings the impression that in the ardours of announcement the picture makers are once again having more to say about what they are going to spend than what they are going to get for what they spend.

Millions are in the air over Broadway again, thick as the fat flakes of a damp goosefeather snow in springtime. The show world seems to be getting quickly back to its norm of the abnormal. It would seem that quite enough had already been said, and agreed, about the general unwisdom of dollar publicity, but one significant aspect of our industry is that nothing ever stays set, or agreed. Possibly that is an index of youth, or vigour, but more likely it merely betokens the persistence of a lazy inertia in promotional thinking and expression.

THE same printed pages which glitter with Hollywood dollar promises and boasts, however, bring re-statement of the considerably increased array of projected motion picture measures for the attention of legislative bodies, state and national. Also generally through business there is anxious recognition of the impending necessities that will be sending the tax makers beagling into every promising source of revenues. Further it is to be borne in mind, with the example of the gasoline taxes before us, that taxes are assessed at the points where it is easiest to dip into the flow of income receipts. The box offices and the film exchanges loom up considerably more conspicuously than the gasoline filling stations. And, as a fruit of its publicity and the Arabian nights displays of Hollywood, "the movies" mean money, easy money and lots of it alike to fervid fans and hungry bureaucrats.

This is, or ought to be, obviously, a special time not to be advertising for trouble.

It seems that we have arrived at a state today where a producer is approximately ashamed to admit that he contemplates any production to be budgeted at less than a million dollars. It takes a two million dollar project to sound conspicuously enterprising among this season's announcements.

This ornate situation is understandable enough. Cost carries with it at least a presumption of value, but, alas, not a guaranty. It seems to be the most ready way of saying that a big picture is about to be made with all the box office value that the talent market affords. But after all every million is not the same size. So much depends on who spends it and for what it is spent, and where. Examination of studio costs, alongside of the arrays of Box Office Champions recorded in the pages of Motion Picture Herald, indicate that a studio dollar may be worth anything from 30 cents to a dollar and a quarter.

THERE are so many kinds of Hollywood dollars. There is a Warner dollar, there's a Paramount dollar, a Zanuck dollar, a De Mille dollar and a Sterling or Ray Johnston dollar, also the famous Yates dollar, the long celebrated Giannini dollar, the flashy Whitney dollar printed in Technicolor.

All these dollars go out in big checks, but they have to come back in small change.

On this subject, this very perennial subject of dollar boasting and boosting in show promises and lures, it may be pointed out that the rather large motor car business approached the current season with a somewhat parallel problem presented in the general and long continued practise of advertising car speeds. Adverse publicity, pointed up sharply by "—And Sudden Death" made Detroit conscious of impending possibilities of restrictive legislations,—censorship of car performance in fact. The air was full of talk and print about automatic governors and regulative devices by which the state could lay its arresting hand on the product. By a much discussed but very slightly publicized agreement, the motor makers eliminated, most positively, reference to top speeds in all consumer advertising. The sole exception that has come to attention is a discreet suggestion that the smaller engined economy version of the Ford is fast enough.

Yet only a year or two ago a writer of motor car advertising would have considered his hands tied if he had not been permitted to expand on how quickly the car got away and how soon it would be doing "eighty and up."

WHILE it is not directly relevant to the publicity considerations of this page, reflection on the trend of motor car development brings the observation that in that great industry addressed at mass consumption the progress of technological research and manufacturing skill has continuously been addressed at a reduction of the cost of the product to the growing body of consumers, whereas the motion picture's trend through twenty-five years of the dramatic feature has been in the exactly opposite direction.

In the opinion of this writer this trend of the screen can not and will not continue indefinitely, and even now in the slowly accumulating velocity of sixteen millimeter there is the making of a significant new approach to the amusement market, however, more likely a supplement than a successor to the grandiose structures of today.

NO matter where one goes there is always a night life. Four miles across the foothills from here is Newt's Place, with

This Week

Exhibitors on the Air

Exhibitors, vehement in their protests against broadcasts on national hookups by Hollywood stars, are realizing and utilizing the value of direct exploitation of their theatres through local radio stations. They still maintain that broadcasts by top flight stars during the evening hours constitute unfair competition, but they admit that such programs have value as advertising for the new films. In many cases they are using tieups with their local radio stations for spot announcements exploiting their theatres and current pictures and in some instances they are sponsoring programs which include organ recitals and amateur hours.

The extent and significance of these links between radio and screen are told in reports from scattered sections of the country on page 13.

Doubles and Dimes

The United States Government has engaged in a legal tilt with eight large distributors and two large Texas circuits over product contracts which provide that the distributors will not service subsequent-run exhibitors who charge unreasonably low admissions and follow a double feature policy with pictures which have been shown in the circuit houses at advanced prices. The case is set for early trial in the United States district court in Dallas and may not be settled before it is brought for final decision to the supreme court.

Details of the charges and the possible significance of the verdict when it is given are on page 33.

Bank Night Rulings

With decisions from two state courts and a federal district court ruling it a lottery, Bank Night and other chance games continue the subject of legal controversy in many states. The appeal of a case in Louisiana has delayed action of police against theatres using giveaways; the attorney general of Kansas has declared that he will move immediately against all exhibitors using the chance games, and the attorney general of Illinois has issued an opinion that the games are lotteries and hence illegal.

Developments are recorded on page 30.

Admissions Up

The W. D. Fulton group of theatres in Kansas City is leading the way toward higher admissions in that territory. Five theatres of the circuit inaugurated small increases this week, the first move in that direction to be made by any exhibitors in the area.

See page 29.

25,000 Yule Baskets

More than 25,000 baskets of foodstuffs were gathered at the morning matinees in Chicago theatres Tuesday for distribution by the Better Films Council of Chicagoland, in the second annual Movie Christmas Basket Party, to which exhibitors and distributors alike contributed. A basket of food for the needy was the admission price, and the exchanges donated the use of the films.

Further details on this and other happenings in the Chicago area are on page 68.

Taxes and Business

Assurances that business, especially the motion picture industry, need have no fears of additional federal taxation measures were voiced in Washington this week by Congressional leaders who are now assembling preparatory to the opening of Congress next month. But, the industry also was told it need expect no relief, for the admission levies are not included in the group of non-protective measures scheduled to be abolished.

The national situation, as well as individual state taxation, is discussed in the story on page 51.

The Roxy Plan

Under the plan of reorganization of Roxy Theatre Corporation presented to Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey by the committee for the first mortgage bondholders in New York, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation is guaranteed a minimum of 83 1/3 per cent of the combined outstanding new Class A and common stock of the reorganized corporation. The reorganized theatre in turn will receive a 20-year film franchise from Twentieth Century-Fox and $650,000 in cash.

The plan is discussed in detail on page 32.

Italian Treaty

A total of 250 pictures a year may be imported by Italy and 20,000,000 lire exported from that country under new regulations governing American distribution in that country. The rules are so liberal that, in effect, Italy becomes a free market for American films. The concessions include the removal of all restrictions on surplus earnings beyond the export maximum.

The story is on page 36.

NRA Hope Abandoned

All idea of resuscitation of the NRA has been abandoned by the National Council for Industrial Progress, it has been announced by Major George L. Berry, and legislation for industrial control to be submitted to Congress next month will be confined to extension of the anti-trust laws on unfair competition.

A story from Washington is on page 29.

Production Tempo

Despite the Christmas season, the studios in Hollywood maintained their average pace of output. Nine productions were started and five others were completed.

Details are on page 41.

RKO Plan Favored

That well over a majority of the RKO stockholders will approve the reorganization plan of the company proposed by Atlas Corporation and Lehman Brothers, Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for the proponents of the plan, told Federal Judge William Bondy in New York this week. The statement was made during a hearing on a petition by Irving Trust Company, trustee of RKO in bankruptcy, for leave to offer $700,000 to the Orpheum Circuit for a clear title to all of Orpheum's going assets.

Details are in the story on page 36.

Stockholders Defeated

The stockholders of Gaumont British were defeated at a meeting in London by the overwhelming power of the proxies and personal holdings of the board of directors of the company in an attempt to reject the GB financial reports and accounts. Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, was ousted from the directorate on a show of hands but was reinstated on a poll called for by Mark Ostrer, chairman.

The account of the stormy meeting is on page 34.

Star Broadcast Issue

Appearances of motion picture stars on radio broadcasts should be regulated by the producers, B. P. Schulberg said in New York this week as his solution of the problem that now is perplexing the motion picture exhibitors and radio broadcasters. Mr. Schulberg is in New York for home office conferences at Paramount and will return to Hollywood this week.

See page 44.

German Credits

Conditions under which imports from Germany could be arranged without running counter to the anti-bounty provisions of the Tariff Act were made public in Washington by the Treasury Department.

Under the regulations German films might be brought into the country to be paid for, in whole or in part, with the use of controlled mark credits, providing that such credits, at the time they became subject to German Government control, were continuously owned by the person for whose actual account the merchandise is purchased.

The films might be paid for also from the proceeds of sales in Germany of pictures exported from the United States by the person buying the German product. An exchange of merchandise between single German and American parties without any monetary transaction actually taking place also would be acceptable.

Music Tax Protest

At the first hearing of the Copyright Appeal Board in Ottawa last week, theatre owners joined with hotel keepers and radio stations in protesting that the fees proposed for 1937 by the Canadian Performing Rights Society were excessive, unfair and improper. Following a hearing, Justice A. K. MacLean, chairman of the board, announced it will make whatever changes in the tariff it considered appropriate.

Colonel John A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Operators, objected to the proposed penalty of 25 per cent for late payment of fees and to the society's regulation that all fees be paid annually in advance. N. A. Taylor of Toronto, representing independent exhibitors, said it was a hardship on small theatres to pay the whole sum in advance. Other interests presented objections on points affecting their peculiar conditions.

Good Will Week

Arthur L. Mayer, one of the few exhibitors operating an independent theatre on Broadway, advances a unique suggestion for a "Good Will Week" to fill theatres during the Christmas void. He guarantees exhibitors as much joy as from a capacity business for the week before Christmas, if they would fill their theatres, free of charge, with children, the old and infirm, and the poor.

Details on the plan are on page 32.

ERPI Monopoly Denied

With John E. Otterson, former president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., on the stand, Samuel Becker, attorney for the Federal Communications Commission, opened the commission's hearings in its investigation into American Telephone and Telegraph in New York this week. Mr. Becker attempted to prove by assertions from Mr. Otterson that Western Electric and Erpi monopolized the motion picture recording and reproducing equipment, but was unsuccessful.

The highlights of the hearing are on page 44.

Production Move

The return of Monogram Pictures to the production field was indicated in New York last week when the plan to repurchase the outstanding capital stock of the company was revealed following a meeting of the board of directors. W. Ray Johnston's stock will not be affected by the deal and his newly-formed Sterling Pictures will probably take over the name of Monogram and produce under it.

See page 44.

Delayed Boards

Delays of large distribution companies in replying to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America's trade practice program are adversely affecting the setting up of local conciliation boards, even in territories where the establishment of a board may be requested, it was reported in New York this week by a proponent of the board plan.

The administration expenses of the boards will be borne by distributors, it was pointed out, and until the large companies formally have made known their approval of the conciliation machinery, have voted the necessary funds for their establishment and maintenance and have cooperated in the selection of personnel, little or no progress can be made. As matters stand now, exhibitor leaders do not expect the boards to be in general operation before spring.

Allied Board Session

The annual meeting of the board of directors of Allied States Exhibitor Association will be held at the Emerson Hotel in Baltimore, Md., on January 21 and 22. The time and place were chosen to permit members and their families to attend the inauguration of President Roosevelt in Washington on January 20th.

Loew Report

Lacking all financial data, which, the company explained, it had not had time to compile, Loew's, Inc., on Tuesday filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington its annual report covering the fiscal year ended August 31st.

The Statement showed that Loew's has 59 wholly owned subsidiaries, which in turn have 27 subsidiaries. Loew's holds over 50 per cent interest in 20 subsidiaries, which themselves have nine subsidiaries.

There have been no changes in the contractual arrangements of the corporation, it was reported to the commission, but there are outstanding options for 201,220 shares of common stock at $35 per share up to March 1 next, and $40 to March 1, 1939, of which 36,110 are reserved for David Bernstein, 44,000 for J. Robert Rubin, 36,110 for Louis B. Mayer and 85,000 for the estate of the late Irving Thalberg.

Champions

Six pictures scored as champions for November. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Paramount and Warner were represented and the pictures were "Libelled Lady," "Pigskin Parade," "Come and Get It," "Big Broadcast of 1937," "The Gay Desperado," and "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

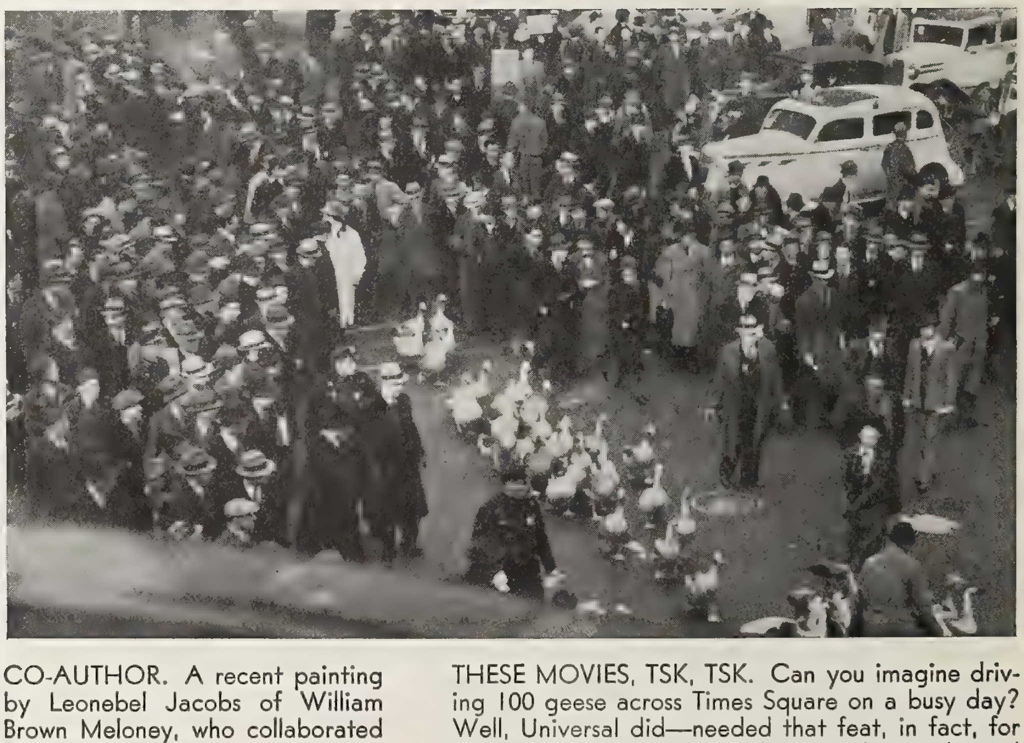
OKLAHOMA EXHIBITORS CONVENE. Members of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, Inc., at dinner which closed their annual convention, held in Oklahoma City, with a record attendance of over 200. Honor guests were Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA head; Dave Palfreyman of the MPPDA, and M. A. Lightman, head of Tri-State. M. Loewenstein was elected president.

ADDRESSES WOMEN'S GROUP. (Below) James Melton, featured singer in Warner musicals and prominent radio artist, as he told the Women's Forum, meeting in New York, of the screen's advantages over other entertainment media. At his right is Miss Helen Boswell, who presided.



CO-AUTHOR. A recent painting by Leonebel Jacobs of William Brown Meloney, who collaborated on the screen play of United Artists' latest Samuel Goldwyn production, "Beloved Enemy."

THESE MOVIES, TSK, TSK. Can you imagine driving 100 geese across Times Square on a busy day? Well, Universal did—needed that feat, in fact, for "Class Prophecy." What happened is indicated above. Puzzled crowds gathered, 33 geese got lost, motorists cursed—what a time!

HONOR GUEST AT PREVIEW. (Below) Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, with her host, Lily Pons, at an advance showing of the latter's latest RKO Radio starring vehicle, "That Girl from Paris." The preview was held at Radio City Music Hall.

LOCATIONS ON THE WING. Members of George Hirliman's company filming "Park Avenue Logger," George O'Brien vehicle for RKO Radio, on their return to Hollywood following a four-day trip by plane to lumber camps in three States. Left to right: Frank B. Good, cameraman; Leonard Goldstein, associate producer; Beatrice Roberts, feminine lead; O'Brien and Director David Howard.

WINS WORLD AWARD. (Above) F. E. Evans, British consul, presenting David O. Selznick the 1936 League of Nations gold award for high film merit as consuls of Italy, Brazil and France look on. The award was made for Selznick International's "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

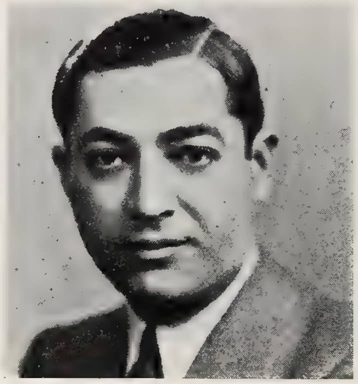
RETURN FROM EUROPE: James P. Mulvey, vice president of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, and Mrs. Mulvey pictured on their arrival in New York from England, where they have been vacationing. Mr. Mulvey also conferred with Alexander Korda.



COLLAPSIBLE VIOLIN. Rubinoff, purveyor of violin novelties to both radio and screen audiences, demonstrating (above) another kind of violin novelty—a collapsible instrument—to Paramount News men in Washington, who filmed his performance before patent experts. Shown are Al Aeth, Rubinoff, Hugo Johnson, Robert Denton.

LEAVES CIRCUIT. Max B. Slott (left), who has resigned from a district managership of Warner Theatres in Chicago to become an independent exhibitor. He will open the Park theatre in Chicago next March.

EXPLOITATION FORCES REORGANIZED. William R. Ferguson, head of MGM exploitation, with members of his field staff at meeting in Cleveland at which territories for each member was assigned. Standing: Oscar Kantner, San Francisco; James Thames, Atlanta and Memphis; J. E. Watson, Cincinnati; James Schiller, Los Angles; Clinton Bolton, New Orrleans; C. C. Deardourff, Cleveland; E. B. Coleman, Dallas and Oklahoma City; Morris Abrams, Minneapolis; W. B. Bishop, Detroit; Claud Morris, Kansas City and Denver; Bert McKenzie, Boston and New Haven; Omar Kenyon (rear), Des Moines and Omaha; Louis Orlove, Milwaukee; Jack Gilmore, Buffalo and Albany; James Ashcraft, Philadelphia. Seated: Ken Renaud, Seattle and Portland; Carlton Duffus, educational contact; Bill Parker, Indianapolis; Fred Bartow, Chicago; Charles Sonin, home office; Mr. Ferguson; N. W. Pyle, Washington and Charlotte; Eddie Carrier, home office; and Jack Walsh, Pittsburgh.

EXHIBITORS NOW TAKING TO RADIO TO SELL SHOWS

Theatre Owners and Managers Blend Use of Radio Time with Protests Against Stars' Appearances on Air Waves

Participation Varies from Flash Announcements to Contests and Organ Recitals and the Amateur Hours Over the Air

That radio has a definite value and a well defined place in motion picture theatre advertising and exploitation is indicated in a survey of the opinions of exhibitors in representative sections of the country and a study of what has been and is being done in this field.

Theatre owners and managers, chiefly the independents and smaller circuit operators, are as vehement as ever in their protests against the appearance of film stars on nationally broadcast programs and their demands that these appearances be limited, at least to hours other than the evening period when theatres expect their best business. Nevertheless, many of these same exhibitors are, and have been for some time, utilizing radio time on their local stations in such a way as to model a plan for a permanent and regulated connection between the two mediums of entertainment.

In most cases these broadcasts, at present, are only flash announcements at various times which cover current pictures at the local theatres and are made in return for passes for the station's staff or for merchandising tieups. This plan is expanded in several instances to the giving of passes in contests of various kinds conducted in connection with commercial programs. In other cases theatre managers themselves sponsor programs varying from 15 minute organ recitals to amateur hours. These originate from the theatres, and exploitation is worked into the announcements.

Factor in Radio Problem

The practice of using the air to exploit attractions at theatres is not new but its recent growth has made it a factor in the consideration of the entire problem of the nature of the relationship which should exist between radio and films, brought to attention in recent months by the increasingly heavy interchange of talent between the broadcasting studios and the motion picture production lots. The Capitol theatre in New York for years has sponsored a Sunday broadcast which was initiated by the late S. L. Rothafel and is now being conducted by Major Edward Bowes. At present it is called the "Capitol Family Hour" and goes out over the Columbia System.

A similar program is sponsored by the RKO Music Hall, New York, and is called the "Music Hall of the Air." Also on the air on Sundays, it is broadcast over the National Broadcasting Company network and, besides a performance by the theatre symphony orchestra, includes references to the current picture and stage show.

Both these programs are national in scope. The type of program and announcement of greatest interest to the exhibitor is that being used by local stations in the smaller towns. Many operators who have adopted this means of exploitation contend that it is supplanting billboard and window card advertising to some extent and very often proves of greater value than either of these media.

NBC Coast Studios To Be Expanded

Studio facilities of the National Broadcasting Company will be expanded to take care of the increasing interest among sponsors in Hollywood as a source of broadcast material and talent, according to an announcement by that company. Construction plans now being drawn call for a complete rearrangement of the present Hollywood quarters, built only a year ago, and for an increase in the number of studios from four to eight. Two more stage studios, each with an audience capacity of 250, will be added.

District managers for the larger circuits, for the most part, are not as concerned as the independent exhibitors about the competition from the national Hollywood star programs. They, too, at present constitute the majority of operators who are using radio tieups for their theatres.

Reports from representative sections of the country follow:

Philadelphia Managers Find Outlet Valuable

The United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware went on record this fall as protesting the radio appearance of Hollywood stars, but Philadelphia exhibitors for some time have been turning to radio stations as a welcome outlet for exploitation and advertising.

The UMPTO petition to producers not only protested but demanded that "every producer of motion pictures, every director, immediately cease all of their activities in broadcasting at any time the talents of motion picture actors, actresses and directors over all radio broadcasting stations, whether on local, Pacific coast or national hook-ups."

Local stations in Philadelphia never have considered the motion picture exhibitor as a source of commercial revenue but usually have been glad to cooperate, on a mutual basis, in the interests of station program policy. It has been the custom for the exhibitor to pay off in passes for the free commercial plugs his house receives.

The only exception to this non-payment policy is the Nixon-Grand theatre, Sam Stiefel sponsoring two and a half hours weekly to exploit his house. Operated as a combination house, featuring negro and white acts in connection with the picture, the Nixon-Grand sponsors a negro children's hour over WIP on Sunday afternoons, a half hour program on Sunday nights featuring the current attractions in the stage offering, and a similar period on Saturday after midnight. On Tuesdays the theatre sponsors an amateur negro program over WDAS. All programs originate on the stage of the theatre and free passes are distributed to listeners for the Sunday shows, a tieup that has been found very effective in building up good will.

Gossip Period Conducted

Every Friday WIP presents a "Movie Chatter" period which includes readers on all the new picture openings and the current attractions and cast at houses throughout the city. Theatres getting the free plugs, in return for passes, include practically all of the midtown houses and first-run neighborhood houses. Participating on the program are Warner Brothers down-town first-run Aldine, Boyd, Stanton, Stanley and Fox theatres; Warner Brothers down-town second-run Earle, Keiths and Karlton theatres; downtown independent Arcadia, Europa and Trans-Lux theatres; and the independent neighborhood Keswick and Erlen Theatres. The station plans to include other neighborhood theatres on the program and invitations have been already extended to the independent Renel Theatre and to Warner Brothers Grange, Bromley, Logan and Yorktown Theatres.

Another program over WIP, "Hollywood Chatterbox," on Thursday afternoon connects the fan gossip given with a local current attraction. Because of the retrenchment policy on free passes by Warner Brothers theatres, the only houses on this program getting a free mention are the down-town independent Arcadia, Europa and Trans-Lux theatres.

The Trans-Lux and Europa theatres come in for additional plugs on WIP's "Eight Bells" program every morning, both houses offering sets of passes for the best jokes sent in by listeners.

Tieups Vary

The program policy at WIP is agreeable to every conceivable type of motion-picture exploitation that may have entertainment value to the listener. Averaging one a month, the station will give 15 minutes for a picture trailer, an electrical transcription taken off the sound track, the theatre showing the feature getting a free plug. When the time is available and the theatre is willing to assume the wire charges, the station will carry a line to the projection booth and broadcast a portion of the sound. This was last done in connection with the opening of "Every Night at 8" at the Stanley Theatre last year. For a special local premiere having a Hollywood opening, as was the case with "Modern Times" at the Erlanger Theatre, the station has set up a microphone in the lobby and projection booth. In connection with the opening of "Green Patsures" at the Boyd Theatre, WIP aired an interview with Harry Goldberg, former local publicity director for Warner Brothers. When a picture has a special children's appeal, as was the case with the opening of "Reunion" at the Stanley Theatre, a tie-in is made with the Uncle Wip's daily program for the juvenile listeners.

At WFIL a tieup is effected with the independent Carmen, Fay's, Trans-Lux, Europa and Arcadia theatres. A music memory contest conducted by the "Melody Man" three times a week offers as prizes 25 pair of passes weekly to the theatres.

Until two months ago, the "Petticoat Lady," news commentator who broadcast twice weekly for quarter-hour periods, had at her disposal 20 pairs of passes to the Europe each week for the best letters sent in by listeners. A daily "Morning Highlights" program includes Hollywood fan gossip with the Europa and Trans-Lux attractions receiving a plug. Arrangements are now being made to broadcast the "Melody Man" program over a state network of 12 stations. Keeping the program and contest idea intact, theatres in the various cities will be scanned for free passes in return for participation on the program. Until the early fall, the "Melody Man" participants included the Roosevelt, Tower and Nixon Theatres, Warner Brothers having absorbed them at that time.

WCAU has a regular sound projector in its studios, and each week, for a quarter-hour period, broadcasts the sound from a picture scheduled to open either at the Aldine, Stanley, Boyd or Fox Theatres. A similar tieup was accomplished at KYW but was discontinued about four months ago when the station lost the use of the sound projector.

Organ Recitals Given

In addition to the Nixon-Grand's amateur program over WDAS, the station conducts a "Movie Review" three times weekly, which is made up of Hollywood gossip and news of the current attractions at the down-town theatres. The Carmen Theatre has their organist on WDAS, every week day. On Sundays, the Wallen Players, radio dramatic group, broadcast a dramatization of the current attraction at Keith's Theatre. In return, WDAS call letters get a plug by the theatre with a slide on the screen reminding patrons to listen in, and a wall and poster display in the theatre lobby carrying the same message. When time is available, the station uses the electrical transcribed trailers, and in connection with the opening of "The Last of the Mohicans" at the Aldine Theatre, broadcast a series of discs giving a serialized dramatization of the picture.

The current use of radio by Philadelphia exhibitors is held down to a minimum at present because of the union impasse between Warner Brothers and the musicians, preventing the use of organ recitals and guest appearances of stage personalities appearing at the combination houses. Practically every station formerly solicited theatre managers to allow the radio appearance of a stage attraction.

Activity in Pittsburgh Area

In the Pittsburgh territory two regular programs are now originating from the stage of the Enright, Warner house in East Liberty. One, called "Footlights and Stardust," is sponsored directly by the circuit over WWSW and includes 30 minutes of film gossip, together with organ music and plugs for all the current Warner attractions in the neighborhood houses. It is on the air five mornings a week.

The other program, is sponsored by a jewelry company and is on WWSW once a week. It is in the form of a community sing in which the audience every Friday evening is asked to participate. There are prizes from the sponsors for those attending.

NEBRASKA EXHIBITOR ASKS RADIO PERMIT

Oscar C. Johnson, theatre owner of Falls City, Neb., looks upon the screen radio controversy with a realistic eye. He has applied to the Federal Communications Commission for a permit to construct and operate a radio broadcasting station in his Rivoli theatre. He owns two other houses in the town which has a population of 6,000.

Milwaukee, Indianapolis Use Time Sparingly

The Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin at its annual convention this year opposed the appearance of film stars on radio broadcasts, contending that the broadcasts are presented during the evening at a time when theatres ordinarily expect their heaviest business. The exhibitors maintain that the practice has become so widespread that some film notable appears on a program almost every night in the week.

At present only a few theatres in Milwaukee are using radio time to advertise their programs. Fox uses flashes over WTMJ to advertise its Palace and Wisconsin programs as well as a 15 minute broadcast, usually on Tuesday morning, over WEMP to sketch pictures playing the two houses. The Avalon offers an announcement of its program for the week over WEMP on Sunday mornings and one or two other houses from time to time present radio flashes of current attractions.

In Indianapolis exhibitors have been consistently off the air for many months. Once in a while performers in stage shows at the Lyric are interviewed over WFBM by Ken Ellington of the station's staff, but these performers seldom are motion picture people. WFBM and WIRE, the two Indianapolis stations, carry several of the network broadcasts that feature film stars. WFBM is on CBS and WIRE is on the red network of NBC and also takes a few blue network programs.

Sponsored Programs Used in Spokane

Theaters in Spokane, Washington, use radio extensively as a means of exploitation and advertising. Evergreen has signed a contract with KGA for a fifteen-minute program four days a week at 5 p.m. The program, which was to be started December 21, will be straight commercial buildup for coming pictures at all Evergreen theaters—Fox, State, Orpheum and Liberty. Very little Hollywood gossip will be used.

As in the past, when vaudeville is booked into the Orpheum the acts will be put on the air from the station studio to promote the theater show. This tie-up has been used before with various types of stage show. The program will be on the air seven days a week when the NBC schedule permits.

A community sing is broadcast every Friday evening from the Orpheum over KGA for 15 minutes.

The Inquiring Reporter in the Fox lobby with microphone one night a week for half hour has been discontinued. KFPY carried the program.

The Orpheum has a 15-minute organ program every morning over KFIO and over the same station, Sally Rand runs a Timely Tips contest. Listeners guess names of songs for theater tickets.

Evergreen has open contracts with KFPY, KHQ and KGA for spot announcements and the circuit often uses 15-minute transcriptions of the regular Hollywood variety which give highlights in dialogue, music and plot of pictures.

The Granada has spot announcements six days a week over KGA and formerly had a radio personality, Gordon of the Granada, giving Hollywood gossip, answering questions, conducting contests and straight commercial advertising.

Seattle Exhibitors Not Active On Air

Exhibitors in the Seattle sector have been unanimous in the past and in the current season in passing up radio broadcasting as an advertising or publicity outlet.

Hamrick-Evergreen, operators of six of Seattle's eight first run houses, confine their broadcasting activities to infrequent spot announcement on one or two major stations. These are used only on certain special occasions, calling attention to an outstanding attraction at one of their theatres. There is no attempt made to provide any type of entertainment to the radio audience. Further, they do not attempt to tie up with any national broadcast featuring film stars or film previews, on sponsored programs.

Jensen-VonHerberg, operating the first-run Liberty theatre and several second run suburban houses, also limit their radio broadcasting to a very few 50-word spot announcements.

John Danz's Sterling Chain Theatres, including the first-run Palomar, vaudeville-film house, and several second-run downtown theatres, also use spot announcements only. The only exception to this rule is that the Palomar on infrequent occasions will allow one of its vaudeville headliners to appear on an "interview" program, sponsored by the station or another advertiser.

Des Moines Exhibitors See Advertising Value

Although Iowa exhibitors, 200 of them, have expressed in petitions their protest against broadcasting by screen stars, Des Moines theatre men are emphatic in their statement that the radio appearance of stars is excellent advertising for their screen shows.

Dorothy Day of the publicity department of Tri-States theatres, operators of the seven largest Des Moines houses, contended that such broadcasts did as much good as they possibly could harm to the exhibitor who sees that his business is well handled.

At Central States Theatres, Don West, who handles booking for 30 theatres in the state including Cedar Rapids, Waterloo, Davenport, Sioux City and Iowa City, as well as other locations with smaller houses, protested not against the broadcast of screen stories but the appearance of top flight stars in these evening broadcasts.

"When it is announced that Robert Taylor will appear on the next week's radio show, you can hear the flutter among the girls listening in at the studio," he said. "There are a great many who are going to stay at home to listen."

At the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offices the reaction recorded was that the radio appearances were but advertising for the screen and that it depended on the manner in which they were handled, if it was to detract from rather than build up theatre business.

Syracuse Exhibitors Sparing in Radio Use

Syracuse exhibitors are using comparatively little radio time to exploit their theatres. With the chief theatres limited to two controlling companies, Loew's and the Schine circuits, air time on WFBL and WSYR, local stations, has been used only by the Keith theatre and Loew's Syracuse.

Manager Edward McBride of Loew's uses a weekly 15 minute transcription trailer for his new show opening on Fridays, plus occasional announcements on hold-overs and special shows. The programs go over WFBL. This station also handles a weekly half hour Saturday morning spot for the Keith house called "Melody Club," featuring a small studio band and music from current pictures playing at Keith's.

WSYR occasionally uses transcription trailers furnished by Loew's although it does not carry any regular schedule for the house. This station has also participated in special exploitation stunts backed by the exhibitors.

Air Advertising Found Popular in Kansas City

Kansas City theatre men are utilizing radio exploitation to its fullest value. Each week an hour and a half of gossip about Hollywood stars and the new films reaches Kansas City audiences and, according to present plans, there will be more shortly.

This fall WLBF began an unsponsored quarter hour of comment on motion picture personalities every Tuesday and Thursday. W9XBY, which has had several screen commentators in past, also has inaugurated a program of this type. WHB has 15 minutes of Tommy Maxwell and his "Flashes from the Film" on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, sponsored by a department store beauty salon.

"Hollywood Highlights," 15 minutes of talk about screen stars and the new pictures, goes over KCMO on Sunday afternoons. Most of the material is studio publicity.

John McManus, manager of Loew's Midland, conducted a 15 minute screen comment program on W9XBY once a week for six months starting in February, 1935 and again from October, 1935 to June of this year. He garnered most of his material from trade journals and conducted the feature without remuneration except for the exploitation of his own pictures and their stars. A regular feature on W9XBY, daily execpt Sunday, is the Loew's organ recital, a sustaining program on which the station plugs the theatre and its current attraction.

Detroit Theatres On Radio Programs

Several theatres in Detroit are using radio exploitation. Through a tieup recently made with the Fox, Station WWJ, owned by the Detroit News, presents Ty Tyson each noon for a half hour as the "Man in the Street," interviewing persons in front of the theatre.

United Detroit theatres use a 15 minute period each evening over WZYZ to plug their first runs. The circuit presents a "Children's Hour" from the Regent over WXYZ on Sunday afternoons and on Tuesday nights presents an amateur hour over the same station from the stage of the Broadway-Capitol, downtown second run house, reopened recently by George W. Trendle.

THEATRE PURCHASED BY RADIO STATION

Radio is helping to solve the problem of what to do with closed theatres. Station KOL in Seattle has purchased the 700 seat Olympic theatre in that city and will remodel it for broadcasting purposes at a cost of $30,000.

A full stage and console organ will be installed and the lobby will be used for advertising displays.

The Fox also has a working agreement with CKLW of Windsor, from time to time presenting a half hour show at 11:30 P.M., featuring stars appearing on the Fox stage.

Radio Exploitation In New England

Allied Theatres of Connecticut, formerly the Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners, was one of the first organized groups to protest against the appearance of Hollywood stars on radio programs. In its protest, however, the group made it clear that its grievance was especially with broadcasts "during the hours of popular theatre attendance" and held that the practice, therefore, was keenly competitive to the very medium which promoted the personalities to stardom.

Broadcasts and spot announcements are in wide use by theatre managers in the New England territory and in most cases they have been found effective exploitation. In New Haven no theatre has arranged or sponsored evening broadcasts. However, Loew's Bridgeport broadcasts the weekly amateur hour programs over WICC and its is expected that the Loew New Haven house will do likewise when amateur nights are resumed in the near future. Programs over WELI, WIXBS and WICC are being broadcast from the Whalley, Paramount, Howard and College, New Haven theatres, but these are either noon organ and talk programs or flashes of show announcements several times a day. A new 4:15 program on Sunday afternoons is being sponsored for the Poli kiddie broadcast.

In Boston theatre-radio tieups are far less numerous at present than they were several years ago. They are largely indirect and are spotted at times when they will be least likely to keep potential theatre patrons next to their loudspeakers.

Hollywood stars doing personal appearances in Boston generally are given at least one radio interview. Some of the interviewers, such as Ruth Moss of the Yankee Network, go further and delve in local film ranks for material. Name orchestras appearing at the RKO Boston or the Metropolitan frequently are spotted on impromptu programs.

Jack Granara of RKO theatres uses commercial spot announcements twice weekly on WEEI and WAAB on the regular news broadcasts as part of a campaign to exploit the RKO Boston stage shows outside of the Hub, a policy that involves press releases and advertisements in nearby cities and towns. RKO uses no free pass schemes, however, because of executive objection to the practice.

The giving of passes, on the other hand, is the main airlane motif of the Metropolitan. Identification of programs played on the Metropolitan Review over WCOP wins passes, as do similar "guess who's" on record programs over WEEI every morning. A "Vox Pop" quarter hour at midday on weekdays provides an indirect advertising plug, inasmuch as the interviews are conducted in the lobby of the Metropolitan. Gene Fox, the manager, has had the tieup in effect for about eight months.

The identification of records on the Scott Furriers program over WEEI carries passes for the two Loew's theatres. Joe DiPesa also has a similar tieup with Phil Saltman's piano quarter hour over the same radio channel on Sunday afternoons.

The elaborate radio programs of past years have been shelved.

Southern Managers Use Program Tieups

In the south generally, direct theatre tieups have been abandoned in favor of short commercial announcements over local stations in most of the larger cities. Managers are not particularly concerned over competition from Hollywood star broadcasts although it is reported in some situations that the programs cut into theatre attendance sometimes in the evening hours, particularly in bad weather.

In Houston, Texas, Al Evans, organist for Loew's State theatre acts as master of ceremonies for a daily feature at KPRC and also present a daily 15 minute organ program. Theatre announcements are spotted on the programs. The Tampa theatre, Sparks house in Tampa, Fla., features a 15 minute organ program from the theatre each weekday noon over WDAE. The theatre and the local radio station last year conducted amateur nights weekly, with the station announcer acting as master of ceremonies on the theatre stage. This year they have had a number of community sings operated on the same basis.

In Louisville, Ky., the Mary Anderson theatre and WAVE are cooperating in a "Man on the Street" program. The interviews are held in the lobby of the theatre and each participant is given a pass for the current show.

Little Rock Operators Belittle Problem

Exhibitors and distributors in Little Rock, Ark., agree that broadcasting by motion picture stars means unfair competition but are taking the problem as a matter of course. They are agreed that there is little to be done about it, and that such broadcasting programs by stars eventually will run their course and cause the stars to lose some of their popularity.

M. S. McCord, secretary-treasurer of the Malco Theatres, Inc., which operates 60 theatres in Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee, said:

"The most serious problem is that the stars wear themselves out. Their popularity plays out sooner when they appear too much over the radio, just as it does when they make too many personal appearances.

"Their broadcasting programs will affect, to some extent, the motion picture houses in the smaller towns. But in cities like Little Rock and larger places where a picture might run from three days to three weeks or longer, such broadcasting, I am convinced, has no harmful effects upon the exhibitors.

"We use local radio stations to broadcast certain pictures and have found that this is good advertising. If this were not a lucrative proposition, we certainly would not keep it up.

"Of course, some of the smaller town exhibitors are bound to feel the effects of these Hollywood broadcasts, yet I don't feel that the situation is as bad as it sounds."

J. E. Wheeler of Sanders and Wheeler, owners and operators of the Roxy, New and Prospect theatres, Little Rock, said he was convinced that exhibitors were up against a problem.

"It is good publicity for a new star," Mr. Wheeler said, "but many times a person listening to a star on the air will stay away from the picture show in order to avoid missing out on the radio program. The chief objection I find to such programs is that the stars do not advertise their own pictures.

B. F. Busby, manager of Republic Pictures in Little Rock, reported that he had discussed this problem with numerous exhibitors throughout his territory and that the unanimous opinion is that such broadcasting is unfair competition.

Canadian Exhibitors Follow General View

Canadian exhibitors are as divided in their opinion of the value or the detrimental effect of film star broadcasting as are their brothers in the United States. There, too, managers, particularly those in the larger cities, use the radio for exploitation in varying forms.

Radio has its place in the scheme of screen and stage entertainment, but broadcasting by Hollywood stars should be limited, in the majority opinion of Saint John, N.B., exhibitors. That there is value in the use of local broadcasts to advertise films being exhibited is conceded by most of them, but there is a variance in the views held.

Walter H. Golding, manager of the Capitol, outlet for Famous Players Canadian Corporation and one of the two largest theatres in Canada east of Montreal, said:

"In private capacities on radio broadcasts, stars can bring the full power of their popularity to bear, but they should not sell themselves vocally for unseen audience purposes and enact sketches that outline fuller screen productions."

Mr. Golding supported his contention by pointing out that Famous Players Canadian Corporation theatres give free admission to sightless persons who, he explained, enjoy the vocalization, although they cannot see the screen play.

Not Regarded As Menace

F. G. Spencer, president of F. G. Spencer Co., Ltd., who operates the Strand Theatre in Saint John and 17 others throughout New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, believed, without having given the matter much consideration, that broadcasting by stars does not affect the attendance at theatres.

It is the view of M. Franklin, manager of the Mayfair Theatre Co., Ltd., which operates the Regent Theatre in Saint John as well as the Mayfair, that this type of broadcasting up to a certain point is not harmful to the exhibitors.

He thought it is to the advantage of stars to meet the public on the air as well as on the screen, except in the case of regular performances.

"WHAT OF IT?" EXHIBITOR ASKS

A veteran Houston, Texas, exhibitor, asked to give his views on the appearance of film stars on radio programs, refused to consider the tumult and the shouting as of any importance.

"Of course radio broadcasts are picture opposition," he said. "What of it? When the exhibitors load themselves down with double and triple features, bank nights, amateur nights and every sort of clap-trap, just greedy or trying to 'keep up with the Joneses,' why kick at stars broadcasting?"

Nickolas A. Vassis, manager of the Saint John Amusement Co., Ltd., which operates the Empire Theatre, does not favor broadcasting in any form in connection with the theatre.

The Capitol is the only theatre in Saint John that broadcasts local programs regularly, although Mr. Spencer declared this is an excellent, worthwhile medium of theatre advertising.

In Charlottetown, P.E.I., where there are three theatres, that operated by the F.G. Spencer Co., Ltd., broadcasts daily, the program billed being outlined by the manager, A. R. Cooper.

Mr. Golding, who devotes five minutes a day on the air during the evening meal hour outlining the Capitol's bill, declared that he knows it pays and brings immediate results.

This form of acquainting the public of the programs and hours "simply approximates the chatty entertainment columns of the printed press," he said.

The Mayfair and Regent do occasional broadcasting, which takes the form mostly of an announcement of what pictures are coming to those theatres.

Tieups in Vancouver

Vancouver showmen give no indication of fearing the bogey of radio personal appearances. They have little comment to make other than "Well, it builds up a star, so what do we care?"

On the other hand, they make use of radio in their own promotion work. In the Capitol Theatre, No. 1, house of Famous Players, there is a microphone hookup direct to Station CKWX, owned by the Western Broadcasting Corporation. Thrice-weekly programs are broadcast.

At present these are scenes re-enacted from current motion pictures. Local talent is used in the acting. Names of pictures are not announced, and passes are given as prizes to listeners who guess the right title and names of the players concerned, an average of close to 200 replies per broadcast are received. This and similar promotion stunts have been a Famous Players feature for several years.

Spot announcements on three local stations—CKMO, CJOR, and CKWX—are also used by Famous Players.

The independent Beacon Theatre, only first-run outside of Famous Players houses, also uses the radio extensively. Semi-weekly programs are broadcast over CKCD, with music and the occasional personal appearance by a vaudeville performer from the Beacon stage show. Tie-ins with news broadcasts over CKWX are also used by the Beacon wherever possible.

The general feeling is to make the best possible use of radio for promotion and straight advertising.

Policy of MGM Flexible and Fair, Declares Rodgers

Clarifying an understanding reached between a committee of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners in Philadelphia, represented by Lewen Pizor, president; Charles Segall, chairman of the board, and Abe Sablosky, and William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Loew's, and Tom J. Connors, eastern division manager, on percentages and preferred playing time of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product, Mr. Rodgers says in a letter to the organization:

"We emphatically advised you that our policy was flexible and that we had not and did not intend to lay down any prescribed formula that would represent the only basis on which our product could be leased. We told you that our policy of merchandising M-G-M product was sufficiently flexible to meet any condition.

"We have a desire to have only satisfied customers, and want only a fair deal," the letter reads. "We expect every penny the product is worth—no more and no less. We do not wish one dollar to which we are not entitled.

"It was mentioned, because you brought it up, that to give us terms we were seeking invites other distributors to solicit equally as favorable terms and I remarked at the time that it was unfair, in my opinion, to penalize us for making good pictures. We are not interested in what other producers or distributors receive for their merchandise and by the same token other distributors should not be interested in our terms, but I do prophesy the suggestion that attempting to fashion their quotations along lines similar to ours, that they should and would no doubt be willing to give theatres a like assurance of protection.

"This writer did say we were interested and hoped that every account with whom we did business would play our product profitably, but naturally, having no control or voice in the operating expense of theatres, we are not in a position to guarantee profit. It naturally follows, however, that theatre owners generally expect to make money on the merchandise they handle and I am sure we could not have satisfied customers who would lose money on our product.

"This writer expressed a very definite assurance of a square deal for all at all times."

Hays Itinerary Set

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., plans to leave for his Sullivan, Ind., home this week to spend Christmas. He will return to New York for a few days before leaving for Hollywood in time to attend the silver Jubilee Dinner for Adolph Zukor there January 7, and will remain in California about a month thereafter, returning to Manhattan in advance of the annual meeting of the MPPDA in March.

Rufus LeMaire has been named an associate producer for Universal. "Be It Ever So Humble" will be his first assignment.

FILMS BOUGHT 901 STORIES IN 1936 FOR $4,505,000

Expenditures for Individual Properties for Productions Vary from $5,000 Average and Up Above the $150,000 Mark

Purchases for Month of December Include 31 Originals and 12 Books As Well as Three Plays, for Total of 46

Motion picture producing companies in 1936 purchased 901 stories, chosen from the fictional, biographical and dramatic fields, for feature production in Hollywood. They invested some $4,505,000 in the purchases, this figure being based on the generally accepted average expenditure of $5,000 a story. Costs, however, actually ran as high as over $150,000 and $100,000 for successful Broadway legitimate theatre "hits" and best-selling novels.

The purchases were made both for immediate production during the 1935-1936 season and, for the most part, for 1936-37. Production heads acquired the vehicles at the rate of approximately 19 per week, or 75 per month.

Original stories in 1936 continued to prove the most fruitful source of screen material, when some 497 were distributed among the various studios, as compared to only 312 in 1935. These vehicles amounted to 52 per cent of the total, as against 337 books (including 167 published magazine stories) and only 58 plays, as compared to 73 last year.

There was unusually spirited bidding during the year among the principal producers for the best books, outstanding plays and originals and magazine stories with good potential value to the releasing schedules of affiliated distribution companies. Notable among these was Samuel Goldwyn, with his record purchase of Sidney Kingsley's Broadway "Dead End," for a figure reputed to be nearly $165,000; Radio, which paid more than $100,000 for the current George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber play, "Stage Door," as a vehicle to co-star Katherine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers; Warner, with a bid in six figures for "Tovarich," international sensation, as a Cosmopolitan production for Marion Davies, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's high expenditure for the Robert W. Sherwood Pulitzer Prize Play, "Idiot's Delight," in which it will feature Greta Garbo and possibly Clark Gable.

Too, the ambitions of virtually all the producers to continue under the order to produce stories of high standing, from a literary standpoint, and otherwise, were noticeably reflected in the high quality of the many dozens of the properties purchased. There was hardly a book or play or manuscript of merit that lent itself to filming that was not taken by one or another of Hollywood's producers for conversion to motion pictures.

46 Purchases in December

In the month of December, producers spent considerable time on actual filming rather than searching for new materials in order to make up for time lost during the year end holidays, but nevertheless, there were 46 purchases made. Of this number, 31 were orginal stories, 12 were books, including five published magazine stories, and three were plays.

Reflections on the Status Quo From a Rancho Deep in Arizona

radio, bar and dance floor. To the local patrons the Budweiser is served in the can, on the half-shell so to speak. Glasses are for city folks. The current fancy is for the "Carolina," which same is a slug of sloe gin irrigated with half a bottle of Coca Cola. Two of them are as warm as a fur coat and three of them make you rich. Newt's two pet wildcats have the run of the place by day, but nights he pens them up to protect them from the guests.

CAREFUL study, glass in hand, of one of Mr. Red Kann's discussions in Motion Picture Daily of sundry moral and artistic considerations, involving the rise and fame of the strip artists, finds his final test of an actress as an actress is: "How box office is she with her clothes on?" That someway reminds one that in all the current enthusiastic appraisals of Miss G. Rose Lee, no reporter seems to have discovered what color her eyes are.

AND continuing with one's mind entirely on art, it is to be reported that Miss Sally Rand is the contemporary wildfire sensation of the great sovereign state of Texas, down east from here. Miss Sally is now playing picture houses with a stage show ensemble of forty—count 'em—girls. Arithmetically forty times no costumes gives a quotient identical with the solo result of one times no costume. The success of the ensemble presentation of what they present is clinical evidence of the value of trade mark—the Rand brand in this case.

THE machine age is doing things to the cow country. Range cattle travel from round-up to the railside markets in motor trucks at fifty miles an hour. It takes twenty-five acres of this scenery to raise a steer and his weight is too valuable to run it off on a hoof drive to market. A qualified cow-puncher has to know about carbureters, too, now. The horse thieves and cattle rustlers are working by fast motor truck now, keeping pace with the times and the business. Presently we'll be seeing Arizona posses pursuing them in planes.

AT last through the decorative advertising of recording film by the Du Pont company the differences between variable area and variable density are made clear to the layman's eye. RCA makes a tweed and Western Electric weaves a cheviot.

Admission Taxes Off Sharply in November

A sharp drop in admission taxes collected in November was reported Monday in Washington by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which placed receipts for the month at $1,605,673.93 against $1,797,278.84 in October.

For the first time since May, bureau records show, collections were under those of the corresponding period a year ago, the month's total being $261,242 under the $1,866,915.42 collected in October, 1935.

As a result in the decline of October collections, the spread between 1936 and 1935 narrowed from $1,873,176 for the 10 months ended with November. For the year through November, collections were $16,262,897.17 against $14,650,962.66 for the corresponding period last year.

Greene Appeals Sale

Arthur Greene has appealed to the United States district court in St. Louis to set aside approval of the sale of St. Louis Amusement Company stock owned by Skouras Brothers Enterprises to a bond holders' protective committee. He asks the court to declare him the successful bidder in case no new sale is ordered. Mr. Greene contends the referee in bankruptcy had no authority to refuse to permit a review of the order of the sale.

Progress Shown in Paramount Refunding

Rapid progress is being made by Paramount in refunding long term obligations at lower interest rates. Paramount's entire British mortgage indebtedness, amounting to approximately $5,000,000, which was carrying interest of approximately six per cent, was refunded during the week at three per cent. Similar interest reductions on a studio debt of $3,000,000 were accomplished earlier. The company's objective during the next six months is to reduce interest rates to three per cent on approximately $50,000,000 of outstanding obligations. The bulk of this will be accomplished by private financing, it is planned.

Morton Van Praag Leaves National Screen Post

Morton Van Praag, for the last six years general sales manager of National Screen Service, Inc., this week resigned, effective January 1. He plans a vacation thereafter and said he has not determined his future plans.

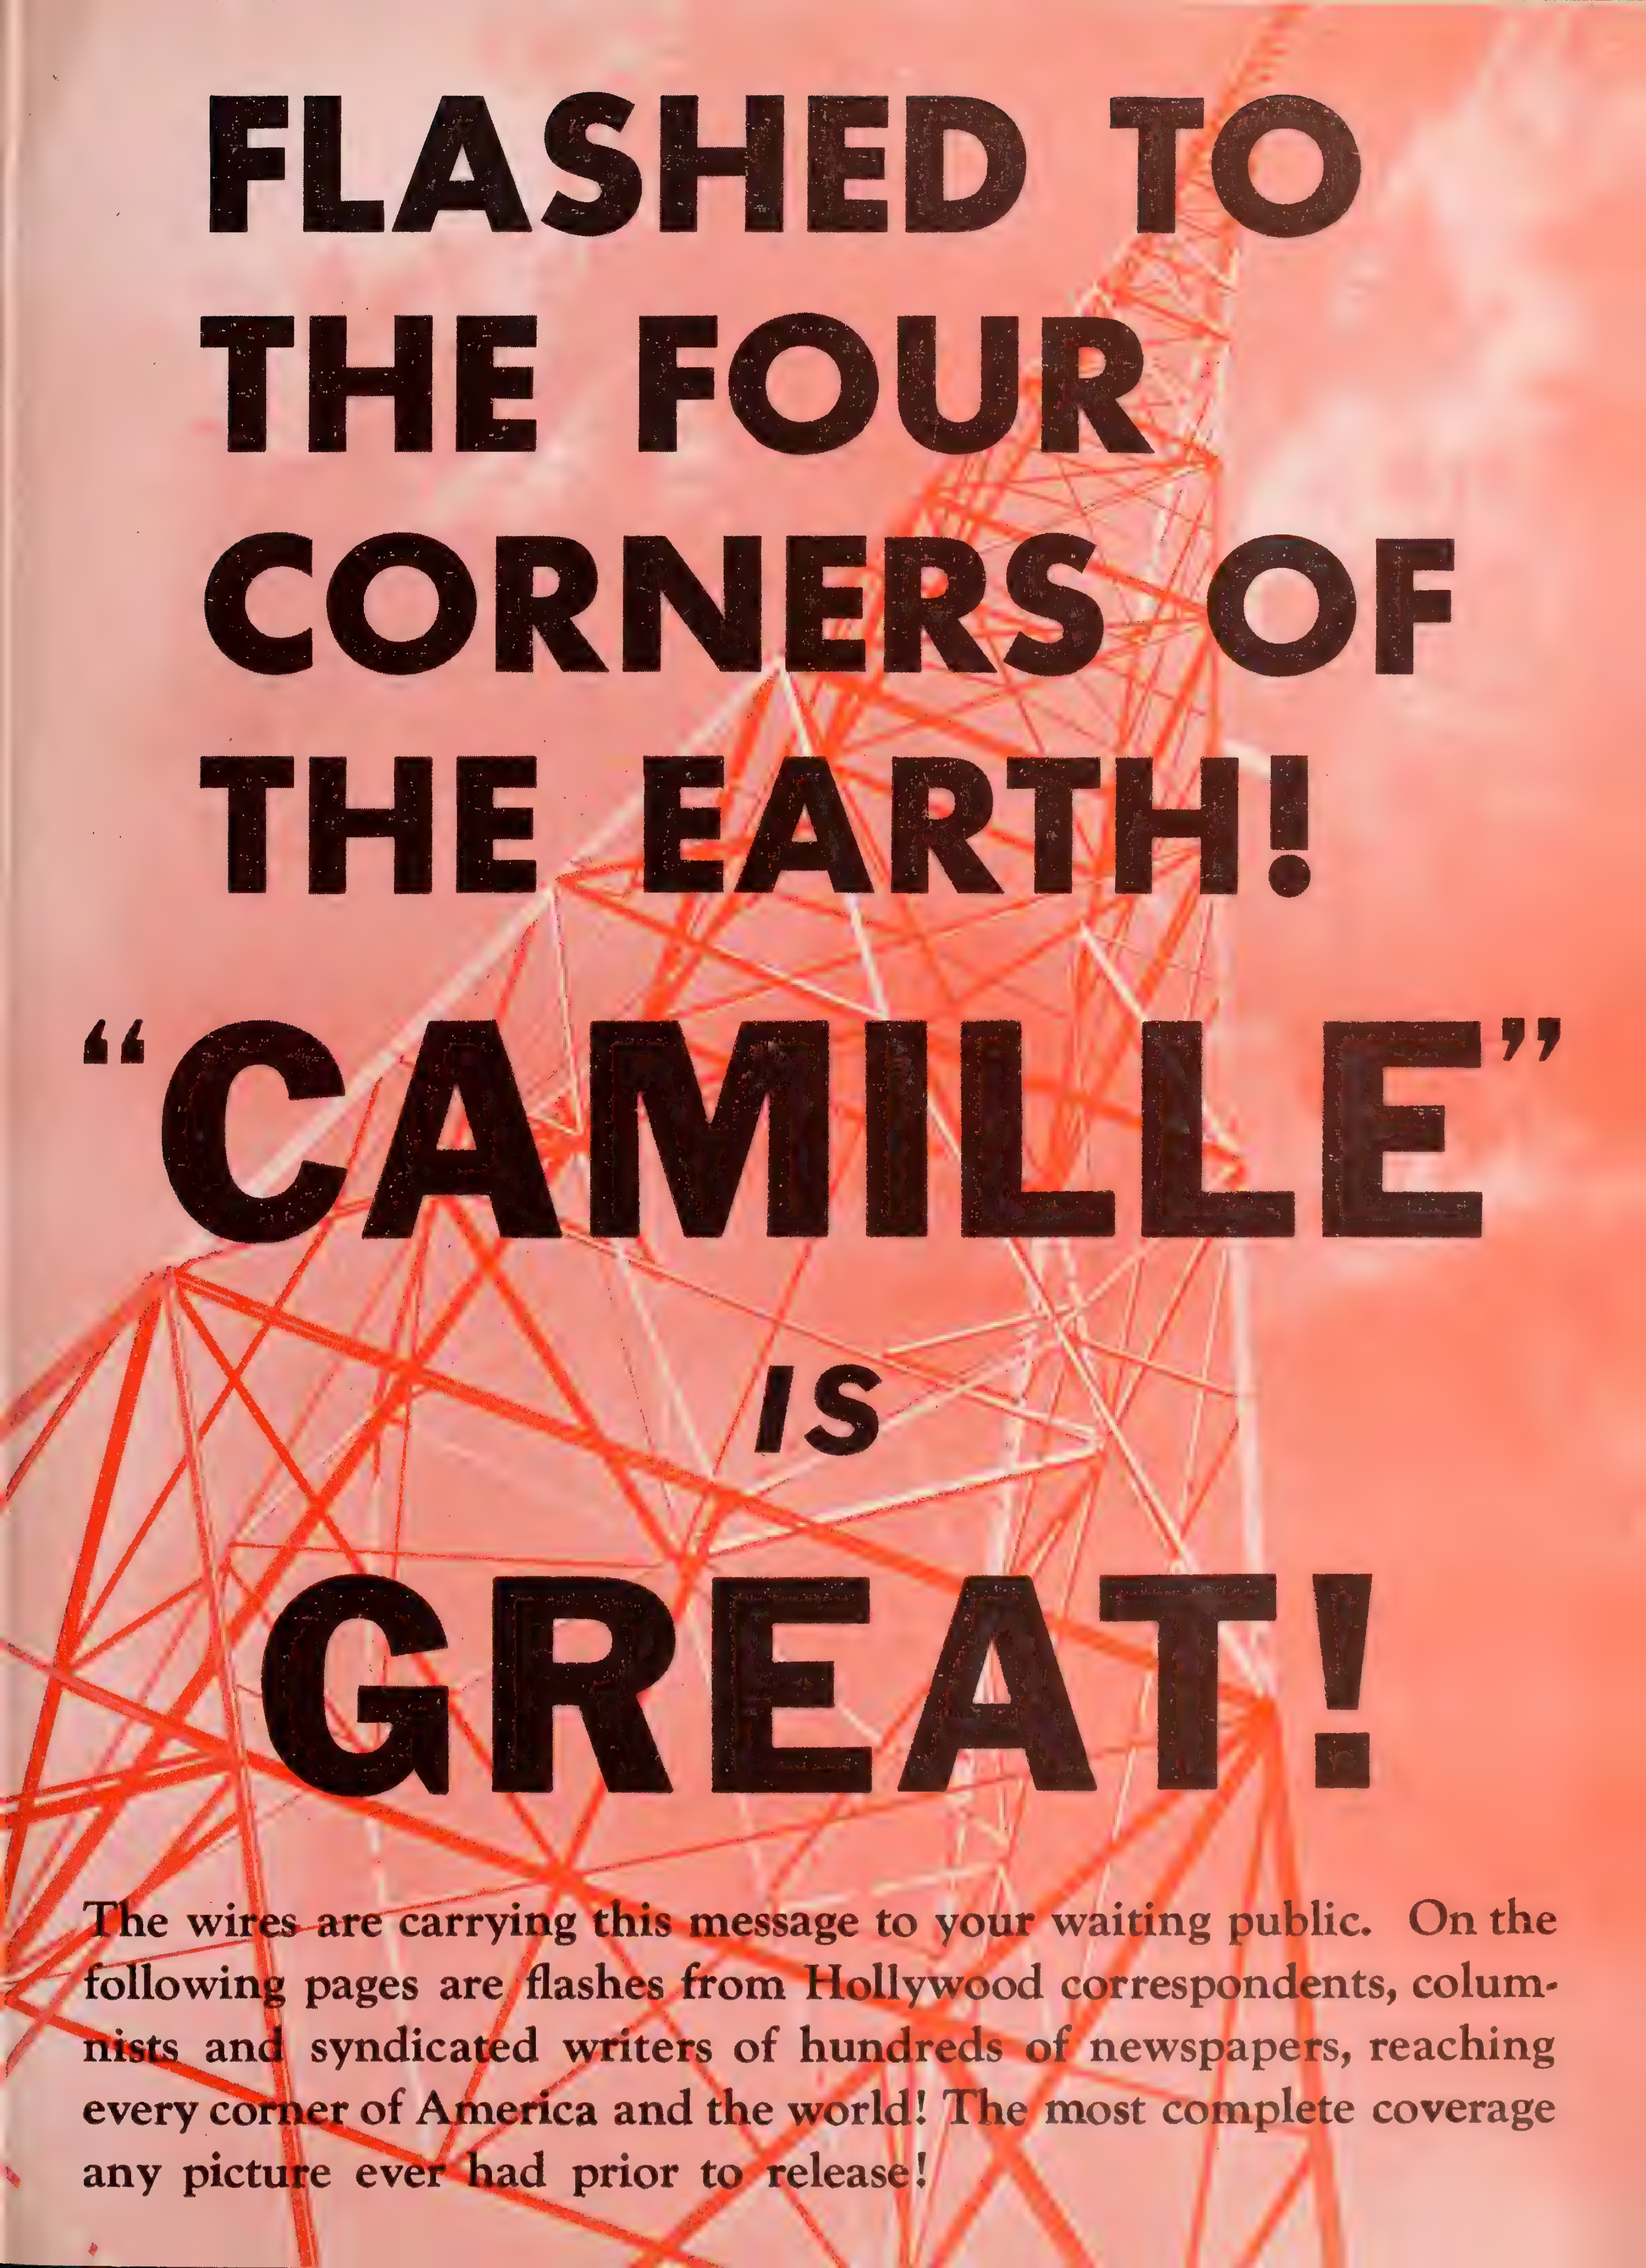
Herman Robbins, president of the company, who is just back from Hollywood, added no plans had been made for a successor. In the meantime, more of Mr. Van Praag's duties will be taken over by George F. Dembow.

Greta Garbo Loves Robert Taylor in "Camille"

TO A WAITING WORLD COME GRETA GARBO AND ROBERT TAYLOR IN M-G-M'S "CAMILLE"

All that you've heard is true. The excitement of the grand love story... the flaming personalities of these two adored stars... the magnificence of the production combine to make the most glamorous entertainment you have ever offered to your public.

Great cast includes: LIONEL BARRYMORE, Elizabeth Allan, Jessie Ralph, Henry Daniell, Leonore Ulric, Laura Hope Crews. Directed by George Cukor.



FLASHED TO THE FOUR CORNERS OF THE EARTH!

"CAMILLE"

GREAT!

The wires are carrying this message to your waiting public. On the following pages are flashes from Hollywood correspondents, columnists and syndicated writers of hundreds of newspapers, reaching every corner of America and the world! The most complete coverage any picture ever had prior to release!

M-G-M's "CAMILLE" STARTS THE 1937 MARCH TO YOUR BOX-OFFICE!

Your patrons are reading these marvelous notices in advance!

LOUELLA PARSONS, Syndicated to millions of newspaper readers and radio listeners: "Only the genius of Irving Thalberg could give Dumas' 'Camille' the interest and beauty of this brilliant screen translation. Greta Garbo and Robert Taylor excellently teamed."

ALICE TILDSLEY, Philadelphia Public Ledger Syndicate: "Greta Garbo scores a great triumph. Robert Taylor will be hailed again a star in his own right when the public sees the picture. George Cukor's direction one of the finest jobs this year."

PAUL HARRISON, Syndicated to millions through Newspaper Enterprise Association: "A fine picture. Acting, direction, photography and all other studio departments concerned in production merit highest praise. The genuine genius, the hand of Irving Thalberg has created another magnificent motion picture."

THE FILM DAILY: "Great love drama, expertly acted and-produced, holds appeal for all types of audiences. Greta Garbo and Robert Taylor in this love drama mean big box-office appeal to all classes of audiences, especially the women from whom it will elicit many a tear. Garbo is beautiful. Her emotional portrayal ranks with her best work. Taylor, handsome as ever, does the best acting of his career. In a production containing as many torrid love scenes as does this picture the dialogue is especially praiseworthy. Lavishly mounted."

HAROLD HEFFERNAN, Motion Picture Editor Detroit News: "The sheer magnificent translation of this classic play to the screen reflects the genius of Irving Thalberg and joins in the cinematic Hall of Fame 'Big Parade', 'Ben Hur', 'Big House,' 'Grand Hotel', 'Smilin' Thru', 'Barretts of Wimpole Street', 'Mutiny on the Bounty', 'Romeo and Juliet' and other great Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures."

EDWIN SCHALLERT, Los Angeles Times: "This is indeed one of Irving Thalberg's most ambitious dreams fulfilled. A triumphant realization of the Dumas classic and certainly no performance of Greta Garbo's has ever approached the perfected beauty of her Marguerite Gautier. Taylor, who is starred with her, surpasses any previous effort."

TED MAGEE, Screenbook: "The inspired performances of Greta Garbo and Robert Taylor make M-G-M's 'Camille' a most masterful version of the great classic."

ROBERT WATSON, Canadian, Scotch and English Publications: "Garbo stands alone in Hollywood as an emotional actress. Taylor also excels previous best performance in 'Camille'."

SHEILA GRAHAM, Syndicating to uncounted millions through North American Newspaper Alliance: "Garbo gave the most sensitive performance of her entire screen career. She was gay even in sadness. Her reality of expression was very stirring."

ED SMITHSON, Movie Classic: "Garbo and Taylor give the best performances of their screen careers."

MOTION PICTURE DAILY: "Quality entertainment with strong emotional appeal to all types of audiences."

W. K. GIBBS, Hollywood Magazine: "'The Lady of the Camellias' is given new life by Greta Garbo ably abetted by Robert Taylor."

JACK GRANT, Hollywood Press Syndicate: "An exquisite production of 'Camille' featuring Garbo's most vital performance and Taylor's finest work in his sensational career."

Garbo's greatest role!

Isn't it wonderful! Move on to next page!

"DESTINED TO BE THE GREATEST PICTURE OF THE NEW YEAR", says Los Angeles Times!

"Speak to me, beloved!"

DAILY VARIETY: "With Garbo and Taylor, 'Camille' has magic marquee combination. The love story still stands as one of the most poignant ever told. Production is gorgeous, direction and playing of highest merit to please the most discriminating and the most naive, all of which spells box-office, a smash proposition."

ROSALIND SHAFFER, Chicago Tribune: "Garbo's emotional scenes are the most tender I ever saw on the screen. For a young actor Robert Taylor plays the role of Armand with great polish. This is one of Irving Thalberg's finest contributions."

CARLOS BORCOSQUE SINTONIA, Buenos Aires Correspondent and Motion Picture Radio Commentator of all Latin America: "The prize to the best screen performances of the year and of many years must go to Greta Garbo for her perfect human characterization of Marguerite Gautier in one of Hollywood's most outstanding pictures that is sure to mellow the hearts of the world."

FEG MURRAY, King Features: "Garbo was never more beautiful. She is still the greatest actress. Robert Taylor gives the best performance of his career."

COL. R. A. DUCKWORTH-FORD, Reuters News Agency, England: "In 'Camille' George Cukor has made himself responsible for another masterpiece of poignant artistry with Greta Garbo triumphant and Robert Taylor, Henry Daniell and Lenore Ulric assured of distinguished places in the Hollywood roll of fame."

CLARKE WALES, Screen and Radio Weekly: "A beautiful production of an infallible favorite. It is Garbo's best picture in years and it raises Robert Taylor to new heights."

E. M. BUCHANAN, Correspondent to England: "'Camille' is a poignant production presenting a new Garbo — gay, sportive, immortal — but so fragile and tragic that her performance wrung tears from men. Robert Taylor is handsome and sincere as the romantic lover."

MAYME OBER PEAK, Boston Globe: "An equal with 'Romeo and Juliet' in beauty of production. Garbo reaches new heights as the screen's finest emotional actress. Robert Taylor superb as Armand. The two stars rise to the heights of artistry under the most capable direction of George Cukor."

HARRISON CARROLL, Los Angeles Herald-Express: "I am still under the spell of Garbo's magnificent performance. She reaches the peak of her career and makes all the other glamor stars of Hollywood seem pale wraiths by comparison. If Greta Garbo in 'Camille' is not Hollywood's greatest dramatic actress in her greatest dramatic role then I have been bewitched."

JEANETTE REX, India Correspondent: "An entirely new, vivacious Garbo rises to greater heights in the M-G-M production of 'Camille' in her role opposite the number one romantic screen lover Robert Taylor."

ELIZABETH WILSON, Silver Screen: "I have gone pleasantly mad over Greta Garbo and Robert Taylor in 'Camille'. Garbo's portrayal of Marguerite Gautier is as near a complete triumph as I hope to see. Only Irving Thalberg could have endowed the Dumas classic with such brilliant a presentation."

BARBARA O'CONNOR, Australian Publications: "Outstanding performance by Garbo. The best thing she has ever done, 'Camille' is excellent."

DOROTHY KILGALLEN, New York Journal: "'Camille' is a beautiful and heart-breaking picture. I didn't see Bernhardt as Marguerite Gautier but I don't see how she could have been better than Garbo."

Winning a fortune, but broken-hearted!

HARRY NIEMEYER, St. Louis Post Dispatch: "Greta Garbo's greatest performance."

ELENA DEZARRAGA, Spanish Publications: "Greta Garbo's best picture and probably will be rated the best picture of the year. Marvelous in every way."

Wherever the news is printed they're reading about M-G-M's "CAMILLE". Read on!

LOVE! THE MAGNET THAT WILL DRAW THEM BY THE MILLIONS!

Press reports blanket the earth! A fortune couldn't buy them!

ALLAN HERSHOLT, Denmark and Norway Correspondent: "I believe 'Camille' is superior to the play. Extraordinary from every standpoint. Garbo gives the outstanding performance of her career."

IVAN SPEAR, Box-Office: "Among the score of highly laudatory observations that might be made concerning 'Camille'; it definitely establishes that Greta Garbo is still the number one exotic lady of the screen."

AGNES BLAIR, Hollywood Motion Picture Review: "Most beautiful and realistic love story. Picture should draw great raves from the country over."

EMIL BERBERICH, Central European Correspondent: "Performances of Garbo and Taylor are outstanding. Indeed 'Camille' as a whole is an outstanding picture."

SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW: "Love story splendidly acted and produced; box-office bulls-eye. Filled with the emotion of great love. Brought to life by the artistry of Garbo and Taylor. Taylor gives his best performance to date and his fans will be fully satisfied. Garbo looks like the Camellia flower for which she is named."

J. D. SPIRO, Screen and Radio Weekly: "'Camille' with Garbo and Taylor should be one of the big box-office successes of the year."

FRANCIS CROWE, Hollywood Citizen News: "Two highly dramatic events stirred Hollywood yesterday. One was the sad farewell of Edward to his people. The other Greta Garbo's return to the American screen. Never a 'Camille' more lovely, more life-like or more heart touching."

"Crush me in your arms till the breath is gone from my body!"

RALPH WILK, Film Daily: "Greta Garbo and Robert Taylor in this superb love drama will mean big box-office. Its appeal extends to all classes."

EUGENIO DE ZARRAGA, Correspondent to Spain and Japan: "The direction is superb and the acting by all is perfect."

HARRY MINES, Los Angeles News: "The greatest performance Garbo has ever given. Destined to be the greatest picture of the New Year."

LLOYD PANTAGES, King Features: "Undoubtedly the greatest Garbo picture to date and the greatest Camille of all with the possible exception of Sarah Bernhardt."

PAZ VANMATRE, St. Louis Star: "As tender and poignant a love story as the screen has seen. Garbo is magnificent and Robert Taylor easily turns in his best performance to date in the role of Armand."

GUY AUSTIN, English correspondent: "Taylor gives a superlative performance as Armand to Garbo's Camille. This 'Camille' surpasses everything that has been done before and represents the excellent traditions of an Irving Thalberg achievement."

These Reviews could go on and on! Opinion is unanimous! "CAMILLE" is M-G-M's salute to the New Year! And then comes—

Your Lucky M-G-M Year!

At the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios the forecast for 1937 is even brighter and more ambitious than the memorable past year. Among the first attractions to come will be an epic production of Rudyard Kipling's "CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS" with Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy, Lionel Barrymore and others; "THE LAST OF MRS. CHEYNEY" with Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery, William Powell; "PARNELL" the noted stage success with Clark Gable and Myrna Loy; "MAYTIME" with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy; the Marx Brothers in "A DAY AT THE RACES"; "MAIDEN VOYAGE" with Robert Taylor and Luise Rainer. And that's just the start of . . .

Your Happy New Year!

London Press Says Hays Raised Film Industry to Power and Prestige

The Daily Mail, London, in reporting on the dinner given Will H. Hays by the British motion picture industry on the occasion of Mr. Hays's recent visit to England, said:

"He has been called the Boss of Hollywood and the Overlord of the Movies. He has been called many other things far less complimentary; but the measure of his importance was seen in London yesterday when the entire British film industry turned out at a moment's notice to meet Will H. Hays.

"For 15 years he has been the power behind the conduct of the American film industry. He has carried it from cheap sensationalism to a position of power and prestige.

"His first task was to create in Hollywood a sense of its own responsibility. He taught film stars that, being in the public eye, they must observe reasonable rules of conduct.

"When he began his work Hollywood was associated in many minds with orgies. Now the general conception of Hollywood is a colony of normal hard-working people who take tremendous care to keep themselves fit for their work. That transformation is one of the results achieved by Mr. Will Hays.

"He introduced to Hollywood the idea of self censorship. . . He may be said to have discovered the family audience. . . Six years ago he introduced a Code of Ethics to Hollywood. . . The virtual disappearance of the "flaming youth" type of drama is one result of his influence. . .

"For the internal conduct of the American film industry he set up 32 arbitration courts which have handled nearly 12,000 cases in a year. . . He has contributed more to the uplift of films than any other man, and he believes intensely in the importance of the cinema as a social necessity.

"He has taught the American film industry self-reliance and self-respect. He has urged day in and day out the necessity for films being entertainment. In that regard it is a pity Hollywood cannot be persuaded to lend him to London."

Lay-offs Delayed In WPA Theatre

All Works Progress Administration Theatre Project employees who received dismissal slips effective December 21st will not be discharged until December 29th it was announced by Philip W. Barber, New York City director of the project, just before the deadline this week. All persons to be dismissed may apply to the Emergency Relief Bureau and if they are found to comply with the "need" requirements for relief the dismissals are to be rescinded. The current dismissals are part of a nationwide reduction in the ranks of this WPA project, among others, and are directed principally against the non-relief personnel.

Mr. Barber's act was announced after he had conferred with the supervisors of the project who contended that the personnel reductions were hampering the work of the project.

The last quarterly meeting of the year of the Actors' Equity Association, held in New York, was enlivened by a continuance of the fight by a minority group that Equity take a firm stand against the dismissal of actors and others engaged in the Federal Theatre Project.

Michael Cisney, chairman of Equity's WPA project committee and leader of the minority, urged all American Federation of Labor groups to unite in protecting employees of the project. He said that 150 to 200 actors had ben dismissed.

KC Circuit Starts Increase in Prices

The W. D. Fulton group of theatres, the Southtown, Tivoli, LaSalle, Colonial and Mokan, are leading the way toward more adequate theatre admissions in Kansas City. The average admission, including first runs, for Kansas City theatres has been slightly over 16 cents per house for several years, called one of the lowest in the country.

Beginning this week dime nights will be eliminated from the Southtown, which goes to a straight 20-cent price; the Tivoli goes 20-cents straight; the LaSalle will eliminate all but two dime nights a week, giving it a 15 cent price 5 nights; and the Colonial and Mokan (at the latter there has been one night a week at 7 cents) will go 15-cents straight.

This represents the first move of any importance, not only in Kansas City, but in the territory as a whole, to bring admissions up to a level commensurate with generally improved business conditions and increasing prices in other lines.

The first-run Tower, according to William Reinke, manager and part owner, will shortly go to 25c-35c instead of the present straight 25c.

There is no definite indication by any other houses, independent or circuit, that they will hike prices, but if Mr. Fulton is successful and his prices stay up, it is quite a foregone conclusion that other independents will follow.

Industry Control Rather than NRA Seen As Objective

by FRANCIS L. BURT

in Washington

Abandonment of all efforts to resuscitate the NRA, and concentration on legislation reaching industrial evils through application of the anti-trust statutes or the adoption of controls on industries engaged in interstate commerce, is seen in recent developments in Washington as the aim of the Administration during the coming Congressional session.

Having sounded the sentiment of industry at the recent conference of his National Council for Industrial Progress, Industry Coordinator George L. Berry over the weekend asserted that there is no longer any need for emergency legislation and revealed that his organization will seek of Congress only legislation clarifying the anti-trust laws with respect to restraint of trade and unfair methods of competition so as to include as unfair such labor evils as unreasonably low wages and long working weeks.

"I personally believe it would be a real catastrophe to the country to attempt to repeat the errors and rebuild the Frankenstein of NRA," Berry declared.

Similar views have been expressed by other Administration officials, and it is anticipated the report shortly to be submitted to Secretary of Commerce Roper by a special committee which has been studying NRA conditions will not recommend a revival of its principles. Instead, it is expected the report will suggest a cooperative movement on the part of business and the Government to increase employment.

The film industry, or any other industry not now represented, has been given a blanket invitation by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper to propose members of his business advisory council. Asked why the film industry has no representative in the group the secretary said that there was no reason why the producers should not participate in the deliberations of the council. He said that he would be glad to put a representative of any important industry on the council and would ask for suggestions.

Set Cook Trial Date

New York Supreme Court Justice Louis Valente on Wednesday set January 5 for the trial of the action of Harry Cook against Twentieth Century-Fox, asking $50,000 and an injunction, holding his likeness was used without consent in the picture, "15 Maiden Lane." The court, however, refused his petition for a temporary injunction against the distribution of the film, declaring it questionable that the spirit and purpose of the civil rights law had been violated.

Adela Farrington Dead

Adela Farrington, 69, once noted actress and former wife of the screen star, Hobart Bosworth, died this week at her home in Los Angeles. Miss Farrington, a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., was featured in comic opera, in stock and in vaudeville, at one time appearing with the late Marie Dressler.

THEATRES DEFY CHANCE GAME BAN; STATE OFFICIAL ISSUES WARNING

Exhibitors in New Orleans Continue Bank Night Despite Louisiana Court Ruling That It Is Lottery and Illegal

Ruled a lottery in two state courts and in a federal district court in the last month, Bank Night and other chance games in theatres continue to be the subject of court rulings and legal opinions in various parts of the country. Developments this week were:

Theatres in New Orleans using Bank Night and other giveaways will continue to operate the games despite a Louisiana court of appeals ruling that they are lotteries, the test case on which the ruling was based having been appealed.

Attorney General Clarence V. Beck of Kansas having won a decision from the state supreme court against the Fox Kansas Theatre Company over the use of Bank Night, announced that he was notifying county attorneys to proceed against theatres and other concerns using Bank Night or other promotion schemes that violate the state lottery law as interpreted in the court decision.

Cash prizes by drawings in theatres were called lotteries and illegal by Attorney General Otto Kerner of Illinois in an opinion given to Ernest Palmer, director of the state department of insurance. Police Commissioner Allman of Chicago announced Wednesday that he would start an immediate drive to halt all giveaways.

Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., owner of Bank Night, has filed suit against two Boston theatre companies to collect royalty payments and the company has announced that it will file similar suits wherever the plan is used without payment in spite of a Colorado federal court ruling that the plan is so close to being a lottery that it is not entitled to copyright protection.

A suit in which the father of a New Orleans minor attempted to collect $105 from the Florita theatre on the ground that his boy had been refused admission on the night his name was called as a Movie Sweepstake winner, has been appealed to the appellate division. The court of appeals last week ruled that there was no cause for action, as a gambling debt could not be collected by law and that the game was a lottery, illegal in Louisiana.

Attorneys for the plaintiff have filed an application for a hearing in the appellate court, temporarily staying the police from stopping the games in other theatres for about two weeks, and they have said that the matter will be taken to the state supreme court if necessary. If the case reaches the high state court a decision cannot possibly be secured before early summer.

Many of the theatres in New Orleans which have been using Bank Night are signing contracts for the resumption of the ladies' chinaware nights which were popular a few years ago.

The Fox Kansas Theatre Company, operator of the Liberty theatre at Fort Scott, Kas., will petition for a rehearing of the case in which the state supreme court enjoined the company from using Bank Night or any similar plan, but the state attorney general announced that he will not wait the 20 days allowed the company for appeal but will immediately notify county attorneys to proceed against theatres using giveaways.

Mr. Beck did not know how many theatres in the state were using cash giveaways but "there are too many," he said.

"Our procedure is first to bring to the attention of the exhibitor or the merchant that the scheme is a lottery, and then, if the exhibitor does not cease using it, we proceed with legal action. There is a special law in Kansas which enables me to file an injunction suit against a theater or a firm, and close them up. This procedure is very quick and effective."

Only one county attorney has shut down on the giveaways, according to R. W. McEwan, Kansas distributor for Bank Night. This is the attorney for Brown County. Dodge City and Hutchinson theatres have discontinued Bank Night and giveaways voluntarily.

Illinois Opinion Given

Mr. Kerner's opinion as Illinois attorney general that cash prizes by drawings in theatres are illegal and lotteries was issued in response to a request of an insurance company to the state director of insurance for permission to issue Bank Night guarantees. The legal authority declared that since the schemes are illegal insurance on such chance games is also illegal.

The opinion set forth that the law sets up penalties for persons who print or have in their possession for sale any lottery ticket, and calls theatre lottery night insurance policies by the name of "lottery tickets."

The ruling adds:

"The United States district court for the southern district of Iowa held that the conducting in a motion picture theatre of an advertising scheme known as 'bank night' is an appeal to the cupidity of the public and the spirit of gambling and speculation and contrary to public safety.

"The case is in accord with the decision of the United States district court of the District of Colorado.

"These authorities are ample to show conclusively that the so-called 'bank night' conducted by certain motion picture theatres constitutes a lottery, prohibited by the constitution and statutes of this state."

Judge Frances B. Allegrettii in Chicago has refused to issue an order requiring Balaban & Katz to produce records pertaining to their Bank Night and screeno contests.

Illinois Attorney General Calls Cash Prizes by Drawings Illegal; Bank Night Owners Sue Two Boston Companies

Exhibitors Sued

Bank Night representatives in the Boston territory have filed suits in the Bristol superior court and the East Boston district court against two theatre companies to collect royalty payments. It was said that similar actions will be filed wherever payment is withheld.

George S. Ryan, attorney for Bank Night, said that the Denver decision was binding only in the Colorado territory. To substantiate his contention the attorney referred to the case of the International Visible Systems Corporation again Remington Rand in 1934 when a United States circuit court of appeals declined to agree with a previous court decision. Mr. Ryan further said that state and municipal courts are not obliged to abide by a United States district court decision.

Allied Theatres of the Northwest, planning a court fight against Bank Night fees were encouraged by the Denver decision but are continuing their plans. "Our proposed action was decided upon because we felt that advantage is being taken of our membership in exacting a fee for Bank Night and we are confident that courts would not sustain such a levy," Stan Kane, executive secretary of the Allied unit, said.

Permits Games in Memphis

After reading a recent opinion of the Tennessee supreme court, City Judge Carter in Memphis declared that theatres in the city holding Bank Nights are operating within the law, as are drug stores and filling stations giving weekly prizes.

"The court does not look with favor on the practice," Judge Carter said, "but under our statutes they are operated within the law."

A city official had previously ruled that the issuance of tickets for the drawing of prizes must be discontinued by all business concerns in the city. Violations were to be followed by arrests and prosecution.

Banned in Wisconsin

District Attorney John H. Matheson in Beloit, Wis., has declared that he will take legal action against all Rock County theatre Bank Night winners in a move to force exhibitors in the county to discontinue the games.

The district attorney has declared he will sue Bank Night winners because the penalty for a conviction of operators of a lottery is not severe enough to halt the practice. The maximum penalty is a fine of not more than $100, he pointed out.

Harry and Louis Brandt of the Brandt circuit, New York, have been directed by the appellate division in New York to produce their books and records for use in a proposed examination by John M. Keating, attorney for Affiliated Enterprises. The action affirms a similar order issued by the New York supreme court. The Brandts are appealing from the ruling on the ground that use of "Prosperity Nite" does not infringe on Bank Night.

"Good Will Week" Advanced for Theatres

Arthur Mayer Proposes Free Admissions for the Poor

A unique suggestion for a "Good Will Week" as the exhibitors' contribution to the spirit of Christmas, instead of the usual bemoaning of the fact that they face empty cash registers every night for a week preceding Christmas while the holiday crowds jam the stores and gift counters, has been advanced by Arthur L. Mayer, operator of the Rialto, New York, and one of the few exhibitors operating an independent theatre on Broadway.

Mr. Mayer would dedicate a week to free shows for those who cannot afford or are unable to visit theatres during the rest of the year and he guarantees that the exhibitors would find that the innovation would bring them as much joy as though their houses were filled with paying patrons for every show during the week.

Mourning the plight of the exhibitor whose best efforts at showmanship are ignored by a public intent on spending their last dime to fulfil their role of Santa Claus, Mr. Mayer points out that the problem of Christmas is as old as the show business itself.

Cites Unsuccessful Plans

"Some energetic managers try to buck the tide by playing outstanding pictures or booking big name stage attractions," he says. "Usually they find it unprofitable... to fight Santa Claus. Most of the old timers prefer discretion to valor, play a bird which would lay an egg in any week and take their holiday medicine in a recumbent position.

"I would like to suggest a third procedure. Our industry has cooperated in the past with 'bigger and better' movie weeks. Why not try in the future to join hands for something 'bigger and better' than the most colossal and stupendous of all movies. Let's christen the week before Christmas 'Good Will Week.' Let's strive to fill our empty seats with non-paying patrons with the same energy and enthusiasm that we apply the other fifty-one weeks in the year to keeping them occupied with paying patrons.

"Sweetest Dividends"

"Let's seek out in our respective communities every organization caring for dependent children, for the infirm and the poverty stricken. Let's see that every child, every invalid and every old man and woman who cannot afford to visit our theatre during the rest of the year has at least one opportunity to see a picture and let's make sure it's a good picture full of sunshine and happiness.

"There is no sound in any theatre, not even the tinkle of the cash register, so gratifying as the laughter of little children and the hand clap of the handicapped. We will make no money the week before Christmas but maybe we can transform it into the best week of the year—the best week for friendship and gratitude and service, for the sweetest kind of dividends any theatre can pay."

LLOYD ABANDONS COMEDY ABOUT KING

Harold Lloyd announced in Hollywood this week that out of deference to the peoples of the British Empire he voluntarily had abandoned production of the comedy on which he had been working the last four months. It was to go before the cameras next month.

The story had no connection with the recent political happenings in London, it was pointed out, but was set in a kingdom and had a royal family background.

ITOA Will Fight Ban on Smoking

The Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York will wage a vigorous fight in opposition to the indicated plan of Fire Commissioner McElligott to seek an ordinance banning smoking in New York theatres, it was announced, in the event such a proposal is actually placed before the Board of Aldermen.

George Curtiss, Pioneer Industry Figure, Is Dead

George W. Curtiss, who is said to have taken the first motion pictures in Kansas City, on May 15, 1897, is dead there. The camera used by Mr. Curtiss was of French make. He is said to have prophesied sound pictures before 1900 and himself experimented with sound by using a phonograph. He invented several types of cameras and was widely known for his experiments with still photographs.

AMPA Holds Annual Christmas Luncheon

The annual Christmas luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers was held in the College Room of the Hotel Astor in New York Wednesday, with Buddy Page and his orchestra, Lynn Kirk, Dorothy Young, Ortis and Margo, and the Seven Loria Brothers entertaining. Ed Riley, co-author of "The Music Goes Round," was master-of-ceremonies.

Pallos Not Seeking Financing: Giannini

Dr. A. H. Giannini, president of United Artists, denied in Hollywood this week the report that Stephen Pallos is seeking American financing for London Films. Dr. Giannini said that Mr. Pallos is merely representing Alexander Korda in product conferences on the coast and is also making preparation for the opening of "Rembrandt" there.

20th-Fox Acquires Roxy Theatre Stock

Twentieth Century-Fox is guaranteed a minimum of 83 1/3 per cent of the combined outstanding new Class A and common stock of the reorganized Roxy Theatre Corporation in New York under the plan of reorganization presented to Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey by the committee for first mortgage gold bondholders in the United States district court late last week. A hearing on the plan was set for January 15.

The reorganized Roxy company will receive a 20-year film franchise from Twentieth Century-Fox and $650,000 in cash. All of the theatre company's new common stock will be issued to Twentieth Century-Fox, although the number of shares of both common and Class A to be included in the plan that Twentieth Century-Fox will have 83 1/3 per cent of the combined total of both issues.

The plan proposes to give to first mortgage bondholders, for each $1,000 of their claims, a new $1,000 first mortgage bond and an undetermined amount of cash, representing their share of distributable sums held by the fiscal agent for the mortgage bonds and the reorganization trustee.

Holders of 5½ per cent sinking fund gold notes are offered, for each $1,000 of their claims, an undetermined number of shares of new Class A stock and $23.79 in cash.

Equity receivership creditors are offered a 50 per cent dividend on their claims.

General creditors and old Class A stockholders will not be entitled to participate and no provision is made for them in the plan.

There are $3,595,208 of old first mortgage 6¼ per cent gold bonds outstanding; $1,548,000 of five-year, 6½ per cent gold notes; $250,000 of prior lien receiver's certificates; $52,345 of equity receivership accounts payable participating in the plan, and $70,663 of general creditors' claims. One hundred and twenty-five thousand shares of old Class A and 350,000 shares of old common stock are not entitled to participate under the plan.

The capitalization of the new Roxy company will consist of $3,595,208 of new first mortgage 20-year 3½ and 4 per cent bonds and an undetermined number of shares of new no par common and Class A stock. All of the new Class A will be issued to the present noteholders and all of the common of Twentieth Century-Fox, but the number of shares of new common will be issued in a ratio to the number of Class A shares issued to preserve the 83 1/3 per cent of the combined total for Twentieth Century-Fox.

The new bonds are to be secured by all of the real estate and personal property of the new company and will bear interest of 3½ per cent for the first three years and interest of 4 per cent thereafter. Amortization is provided for either by purchase of the bonds in the open market or by redemption by lot. In the event of the latter procedure, redemption is to be in lots of $54,000 a year during the first three years; $60,000 a year during the next seven years and $65,000 a year during the final 10 years.

Warner Refinancing May Require Weeks

Indications are that plans for refinancing Warner Brothers will not be completed for some time. Executives of the company are studying several proposals and it may take weeks, if not months, before a decision is reached.

GOVERNMENT, DISTRIBUTORS CLASH OVER DUALS AND DIME ADMISSIONS

Government Charges Restraint of Trade Under Contracts Prohibiting Double Featuring and Showings for 10c Tickets

The United States Government has engaged the motion picture industry in general and eight large distributors in particular in legal battle in the first case of its kind to reach a federal court. The issue is the distributors' right contractually to prohibit exhibitors from double featuring and charging ten-cent minimum admissions. The charge is restraint of trade.

The outcome of an anti-trust action brought by the Government against two Texas circuit operators and the distributors is expected to have a far-reaching effect on the relationship between distributors and exhibitors and may afford distributors a weapon to force the abandonment of double features and unreasonably low admissions, both sore spots in present fair trade practice discussions. The trial has been set tentatively for early in February before Judge William Hawley Atwell in the federal district court in Dallas.

Contracts between the distributors and Karl Hoblitzelle, operator of the Interstate circuit, and R. J. O'Donnell, operator of the Texas Consolidated Circuit, under which the distributors agree not to service a subsequent-run exhibitor who fails to maintain a specified minimum admission price for a picture which has played the circuit houses at a designated admission price, are the basis of the action. The petition and complaint filed by B. W. Henderson, special assistant to Attorney General William Cummings, allege restraint of trade and commerce and seek an injunction to prevent the defendants from carrying out the contract provisions.

Since the case is expected to command nation-wide attention from the motion picture industry, both the defendants and the Government are agreed on a prompt trial. The action is generally regarded as a test case which will determine the right of exhibitors and distributors to enforce trade practice regulations, particularly those involving minimum admissions and double featuring, through contract provisions. A vindication by the federal court of the type of contact in question would no doubt be followed by employment of the same kind of contract in numerous other situations. Unofficial comment has been that the case is of sufficient importance to warrant its being carried to the United States supreme court.

Sees Supreme Court Fight

Mr. Henderson, who was sent to Dallas to prosecute the case by Mr. Cummings and by John Dickinson, assistant attorney general and head of the trust division, was quoted in the Dallas Morning News as having said:

"It amounts to a fight on the large chains which dictate their own terms in restraint of trade against independent theatre owners. I have no doubt the case will be fought on up to the supreme court and will set a precedent for years to come in regard to film admission prices."

DELAYS EXPECTED IN OHIO PLAYDATE CASE

Depositions of complainants in the preferred playing time suit of RKO versus the State of Ohio will not be filed before January 30, nor the brief before about February 15, the dates fixed by the United States statutory court at the recent hearing in Columbus, according to Lester Jaffe, of Seasongood & Mayer, Cincinnati attorneys for the complainant.

In addition to the circuits named, the defendants are Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, Inc.; Vitagraph, Inc.; RKO Distributing Corporation; Columbia Pictures Corporation; United Artists Corporation; Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation; Metro-Goldywn-Mayer Distributing Corporation of Texas; 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation and 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation of Texas.

Under contracts made by the Interstate and Texas Consolidated circuits with the eight large distributors, subsequent-run exhibitors are not permitted to double feature or to charge an admission of less than 25 cents for any picture which the circuit exhibits at 40 cents or more. Both preliminary and permanent injunctions to restrain the defendants from entering into such agreements are sought in the action.

Follows Two-Year Dispute

Such contract provisions were first adopted in a few situations two years ago by most of the large distributors who have taken a definite stand against both double features and low admissions on the ground that they lower the average rental on pictures.

The situations affected under the Texas contracts are listed in the complaint as Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Fort Worth, Austin, Galveston, Waco, Wichita Falls, Abilene, Amarillo, El Paso and Albuquerque.

Numerous home office and sales executives of the large companies are expected to be subpoenaed as witnesses. Trade opinion this week was that a vindication by the courts of the contracts would make it possible, similarly, to ban chance games, giveaways, and all forms of bargain admissions with the playing of any outstanding pictures in subsequent-run houses.

The contracts were the subject of an action brought by Robert Z. Glass, an independent exhibitor, in the Texas state courts a year ago. The court found that no conspiracy was involved in the use of the contracts but ruled that the subject of the action was interstate commerce and, therefore, within the jurisdiction of the federal courts.

Federal Prosecutor Predicts the Fight Will Go to Supreme Court Regardless of Outcome of Dallas (Tex.) Case

The Dallas case represents the second time in a year that the Government has entered into direct legal entanglement with the distributors under the anti-trust laws. This summer the attorney general brought an action against Fanchon & Marco, St. Louis circuit, for violation of the anti-trust laws but the circuit was acquitted. Department of Justice agents for the last year have been reported active throughout the country in investigating reported anti-trust violations and attempts to restrain trade in the motion picture industry.

J. Robert Rubin, vice-president and general counsel of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, issued a statement which is unusual in that distributors in similar cases in the past have been reluctant to explain their stand for publication. The statement follows:

"The Government has gone into equity court primarily to seek a cancellation of contract provisions which Interstate Circuit, Inc., the operator of the first run theatres in several principal cities in Texas, made with each of practically all the companies distributing motion pictures nationally.

"Since Interstate Circuit, Inc., contracts with the leading national distributors of motion pictures, the Government, in order to have such provisions canceled, has had to join in the suit each of the national distributors with which Interstate Circuit, Inc., has contracts.

Cites Resale Price Cases

"I am informed that the Government does not charge that such distributors conspired among themselves in violation of the anti-trust laws, but only that under the circumstances described, the agreement Interstate required with each national distributor is a violation of the Federal anti-trust laws and should be canceled.

"The issue of law presents problems quite similar to those presented in the recent resale price maintenance cases before the Supreme Court of the United States in connection with the statutes of California and Illinois, which legalized the maintenance of resale prices and provided for punishment for those who knowingly sought to violate such contract provisions.

"The legal question in the present suit has never before been passed on in a case in the Federal courts involving motion pictures and its outcome is awaited with interest. A previous suit in Texas state courts upheld the right of Interstate Circuit, Inc., to make such contracts with distributors."

GB MANAGEMENT WINS STOCKHOLDER DISPUTE

Directors' Proxies and Holdings Pass Five Proposals First Voted Down by Shareholders

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The directors of Gaumont British faced the ire of stockholders of the company at a stormy meeting in the New Gallery when five important proposals were voted down by a show of hands among stockholders present but passed in a poll by virtue of the proxies and personal holdings controlled by the board. The poll, on a share basis, was called for by Mark Ostrer, chairman. The major triumph scored by the directors by this means was on the proposal to accept the financial reports and accounts of the company.

A show of hands vote ousted Sidney R. Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox, from the directorate, but a poll vote reelected him. The directors apparently control approximately 3,000,000 shares to the approximately 12,000 held by the militant, but helpless minority.

Indicative of the important place John Maxwell may be expected to fill in the future activity of Gaumont British was the reception he received from the stockholders when he unanimously was reelected to the board of directors. The Associated British Picture executive was summoned repeatedly from the floor until he finally responded with a speech of thanks.

The session was the resumption of the annual stockholders' meeting of Nov. 2, which was abruptly adjourned after a castigation of the directorate which specifically cited the inadequacy of the financial report of GB and the manner of handling the American negotiations for control of the company.

Today's meeting rivalled the first session in its expression of intense feeling, the proceedings being splashed across the front pages and on the posters of the leading evening papers here tonight.

Mr. Ostrer opened the meeting by replying to an attorney's letter demanding certain information in the interest of the stockholders. He declined to state the company's gross receipts from theatres, the receipts from film rental, and the proportion of the gross paid to the directors.

Concedes High Write-up

Asked what proportion of the receipts here were sent to 20th Century-Fox, Mr. Ostrer declared the American company's product is booked on a competitive basis. He said no consolidated profit and loss statement has been prepared. A representative of the auditors, replying to a question from the floor about the £16,250,000 valuation placed on the fixed assets in the latest statement, admitted the figure represented the writing up of the assets to the maximum.

Charles Nordon, a stockholder, moved that the report be not received, and asked the appointment of a committee of stockholders to investigate the accounts and obtain whatever information necessary from the directors.

"This would prevent washing the dirty linen in public," he said. "The company technically is highly efficient and received enormous revenues," he continued. "It is the duty of the directors to show how they were disposed of. The directors' bad practice of conducting operations through subsidiaries meant opportunities for undesirable manipulation."

He compared the £16,000,000 of Gaumont valuation of theatres to A.B.P.'s £8,000,000 for approximately the same seating capacity. The £1,600,000 deficit in the balance sheet should be increased by the amount by which the assets of the company were written up, Nordon insisted. He protested that the article forbidding foreign directors had been nullified by a one-line amendment. He called Metropolis and Bradford Trust, the holding company for GB, a subterfuge whereby an English company is nominally the biggest shareholder in GB, but under which the real owners are elsewhere.

General Meeting Threatened

Mr. Nordon threatened that if the chairman, Mr. Ostrer, refused approval of the shareholders' committee as suggested, the next step would be a request for an extraordinary general meeting.

The stockholder's proposal was carried by about 80 to 40, Mr. Ostrer demanding a poll, saying that 80,000 shares at the meeting and the proxies in the directors' hands amounted to 127,000 shares, apart from his own shares.

Answering questions, Mr. Ostrer declared Lord Lee was never in control of the company, and that he had parted with his two per cent, which actually was the balance of power, four years ago.

A shareholder asked, "Who does control the company?"

Mr. Ostrer replied, "If you mean voting control, I think Metropolis and Bradford. They hold 3,000,000 shares."

Asked if the £4,000,000 or £5,000,000 in American business appeared in the balance sheet, the chairman said, "The figure refers to business contracted, not money received, and does not appear in the accounts."

After Mr. Ostrer had refused to accept a motion for a further adjournment, the shareholders unanimously reelected John Maxwell as a director.

Mr. Maxwell at last responded to repeated calls for him, saying, "I thank you for your expression of confidence. At the moment my lips are sealed. I am only just becoming acquainted as a director with the details of the business, and could not give you any useful advice."

GB ordinary shares fell one shilling and three pence to £8 1½/ from the figure of £11 prior to the first stockholders' meeting.

Ostrers Leave New York

Isidore and Maurice Ostrer are due home next week from New York after failing in a reported attempt to purchase the GB interest held by 20th Century-Fox.

New Stock Issue

Details have been revealed of the offer of £2,000,000 ($10,000,000) in 4½ per cent first mortgage debenture stock of Associated British Properties, Ltd., which has been formed to take over from Associated Cinema Properties, Ltd., a subsidiary of Associated British Picture Corp., Ltd., 53 theatres leased to the last named company.

Associated British Properties, which has an ordinary share capital of £1,000,000, in addition to the loan capital now offered, is buying 53 theatres from A. C. P. for £3,000,000, £2,000,000 cash and 999,000,900 ordinary £1 shares.

'U' Stock Acquired By Universal Unit

Acquisition of 2,000 shares of Universal Pictures common stock by the Universal Corporation, Wilmington, Del., was disclosed this week in Washington in the October report of the Securities and Exchange Commission on the transactions of officers, directors and principal stockholders of corporations.

At the same time, the commission announced receipt of a report from the Universal Corporation, revealing that on April 1, last, it became a principal stockholder of Universal common with holdings of 233,527 shares. The 2,000 shares acquired in October brought its holdings at the close of the month to 225,527 shares. The company also held 2,000 shares of second preferred.

The commission report also showed that Carl M. Leserman, New York, disposed of 2,900 shares of Grand National Films common in October.

Reports of holdings of individuals becoming officers or directors of corporations showed that neither Al Lichtman, New York, nor Edgar J. Mannix, Culver City, Cal., held any equity securities in Loew's, Inc., when they became officers, according to returns dated Oct. 7. Sam Katz, Culver City, also made an officer in the company, held 500 shares of common.

Reports dated Oct. 31 showed that the new Atlas Corporation was a principal stockholder in RKO with 212,006 shares of common, while its subsidiaries, Atlas Utility and Investment Company and Yorkport Corporation, held 24,229 and 27,258 shares of common, respectively.

Board of Review Picks 'Best' Films

The Committee on Exceptional Photoplays of the National Board of Review this week made public its selections of the best pictures of the year between Dec. 20, 1935 and Dec. 17, 1936. The best motion picture made in any country was judged to be "La Kermesse Heroique," released in America as "Carnival in Flanders," and the best American production "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town."

The 10 best American pictures chosen, in the order of their position, were: "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "Modern Times," "Fury," "Winterset," "The Devil Is a Sissy," "Ceiling Zero," "Romeo and Juliet," "The Prisoner of Shark Island" and "The Green Pastures."

The 10 best foreign pictures were listed as: "La Kermesse Heroique," "The New Earth," "Rembrandt," "The Ghost Goes West," "Nine Days a Queen," "We Are from Kronstadt," "Son of Mongolia," "The Yellow Cruise," "Les Miserables" (French) and "The Secret Agent."

The review members of the National Board, over 300 in number, made a list of selections based on popular appeal, which were: "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "Romeo and Juliet," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "San Francisco," "The Great Ziegfeld," "Anthony Adverse," "Dodsworth," "The Green Pastures," "Fury" and "Winterset."

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The recent visit of Metro's "great lover" and "screen's greatest sensation," one Robert Taylor, to his home town of Beatrice, Nebraska. still has the old folk back there gasping for breath. Robert returned to the little community with a full Hollywood retinue, and immediately the press of the surrounding countryside assigned their very best reporters to tell in print, for posterity, the story of the homecoming of the Pomona College boy who made good. The reporters found, as already reported here, that Robert Taylor really is Spangler Arlington Brugh, and that Spangler changed his name because the family moniker sounded too much like "brew"—"Arlington hates the drink."

"He is still Arlington Brugh to all of us," the news men heard from the Hollywood star's little white-haired grandmother, Mrs. A. L. Stanhope, now 80. "No, sir, he never chose that Robert Taylor. He liked his own name—Spangler Arlington Brugh. They have a woman in Hollywood who names all the stars," the grandmother continued. "She asked Arlington what his name was, and when he told her, she says, 'Oh, home brew.' So Arlington didn't say much when they gave him the other name. He hates the drink."

Back in Beatrice, Arlington was a real pretty boy, his grandmother recalled. He was always in love with some little girl or other, and one time talked his mother into giving a party for the girls.

"But he wanted to have the party in the hayloft," laughed the little old lady.

Annually at this holiday-time, Broadway Restaurateur Arnold Reuben raffles a giant turkey, the proceeds of which go to charity. Broadway's stage and screen always participate in the raffle for the beautiful bird with heavy plumage. Usually young, live turkeys are as bare as vultures—it is only the older bird which collects the handsome feathers. Many have observed that the Reuben turkey seems to be a twin of the turkey raffled off the year previous, and a triplet of the turkey raffled off the year before that. So much is known.

What Broadway has not known, however, and we have Louis Sobol's word for it, is that Reuben has been raffling off the same turkey for five years. The winner never gets him. Instead, he'll get one weighing just as much, maybe just as good to the taste. But not Harold—that's what they call the turkey in Reuben's—because every year after the raffle, for the past five years, Harold has been shipped back to Harry (Warner Brothers) Warner's farm in Westchester, where he belongs, to fatten up for the following holiday raffle at Reuben's.

Omigosh Department, quoting a memorandum sent by the British Broadcasting Company to all married women on the BBC staff in London:

> Dear Mrs. Whoozis: If you are contemplating motherhood in the near future, please communicate with the Internal Director.

The Grace Line is continuing its promotion of travel to South and Central America, concentrating at the moment on the sightseeing advantages of Bolivia. Chief among Bolivia's offerings, they point out, is Lake Titicaca, highest navigable lake in the world, standing two-and-a-half miles up in the skies. Then there's La Paz, the capital, and Sucre and Potosi, "two of the most unspoiled charming towns in the New World," as the Grace Line's press agent so subtly puts it.

Our interest is in Potosi, for it was in that little place that theatre tickets once sold for $50 apiece, for each performance, day in and day out, for months—and the inhabitants paid it, gladly, without even a whimper.

In its heyday Potosi was a veritable Bagdad. Nestled 14,000 feet above sea level in a bowl of Bolivia's bronze-colored hills, Potosi came into being in the year 1545, shortly after an Indian goat-herdsman uprooted a bush to find the earth beneath sparkling with masses of pure silver. This little incident led to the further discovery that the highest of the nearby mountains was filled to overflowing with the precious metal. Soon silver seekers began their trek to the mountain of wealth and Potosi, the little town which sprang up at the spot, grew rapidly from a small mining settlement to a city of 150,000 inhabitants. It is estimated that 7,000 mines were opened, and many hundreds of millions of dollars worth of silver removed.

The inevitable gambling dives sprang up, 30 of them doing business regularly during the silver-rush. The well dressed Potosian women of the day spent $15,000 for jeweled gowns to wear at each fiesta, figuratively going from one fiesta to another with hardly a siesta. The gals spent $500 a pair for pearl embroidered overshoes. Dona Clara, the reigning belle, used gold and silver table services. The local theatre charged $50 apiece for admission. That was nearly four centuries ago—75 years before the Mayflower landed at Plymouth Rock and exactly 375 years before Broadway ticket speculators caused Wall Street billionaires to faint with their demands of $40 for a pair of tickets for the Army-Navy Game.

One hundred lamellirostrals of the subfamily Anserinae of the family Anatidae (sometimes called geese) attempted to cross the busiest part of busy Broadway the other day at Times Square, with such disastrous results as to bring the first serious production loss to the great and new and up-and-coming Universal Pictures of the J. Cheever Cowdin-Robert Cochrane interests.

Universal has a picture in the making titled "Class Prophecy." Production is centered in the normal place of Universal production, in California, but "Class Prophecy" needed a New York scene. The heroine, played by Virginia Bruce, accepted a dare—in the picture—to drive 100 geese across Broadway. So, the scene was finally arranged, after Universal experienced the annoyances of entangling the web-like red taping for permits. Police protection was assigned, nay, required, and the geese were marshaled in front of seven Universal motion picture cameras. As soon as Ruth Lincoln, who plays the part of the goose girl, got her flock under way, however, the 10 to 20 policemen were bowled off their feet by crowds of curious New Yorkers (all of New York's 8,000,000 inhabitants are curious). As a result, very few of the geese actually got across Broadway. And 37 of them were lost. Where the 37 went is a problem that will be taken up immediately by Universal's board of directors, under the business of lamellirostralia.

Story-of-the-week from Leonard Lyons concerns one Harpo Marx, who, requiring a tonsillectomy, was removed to a California hospital. After the operation, Harpo was taken to a private room—to convalesce for three days in peace and quiet. The last night of Harpo's hospitalization was a sleepless one because of the groans emanating from the patient in the next room. Harpo summoned the interne and made his complaints.

"Well," cracked the doctor, "what do you want me to do about it?" Marx drew a half-dollar from under his pillow, flipped it and covered the coin with his palm. "Heads that guy gets the hypo," he propositioned; "tails, I get it."

ITALY GRANTS LARGE FILM CONCESSIONS

Twenty Million Lire Exportation Permitted and 250 Pictures Allowed to Enter

New regulations governing the importation of American films into Italy raise the allotment of films to 250 a year and increase the amount of revenue to be exported from that country to 20,000,000 lire, it was announced on Wednesday. The concessions make Italy almost a free trade market for this country's screen product.

The regulations include the removal of all retrictions governing the investment in Italy of the surplus revenue above the 20,000,000 lire allowed for export.

The amount set for export is an increase of 12,000,000 lire over the previous limit of 8,000,000 lire and the annual film quota of 250 pictures allotted the American distributors for import is an increase of 82 over the highest number of imports in any year. It is anticipated that the distributors will immediately resume sending pictures to Italy.

Restrictions imposed on exportation of film revenue from Italy and regulations governing the number of pictures to be imported have been the subject of discussion between the Italian Government and United States Ambassador William Phillips for the last two months.

On his recent visit to Italy, Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, obtained assurances of concessions from Premier Mussolini but their extent was not made known officially at that time.

The first change in the motion picture import regulations of Italy which brought protests from the American companies came in Febuary, 1935, when a general contingent decree was put into effect. The decree included a contingent on pictures to the extent of about 25 per cent of the previous year's importations. Later in 1935 films were classified in a group of articles, importation of which was regulated not on a percentage basis but in accordance with ministerial import licenses.

Restrictions Modified

On August 7, 1936, the Italian Motion Picture Federation (Federazione Nazional Fascisti degli Industriali della Spettacolo), a quasi-government body with great power, informed all distributors in Rome that the previous method of granting licenses would be modified to allow, for the 12 months beginning July 1, 1936, the exportation of not more than 10,000,000 lire received from film distribution. Any balance remaining, under this regulation, had to be invested in Italian film activities.

Total film imports were limited to 300 during the 12 months, of which 250 could be distributed by established importers and the remaining 50 distributed to casual importers.

Out of the 10,000,000 lire allowed for transfer abroad, 2,000,000 lire would be set aside to provide for the 50 pictures allotted to the casual importers, chiefly Italian producers, the remaining 8,000,000 lire to be distributed among established national distributors in Italy. Attached to these regulations was the provision that importing companies must obtain their foreign parent companies' written statement agreeing to the regulations which agreement would also provide that an importer would maintain the previous year's normal level of imports.

Further Modification

On Oct. 27, 1936, the Motion Picture Federation advised that the regulations again would be changed so that 16,000,000 lire of the money received from the distribution of all foreign films could be exported in the year ending June 30, 1937. Any amount above that sum was to remain in Italy and might be invested in some manner in that country, such as building or purchasing a theatre, authors' rights or production of pictures in foreign languages; not necessarily for film production, but subject to the approval of the Italian authorities.

Of this 16,000,000 lire, 13,000,000 was to be allotted to direct importers of whom the majority are American so that about 8,000,000 lire could be exported by Americans and 3,000,000 lire was allotted to local producers and distributors, mostly Italian.

The number of pictures allotted to the American companies and to Italian companies distributing American pictures was fixed at 48 to be imported during the year beginning July 1, 1936.

Revenue and Quota Balance

The number of films might be reduced if the revenue exceeded the quota of funds for exportation. The companies might import additional pictures under special permit only if the net revenue above the export allotment is left in Italy. Bank deposits as of September 30, 1936, representing earnings prior to July 1, 1936, of foreign motion pictures were to be allowed to be exported when exchange was available.

Companies not making application to abide by these regulations were to lose their rights for importation of pictures and their allotment of pictures was to be assigned to other companies.

The regulations had resulted in the suspension of the importation of films into Italy by American companies.

RKO Majority To Favor Plan, Court Is Told

Well over a majority of the RKO stockholders will approve the plan of reorganization for the company proposed by Atlas Corporation and Lehman Brothers, Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for the proponents of the plan, told Federal Judge William Bondy in New York Monday.

The assurance of stockholder support for the plan is taken to indicate that the principal RKO stockholders' protective committee will recommend its confirmation by the court, inasmuch as Atlas Corporation and Lehman Brothers do not represent a majority of the RKO stock outstanding and, therefore, Mr. Rickaby must have been speaking for important stockholders' interests in addition to his clients.

Atlas-Lehman own about 630,000 shares of RKO stock, or 24 per cent of the 2,593,992 shares outstanding, and have an option to acquire from RCA another 24 per cent. They also own about 42 per cent of the $11,600,000 of RKO debentures outstanding and have an option to acquire a like amount from RCA. The approval of the plan by debenture holders has been assured already.

Mr. Rickaby's statement was made at a hearing on a petition by Irving Trust Company, trustee of RKO, for leave to offer $700,000 to the Orpheum Circuit bankruptcy trustee for a clear title to all of the latter's going assets. The proposed offer was approved on behalf of Atlas-Lehman.

France Rejects Italian Film Plan

The French government has declined to approve the proposed Franco-Italian commercial agreement covering the exchange of films, and despite the visit to Paris recently by Luigi Freddi, head of the Italian industry. The aim of the agreement was to permit French producers to work in Italy, as was proposed to American interests, the financing to come from the revenue on French films shown in Italy, since the Italian law forbids the export of the money.

The French objection centered chiefly about the estimate that the revenues to be derived from the distribution of French product in Italy would not be sufficient by a wide margin to finance French production in Italy. Whereas a French picture could not be expected to draw more than 100,000 lire in Italy, a production would cost approximately 1,000,000 lire.

It was concluded therefore, that an agreement on the basis proposed by the Italians would be of no benefit to French producers.

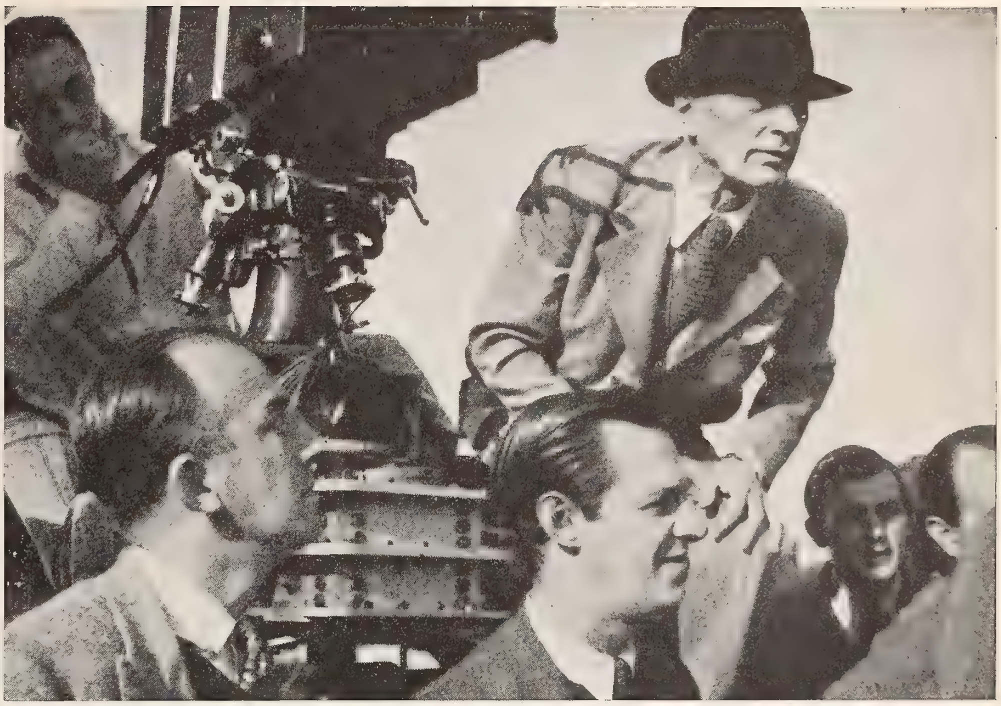
THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production Average

Approaching the Christmas holiday season, new production held up to its average schedule as nine films were started. During the same period five finished. Anticipating that the round of parties during Christmas week will make severe inroads into production schedules, executives were loath to begin work on more than the ordinary number of photoplays. The success which the production end of the business enjoyed during 1936 has given Hollywood an inclination to indulge in considerable more celebrating than was characteristic of the past several seasons.

However, the production factory risked starting three or four potentially important features, including "Escadrille" (tentative title), "Robber Barons," "The Last Slaver" and "Class Prophecy."

Universal began work on two pictures. In "Person to Person Call," a romance drama, Gloria Stuart, Walter Pidgeon, Billy Burrud, Hobart Cavanaugh, Sidney Blackmer, Michael Fitzmaurice and Gerald Oliver Smith will be seen. Sidney Salkow is directing. The second activity, "Class Prophecy," comedy and romantic drama, features Virginia Bruce with Kent Taylor supported by Walter Brennan, Jean Rogers, David Oliver, Greta Mayer, Sterling Holloway and Christian Rub. Hal Mohr, leading cameraman, makes his first directional attempt with the production.



THE LONDON SCENE. Henry Straddling (center) and Jacques Feyder (wearing hat) watch a scene in rehearsal on location in the grounds of the Denham Studios, for "Knight Without Armour," London Films production starring Marlene Dietrich and Robert Donat. Feyder is the director.

Two pictures also were started at Radio. Paul Muni and Miriam Hopkins are starred in "Escadrille." Other names are Wally Albright, Elizabeth Risdon, Paul Guilfoyle, Colin Clive, Donald Barry and Alan Curtis. Direction was assigned to Anatole Litvak. The cast of "Robber Barons," which Al Hall is directing, is headed by Edward Arnold, Cary Grant, Jack Oakie, Frances Farmer, Thelma Leeds and Paul Guilfoyle.

The third company to start two pictures was MGM. The comedy drama, "To the Victor," will present as principal Joseph Calleia, Florence Rice, Ted Healy, Thomas Mitchell, Paul Stanton, Jonathan Hale, Eddie Nugent and Catherine Doucet. Edwin L. Marin is the director. The second production, "Burnt Fingers," being directed by George B. Seitz, will feature Guy Kibbee, Alice Brady, Gene Lockhart, Betty Furness and Stanley Morner.

"Marry The Girl," comedy romance, started at Warner. Under William McGann's direction, it will present Hugh O'Connell, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Teddy Hart, Hugh Herbert and Mary Boland.

At Twentieth Century-Fox "The Last Slaver" went before the cameras. The schedule calling for considerable work both on locations and in the studio, Wallace Beery, Warner Baxter and Peter Lorre are featured with George Sanders, Mary Rogers (Will's daughter), Miles Mander and Francis Ford. Tay Garnett is directing.

Last of the newly started films is Republic's "Old Lady Ironsides." The cast includes Alison Skipworth, Polly Moran, Hope Manning, James Morton, Harry Burns, Donald Cook, Maxie Rosenbloom and Clarence Wilson. Phil Rosen is directing.

Five different companies checked in the five completed pictures. In Columbia's "I Promise To Pay," Chester Morris, Helen Mack and Leo Carillo are featured, supported by Patsy O'Connor, John Gallaudet, Thomas Mitchell, Crawford Weaver and Thurston Hall. D. Ross Lederman directed.

For Paramount release, B. P. Schulberg finished "A Doctor's Diary." It will present George Bancroft, Helen Burgess, John Trent, Ruth Coleman, Ra Hould, Molly Lamond, Sidney Blackmer, Charles Waldron, Frank Puglia, Milburn Stone and Sue Carol. Charles Vidor directed.

Under its direct sponsorship, Paramount finished "Bulldog Drummond Escapes." The names listed in the cast include Ray Milland, Guy Standing, Heather Angel, Reginald Denny, Porter Hall, Fay Holden, E. E. Clive, Walter Kingsford, Pat Kelly, Charles McNaughton, Clyde Coo, Frank Elliott, David Clyde, Doris Lloyd, Zeffie Tilbury and Barry Macollum. James Hogan directed.

Warner completed "Her Husband's Secretary," a domestic problem play. It will feature Warren Hull, Jean Muir, Beverly Roberts, Harry Davenport, Clara Blandick, Stuart Holmes and Pauline Garon. Frank McDonald directed.

"We, The Jury" (tentative title) was finished at Radio. It will present Helen Broderick, Victor Moore, Philip Huston, Louise Latimer, Colleen Claire, Vinton Haworth, Frank M. Thomas, Earle Foxe, Maxine Jennings, Billy Gilbert, Robert McWade, Charles Middleton, Sarah Edwards, George Irving and Leonid Kinsky. Ben Holmes directed.

MGM To Build

An extensive building program, "necessitated by the company's unprecedented production schedule planned for both the current and 1937-1938 season," will be launched immediately at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Hollywood, Louis B. Mayer announced this week.

Six large and modern stages, providing a total of 29 sound stages, will be constructed for simultaneous use and a five-story building will be provided for new camera and still departments, laboratory, sound department, gymnasium, projection rooms, cutting rooms and additional dressing rooms. Various buildings and equipment now in use will be remodeled and expanded.

This statement is not to sell you a picture, but to open your eyes to an opportunity for making extra money.

It's about one of our pictures called "Crack-Up". It has a thrilling story, some of the best acting I've seen in any picture and a climax that left 250 people in our projection room silent for a full moment before they burst into spontaneous applause. They were young men and women of an every-day theatre audience.

When a picture does that, it has a quality that demands the best in your showmanship ability.

I am certain you will realize that its profit possibilities make it worthy of an earnest, extra effort of exploitation on your part in the proper theatres.

LLOYDS' HELD FOR 5TH WEEK AT ASTOR, CARTHAY CIRCLE!

OTTERSON DENIES ERPI SOUND FILM MONOPOLY

Former President, Testifying Before U. S. Commissioner, Says Standards Were Protected

The desire to keep the motion picture industry on a high plane and protect it from discredit was the motivating spirit which prompted Electrical Research Products, Inc., to limit the use of its recording to its own equipment in the early stages of sound development, John E. Otterson, former president of the company, testified before the Federal Communications Commission in New York this week. This was the second phase of its investigation into American Telephone and Telegraph Company, other hearings having been conducted earlier this year.

Samuel Becker, attorney for the commission, tried to draw from Mr. Otterson, who was the only witness, the assertion that the combined efforts of Western Electric Company and Erpi from the inception of the last-named company were to monopolize sound motion picture recordings and sound equipment. Mr. Otterson insisted that Erpi wished only that any and all recording over its equipment maintain a standard compatible with its own products.

Erpi Protecting Rights

Tracing developments in the history of Erpi, starting in 1926 and leading forward, Mr. Becker sought by direct questioning and introduction of documentary evidence to have Mr. Otterson admit the purpose of Erpi was to kill competition at all costs. Mr. Otterson said, however, that Erpi was only insistent on protecting its rights and standards, but meanwhile "we wanted all the business that could be obtained by all legal means," he said.

With masses of documents at his disposal, Mr. Becker then tried to draw from Mr. Otterson the admission that two clauses in the first licensing agreement concluded with producers and exhibitors, on recording and reproducing equipment respectively, were designed principally to foster the control by Erpi of the sound film field. The two clauses were those referring to interchangeability and restriction.

Mr. Becker first said that the restriction clause, which provided that pictures produced with Erpi-licensed recording equipment could be reproduced only on Erpi reproducing equipment, had been a feature of the original contracts. He demanded to know if the real reason for the restrictive clause was to avoid possible competition, and Mr. Otterson replied that it was not.

The commission attorney tried again and again to get the response from Mr. Otterson which he desired, on the question of what he called Erpi's desire to make the sound film field exclusively its own. Mr. Otterson's consistent replies to Mr. Becker's questioning were to the effect that Erpi was interested in obtaining the maximum business of the sound film field "by every legitimate and legal competitive method."

Memoranda, cables, telegrams and letters, involving Mr. Otterson, David Sarnoff, RCA president at the time; Edgar S. Bloom, then president of Western Electric; General James G. Harbord of RKO; Paul Cravath, of Cravath, de Gersdorf, Swaine and Wood, attorneys for RCA, and a number of others, flowed through Mr. Becker's hands as he bore down on the other important point, the socalled interchangeability clause, which provided that Erpi-recorded product could be reproduced on other equipment only if that equipment was equal in quality to that of Erpi.

Defends Clause

Under questioning, Mr. Otterson declared the clause was Erpi's method of protecting the industry from the effect of poor equipment, while Mr. Becker insisted that Erpi consistently refused to take a definite position on interchangeability. Mr. Becker asked what was to determine the quality of other types of equipment, and Mr. Otterson replied it had not been specified.

The uncertainty among exhibitors as to whether they could play all product if they installed other than Erpi reproducing equipment, as a result of the Erpi licensing agreements, Mr. Becker contended, was deliberately stimulated and fostered by Erpi to maintain its position in the field. This Mr. Otterson denied.

Three Phases Covered

The hearing on Tuesday covered three major phases of Erpi's sound equipment operations, in the course of which Becker sought to further substantiate the basic premise of the inquiry that Erpi developed, and strove to maintain, a monopoly of the sound equipment business. The first phase concerned the so-called double royalty provisions of the Erpi license agreements with producers, in the interpretation of which, Mr. Becker sought to point out, Erpi attempted to keep competitive equipment, especially that of RCA, off the market. Mr. Otterson's testimony, continued from Monday, featured this part of the inquiry. The second phase had most specific reference to the cross licensing agreements with RCA, and Mr. Becker sought to draw from John H. Ray, formerly Erpi and Western Electric legal chief, and now A. T. & T. general counsel, the admission that Erpi arranged a licensing settlement with RCA only after RCA had drawn complaint papers in a proposed anti-trust action against Erpi, based on its licensing agreements.

The third and final phase of the day's hearing concerned Erpi's contracts for service, parts and replacements with exhibitors, and during which Mr. Becker quizzed Herbert M. Wilcox. At the close of the session, Mr. Becker had not completed his examination of the former vice-president.

The total gross revenue derived by Erpi from its repair and replacement business on sound film equipment in theatres dropped from $1,627,000 in 1930 to $293,000 in 1932, Mr. Wilcox testified on Wednesday. He said the drop was caused chiefly by the inadequacy in quality and high level in price of Erpi replacement parts.

Schulberg Sees Regulation of Star Broadcasts

The regulation by motion picture producers of the hours during which film players may broadcast must come, is the opinion of B. P. Schulberg, who is in New York for conferences at the Paramount home office. He agreed with the complaint of exhibitors that stars should not be permitted on the air during what are generally known to be the best theatre hours in the evening, but he declared that such broadcasts have no adverse effect on theatre business.

The hour conflicts should be avoided, he declared, because there are "more good air hours than theatre hours" during the day. Mr. Schulberg likened star broadcasts to personal appearances in theatres, expressing the belief that similar to personal appearances, the broadcasts should improve business, if they are well done.

He said he had a two-year contract for release of his product through Paramount, with an option coming up in February, and under the terms he will make eight pictures a year. He plans no color films, declaring that although color eventually will be a common screen medium, it "is not right yet."

Mr. Schulberg will return to Hollywood by plane this week, bringing with him Luli Deste, Austrian player he recently signed and who arrived in Manhattan this week.

Monogram Return To Producing Seen In Stock Purchase

The return of Monogram Pictures to the production field was indicated last week in New York following a meeting of the stockholders and the board of Monogram Pictures Corporation. The stockholders agreed to the repurchase by the company of the outstanding capital stock, except that held by W. Ray Johnston, president of the company. The repurchase plan was revealed at the close of the board meeting, which followed the stockholders' session earlier in the day.

It was indicated that the action taken last week was another step in the course of negotiations for the re-appearance of Monogram. "It is expected that Johnston's new company, Sterling Pictures Corporation, shortly will acquire by purchase the goodwill and assets of Monogram and will use the Monogram trademark for its new product, "a company statement declared."

A special meeting of the board of directors of Sterling will be held, probably some time next week, when a decision relative to the future company name and product trade mark will be made. The statement indicated the possibility of either Monogram-Sterling Pictures Corporation or Monogram Pictures Corporation of Delaware being designated as the company's new name.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Clarence

(Paramount)

Comedy

Based on a book and stage play by Booth Tarkington, "Clarence" is dizzy domestic comedy. Its trend and atmosphere are similar to the amusement content of such pictures as "Six of a Kind" and "Three Cornered Moon."

The story concerns the experiences of a saxophone playing war veteran who becomes a part of the more than slightly mad Wheeler melange. Exactly who or what he is remains a mystery until the climax, but before that point is reached there isn't a single situation arising that Clarence can't handle to the queen's taste. Whether it's repairing the family plumbing, stopping blackmail plots, making love to his employer's wife, breaking up or fostering youthful romances involving younger members of the household, Clarence, whom everybody considers a first class nut, is Johnny on the spot. Straightening out complicated affairs, he marches off about his own business to become an expert on Egyptian archeology.

With the screen play by Seena Owen and Grant Garrett, and George Archainbaud directing, Roscoe Karns is starred as the resourceful and inscrutable Clarence. Eugene Pallette and Spring Byington are Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler. Their son is Johnny Downs, who is in love with Charlotte Wynters, but Johnny once kissed the maid, Inez Courtney, and there's trouble aplenty there for him. The daughter is Eleanore Whitney, who has just arrived at the romantic stage when she's in love with every handsome man she meets. Richard Powell is Miss Courtney's partner in blackmail and Theodore Von Eltz is the mysterious Tobias.

Death in Paradise Canyon

(20th Century - Fox)

Mystery Drama

Although a first glance at the title might indicate that this is a western, such interpretation is not a fact. Dramatic mystery murder is the story's substance. Paradise Canyon, in this case, is the famous Death Valley in California. Once before, in "Greed," produced by Erich von Stroheim, the great desert sink was the background of a production. The public having been made familiar with its forbidding atmosphere via that picture as well as countless stories, cameraman Sidney Wagner has devoted his attentions to photographing the weird locale in all its charm and beauty.

Basically the story told in the production details the amazing drama and terror to which a party of tenderfoot eastern tourists are subjugated during a sojourn in the Valley. Death came to individual members by bullets, poison and from other unfathomable causes. How the mystery was solved and the culprit brought to justice promises to be entertainment of unusual quality.

The story utilized is one written by Phillip Wvlie which originally appeared in American Magazine. The screen play is by Norman Foster, who also is directing.

The production features J. Edward Bromberg, seen in "Sins of Man," "The Mercy Killer" and "Girl's Dormitory"; Betty Furness, currently in "They Wanted to Marry," "Mister Cinderella" and "The President's Mystery," and John Howard Payne, a recruit from radio broadcasting and the English stage, who made his screen debut in "Dodsworth." The supporting cast is composed of wellknown names, listing Victor Kilian, Billy Burrud, Gavin Muir, Gloria Roy, Andrew Tombes, Ivan Lebedeff, John Eldredge, Julius Tannen and Paul McVey.

Secret Valley

(20th Century - Fox)

Drama-Romance

The materials going into this production which presage potential entertainment commercial appeal are: a Harold Bell Wright story, a competent cast, expert direction, high caliber backgrounds and music.

In the yarn a gang of eastern racketeers comes to grips with a corps of hard-riding, quick-shooting westerners. This twist promises to provide plenty of double-barreled action. The romantic contrast, pending a racketeer's runaway bride into the West, makes her one of the objects of contention between the two forces. The comedy relief accompanying the action and rugged drama is of the human humor type. The music includes a presentation of "Home on the Range," a topical romantic love song, and a burlesque Chinese crooning of "Yankee Doodle." Practically all the action takes place in the mountains and valleys of the High Sierras, with Mt. Whitney continually in the background.

The cast features Richard Arlen in the leading role. As leading lady there is a promising newcomer, Virginia Grey. Included in the support are Jack Mulhall, a veteran who again is becoming prominent on the screen, Norman Willis, Sid Taylor, currently in "Born to Dance," Willie Fung, Russell Hicks, Maude Allen and Charles Delaney.

Direction is by Howard Bretherton, who made "King of the Royal Mounted" and "Wild Brian Kent," as well as the initial members of the first Hopalong Cassidy series.

Wright's original was adapted by Paul Franklin, with screen play by Dan Jarrett and Earle Snell. Sol Lesser is producing.

You Only Live Once

(UA-Wanger)

Drama

In addition to reuniting the stars of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," Sylvia Sidney and Henry Fonda, worthy commercial and entertainment value in this production is found in the powerful dramatic story it narrates. It is the story of a criminal who, inspired by the love of a girl who procures his release from prison, tries to reform. Achieving his own dream and that of the girl who has become his wife, the stigma of jail bird is held over him by the public, and when circumstantial evidence makes him a suspect in a sensational crime, he gives himself up on the plea of his wife, who, knowing that he is innocent, is confident of his exoneration. But the stern letter of the law forces his conviction and condemnation to death. On the night of his execution, using a doctor as a shield, even though the wires flash the message that the condemned man is innocent, he escapes, killing a friendly priest while doing so. A murderer now, and the objective of an intensive manhunt, accused of every desperate crime committed, he learns that he is to become a father. The child placed in safe keeping, he and his wife die in a storm of possemen's bullets.

The story is an original screen play by Gene Towne and Graham Baker, done in their typically powerful style. It is being directed by Fritz Lang, the European director who made "Fury" for MGM.

Principal supports to Miss Sydney and Fonda are Barton MacLane, Jean Dixon and William Gargan. The others of the cast was chosen by Walter Wanger, with a particular eye to their adaptability to the various roles they essay. It lists the late Chic Sale, Warren Hymer, Margaret Hamilton, Quinn Williams, Jerome Cowan, John Wray, Jonathan Hale, Ward Bond, Wade Boteler, Henry Taylor, Jean Stoddard and Ben Hall.

A Doctor's Diary

(Paramount-Schulberg)

Drama

Though drama that has potent human interest appeal is the substance of this production, it also tells a compelling love story. As the title indicates, a doctor is the central figure. For background to the direct drama and romance, substantiating atmosphere deals with the peculiar application of professional ethics that influences the relations of surgeons, hospital owners and employees.

A girl dies. A promising young violinist loses his arm. Both tragedies are the result of surgical negligence, and they create a nasty scandal. A young doctor loses his hospital connection, also the girl he loves, when he announces his willingness to testify in behalf of the maimed boy's mother. An epidemic of infantile paralysis breaks out, a disease in which the young doctor is a specialist. Denied hospitalization of his patients in the institution in which they may receive proper attention, he places the health of many ahead of that of one. Shot by the maddened mother for his apparent treachery as he testifies in behalf of his profession, his life is saved by the doctor responsible for the initial scandal, who also promises to restore the boy's useless arm.

Being directed by Charles Vidor, the production is based upon a story by Samuel Ornitz and Joseph Anthony for which David Boehm did the screen play. It features John Trent, who undoubtedly will be seen in "John Meade's Woman" prior to the release of this film, as the doctor. Helen Burgess, seen in "The Plainsman" as Buffalo Bill's wife, is the girl. The supporting cast which B. P. Schulberg selected for this production seems to be of much name strength. It includes George Bancroft, Ruth Coleman, Ra Hould, Molly Lamond, Sidney Blackmer, Charles D. Waldron, Frank Publia, Milburn Stone and Sue Carol.

Alperson Signs Stone

Edward L. Alperson, president of Grand National, has signed Andrew L. Stone as a producer. His initial production will be "Broadway Chiselers" and work is scheduled to start next month.

CENTRAL U.S. PICTURE UNIT IS CONSIDERED

Protests Made Against Flood of "Alphabet" Projects' Films, Reported Due to Ebb Soon

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Consolidation of all motion picture activities of the Federal Government may be proposed at the coming session of Congress.

The suggestion that there be established a central agency for the production of all motion picture films to be made by the various departments and bureaus is an outgrowth of the investigation now being made by a special Senate committee headed by Senator Byrd, of Virginia, into the question of departmental expenditures, which recently turned its attention to the expenditures for motion pictures and other propaganda. The Brookings Institute is cooperating in the work, making a study of motion picture production by the Federal Government.

Proponents of the plan say that by concentrating picture production at one point it would be possible better to control such expenditures. Critics, however, point out that the production of pictures by the permanent establishments is controlled by Congress, which earmarks all appropriations and knows, or should know, what it is giving the various departments for such projects.

In the case of the emergency agencies, it is pointed out, a central picture bureau would have no more control than is now exercised by the comptroller general, who in the past has frequently vetoed expenditures for motion pictures. Where the emergency agencies produce pictures, they do so under conditions which could not be altered by any bureau, unless it was given the authority now vested in the General Accounting Office.

Greater Cost Seen

At the same time, it is asserted, once a motion picture division were organized it would be necessary to keep it busy and it would go to Congress each year for more and more funds to meet the "demands" of the departments.

As things stand now, while several of the departments produce pictures they are, generally speaking, films which are of value to some segment of the country's population, as in the case of the films produced by the Department of Agriculture on matters of importance to the farmer.

The flood of pictures of which complaint has been made has emanated from the emergency agencies—the "alphabet" projects—taking this means of selling their projects to the country. Gradual slowing down of these emergency agencies will start in the near future and will gradually be slowed down and the number of pictures so produced will diminish, and rapidly.

Officials high in Administration circles look upon excessive picture production with dislike, realizing that if the exhibitors are flooded with picture after picture, all advertising the Government, they some day will shut off their screens entirely to such product, and the Government might find itself at a disadvantage should it seek to use the theatres for some worthy purpose. At the same time, they feel that there is not sufficient distribution outside the theatres to make pictures worthwhile.

All these phases of the situation will be duly laid before Congress should it undertake consideration of a bill setting up a picture bureau. The legislation, however, probably would be frowned upon by the President, who now is anxious to reduce rather than increase the number of Government units.

Erpi Names C. L. Stong Sales Promotion Manager

C. L. Stong has been named sales promotion manager, heading a new department, by Electrical Research Products, Inc., in New York. He will report directly to C. W. Bunn, general sales manager, who anticipates a more solid bonding between the efforts of the field sales personnel and the home office by the formation of the new department.

Mr. Stong, originally affiliated with Western Electric, was formerly identified with Erpi's Hollywood field organization and later in Pittsburgh and Detroit as division superintendent.

New Trial Ordered For Erpi in Alaska

Electrical Research Products has been granted a re-trial of its suit against W. B. Gross, proprietor of motion picture theatres in Juneau and Ketchikan, Alaska, by order of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the ninth circuit. The order, reversing the verdict of the U.S. district court for Alaska, division number one, was contained in an opinion written by Circuit Judge Mathews and concurred in by Judges Wilbur and Denman.

The suit was originally brought by Erpi in April, 1931, and brought to trial in January, 1935 for recovery of Western Electric equipment installed in the two theatres because of non-payment of money owed and to recover damages and attorneys' fees. Following a jury trial, the court entered judgment in favor of the defendant, Mr. Gross, for counter claims in the total amount of $58,436, plus attorneys' fees and costs.

In rendering its decision on the appeal from the ruling of the lower court, the Circuit Court of Appeals stated among other things that Erpi had been fully within its legal rights in taking and removing its equipment from the theatres in question and, further, that the lower court's instructions to the jury in respect to the award of damages to the defendant, Mr. Gross, were in error as were other rulings of the court. It was also stated in the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals that the lower court had been in error in refusing the request of Erpi to instruct the trial jury that the evidence clearly showed the defendant to be in arrears for payments due on the leased equipment.

The judgment of the lower court was therefore reversed and a new trial granted.

Will Hays Sees Three-Dimension Films in Offing

Three-dimensional motion pictures, entirely in color within the limits of artistic demand will be seen on every screen as soon as they are technically practicable, Will H. Hays told Associated Press in an interview Monday, in a general discussion of the present status and future of motion pictures.

Self-regulation, that co-operative effort of the industry to "censor" its output before it is manufactured, was termed by Hays the most gratifying step the industry has taken.

It has reached such a degree of perfection in operation, said Mr. Hays, that its future may be definitely charted: A constant surveillance of the Motion Picture Code Authority in enforcing the spirit and letter of the code and continued effort to improve public support of better pictures.

The president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., interviewed in his office, above Fifth avenue in New York, paid high tribute to Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount, who is celebrating his 25th year in the industry.

Referring to color and third dimension, Mr. Hays said every technical and artistic advancement has been made in the direction of making movies more realistic. He added:

"Color plays an important and continuous part in our lives. It is another element of vivid dramatic presentation. It is a stroke of realism which eventually must mean much to motion picture appreciation. We will learn not only to achieve the highest form of naturalness in colors and color combinations, but also the most effective manner of their use."

As with color, so with depth, he said, stressing that in a few recent pictures application of advances in motion picture photography had, in some scenes, created the illusion of depth, greatly heightening the realism.

As for the "gratifying results" of self-regulation and improved product, Hays said weekly attendance at movies in the United States has risen to 80,000,000 from 60,000,000 in the last few years.

UA Planning to Release Thirty

United Artists producers are planning to produce approximately 30 pictures for release during the 1937-38 season, it was reported in New York Monday by George J. Schaefer, general sales manager, on his return from studio conferences in Hollywood.

The schedules are as follows, according to the individual producers: Samuel Goldwyn, eight; David O. Selznick, eight; Walter Wanger, six, and Alexander Korda, six to eight.

Mr. Schaefer said that his company's selling is 40 per cent ahead of deals made at this time last year.

NO NEW FEDERAL TAXES, BUT NOT SO IN STATES

New Taxation Actions in Alabama, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Illinois in 1937

Further assurances that business, including the motion picture, need fear no additional federal taxes during the coming year were voiced this week at Washington by Congressional leaders who shortly will begin preparation of such revenue legislation as will be sought and required at the session starting next month.

But, while the motion picture business need fear no increase in its federal tax burden, it can expect no relief, for the elimination of non-productive taxes which is planned will not include the admission levy.

In states and municipalities there were indications of new tax moves, in addition to those recently introduced or enacted, in Alabama, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Illinois.

With the improvement in industry which has been spreading steadily for some months, the United States Treasury will go into the new year confident that the income returns to be filed March 15 will bring in the heaviest tax revenue since the onset of the depression. No estimates have yet been made as to what the March receipts will be, but officials are confident that they will be surprisingly large, partly as a result of the new corporation taxes which become applicable for the first time.

Payroll Tax Income

In addition, the Government will receive a heavy return from the payroll tax for unemployment compensation, also to be received for the first time, and will begin to get in money from the taxes for old-age pensions. Much of the unemployment tax returns, it is believed, will be retained, since only a few of the states as yet have enacted the legislation under which they can receive a share of the tax. There are no strings on this money, and it can be used by the Treasury for general purposes.

Tax legislation now under consideration by Congressional committees will be aimed chiefly at the plugging up of holes in the administrative provisions of the law and determination of the fate of the socalled nuisance taxes which expire next summer. Several are expected to be dropped because the cost of collection is so high as to leave little or no revenue.

The decision to continue under the present federal tax law, while relieving the fears of business, will necessitate postponement for at least another year of the long-awaited balanced budget. Administration leaders are now agreed that it will be impossible to bring the budget into balance during the coming year, in view of the continued need for relief funds. Much of the emergency spending, however, will be discontinued, and efforts will be initiated to close out some of the emergency agencies, relieving the strain on the Government payroll.

At Montgomery, Alabama, on December 17, the Senate, by a vote of 20 to 13, passed the House-approved one and one-half per cent gross receipt tax on retail sales and amusements, and sent the measure to Governor Bibb Graves for his signature.

Boston Tax Proposed

Exhibitors in Boston are pondering the possible effects of a move to pass a law limiting the tax on real estate to $25. They see an admission tax looming in the background as one way to meet the deficit which would result. The tax move initiative petition already has been signed by enough voters to insure its consideration by the legislature.

The city council of Ocean City, N. J., has adopted on first reading a revised mercantile license ordinance, under which motion picture theatres will be compelled to pay $100 each in license fees, as compared with only $5 at present. The purpose of the ordinance, which also provides increased fees for other businesses and is believed to be the most stringent of any in effect in nearby coast resorts, is said to be not only to control business but to raise $10,000 to $20,000 for city advertising. Revenue from the license fees, it is understood, will be strictly earmarked for use in newspaper, magazine, booklet and radio advertising.

Governor Henry Horner at Springfield, Ill., has signed the five companion bills which extend the state's three per cent sales tax to May 1, and determine the manner in which the taxes shall be paid. The tax has been netting the state $3,000,000 a month in revenue.

Columbia Acquires Four New Serials

Columbia Pictures this week closed its deal with Louis Weiss of Stage and Screen Attractions, Inc., for the production of four serials. The first will star Frank Buck; the second, Captain Frank Hawks. While no star is mentioned for the third and fourth, it was stated that one of the serials will be called "The Secret of Treasure Island." The other will be an historical film built around "Wild Bill Hickok."

In commenting on the deal, Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia, said:

"Recognizing the fact that there is a large juvenile market for films of this nature which contain the elements of action, thrills and romantic excitement, our study of the situation further revealed that this market could be broadened considerably by designing these chapter plays to include adult men and women appeal.

"With this thought in mind, it will be seen that these new productions will not be limited to Saturday bookings, but will earn a place on any feature program."

God's Country and the Woman

(Warner Brothers)

Romantic Drama

Adapted from a James Oliver Curwood novel, the theme, the quality of screen play, acting, direction and production effects endows this picture with a stirring dramatic quality. Essentially the story is one of mental, romantic and physical conflict. It moves at a steady, attention-holding pace, with its tense drama, appealing love interest and laugh-provoking comedy. Additionally thrill action is inserted in the spots where it functions most efficiently.

A story of lumber men and women, it is localed in the North Woods, the scenic values of which are accentuated by the artistic use of Technicolor. In gist it tells of how a gay playboy was made a man, and a woman who was more a man than she was a woman was made a real woman. The plot is well developed, with dialogue and action smoothly blended. An entertaining picture because it treats of conditions and situations which ordinary folks understand, it also has more than usual exploitation value.

Disgusted with his brother's irresponsible mode of living, forceful and avaricious lumber baron Jeff Russett orders his philandering brother Steve home from Europe to a job in the lumber mills. Possessed of no love for a humdrum lumberman's life, Steve, attempting to escape, lands in the camp of Jo Barton, stern-minded woman competitor, whom Jeff has vowed to drive out of business. With the atmosphere alternately tensely dramatic and gayly comic, romance is the only thing that Steve has in mind when he meets this masculine woman. Forced to undergo backbreaking toil and the taunts and abuses of his rough coworkers, Steve, who has kept his identity secret, eventually comes to learn of his brother's vicious plot. Having in a measure aroused Jo's feminine romantic instincts, Steve steals a supply train and rides it through his brother's barricade to the relief of the starving camp. In doing so his identity becomes known, and the reward for his heroic adventure is a brusk order to leave the camp, or else.

Back working with Jeff, sore because he could not make a woman out of this strange woman, Jo's winter cut of lumber is prevented from reaching market by a log jam created by Jeff's minions and Jo's treacherous worker Bullhead. Ready to acknowledge defeat, Jo comes to Jeff willing to make a deal. When Jeff gloats, Steve turns into a man of action. Rushing to Jo's camp, he arms the workers and as a pitched battle is waged between the rival lumber crews, he succeeds in dynamiting the log jam in a thrilling and exciting spectacle sequence. The climax of the story has Jeff thanking Jo for making a man of Steve, and Jo thanking Steve for making a woman of her.

"God's Country" is one of those unique features that crop up every once in a while—a compelling man's picture and an intriguing woman's attraction. Dealing in elements of strong interest to both sexes, it is acted by George Brent, Beverly Roberts, Robert Barrat, Alan Hale, Barton MacLane, Billy Bevan, Roscoe Ates and El Brendel principally, in a manner to capture general attention. Many novel twists have been introduced in the dramatic, romantic and comedy content of the story.

Previewed in Warner Hollywood Theatre. Audience reaction indicated general satisfaction.—Gus McCarthy.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Based upon the novel by James Oliver Curwood. Screen play by Norman Reilly Raine. From the story by Peter Milne and Charles Belden. Directed by William Keighley. Assistant director, Chuck Hansen. Photographed by Tony Gaudio. Art director, Carl Jules Weyl. Film editor, Jack Killifer. Unit manager, Al Alborn. P. C. A. Certificate No. 2357. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 85 minutes. Release date, January 16, 1937. General audience classification.

One in a Million

(20th Century-Fox)

Dramatic Musical Comedy

A winter sport picture, this is also a light dramatic musical comedy, the appeal of which is not restricted to any topical time. It features the world's champion woman figure skater, Sonja Henie. Not only is she the essence of form and grace on skates, but further, in her screen debut, she demonstrates other talents and abilities, promising to become a screen personality. While this picture elects to concentrate primary interest in Miss Henie, by no means is she the only unusual value in the film. Lavishly produced in a winter setting in Switzerland, it moves to the tune of pleasing comedy, engaging music and ice skate dancing; contains slight but sufficient romantic content and in the climax takes on a human interest dramatic twist. It supports Miss Henie with such capable performers as Adolphe Menjou, Arline Judge, Ned Sparks, Jean Hersholt and Don Ameche, and brings into its action the clowning of the Ritz Brothers and presents another newcomer, the comic harmonica playing Borrah Minevitch in hilarious specialties.

In the yarn, threadbare show promoter Tad Spencer, his wife Billie and their girls' jazz band are having a tough time to eat and keep warm in the snowbound Alps. As a slight thread of romance involves newspaper man Harris and Greta Muller, both he and Spencer come to realize she is a marvellous skater. Tricky Spencer, always on the alert to make a dollar, inveigles the innocent Swiss miss into participating in a winter carnival. But behind it all, her father Heinrich, who once was deprived of Olympic honors by the taint of professionalism, is training Greta to win the Games' skating championship. As the combined romantic and dramatic theme is contrasted by the specialty comedy of the Ritzes and Menjou, as well as the legitimate story stuff contributed by Billie and Harris' stooge Simpson, Greta goes on to win the title. Then, when Spencer learns that Greta is not going to be the star of his ice carnival troupe that will make millions for all in America, he threatens to expose her as a professional. But as Harris explains the circumstances to the Games' secretary, Greta is cleared of all charges and deciding to turn pro, she is presented in Madison Square Garden in a spectacular rhythmic ice skating ballet.

Made up of the entertainment and commercial elements that mean something to patrons and showmen, it can be anticipated that "One in a Million" more than holds its own at the box office. Featuring a new but well publicized name and presenting a group of supporting players who in recent pictures have won public favor, embellishing the film with high quality production values and presenting a new kind of music dance supported spectacle, it seems to be an exploitation feature.

They Wanted to Marry

(RKO Radio)

Comedy

Lively comedy of the never to be taken seriously brand, this looks to be that kind of amusement pleasing to the rank and file. The cast doesn't include any magnetic names. Production values are adequate, but not of the grade to send anyone away talking about the amount of money spent on the film. The story isn't entirely new. But as it is intelligently directed and acted with a spirited enthusiasm by a mixture of youthful and veteran players, it is that sound type of amusement that regular theatre goers may enjoy without exerting too much mental strain.

In idea the story follows the newspaperman-rich girl theme, pepped up by many fresh angles. News photographer Jim is hounded and browbeaten by his editor, Clark, who is more than anxious to get photographs of wealthy, publicity-hating Mr. Hunter. Endeavoring to fill his assignment, Jim undergoes many harassing experiences. The occasion of the wedding of Hunter's daughter, Helen, appears to provide Jim and his carrier pigeon aide the long sought chance to photograph Hunter. Then the real fun begins. Hunter, discovering the presence of the unwelcome guest in his house, starts the ball rolling. As butler Stiles contributes measurably to the merriment, daughter Sheila comes to the rescue of Jim. From then on, with plenty of amusing and exciting action, situations and dialogue, the film is lively fun. Attracted to this peculiar young man, Sheila is his companion in a series of news covering escapades that keep the pair in and out of jail.

Fast moving, the few shortcomings in the film are more than compensated for, particularly for younger patrons, by the enjoyable twists the story takes and the gay manner in which the players go about their work.

College Holiday

Comedy with Music

Such fun makers as Jack Bennie, Gracie Allen, George Burns, Mary Boland, Martha Raye, Ben Blue and Etienne Girardot are in the picture. A quartet of humorists, John P. McEvoy, Harland Ware, Henry Meyers and Jay Gorney, wrote the story. Musical content is the combined product of Ralph Rainger and Leo Robins, and Burton Lane and Ralph Freed. The spectacular dance effects were arranged by LeRoy Prinz. Frank Tutile, who has had considerable experience handling musical comedy material, directed.

But as the film unfolds, it looks very much as if the players tossed the prepared script out of the window, chose to ignore the director's guidance and go about dishing up a banquet of frolicsome fun, lilting music, lavish production features and typical personal characterizations, in short as if they went about the business of making the show in the manner they thought the public would like best to see. In fact, Benny has one line that reads something like "Whenever the story interfered with art, we didn't compromise, we got rid of both." The resulting fun means a good hour and a half's mirthful merriment for any kind of audience, any place, and time.

If there is a story, and in relation to what happens nobody who sees it cares whether there is one or not, it has to do with what happens to Jack Benny when Mary Boland, who owns the mortgage on his decrepit hotel, gets an idea. Miss Boland, aided and abetted by Giradot, has a sudden thought to turn the institution into a modern eugenics experimental station. Benny satisfies the yearning by rounding up a regiment of perfect physical specimens from boy and girl colleges. This brings on some sort of romance between Marsha Hunt and Leif Erikson, and as far as rhyme or reason is concerned that's all the story there is. From then on it turns into apparently what is a players' idea of what a show should be. With Benny master of ceremonies and with Ben Blue continually running in and out, it's high grade specialty stuff. There's Burns and Allen contributing to the gayety. The tip-off as to their part comes when Gracie, giving George goosepimples, drives a Roman chariot through crowded traffic. Miss Hunt and Erikson lead the singing numbers. Eleanore Whitney, Olympe Bradna and Louis DaPron are in the forefront of the dancing. Miss Raye clowns. The whole melange have a good time among themselves and provide a good time for anyone. Sometimes they are up there themselves, just as often the whole gang is together, but always the laughs come thick and fast.

Essentially a novelty treated variety show, there doesn't seem to be much question, however, that it is of the material which leads to strong box office returns. Wide open for all sorts of unique interest creating exploitation, the picture really gives exhibitors a comedy feast to sell that should inspire sparkling campaigns.

Stolen Holiday

(Warner Brothers)

Dramatic Romance

This is both a production exploitation feature and an interesting dramatic romance. With the name of Kay Francis as the initial value to intrigue general audiences, the film is distinctively a woman's picture in two departures. First, the story is about a woman and consequently is of direct interest to women from an entertainment standpoint. Secondly, as Miss Francis several times is presented in a stunning series of ultra modern costumes and gowns, the picture is a fashion show of unique caliber. Production substance of the film, inasmuch as a great deal of its action is laid within a modiste's shop, legitimately makes possible the presentation of a fashion show as an extra inducement to feminine attendance, in which most the exclusive shops in any town should be willing to cooperate.

Though the film runs to unusual length and major interest is concentrated on three persons, Miss Francis, Claude Rains and Ian Hunter, the romantic and dramatic plot is engaging. It is localed in Paris. Nicole Picot, a dress model, rises to a prominent place in the business world through the financial support of Orloff. Appreciation of his help brings on affection, but not quite love. Following a delightful interlude on the Riviera, Nicole, during a stolen holiday from Orloff, falls in love with British diplomat Wayne. Returning to Paris, Nicole not only discovers that she is being forced into a loveless marriage but also that Orloff is an audacious crook, posing behind a veil of respectability. Disappointed but nevertheless loyal to him, Nicole sticks with Orloff until he is killed by police. After reimbursing those who have suffered by his knavery, Nicole, once more reduced to the status of mannequin, finds love with Wayne.

As all the characters perform with sincerity and conviction the show has a character of realism that seems certain to leave an impression. Entertainment in its own right for mature audiences, it has extra value as a feminine exploitation feature.

Stowaway

(20th Century - Fox)

Comedy, Romance

Any speculation as to Shirley Temple's ability to retain her hold upon audiences is answered with the assurance reflected by this picture that her prestige continues undiminished. "Stowaway" has what it takes for the box-office. Miss Temple is as appealing and engaging as ever, and what is more to the point is that an excellent vehicle for her practically unlimited talents was chosen.

The story allows the child star full latitude. Shirley is something more than just an appealing little girl; she strikingly demonstrates she is a swell actress to boot. Whether she is unconcernedly spieling off Chinese, quoting the phrases taught her by the Honorable Sun Lo, or imitating Eddie Cantor and Al Jolson or reeling off three and four syllable words in a courtroom scene, Shirley is vitally alive to the task set for her.

Whereas the picture belongs to Miss Temple, she doesn't monopolize it, and therein lies, conversely, part of the charm of the production, for an excellent cast has been gathered around her and they all have a goodly share of the screen. Robert Young, Alice Faye, Eugene Pallette, Helen Westley, Arthur Treacher and J. Edward Bromberg constitute an enviable cast of stars and character actors to have in support and in this Shirley is fortunate.

As Ching-Ching, the orphan daughter of slain missionaries, Shirley absorbs the wisdom of Sun Lo while living in Sangchow. Forced to flee, because of the impending arrival of a Chinese bandit, Shirley finds herself in Shanghai with no money, no friends, but a ravenous appetite. She meets Young, a rich playboy, who is on a pleasure tour with a group of friends. Shirley becomes a stowaway when Young's car, in which she is sleeping in the rumble seat, is stowed on board a steamer.

Shirley winds up in the stateroom occupied by Miss Faye and her mother-in-law to be, Helen Westley. Shirley brings together her "two best friends," Young and Miss Faye, and a romance is in the offing but is short lived when Miss Faye's fiance appears when the steamer docks. Miss Faye breaks the engagement and marries Young. They adopt Shirley to save her from an orphanage. A marriage in name only, Miss Faye goes to Reno to have it abrogated. Amid court proceedings Shirley convinces the litigants that they really love each other.

In every department "Stowaway" is excellent

(E. N. I. C., Rome)

Romantic Drama

Lieutenant Mariò Ludovisi is in love with Cristiana, an aristocratic young woman. Deceived by her, he enlists in the Meharist Squadron in Libya. The new life at first seems unsuitable to him, but taking example from his captain he pulls himself together and becomes a real soldier. The captain dies in action and Mariò takes his place. Cristiana comes back to him, but he has forgotten her and determined to remain in the desert with his soldiers.

The highlights of the film are the desert scenes. The camel soldiers and their native costumes provide fantastic shots.

More Than a Secretary

(Columbia)

Comedy, Romance

The relations of a secretary to her boss constitute the theme of this production, which presents still another version of that well worn plot, albeit the picture is light and gay and has its moments of charm. That these moments are not twice as numerous is more the fault of the story than the acting or directing, but still a fault. The difference is probably in the ratio, as good is to very good.

The emphasis is on comedy and comedy situations. These situations are for the most part novel and good for laughs, which is a tribute to the directing by Alfred Green, especially so in considering the thin story material he had to work with. The title has a natural appeal to women.

A cast of big names and notable character actors round out the assets of the production. Jean Arthur, seen as the feminine lead in two or three of the year's outstanding comedy attractions, plays the secretary. George Brent, as the health crazed editor of a health magazine, makes the most of his role. Lionel Stander, Ruth Donnelly and Reginald Denny are all competent foils for the main characters.

Miss Arthur and Miss Donnelly run a business school for secretaries. Brent is hard to please in the secretarial line. Miss Arthur, after several of the girls have failed to please him, goes to see him herself. The upshot is that she takes the job. Brent, a bug on health, has the entire office staff doing calisthenics at regular intervals, and has milk and wholewheat bread brought in for lunch.

Miss Arthur humanizes Brent to the extent that he makes her an associate editor and hires a nitwit blonde for a secretary. The magazine had been losing circulation rapidly until Miss Arthur takes control and enlivens it with pictures of good looking girls to take the place of the athletic type male. Brent in the meantime is having himself a time. Miss Arthur resigns. Brent reaches her through a stunt in the health magazine, with the usual ending.

Jungle Jim

Action Serial

Based on the wellknown newspaper cartoon feature by Alex Raymond, this picturized version of the hectic adventures of the popular hero Jungle Jim offers much of the excitement of the original. Primarily tuned to the perennial taste of the juvenile appetite for action and still more action, the story continuity, nevertheless, has decided appeal for the adult who inclines toward screen fare of the action-thrill genre. The established popularity of the cartoon hero affords the exhibitor rich opportunity of drawing patrons' interest.

In chapters full of fast paced action Grant Withers in the title role of Jungle Jim is bent on the double mission of finding the murderer of his friend "Red" Callahan and the whereabouts of an heiress who as a child was wrecked upon the shores of Africa. Withers runs across the path of a sort of feminine Tarzan, Betty Jane Rhodes. As the Lion Goddess, Betty Jane wields a powerful influence over the native tribes. In reality she is, of course, the missing heiress. At first enemies, they soon become fast friends. Complicating the issue is the presence of Bryant Washburn as Bruce Redmond, another claimant to the fortune and determined to put pretty Betty Jane out of the way.

The supporting cast includes Raymond Hatton as Malay Mike, friend to Jungle Jim and good for a laugh or two each chapter, and Evelyn Brent, Henry Brandon, Selmer Jackson and Al Bridge, aiding the innumerable natives to make the way of Withers and Miss Rhodes far from peaceful. Running time, 20 minute each chapter, 12 chapters to serial.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 30

(Universal)

Newsy

Among the items of interest and cause of wonderment included in the newsy issue of oddities are shots of a natural spring that sprouts liquid tasting like lemonade or equally good; two persons who pursue such strange hobbies as the collecting of elephant miniatures and the breeding of minks; a young man with a sure hand who insists on using a dangerously sharp looking woodsman ax instead of the more prosaic safety razor for his morning shave; and in conclusion an exhibition of remarkable animal training wherein a chow dog, a collection of kittens and a set of birds, all natural enemies of one another, frolic through a set of tricks with all the appearance of being the best of friends. This issue abounds with entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.

Singing Wheels

(RKO Radio)

Interesting

A variety of automobile racing from the soapbox derby to the professional skill as displayed at the recent Vanderbilt Cup Races is the exciting material offered in this Bill Corum sport short. The thrill and danger to be found in the sight of speeding cars wheezing madly around the course like silver bullets are excellently screened and made contagious. For the fans' delight there are included some album shots of several racing kings from the past years. The one fault of the subject is Mr. Corum's monotonously matter of fact style of narrative. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Pups' Christmas

(MGM)

Timely

Particularly appropriate for the current Yuletide season is this excellent little subject in color. When the two puppies grow inquisitive as to what Santa might have brought them, things begin to pop in more ways than one. There is much noise as well as fun when the pups become involved with runaway trains, speeding autos and expoding toy tanks. The sequence in which the tiny canines encounter the big calico hound is especially hilarious. Running time, 8 minutes.

The Chesapeake Bay Retriever

Good

For the sport fans, the dog lovers, and the audiences who always welcome an enjoyable and different short, this subject will hold decided appeal. Showing the course of training through which these animals are paced to make them the cleverest of bird dogs, the composition makes much of the human attractiveness of the four-legged wonders. The last portion of the continuity is a pictorial exhibition of the amazing skill of the canines. Running time, 9 minutes.

Cats in a Bag

Ordinary

The quality of entertainment in this short Paul Terry-Toon cartoon is but ordinary. The plot, what little there is, is of a pattern style and concerns the woes of Puddy the Pup with a litter of mischievous kittens. Rescued from a cold and wintry night, the cats proceed to harass Puddy, their benefactor, and with a great deal of nonsense and noise they do their best to upset the peace of a quiet and well ordered household. Perhaps it will amuse the youngsters. Running time, 6½ minutes.

Civic Leader Decries Screen Censorship

"Film censorship leads to the suppression of a free press and free speech. Censorship has always been the weapon of autocracy. It suppresses free opinion."

Joseph M. Price, chairman of the board of trustees of the City Club of New York and active for many years in New York civic and political affairs, expressed that opinion this week following his election to the executive committee of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures.

BRILLIANT

EASTMAN Super X won its first triumphs through remarkable adaptability to special situations. When it proved its superiority in all situations, it became an unparalleled find for the industry. Today it regularly runs the whole gamut of black-and-white cinematography with brilliant success. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. ADDRESS
~~MAJESTIC THEATRE~~
AUCKLAND
NEW ZEALAND.

August 4th. 1936.

The Publisher,
Motion Picture Herald,
Quigley Publishing Company,
Rockefeller Center,
NEW YORK CITY. U.S.A.

Dear Mr Quigley,

Will you please forward us a copy of your "Motion Picture Almanac" (1936-37) for which we enclose the necessary money.

Whilst on the point of writing you we would very much like to tell you how much we appreciate your trade magazine: "The Motion Picture Herald", which we always find of the greatest possible use in our theatre business.

As we have been in the business since it was a "business" at all, in this faraway country "down under", we have watched, with interest, how your "Herald" has gradually developed into the finely produced edition it is to-day. If you require any information on the picture business in New Zealand, at any time, we will be delighted to do our best - and when we tell you that we have been actually screening motion pictures since 1906 (first as a travelling unit) we should be able to. With every good wish,

Yours sincerely,
Henry Hayward, Phil Hayward
Phil Hayward,

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 50

Bluebook School Question No. 50 was: (A) Tell us why a really good workman never blames his tools. (B) What do you regard as the chief two maintenance requirements? (C) What is the difference between a parallel and series circuit? (D) What are harmonics?

The following made acceptable answers: S. Evans and C. Rau; D. H. Danielson; B. DeVietti; G. E. Doe; W. C. Brown; W. Limmroth; C. Oldham; J. R. Prater; H. Edwards; R. R. Lee; H. B. Smith; S. O. Sears; L. Cimikoski; O. H. Schmidt; M. and J. Devoy; R. A. Hooker; C. Champkey; C. L. Loft; W. H. Edmonds; R. and K. Wells; F. Barkey; J. Weiser; C. Lonie; R. E. Adams; L. F. Hayes; J. A. Zachitz; W. H. Edmonds; J. Wentworth; G. N. Guidotti; E. N. Solomon; A. L. Cooper; H. Lathrope and C. H. Lowrie; C. and S. E. Gay; C. Hawkens; T. W. Wilson; H. P. Richardson; C. L. Davis, R. V. Manning, and H. T. Plum; L. Greenhouse; W. N. Bolton and G. Lantry; D. Morgan; T. H. Morton, F. H. and L. Klar; T. L. Redhouse; B. B. Donaldson; U. S. Logan; T. T. Golley; D. Pollock; F. E. Dorp, R. Dennis and H. A. Aims; M. F. Robinson and L. A. Beachwood; P. and L. Felt; C. B. and L. M. Traxler; D. L. Johnson; R. R. Jacobs and B. B. Hornstein; H. L. Lilly; G. Caldwell; B. and M. Walker; P. F. Maxwell; L. and W. R. Matthews and T. R. Tomlinson; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; J. G. Brown; H. T. Tood and L. E. Dodson; J. K. Robinson; C. L. Mosier; T. L. Brown; L. B. Jones, H. W. Matthews and J. R. Davidson; F. L. and L. Savlor; H. D. Stonybrook; D. Davis and F. M. Brown; F. L. Birch; G. T. Jones and A. Leonard; O. Hunt; H. J. Abernathy and R. Tompkins; D. and W. Porter; B. L. Lasser; S. D. Manning and W. L. Bancroft; E. and G. E. Lomax; B. L. Sanderson; W. R. Baxter and R. N. Davis; R. R. Robbins and W. Winkle; D. H. Purcell; E. L. Stanford; L. B. Masters; S. Q. Mallaby.

(A) S. O. Sears says, "A good workman always provides himself with good tools, therefore when anything goes wrong he knows it is himself. The good workman regards his work one way; the poor workman another. The really good workman puts his heart and mind into his work. He hardly thinks about his tools, save to protect them from harm and repair them when, through accident, harm is done."

W. C. Brown replies briefly and well, as follows: "The good workman never blames his tools because he selects only those of good quality and keeps them in good condition. He will obtain all the tools required to take care of any and all jobs that may be legitimately imposed upon him."

S. Evans and C. Rau say, "A really good workman provides himself with the proper kind of tools of good design and quality. He keeps them in good condition. He therefore has no reason ever to blame his tools."

B. DeVietti says, "The good workman never blames his tools because he is the type of person who insists upon tools of good quality, kept in good condition and sufficient in number and type to fill all his needs."

(B) G. E. Doe replies, "Is there more than one chief requirement? Does not good maintenance, in its true sense, mean such maintenance as will enable the equipments, separately and as a whole, to operate at just as nearly as possible 100 per cent of its possible efficiency? And does not that include 100 per cent of all requirements?"

L. Cimikoski says, "(1) Such up-keep as will insure trouble-free operation at all times. (2) Operation at the lowest cost possible without risk of injury to either visual or acoustic results."

H. B. Smith says, "In my opinion the two chief good maintenance requirements are, first, periodic inspection and prompt correction of all faults found; second, when any fault or damage is corrected, do the job right—slipshod repair work is the seat of much trouble."

(C) From C. B. and L. M. Traxler comes the one reply I selected at once as best, out of many excellent answers. They say:

"The difference is simple and quite easy to describe, or so it seems to us. Parallel connection is one that permits the operation of any and all elements thus connected to supply their full individual capacity in amperage to the circuit, if the elements be of the generative type, or to oppose their individual, separate resistance to the voltage if they be of the resistive type. The effect of this connection in the first named type is to increase current volume (amperage); the effect in the case of the second is to increase resistance."

(D) J. R. Prater answers, "Harmonics are secondary sound that accompany the fundamental tone produced by a vibrating object. They are caused by small portions of the vibrating object vibrating at much higher frequency than does the object as a whole, thus superimposing upon the fundamental tone a secondary one. It is the harmonics that make it possible to distinguish between the tones of, for example, different instruments or voices producing the same fundamental note. It is of high importance that sound equipment be able to record and reproduce harmonics faithfully for the reason that many fundamental sounds have not merely one, but several harmonics, which must be recorded and reproduced faithfully, else the sound will lack naturalness."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 54

(A) What is the temperature of the crater floor of an electric arc?

(B) Explain why current will not flow until the carbons are in actual physical contact and will flow after they have been contacted and then separated a considerable distance.

(C) Is special treatment necessary for each of the several arc light sources available for projection? Explain.

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

C. Hawkens says, "Harmonics are overtones, the frequencies of which are multiples of the original tone. Their effect is to add to the sound what musical experts term timbre, which is what we common folks term quality. Only but very few instruments produce pure tone, without harmonics. The ordinary tin whistle is one. The tuning fork is another."

O. H. Schmidt says, "Harmonics are secondary vibrations producing sounds higher in frequency and pitch than the fundamental sound by means of which they were produced. Their cause is the inability of most sound producing instruments to vibrate with the true, fundamental sound only."

And that's that for Question No. 50. But, say, did I forget to wish you all Merry Christmas last week? Well, here's getting a Happy New Year in on time. And many of 'em.

Government Studies Storage for Films

Foreseeing future widespread use of motion picture films for reference and record purposes, the National Bureau of Standards in Washington is making a study of the care of such films, which will involve upon librarians problems of a nature they have not heretofore encountered.

Reporting on the problem, C. G. Weber and John R. Hill of the bureau's staff point out that the film used for records is of the safety type, and is no more inflammable than books, hence offers no new problems in fire protection. Safety film, however, is quite sensitive to moisture changes and is brittle when dry, so that air conditioning to regulate the moisture content will be required for satisfactory service.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

DEVIL'S SQUADRON: Richard Dix, Karen Morley—Good story, but my patrons seem to be tired of air pictures.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LAWLESS RIDERS: Ken Maynard—Many like Ken, and carry memories of "Strawberry Roan." He's sure-fire for weekends at the box office. Think I'll get a cowboy outfit, they like westerns so well.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MEET NERO WOLFE: Edward Arnold—Entertaining detective story; good bill for Saturday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—We brought "Deeds" back for a return engagement and personally recommended the show as the best picture for 1936. A big house resulted and everybody more than satisfied. Played December 5.—C. W. Mills Co., Inc., Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MYSTERIOUS AVENGER: Charles Starrett, Joan Perry—In spite of cold weather and plenty of snow, we did well for this western. Satisfied. Played November 28.—C. W. Mills Co., Inc., Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Madge Evans—Remember "The Music Goes 'Round?" This is the nearest I've seen to it for a long while. It is a much better picture, but the hit-songs are too good for the picture. The hit-songs do so much ballyhooing that the people are deceived and after they see it, the word gets around; you know what. Played November 29-December 1.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

TWO-FISTED GENTLEMAN: James Dunn—No cheers and no complaints. They seemed to rate it acceptable.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

First National

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown—Perfect entertainment and good box office for my town.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

GOLDEN ARROW, THE: Bette Davis, George Brent—Fair picture; title has no relation to the story. Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HEARTS DIVIDED: Marion Davies, Dick Powell—Nice picture; pleased a small crowd.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

TWO AGAINST THE WORLD: Humphrey Bogart, Beverly Roberts—A drab tragic little picture using the theme of "Five Star Final" if my memory is correct, but instead of using the tabloids as the horrible example they made the radio the villain of the piece. This has very little to offer as entertainment.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Grand National

IN HIS STEPS: Eric Linden, Cecilia Parker—Here is one that every exhibitor should play and boost to the limit. We have never played a picture that gave more universal satisfaction than this one. Did above average business second day. Good for three days in any town. If Grand National can keep this up, they are in the big money. Played November 29-30.—H. H. Daniels, Nu-Era Theatre, Oswego, Kan. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FURY: Sylvia Sidney, Spencer Tracy—Very strong picture; aroused quite a few comments.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

FURY: Sylvia Sidney, Spencer Tracy—A very interesting story of a boy who was about to get married and on his way to see his sweetheart was stopped and held in jail for questioning about a recent assault in the neighborhood. The local citizens took it upon themselves to take the law in their hands. Being unable to get their prisoner, they burned the jail down. Spencer Tracy, the accused, escaped and appeared at court in front of the gang leaders of the mob. Sylvia Sidney played well as the sweetheart of Spencer Tracy. This picture carries a real moral and should be shown where lynchings are prevalent. Did above average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor—A splendid attraction, but did not do the business we expected it would. Running time, 102 minutes. Played November 29-December 1.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE: Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck—What few people saw this picture liked it, but no drawing power here. Maybe we played it too late! If this be true the blame is not with us. Running time, 80 minutes. Played December 13-14.—Cliff F. Deane, Dunbar Theatre, Dunbar, W. Va. General patronage.

LIBELED LADY: Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—This picture is a great show. The stars will draw at the box office and the story and direction will hold the picture up. William Powell's fishing sequence will make any audience roar. Played November 15-17.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

LOVE ON THE RUN: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford—Every bit as good as "Libeled Lady." Slightly "screwy" in places, but the clever direction and acting pull it through to make laugh hits with the audience. Some parts even funnier than Powell's fishing scene in "Libeled Lady." Played December 13-15.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

PICCADILLY JIM: Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans—A little too much dialogue to suit my average patron, although it was very well produced and this type of story required more than the average amount of dialogue, so altogether would say it was okay. Business fair.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Splendid, but high class musicals don't go here and business not as good as expected on thic picture. Played November 20-23.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Can. Country patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO: Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald—A remarkable picture, especially the earthquake scenes.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SPEED: Wendy Barrie, James Stewart—Fair entertainment; but not b. o. pull.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

TARZAN ESCAPES: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—I never did like "Tarzan" pictures, this this one is certainly different. Everyone liked it and told their friends about it. Even the women flocked to see it. Be sure to advertise it as all new and different, and stand behind the picture and it will hold you up. Running time, 89 minutes. Played December 10-12.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

THREE WISE GUYS: Robert Young—Good average entertainment.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Burns and Allen—We did not do a big business with this one, but those who came liked it very much.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West—Poor. If Mae cannot write better stories for herself, she should stay out of pictures. Running time, 79 minutes. Played December 6-7.—W. M. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

HIDEAWAY GIRL: Shirley Ross, Martha Raye, Robert Cummings—Will get by, but nothing wonderful. Audience about divided equally on satisfaction. Some like Martha Raye and some do not like her. Personally, we like her stuff. Business average.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

HOPALONG CASSIDY RETURNS: Bill Boyd—You can't go wrong on this one. Played December 1.—S. A. Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Inc., Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

JUNGLE PRINCESS, THE: Ray Milland, Dorothy Lamour—Just the kind of a story they eat up in a small town. Just as good as any of the Tarzan pictures. Wonderful business.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

MY AMERICAN WIFE: Francis Lederer, Ann Sothern—A fine show and it did the trick—and think it put Lederer in better standing with my patrons. Played December 1.—S. A. Kimball, Cornish Theatres, Inc., Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby—Just the kind of show that enables an exhibitor to stay in business. Nothing better for the box office. Running time, 85 minutes. Played December 3-5.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby, Frances Farmer—Excellent picture to good business. Recording bad. Played November 27-30.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Can. Country patronage.

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER: Ralph Bellamy, Katherine Locke—A fine show that held up in spite of a high school operetta. Played December 11-12.—S. A. Kimball, Cornish Theatres, Inc., Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS, THE: Fred MacMurray, Jean Parker—The allocation would indicate this to be an epic of some kind; but as pictures go, it is just a little-above-average western. However, out here where westerns are in great demand, we are sorry there aren't more like it. Running time, 99 minutes. Played November 27-28.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

Republic

COUNTRY GENTLEMEN: Olsen and Johnson—Just fair for a double bill. Running time, 65 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

HARVESTER, THE: Alice Brady—This picture might have been big box office and entertainment, but it missed fire.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

RIDE, RANGER, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—I consider this equal to any of these stars' pictures. They wisely gave Smiley Burnette more footage, which provides more fun, which also helps make this series more popular. Business was above average; of course, it was on a double bill, but this did its full share in bringing them in.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THOUSAND DOLLARS A MINUTE, A: Roger Pryor—Speedy and entertaining comedy.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

LET'S SING AGAIN: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta —A very good picture which brought very favorable comment, but did only fair at our box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAKE WAY FOR A LADY: Anne Shirley, Herbert Marshall—Fair little picture; good for some laughs. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 1.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

MAKE WAY FOR A LADY: Anne Shirley, Herbert Marshall—This picture broke all records—for walkouts. Perhaps they didn't appreciate it, but would have appreciated more if we hadn't run it. Played December 12.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

YELLOW DUST: Richard Dix, Leila Hyams—Very good satisfaction to normal business. Played November 21.—C. W. Mills Co., Inc., Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

AMBASSADOR BILL (Re-Issue): Will Rogers—We were fortunate in having excellent weather for this feature and did better than average business. Our patrons still want to see and hear Will Rogers. Played November 25-26.—C. W. Mills Co., Inc., Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

CAPTAIN JANUARY: Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbee —One of Shirley's best, which pleased all. Thirty degrees below zero and a foot of snow kept the crowd down to small numbers. Played December 4-7.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Can. Country patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S SECRET: Warner Oland—The Chan series in our town has always proven very popular. Enjoyed a S. R. O. at box office. Many consider this his best.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

EDUCATING FATHER: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane —This was doubled with "White Fang" and is a nice entertaining picture of this series of the Jones Family. We did a good average business on this.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

EDUCATING FATHER: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane —Good for all ages of patrons and gave satisfaction. Running time, seven reels. Played December 5.—Edwards & Case, Opera House, Paw Paw, Ill. Small town patronage.

GIRLS' DORMITORY: Simone Simon, Herbert Marshall, Ruth Chatterton—A simple story of a school girl falling in love with the professor. Simone Simon does quite well with the part. Whether she will become a star of first magnitude remains to be seen. This was doubled with a Hopalong Cassidy picture and did a nice Friday-Saturday business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Constance Bennett, Loretta Young, Simone Simon—Almost any program picture would have done well on Thanksgiving, but this was a complete loss. Entire story weak and this company's current rave seemed utterly ridiculous; an otherwise splendid cast could not bring it out of the hole. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 25-26.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS NOBODY: Jane Withers, Ralph Morgan—Miss Withers still seems to have an appeal for both young and old. All of her pictures are well done. We are looking forward to playing "Pepper." Running time, 72 minutes. Played December 8-9.—Albert Heffernan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly, Judy Garland, Yacht Club Boys—Good football musical, some swell numbers and catchy tunes, with a new little star, Miss Judy Garland. Freckle-faced, a miniature Huck Finn of the opposite sex, and has she a singing voice! She put over two swell numbers and has remarkable power to her voice for so small a lady. From the reaction of our public, she has more on the ball than Simon, at least we received more comments about her than we have on the French girl. My money of the two would be on Judy.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL, THE: Shirley Temple, Alice Faye—Pleased those who attended as much as any Temple picture, but does not draw as good as her earlier pictures. Played December 11-12.—Edwards & Case, Opera House, Paw Paw, Ill. Small town patronage.

RAMONA: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—The old classic that has been produced, I think, for the fourth time. It is very beautiful in the colors and while it did not do outstanding business, it was well received by the audience.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—Nothing like "The Country Doctor." You will find that the novelty of the Quins has worn off. The story attempts great things, but fails. I didn't see anyone who said they liked the picture. Played December 6-8.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

STATE FAIR: Will Rogers—This is still the best picture for a small-town audience that was ever released.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

THANK YOU, JEEVES: Arthur Treacher, Virginia Field—Well, well, the English dialect is back with us again in a Mr. Wodehouse story and not a known name in the cast. The picture is not bad and I suppose it is English as it should be spoken, but it had some action ad comedy, so it got by.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

UNDER TWO FLAGS: Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert, Victor McLaglen, Rosalind Russell—A great picture! Very wonderful and grand scenes depicting the great French Foreign Legion of which we hear so much. Really this picture should please everyone. Of course, there might be a few people who are not up to the sharp clip of the accent English and French. One who has a knowledge of this will enjoy it. Even this small-town people enjoyed it. Twelve reels and a good print. Running time, 110 minutes. Played December 11-12.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

WHITE FANG: Michael Whalen, Jean Muir—A better than average "far north" picture. It holds interest all the way. The work of the dog is excellent. I was under the impression that there was something in the Motion Picture Production Code not to ridicule or burlesque preachers of the Gospel, but in this picture a preacher is burlesqued to the limit. We did a good average business on this. This was doubled with one of the Jones Family pictures, "Educating Father," which is a nice entertaining picture of this series.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

WHITE HUNTER: Warner Baxter, June Lang—This is about the most disappointing picture from Warner Baxter we ever saw. The story is poor, and everyone is miscast. Just another furnace-room picture. I'm ashamed of Fox. Played November 22-24.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

United Artists

CALL OF THE WILD: Clark Gable, Loretta Young Old but business was 30 per cent over average. Played December 8.—S. A. Kimball, Cornish Theatres, Inc., Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

COME AND GET IT: Edward Arnold, Francis Farmer—A natural to us in the sticks. Played December 11-12.—S. A. Kimball, Cornish Theatres, Inc., Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes—It brought them in but I had a feeling that the older patrons were not so well pleased as with "Call of the Wild." Played December 4-5.—S. A. Kimball, Cornish Theatres, Inc., Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

Universal

MAGNIFICENT BRUTE, THE: Victor McLaglen—Don't fail to play this. It's a small town natural. McLaglen at the boarding house table is worth the admission. Play it up, it should do business anywhere. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MY MAN GODFREY: William Powell, Carole Lombard—Seemed to please. Powell had a good role, marred a little by overacting of Lombard. That was its only fault. It was a good story and kept up its pace to the end. A lot of clever dialogue.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

POSTAL INSPECTOR: Ricardo Cortez—Fair entertainment.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SHOWBOAT: Irene Dunne, Allan Jones, Paul Robeson, Helen Westley, Helen Morgan—Mere words cannot express the fineness of this feature. It has everything, comedy, pathos, music and a romance without an equal. Universal should be proud of their achievement. Irene Dunne did full credit to a difficult role and her singing was grand. Allan Jones, Helen Morgan and Paul Robeson all did fine work and deserve the highest commendation. The men here thoroughly enjoyed it and in many an eye there were tears at the conclusion of the picture. Every exhibitor who has not booked this should do so. Running time, 112 minutes. Played December 12.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SHOWBOAT: Irene Dunne, Allan Jones—A very good picture; did just fair business on Sunday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

THROWBACK, THE: Buck Jones—Good old "Buck." He never lets us down. Played him on a double bill with "Charlie Chan" and did a gratifying business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Frederic March, Olivia de Havilland—As Bob Quillen says, "It followed the book for two hours and a half and then gave up." It's a swell picture but the costume angle kept the regular fans away. However, it drew enough of the highbrows for a fair Sunday house.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

GREEN PASTURES, THE: Rex Ingram—We could not arouse any great enthusiasm in this picture. If not for the trailer, which is a masterpiece in the trailer line, this picture would not have fared as well as it did. It is quite an unusual theme for a motion picture. In my opinion this was not suitable for motion pictures in spite of its great success on the stage. To the masses, most of whom have formed certain ideas of the Deity and of the Bible, it must be quite a shock to some to see God pictured as a colored man and leading Bible characters pictured as they have been done. It is true that it is all done with reverence and every possible effort to avoid offense, but still parts of it look like burlesque, especially the ark scene. If you can get your patrons to see it from the start it will leave a much better impression than if they came in the middle. We just managed to do a fair average business with this picture.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HOT MONEY: Ross Alexander—Rather thin stuff; it isn't hot money at the box office.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SONS O' GUNS: Joe E Brown—Good Saturday business, but the picture was a disappointment to the Brown fans.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

TIMES SQUARE PLAYBOY: Warren William—Rather thin stuff, but nobody kicked.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: Columbia seems to have hit the nail on the head with these series. They eat them up. Keep the good work up.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Otnario, Canada. General patronage.

WHOOPS, I'M AN INDIAN: Three Stooges—A typical Stooge fan comedy that brought the house down.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Educational

BLUE BLAZES: Two-Reel Comedies—This two-reel Buster Keaton not up to his usual standard. Will get by on Saturday.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FIRST SNOW, THE: Paul Terry-Toons—One of the best comedies so far. Ice skating, sliding, etc. It is very funny and it was well liked. Good to play around Christmas time. Running time, six minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich Small town patronage.

TARS AND STRIPES: Buster Keaton—When Educational Pictures signed up Buster Keaton they really did something. He is a great hit and is liked by the entire family. Keaton comedies are always clean. Running time, 22 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANNIE LAURIE: Tabloid Musicals—Excellently made but only fair as to audience appeal.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PUBLIC PAYS, THE: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—MGM deserves much praise and applause for their efforts in behalf of the public. Splendid acting, direction and production send the facts home.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TWO LITTLE PUPS: Harman-Ising—These Happy Harmonies series are getting to be very popular with our patrons and as well liked as Disney's productions.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WEST POINT OF THE SOUTH: MGM Miniatures—More suitable for college towns in the Southern states. Not appreciated in Canada as much as in United States.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

ACCENT ON GIRLS: Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears—This short is a snappy musical offering. Ina Ray Hutton has "it" and lots of it. The only complaint we had was that it was too short. The musical numbers were well chosen, "sweet and hot." A sister team sings an African song with gusto. Well worth booking. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 3: Up to the average of these excellent reels.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE, NO. 1: A very fine and interesting colored reel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RHYTHM OF THE RIVER: Paragraphics—One of the best single reels. Negro singing excellent. Give it preferred time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TRAINING PIGEONS: Betty Boop Cartoons—We cannot give this very much. Even the kids did not like it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEUR SHORTS: We have had two of these and except for about two numbers in six acts, they are old stuff. If they are all six like these two, Major Bowes will lose a lot of fans. The audience gave both of them the bird.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 4: Better than the previous. Some like; some do not.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MOLLY MOO COW AND THE BUTTERFLIES: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—We are playing these colored cartoons second-run and our audiences like them.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

MARCHING WITH SCIENCE: Adventures with the Newsreel Cameramen—One of the best I have seen to date. Fine and everybody enjoyed it. Running time, 12 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: Issue No. 16—About the President after election. An entire review of the proceedings and things that happened at election. Well liked in my town. Running time,, 12 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: We run news twice a week. Fox on Monday-Tuesday and News of the Day, Friday-Saturday. After watching both, which are 14 days old in Canada. we're of the same opinion that Fox is the better news.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WEST INDIES CRUISE: Magic Carpet Series—Very nice and good to fill in a program if it should run a little short. Running time, 10 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

United Artists

WATER BABIES: Silly Symphonies—This colorful Disney masterpiece with exquisite coloring around a water lily pond that should be played weekend for the kiddies.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Vitaphone

EMIL COLEMAN AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—One of the finest band acts in this fine series. This is a masterpiece. Give it preferred time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SAY IT WITH CANDY: Broadway Brevities—These two-reel musicals of Warners are certainly slipping. There's money in the production, but this one is just not there. Our patrons yawned and were restless in their seats. The only salvation for these two-reel musicals is to inject some comedy acts into them.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STARS CAN'T BE WRONG: Broadway Brevities—This is a very clever musical with an astrologist giving horoscopes on stars who appear in the picture in novel acts. The exhibitor can't go wrong in this one. I hated to ship it back to the exchanges.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

25,000 YULE BASKETS AT CHICAGO THEATRES

Members of Chicago Federation of Musicians Barred from Recordings after February 1st

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

The second Movie Christmas Basket Party staged under the auspices of Chicago's amusement industry proved to be an even greater event than the one held last year.

More than 25,000 baskets of foodstuffs were gathered through the morning matinees held in practically all Chicago theatres on Tuesday. Last year 20,000 baskets were collected. These baskets of food were distributed to needy persons through the organized efforts of the Better Films Council of Chicagoland. This group, under the direction of Mrs. Richard McClure, had prepared a list of those who needed the foodstuffs and it was properly distributed.

The entire affair was under the supervision of Aaron Saperstein, president of Allied Theatres of Illinois. He and his assistants, with the aid of the Chicago Amusement Publicists Association, who handled publicity and advertising for the benefit, worked night and day last week to help make the parties a great success.

Local newspapers and radio stations gave freely of their services and helped with the publicity. The Film Board of Trade, under the guidance of Emma Abplanalp, arranged for the booking of pictures into the 300 theatres participating. The films were donated, as the distributors' contribution.

Exhibitors suggested that this Movie Basket Party plan be adopted nationally next year. So great has been its success without any drain on the finances of anyone, that it is deemed an ideal way of bringing cheer to the homes of many of those who are desperately in need of food. The admission by foodstuffs only, regardless of quantity, has made it an ideal form of charity work and one that is very adaptable by the theatres throughout the country, local industry leaders say.

A Christmas Party was held Monday by the members of the Warner Brothers exchange here. Gradwell Sears was to have been the guest of honor but at the last minute was unable to attend. The entire sales force of the Warner group in this locality were present, as were a number of other guests from out of town as well and many local exhibitor leaders.

Jerome J. Shurley has just been named assitant manager of Chicago's Blackstone hotel. Mr. Shurley is one of the city's youngest hotel men to rate such a responsible position and he has been receiving congratulations from all over the country on his promotion. Shurley takes the place vacated by Garnett B. Watson, who sailed last week for Honolulu to become assistant manager of the Royal Hawaiian hotel. Both men have wide acquaintances in the motion picture industry.

TEXAS TOWN MAY BE 'AUTRY SPRINGS'

According to an Associated Press dispatch, the City Council of Tioga, Texas, under the leadership of Mayor George Smith, unanimously has voted to hold an election January 6 to decide on a change of name from Tioga to Autry Springs in honor of the town's foremost citizen, Gene Autry of the motion pictures. The star was born and reared in Tioga, his family before him, and his father still operates the family ranch.

The town's only other claim to fame is its wealth of mineral springs underlying the city.

Members of the Chicago Federation of Musicians will be restricted from making recordings of any kind beginning February 1, 1937, according to James C. Petrillo, president of the federation.

The ruling was made in behalf of the federation's war against "canned music," Mr. Petrillo said. He declared that "the musicians of this country have been making records to such an extent that they have finally reached a place where they are faced with the possibility of being put completely out of business by the very records they have produced."

The ruling was made after a meeting of the executive board of the federation. They declared that "canned music" was the greatest menace with which "live music" has been confronted and as a result employment opportunities for professional musicians have been getting fewer and fewer each year.

In reviewing the question of what musicians receive for recording, as compared with the profits which accrue to those who employ them to make the recordings, the federation's executive committee said:

"When their (the musicians') part of the bargain has been performed, when the job of recording has been completed, the finished record is distributed to theatres, radio stations and other places of amusement all over the country and, by the time it has worn itself out (mechanically and otherwise) and has been discarded, it has ruined and wiped out around one and one-half million dollars worth of business for living musicians. The average recording unit receives in the neighborhood of $1,500."

"Let us continue, for a moment," the resolution read, "the problem of sound in connection with music and musicians. What are Movietone and Vitaphone? Nothing but 'canned' music, made in exactly the same way as ordinary recordings. Since the invention of Movietone and Vitaphone, the number of musicians employed in the theatres in this district had dwindled from approximately 2,000 men and women to about 125.

"No individual or group is responsible for this condition. We hoped that, some day, the public would grow weary of, and nauseated with, this fictitious brand of music and would unite in an irresistible demand that 'live' music be brought back to theatres and other places of amusement . . . and we have finally reached a place where we are firmly convinced that the time has come for us to take matters in our own hands and stop, once and for all, the suicidal policy of destroying our own employment opportunities."

Edwin Silverman, in charge of the Community Chest Fund drive for the amusement industry, announces that the Drive was a great success, going well over the quota set for it. More than $20,000 was contributed by the local industry and this figure was considerably more than the amount asked for last year.

Film production has come back to Chicago. In the old Essanay plant, 1345 Argyle street, where Charlie Chaplin first twirled a cane, Hollywood talent, supported by Chicago stars, is facing the cameras where Gloria Swanson, Wallace Beery, Lewis Stone, Beverly Bayne, Francis X. Bushman, Henry B. Walthall, Bryant Washburn and a host of other glamorous stars of the silent days first stood under the arc lamp.

Lois Wilson, Earl Gilbert, Conway Tearle, Maxine Doyle and William Janney, to mention a few, are and have been making films in the famous old studio plant.

Through a wood-paneled entrance lobby done in modernistic lines one enters the famous structure. Back on the sound stages preparations are being made to shoot a five-reel picture, "All in the Family." The stage sets are in place and Joe McDonald, Hollywood camera man, is directing the focusing of the huge spots. Director Jack Boland, borrowed from Warner Bros., is in charge. A spectator on the set is R. L. Miller, vice-president of Wilding Pictures Productions.

"We've got fifty reels of pictures scheduled for production before March," he says. "The one being done now is a five-reeler which must be finished in six days. Wilding pictures are moving their laboratory and complete equipment for making sound motion pictures to Chicago. This will be headquarters.

Most of the pictures turned out are commercial films, sponsored by industrial concerns.

The new Times theatre at 4847 Milwaukee avenue and Higgins road, a $250,000 project in the heart of the Jefferson Park business center, opens on Christmas day.

Spacious vestibules and lobbies, decorated in colorful style, an extra large daylight screen, perfect vision from every one of the 1,000 seats (all on one floor), super sound reception, fully upholstered seats, luxurious restrooms, a soundproof crying-room for children and free parking space are among the attractions offered by the theatre, designed by Alexander L. Levy, architect. It will be under the same management now operating the Rio in the Logan Square district.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

LET US HOPE IN 1937, THAT—

Dark houses closed on account of poor business will all be opened, thus putting men to work.

Business continues to keep grosses out of the red so that managers will receive deserved promotions, salary rises, bonuses.

Fewer special drives will be put on and more circuits adopt the 52-week percentage plan.

Every manager will receive a day off each week, a two weeks' vacation with pay each year.

Managers' jobs will be made attractive enough to assure security and a living wage for the man who knows his job and does it.

All executives will regard the manager as a human being and act accordingly.

All managers will regard their bosses in the same light and do likewise.

Every theatreman will have a good word for his brother-showman, that knockers will sell their hammers and buy horns.

Every exhibitor will come to realize the value of strong exploitation and allow managers sufficient latitude to put over their attractions.

Every manager will regard each advertising dollar as his own and spend it accordingly.

Every showman will take it upon himself to defend the industry from outside criticism by doing everything within his power to maintain advertising at the highest level.

Good pictures will keep on coming so that the theatreman can remain enthusiastic about his work.

And last, but far from least, that all Round Tablers do their part in keeping the Club section helpful and readable by forwarding regular reports on their boxoffice activities.

PRAISE WELL MERITED

With the publication of the second series of the Showman's Travelogue, now current in the Round Table, the spotlight may well be cast in the direction of earnest Motion Picture Herald correspondents in various of the world's key cities who have contributed articles of particular interest. Consensus of authoritative opinion indicates the writers have done a noteworthy job of work, an instance of which is voiced from Cleveland by Manager E. A. Steinbuch, of Loew's State, in appreciation of Elsie Loeb's contribution to the series, published in the issue of October 17. Writes Ev:

"I wish to take this opportunity to tell you how much I enjoyed the article about Cleveland written by Mrs. Loeb. . . . Besides being very interesting, the article showed a great amount of intelligence and hard work in its thoroughness. I thought you would like to know I heard many fine comments from exhibitors throughout the city."

From the beginning, it was intended the Travelogues act as an accurate guide-book, so to speak, to the status of the motion picture and conditions as affect the showbusiness in the situations selected. How well they have measured "up to scratch" is written in the praises of appreciative readers.

PARAMOUNT'S PRESS BOOKS

It no doubt has come to the attention of Round Tablers set agin' those blanket-sized press books that for some time Paramount has been getting out a meaty though modest job of work that is easily handled and conveniently laid out. The Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee manual (size about 8 by 10) is a recent and excellent example.

Here in some 22 pages Bob Gillham's department has managed to put together sufficient promotion material to serve during the many weeks of the Jubilee. Contests, lobby, tieups, newspapers, displays, screen and radio have been adequately covered, judiciously selected. There is evidence of exploitation promising more than the conventional tiein.

Seems to this department that, in the final analysis, any argument on the pros and cons of the smaller press book versus the giant volume should have less to do with size and more to do with what's inside the covers.

FINAL NOTICE. Two full weeks remain until deadline for entries in the Quigley December Awards, the last month of the 1936 Competitions. Midnight of Saturday, Jan. 9th, is the deadline date and to be eligible for the Awards, entrants must forward campaigns so that they will arrive at this office no later than that time. Theatremen are again requested to co-operate.

Talent Quest Arranged On "Sing Me a Love Song"

On "Sing Me a Love Song" at the New York Criterion Theatre, a "Love Song" Talent Quest, limited to mike singers only, was arranged with the cooperation of the New York Evening Journal, first prize a screen test at the Warner Bros. Vitaphone studios in Brooklyn under the personal supervision of Sam Sax, production chief. Four additional cash prizes totaling $300 will also be awarded.

Paper printed entry blanks, and entrants were tried out over a regular broadcast on Station WINS with James Melton, star of the picture, acting as master of ceremonies. The finalists will sing their songs at the Criterion Theatre for final judging.

Conner Uses Spook Copy To Sell "Sworn Enemy"

Marlowe Connor, Grove Theatre, Chicago, Ill., for "Sworn Enemy" made a six-sheet cutout and surrounded it with stills and "talk copy." Flashlight was inserted in the poster and made to go on and off. From blackboard, Marlowe cut out silhouette figures of gangster type and placed them, jutting from behind chairs and easels.

On the lobby floor was painted a large figure of a man to appear as though he were lying flat on his face; this was painted with black covered with water glass.

Various merchants tied in distributing heralds carrying their ads, laundry copy reading "The sworn enemy of dirt," service station herald read "Winter—the sworn enemy to the unprotected car," etc., etc.

Kay Ties Up Main Street With "Go West" Sled Bally

To sell "Go West, Young Man" at Schine's Glove in Gloversville, N. Y., Erwin Kay promoted a team of horses and sled, properly bannered and carrying live stock and farm products. At noon on main street the chickens and ducks were released from bally truck tying up traffic while the stooges went about retrieving the animals. Irwin also planted a contest for the rural trade, offering passes to those submitting best story on "Life on the Farm."

For "Reunion," bank cooperated, offering to start an account with $5 for babies born on the day and hour the picture opened. The merchants issued a price circular with lucky numbers, 10 passes were given to those presenting circular at the boxoffice with any of the prize-winning numbers.

Robertson's "3-Men Derby" in Action

Sororities Work With Robertson On '3-Men Derby'

And now it's a "Three Men on a Horse Derby" as staged by Manager Allan D. Robertson, at the L & J Palace, Athens, Ga., as top feature of the drive for the picture that had the folks doing a lot of buzzing to each other. As Athens is the home of the University of Georgia, Robertson contacted four of the leading college sororities and sold the girls the idea of competing in the Derby, winner to be given a theatre party. Each sorority was to pick three men students to act as jockeys and the girls with their jockeys were to be at the theatre on the morning of the Saturday the picture opened to draw straws for their horses—which turned out to be mules, and purposely not very spirited.

Each mule was then decorated and with an escort of Army men from the college ROTC the animules were taken to the starting point, about three miles away. Final lap of the course comprised the block surrounding the theatre with finish line in front of the house. The stunt, as to be expected, was quite a "natural," with the whole town and college turning out to see the fun. Traffic was tied up at the start and finish and the sorority girls accompanied their entries via auto. The city cooperated by furnishing escort of motor cycle police and accompanying photo shows two of the teams in action. Allan says they all finished with the race so close that two of the teams were rewarded with the theatre party.

Rules were as follows: No whips or spurs permitted. No abuse of animals permitted. No saddles or blankets were allowed, jockeys riding bareback. Curb bits and galloping of mules was "out" and three jockeys had to remain mounted. If one or more fell, they were permitted to remount and continue race. Papers front-paged the story for two days with mention of the picture, as did the University weekly.

Postcard Stunt Also Clicks

Although in itself the Derby was a "honey," Robertson had some other snappy ideas to arouse further interest and curiosity and among these was a radio stunt starting a week ahead with four announcements made daily, "Calling all police cars, hospitals and asylums" asking for information on the missing "Erwin" and requesting the folks to call the station. When calls were received they were referred to the theatre. This continued for three days and for the next three up to the day before the opening, announcements were made that "Erwin" was located and could be seen at the theatre in the picture.

Together with this, some 1,200 handwritten postal cards were mailed to phone subscribers with copy: "Dear Mr. Blank. If you do not hear from me before Thursday or Friday, please call me at 1071," which was an unlisted theatre number. Allan reports over 800 phone calls with the callers being told that "Erwin" was at the Palace plus a buildup for the picture. This, too, cracked the papers, as did a morning show for the Georgia football team.

Wade Sponsors Boys' Day for "Sissy" Tiein

It was quite a big event in Gainesville, Texas, the Boys' Day celebration put on by Manager Milton Wade as the top tiein on his date for "Devil Was a Sissy" at the Plaza Theatre, what with the active aid of civic and organization heads in putting it over. Campaign started well ahead, Wade calling a meeting with the local PTA, city schools superintendent and school principals. District Court Room was secured for the gathering and immediate endorsement secured by Wade for the special "day." City Manager, chief of police and fire marshal were next contacted and these officials were also in favor of the idea to turn the city government over to the boys for this day. Quick action was taken by the city council and a proclamation for the day plus the theatre credits was speedily voted.

Elections Held in Schools

Arrangements were then made with the school superintendent for the election of junior councilmen, one from each school, to take the place of the city's five regular councilmen and much activity was evidenced as the pupils campaigned with placards, banners, boards, etc. In addition, each school also participated in a Bartholomew, Cooper and Rooney contest, the winners to serve as theatre manager, doorman and head usher on the "day."

Then after the elections, a council meeting was held, presided over by the junior Mayor, who with the council appointed heads of every city department. Local state senator was in charge of the induction ceremonies and administered the oath of office to the new "officers," the induction being held at the high school before the entire student body. From the school the junior officials were escorted to the City Hall to take charge and the contest winners to the theatre to enter upon their duties. Wade was host at a luncheon for the juniors and regular city heads and also did the honors that evening at the theatre when the selected boys were introduced from the stage.

Puts On Frank Buck Welcome

It so happened that Frank Buck, who was born in Gainesville, was appearing at the Texas Centennial, and thus it was possible to have him appear at the Plaza at a morning community meeting where the Boys' Day and the picture were given some extra publicity. Besides all this good advertising, Wade also hooked into a plan for a school police patrol which secured extra endorsement because of the success of Boys' Day. As a result, the junior police are meeting regularly at the theatre to be instructed in their duties by the chief of police and this permanent boys' organization, Wade believes, will be of assistance to him in future campaigns.

As this Round Tabler eschewed the usual exploitations on the date and concentrated on a newspaper publicity campaign, he received many page one breaks and other wide cooperations that aided him in tilting grosses on "Sissy" nearly 50 per cent over average grosses on similar days.

1937 Awards

Out in Oklahoma years ago, old-timers used to end arguments with the snappy line:

"Talk is cheap. It takes money to buy whiskey."

In other words, the books don't pay off on conversation.

Only results count.

And because the results of the 1936 Quigley Awards show a continued high score of accomplishment in making possible the progress of the individual theatreman, your Chairman has the honor to announce, on the threshold of the New Year, the continuation of the Quigley Awards in 1937.

Unanimous endorsement from executives who have accepted places upon the 1937 Judging Committee, from showmen in every classification (non-winners as well as winners), from circuit heads, division and district managers, independent exhibitors, from production chieftains, stars and directors; wholehearted approval of representatives from every branch of the industry masses solidly behind the Awards to make the fourth year of the Competitions even more important in spotlighting the efforts of the man in the field.

As in previous years, the Silver and Bronze Plaques, First and Honorable Mention Sheepskin Certificates in 1936 have proven the "open sesame" to better jobs, salary rises, bonuses, enhancement of personal prestige. No effort is spared in bringing to the attention of executives concerned the success of the monthly winners.

As in previous years, the 1936 Awards have been taken down by entrants in various situations, subsequent-runs scoring as well as the first-runs, small towns vying with the big cities, and overseas showmen competing successfully with the men on this side. And it is now definitely accepted that every entry is given equal consideration regardless of the amount of money expended; that "it's not what you spend; it's what you do".

The Quigley Awards continue, and happily, to remain the symbol of accomplishment as concerns the theatreman striving for well-merited recognition. Thus again, every showman everywhere in this wide world is invited to show a bit of what he has on the ball through the 1937 Quigley Awards for the approval of his superiors and the attention of the industry's ranking names. —A-MIKE.

Merchandising Campaign Set For "Rainbow on the River"

In preparation for the country-wide openings of "Rainbow on the River," limerick contest has been launched whereby manufacturer of the Bobby Breen polo shirts offers a thousand prizes to youngsters competing in the contest. Sales manuals are already in the hands of salesmen for presentation to exhibitors, illustrating various tieups available. Counter cards, identical with the garment box carrying the items are supplied with the line.

Also available are mammy dolls, based on the Louise Beaver characterization of the role of "Toinette" in the picture. In addition there are records of Bobby Breen's recording of the picture's theme song.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"

SILHOUETTE STUFF. Shadow-box display with cutouts of the four leads from "Libeled Lady" was used by Hal Howard, Kentucky Theatre, Henderson with cast names in stars at bottom.

"Give Me Your Heart" Float Entered by Griffin in Parade

Tying in with the recent Pioneer Day parade in Cushing, Okla., Max R. Griffin, Dunkin Theatre, entered his "Give Me Your Heart" float (see photo), made entirely of orchid crepe paper, with two girls seated on radiator and two oversized life-like standees of Kay Francis on either running board.

For "Texas Rangers," Max promoted cowboy regalia for his entire staff, including lobby display of saddles, guns, hats, boots, etc., and for "Road to Glory" promoted toy soldiers which were placed in formation on small miniature road in lobby, rifles from American Legion Post completed the display and special cards were mailed to all members of the Post.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"

Tully Kicks Off For "Big Game"

Ralph Tully at the Paramount, Haverhill, Mass., used a novel stunt for "The Big Game" by lettering three footballs with selling copy and kicking them from the stage into the audience. Those that got the balls showed them all around town and those that didn't talked about the stunt anyway.

Other exploitation on the picture included two football nights for two local high schools at which time the school bands paraded to the theatre and played on the stage with newspapers giving the stunt plenty of publicity.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"

American Baby Glorified By Grady for "Ziegfeld"

Ziegfeld may have gloried the American girl, but Hal Grady, Palace Theatre, Lubbock, Texas, went him one better on "The Great Ziegfeld" and glorified the American baby, offering prizes through cooperation of local studio in connection with a baby contest.

Double truck ad was also promoted with merchants' ads, each carrying names of two locals who, after identifying themselves, were admitted to the show gratis. Grady arranged for a radio broadcast over station KFYO from the lobby of his theatre end of opening day matinee and night performance with comments from the patrons.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"

Thomason Reports Good-Will Stunts

R. M. Thomason, Uptown Theatre, Sedalia, Mo., reports a couple of stunts he has successfully engineered at his house recently. First is contacting a merchant a week to have small cards printed advertising that if the card is taken to his establishment before a certain time, it will allow the customer ten cents reduction on some article not to sell over a dollar. These cards are distributed at what Thomason calls his "thrift programs," to which admission is only ten cents, thus conveying the idea to the patron that the dime paid for admission is refunded by the card, which is worth the same amount in trade.

Another tieup was effected with local bus company covering the entire city whereby Thomason agreed to furnish them with special tickets which they could sell at the regular admissions. Driver of each bus was furnished with the tickets, which he punched for identification. Three-foot banners were placed on both sides of buses advising that riders were entitled to free transportation to the theatre and that tickets were available from the driver. Thomason reports the stunt worked well for the bus company and himself.

Purves' Tea Table in Lobby

Pirate on Scaffold Ballys "Dancing Pirate"

Wilhelm Sorensen in charge of RKO advertising for the "Dancing Pirate" date at the Spegeln Theatre, Stockholm used an excellent street stunt (see photo) consisting of a pony team drawing a cart about town on which was erected a gallows in Spanish colors in which life-size pirate was hanging. Dummy was placed in such a manner that his feet barely touched the floor and when the horses were running it gave the impression that he was doing a tap dance.

For his lobby stunt, Sorensen clipped a rave and "pan" review from local papers, mounted them both on easels and over all copy called attention to the conflicting reviews.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"

Directional Arrows Point to "Road to Glory"

Charles G. Pickett, Ball Square Theatre, Somerville, Mass, used directional arrows about town pointing to "Road to Glory" as exploitation for that picture, and a kid parade was held opening day, each child carrying broom handles and sticks with the arrows tacked to them.

For his lobby display Charlie used a giant book display five by seven feet with title and cast and also tied up empty store windows with displays.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"

Shields' High School Tieup

Jack Shields, Capitol Theatre, Ansonia, Conn., has promoted some goodwill for his house by contacting local high school and planting a contest in their school paper. Jack offered cash prizes to those writing the best essay on "Charge of the Light Brigade." Paper ran large theatre ad and winning essay. Jack says The Observer has a circulation of 1,200 students and among all the business men in town.

"Have We Your Face Photo?"

Pig, Pig, Who Gets the Pig? Asks Ted for "Pigskin Parade"

'Tis Tea Time At the Tivoli

Jack Purves, Tivoli Theatre, Hamilton, Ont., Can., has just completed arrangements to serve tea and biscuits in his lounge every afternoon, having promoted the beverage, cream, cookies, sugar, an electric refrigerator and radio, the latter to entertain the folks while imbibing. Accompanying photo shows how Jack dressed his lobby around his old fireplace with real logs and kettles boiling over the fire, and reports the stunt catching on like wildfire, particularly on these cold days.

The College Town Theatre And What To Do About It

Round Tabler Details Methods Found Effective With Students and School Heads

by GUY W. MARTIN
Managing Director, Colfax, South Bend, Ind.

I shall endeavor, in a few words, to give you my impression of the theatre in a college town. When we speak of the motion picture theatre operating in towns which have colleges and universities, we are delving into a subject which will bear considerable thought and concentration.

For instance, there are no two colleges which have the same operating policy; some will consider it a privilege to work together with a theatre for the mutual advantage, while others are strictly thumbs down on any cooperative proposition, no matter how advantageous it might sound to the individual.

As a whole, college students are potential theatre-goers. They enjoy good motion pictures and are very receptive to stage entertainment. Naturally, they prefer the cheaper priced sections of the house (especially the freshmen and sophomores). The upper classmen are usually apart and conduct themselves quite differently and usually prefer main floor seats, especially when attending the theatre in the company of a date.

College students are like any other group of young people. They enjoy being catered to; they like for you to ask their reaction to pictures and stage shows and they are not timid in expressing their opinions.

South Bend, Indiana, is the seat of Notre Dame University, one of the oldest schools in the country. It is strictly a school for learning and much of the so-called college atmosphere which prevails around the campuses of stage colleges and universities is lacking here. Students of Notre Dame attend this school to learn and in this connection it may be said that discipline is strict. The boys are governed religiously by campus hours and there is a systematical routine connected with student attendance.

Notre Dame Men Good Patrons

Notre Dame boys, as a whole, are good patrons. We endeavor each year, at the beginning of the school season, to offer some sort of a welcome to the boys. For instance, note the attached "Theatrical Date Book," presented to all Notre Dame students at the opening of the 1934 school season. In addition we use banners, cards, and other publicity items which carry welcome messages to the incoming school body. A welcome trailer is also used every year, synchronized with the school songs, etc.

Notre Dame is not a school with tie-up possibilities. It is impossible to get on the campus with any commercial matter, much less advertising material on a motion picture. Our only resort at the school is by direct mail and once in a while we use this medium of advertising when we have an attraction that has a special appeal to the boys. It is also possible at times when we have a picture of note and which is recognized by the good fathers of the school to make an announcement concerning the picture, or posting of a notice of same on their bulletin board. Other than this, it is absolutely impossible to publicize attractions regardless of their merit.

Notre Dame is unlike many other schools in this regard. During the time I had charge of the Publix Operations in Indiana, I supervised the town of Bloomington, home of Indiana University. This school was especially cooperative with our Princess Theatre and I am giving you the details of a welcome campaign put over by Mr. Harry Palmer, manager of that house a few years ago.

All incoming roads were posted with three sheets reading: "Welcome to Bloomington's Two Leading Institutions—Indiana University and the Publix Princess Theatre."

We started posting about twenty miles out—on the sides of barns and buildings of all descriptions. Practically all the students come to this city in cars and on the Greyhound Bus lines. Posting went up the week previous to orientation week, which is the week previous to the opening of school. Practically all the freshmen come in then.

Stretched across the main roads leading to the city we erected 70-foot banners bearing the same copy as above. Fortunately, the Illinois Central Railroad crosses the road at two points and we secured permission to drop banners beneath the bridges where they secured much attention.

We used 500 auto banner cards with the following copy: "Welcome to I. U. and the Publix Princess Theatre." Auto owners did not refuse us the privilege of attaching these to their front bumpers.

Through the I. U. registrar, who is a very personal friend of mine, I secured permission to place a table in the registration line. Thirty-six hundred students had to pass our table and each one received a sealed envelope reading: "Instructions to Freshmen." The upper classmen opened it through curiosity. In each envelope we enclosed folders showing our coming attractions. We also enclosed a good will letter to the student. This was the first time that any commercial enterprise had ever been allowed to do such a thing. We obtained the

ALEXANDER SMITH CARPET

LETTERS FROM READERS

SUGGESTS SOLUTION FOR CUE MARKS

Dear Mike:

ONE, TWO, THREE, FOUR, FIVE, SIX, and I might even add SEVEN, and EIGHT. I am referring to the number of cue marks, and the manner in which they are put on film. It is all right at the first, and second run houses, but when the film reaches the third and fourth run houses there is a vast assortment of change-over cue marks.

The projectionist with a machine that has a slow pick-up speed, takes a long run at it with a cue mark 20 feet back, and from there on every projectionist has made a mark to suit the pick-up of his machine. It would not be so bad if these marks were made so that they could be removed, but they even go to the extent of punching holes through the center of the frame. This practice of punching holes for cue marks, I am told, was used twenty years ago, and in my opinion there is no place in the projection room of today for a projectionist who has to use cue marks of this nature.

Another method is to scratch the emulsion from the side of the film, and in a great many cases you will find these marks are made right beside the original cue marks. I think that every manager should insist that his projectionist think of the other fellow when he makes a mark suitable to the pick-up of his machine. A mark made with a china pencil can be removed very easily, leaving the film in good condition for the next projectionist.

The only real solution to the whole problem is a standard pick-up time of seven seconds, the same as there is a standard running speed, and in this way the annoyance of seeing a large number of cue marks on our screens, and poor change-overs will be cut to a minimum.—Lionel Hansher, Radio City Theatre, Toronto, Can.

CHILDREN'S CHORUS POPULARIZES CLUB

Dear Mike:

In reply to your letter of November 23. Our Kiddie Club is along the usual set-up of such clubs in which the children contest for prizes and the child audience is the judge. We provide the accompanist, the rehearsals and on Saturday the first hour of show is devoted to the Kiddie Club program. We find that after a few months that the acts run about the same and settle down to just a few who enter the contest and interest glides. So in order to overcome this we have what we call a chorus, all entrants that are not prize winners provide a singing and dancing chorus which is directed by the person in charge of the Kiddie Club. This makes a bigger flash and also gives those that are not so talented a chance to get over stage fright and get ideas for individual acts.

Another idea that was brought up which we are trying out, so far has not been as big a success as we thought it would be, is a special prize set up as a musical act prize. We noted that most of the acts, both boys and girls, are mostly dancing with a little singing or monologues, so we wish to create more interest in the musical angle. This has not been running long enough yet to really judge it by the present as they are a little disappointed. We have hopes yet of creating enough interest so that those children who are talented musically will enter and provide for the musical atmosphere of the program.

The prizes and extra expense we have on Kiddie Club does not make us any money but it does provide a means for children to show their talent and it is their show, both the performers and the audience, and we feel it is doing a lot of good for the children.

We have tried Kiddie Clubs in smaller towns but the talent is soon used up and thep rogram becomes stale. We tried with a little success but too much expense of taking the prize winners from one town to the other. This helped to hold up interest as the children had a trip with all expenses and a chance to show off in other towns.—Leo Petersen, Elks Theatre, Rapid City, South Dakota.

privilege on account of our cooperation with the Indiana University Band.

The first issue of the Indiana Daily Student—the campus "Bible" was ours. It was the "Welcome to Indiana University" edition and through the cooperation of a group of local merchants we put over a dandy.

On the campus, directly in front of the Student Building—which is the principal edifice on the grounds—we erected a huge thermometer to show the progress of the band fund drive. We participated in this drive. We indicated the progress of the drive with red in the hollow space center of the tube. We also placed alongside this thermometer a special poster board holding a one sheet and a card announcing the date of the picture.

Our cooperation with the band gained the exclusive rights to the stadium for the football games. We used an eighty-foot banner—six feet wide—which we hung at the lower end of the bowl during each game. It advertised the midnight show. We also sent a thirty-foot banner around the football field—this banner bearing the title of the picture. This worked before the game and during the half. I was the first one to ever crash the football field with this type of advertising.

During each game we had our newsreel outfit on the side lines—making pictures of the game. We carried a lot of dummy cases, each one painted "Publix News." This outfit was before the students at all times during the games. We didn't permit them to forget "Publix" at any time.

We conducted in the columns of the Indiana Daily Student a "Movie Title Contest," using 60 cartoons that my artist drew. We used them in a double truck cooperative stunt. However, they can be used one a day in a direct newspaper tieup. I am now having mats made of the series and they will be available at cost to the boys throughout the territory. They have never been used anywhere but here as all the cartoons are original.

Student Raids Eliminated

Through our direct tieup with the Indiana University Band and our intimate contact with the students, we expect to eliminate the raids that have been so troublesome during the past. I have the assurance of the officials that they will assist us in every way to discourage the raids. The Indiana Daily Student has promised to wage an editorial campaign against raids.

Another college which is very receptive to cooperative tieups is the University of Kentucky, situated at Lexington, which town was also included in the Indiana Publix setup. This school was very receptive to any idea which would result in mutual benefits.

I have always found that in a school of any size it is a wise procedure to cater to the student body as well as the faculty of the school. In this connection, in most cases you will find the faculty very receptive to motion pictures, especially in attractions of a clean and wholesome character.

THE QUIGLEY NOVEMBER "FIRSTS"

WINNING CAMPAIGNS COVER THREE CLASSES

It has not happened often that three First Mentions are awarded to entries in different classifications and thus the winning campaigns in the November Awards are distinguished for this reason. Ben Cohen, for his drive on a road-show "Romeo and Juliet" date; John Burhorn, for a subsequent-run campaign on "Sudden Death," and Matt Saunders, for his first-run efforts on "Tarzan Escapes," were so rewarded.

In New Haven, at the College Theatre, Ben Cohen found that block ticket sales on "Romeo and Juliet" comprised the backbone of his drive and the opening gun was a mimeographed letter to school principals and organizations containing details of what he termed an Educational Cooperation Discount Plan wherein groups could avail themselves of the lower prices. For this, applications had to be made at the theatre no later than two days ahead. Schools, stores, offices and factories were covered and ticket booths established on the premises at club and organization meetings. Personal contacts were made by Cohen, who addressed the different groups on the date. Select mailing list also brought results.

Newspapers, local and suburban, cooperated with generous publicity, one paper contributing two editorials and a page-one story. Unusual also were reviews on the day after opening as these are rarely given picture in New Haven, says Ben. Full-page co-ops brought further notice and there was frequent mention including special art in both local and surrounding papers well ahead of the date. Different newspaper slant was given the buildup by Cohen himself through his personally-written "Movie Guyed" column, syndicated through weekly papers in his sector. Included was an usher's version of the deathless tale which had a decided appeal to the masses. Local theatre publication with select circulation gave strong reviews for three subsequent issues, ran a contest and printed application coupon for reservations. High school and college papers ran the coupon and page-one boxes.

Special Displays in Ace Windows

To obtain window space where the usual cards were not accepted, Cohen made up special jumbo displays with enlarged stills on maroon background. Set of historical settings and other accessories were routed to libraries and schools and used as a basis for the lectures on the picture. Essay contest tied in with the Board of Education brought entries from over 600 students. Special programs were broadcast, spot announcements made and a series of 15-minute transcriptions given from Stations WELI, WIXBS and WICC. Included was a half-hour program with the balcony scene produced by local players.

To bring children to the theatre from the various schools, extra trolley cars were obtained and a release printed and distributed by the Conn. Child Welfare Association, to be signed by parents for the responsibility of transporting the children. In addition to Cohen's addresses, teachers, club presidents, principals and Board of Education heads also spoke before different groups. Outstanding cooperation from this end was secured through the famed Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale, who endorsed the picture in church, insisting that his congregation attend the showing.

For invaluable assistance in putting over the campaign, Cohen generously credits Loew-Poli division head Harry F. Shaw, Bob Russell, manager, Poli-New Haven and the entire staff of the College Theatre.

One of Burhorn's "Sudden Death" Windows

Second Run On "Sudden Death" Features Safety Week Drive

Although the picture had played a strong first-run date previously in his neighborhood, Manager John F. Burhorn, at the Gayety, a subsequent run in the South Side steel mill district of Chicago, figured there was meat enough left for another campaign on his date for "And Sudden Death" which he proceeded to get with an ace drive tied in with the sectional daily newspaper, the alderman of his ward and the South Chicago Business Men's Association. Termed "Drive Safe Week," much was done to cut down accidents and to build the picture's grosses.

After receiving these endorsements, Burhorn contacted local Patrol Boys at the YMCA and held a meeting to explain the purposes of the "week." The boys spread the news and in return were given a theatre party, marching in uniform and in a body to the house. Girl Scout Week coming just ahead of the drive, the occasion was used for extra publicity with a party for the girls. Important also was an endorsement from the local alderman which was attached to the regular trailer. The newspaper campaign was vigorous and included three editorials on subsequent days. Safety drive articles tied in to the press-book error-driving contest for cash and ticket prizes was put on starting five days ahead. A double truck co-op was also obtained, Burhorn taking personal charge and windshield stickers were carried by over 200 local drivers who cooperated on the campaign.

Choice windows, never before cracked, according to Burhorn, were obtained on the drive, the one illustrated on this page being an example of the fine cooperation obtained from this angle. Imprinted copies of the "Sudden Death" booklet were distributed by local insurance agency and a lucky number idea tied in to department store with imprinted shopping bags. For street bally, recent wreck was obtained, bannered and shown all over the district and another topper was a parade on the morning of the opening headed by 50 taxis and other cars, all carrying display. Parade covered the entire South Side. Other units were composed of the Patrol Boys and the procession was headed by a courtesy car which for three days distributed guest ticket to careful drivers.

Campaign went over so well that the paper ran a followup editorial after the date and Burhorn received a number of complimentary letters from civic officials, cooperating merchants, YMCA heads, etc.

Tarzan-man In Tree Bungalow Features Foyer Jungle Display

If Tarzan himself or any other tree-dweller visited Bridgeport, Conn., during the run of "Tarzan Escapes" at the Loew-Poli, Manager Matt Saunders was well prepared with a tree-bungalow in his outer lobby occupied by his bally man dressed (see photo) in appropriate animal skins. Hut was made of tree branches and supported by poles covered with artificial palms and coconut matting. Platform atop hut was 15 feet high upon which Tarzan performed with a live monkey. Inside the hut another monkey performed on the rope and trapeze.

Matt really turned himself loose in his Grand Lobby with an African jungle dis-

TOLEDO COUNCIL GUESTS AT THEATRE WEDDING PARTY AND G-MAN SHORT DISPLAY IN ROXY LOBBY

Picture Council Stages Wedding; Roxy Plugs Short

Reported by all local dailies and given wide publicity throughout Ohio was the "Golden Wedding Couples" theatre party on "Ramona" inaugurated by the Toledo Motion Picture Council and put on at the Paramount Theatre with the cooperation of Manager Henry Stickelmeier. Names of couples married 50 years or more were obtained through friends and relatives, the invitations written by girls in the high school motion picture appreciation classes who also served the couples at the party. Photo above shows the guests and council officers with the birthday cake.

After the preview, cake and ice cream, both promoted, were served in the mezzanine lounge. Wedding march was played by leading church organist and solos sung by prominent singer. In the receiving line were Mrs. O. E. De Long, council president; Mrs. Roy Smart, wife of the Mayor; Mrs. John N. Edy, wife of the City Manager; Mrs. George N. Fell, president of the Catholic Diocesan, and Mrs. Henry Stickelmeier, among others.

Lobby Display for "G-Man" Short

"You Can't Get Away With It," Universal's G-Man short, after being privately shown for special writers, established a reported "first" when leading New York newspapers carried editorials in their columns. Morris Kinzler, Roxy Theatre's publicity pusher, took full advantage of the editorials by blowing them up to giant size and spotting them around the lobby and out front.

Behind-the-scenes stills, "wanted" cards and other authentic material was obtained through the cooperation of the local office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and went to make up a giant lobby panel, around which passersby swarmed all day. Good size plugs in all newspaper ads rounded out the campaign which did an effective job in calling attention to the G-Men activities.

"Pigskin Parade" and "Legion of Terror," Lincoln, Miami Beach and Capitol, Miami; Hal Kopplin, Wometco Theatres.

"Love on the Run," Loew's Rochester; Les Pollock.

"Rainbow on the River," Radio City Music Hall; Hazel Flynn.

"In His Steps," New York Criterion; Arthur Jeffrey.

"Libeled Lady," Rialto, Dallas; Louie Charninsky.

"Born to Dance," co-op ad, Loew's Midland, Kansas City; John McManus.

"His Brother's Wife," RKO Orpheum, Denver; Ted Halmi.

"Born to Dance," New York Capitol, Ernie Emerling.

"Three Men on a Horse," New York Strand; Dinty Moore.

"Light Brigade," Warners' Branford, Newark, N. J.; Bob Paskow.

The Poli ad is one of the co-ops used by Erle Wright for planting at the bottom of the producer ads in local papers for the Loew-New England houses and the opening type ad on the New Madison, Madison, Wisc., is credited to E. Ashley.

Memphis Rembrandt Previews "Rembrandt"

It broke all papers and naturally that smart stunt put on by Cecil Vogel at Loew's State, Memphis, wherein a private screening was arranged on "Rembrandt" for Julius Rembrandt, seventh lineal descendant of the famous Dutch master and a local painter of quite some fame in his own right.

After the showing, the living Rembrandt was shot for the papers and interviewed on what he thought of the picture.

play comprising a truck-load of skins, stuffed birds, bear heads and deer heads, a South American condor with a 14-foot wing spread, mounted foxes and other species locally promoted. Walls were draped and skins covered floor with the title in large cutout letters strung across lobby on invisible wire. On a miniature stage was shown leopard head and skin, mounted foxes and other heads. Lighting included foots in color, proscenium lights and border, with automatic dimmer keeping lights in constant change. Box office out front was covered as the hut with almost life-like paintings of wild animals. Cutout title letters were centered around stuffed condor. Also displayed was an original elephant head 300 years old and 450 pounds in weight which was borrowed from the Barnum Museum. For further atmosphere, bally-man climbed rope suspended from marquee and amplified animal roars on loudspeaker made effective street-stopper.

Makes Many Newspaper Tieins

Newspaper tieins featured two classified contests. One had the stars scattered through the ads with tickets given those who gathered them together properly. The other was a "thrill-hunt," readers asked to hunt through the ads for names of the animals shown in the picture. Co-op ads tying photos of local girls were promoted with those whose pictures were run receiving merchandise and ticket prizes. Newsboy stunt that clicked was overprinting of front page with boys shouting "extra" as they gave them to passersby. Stunt as put on was strong enuf to gather a heap of attention.

Stills and photos were used for displays in main and branch libraries where book marks were also distributed. Tabloids, miniature books in five-and-tens, windows and hotel displays were other of the exploitations used by Saunders to put over his date.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Mission, Texas

Dear Herald:

After we covered Oklahoma and had gotten into Texas, Elsie, our housekeeper and pancake baker, got car sick and was unable to travel, so we drove down to the Rio Grande Valley and got a place for Elsie to stay, and then we are going back upstate and call on some of the Longhorns.

Yesterday we came up here to Mission to call on our friend Bob Smith of the Mission theatre. Bob owns four theatres, one here at Mission, one at Donna and two at Raymondsville. Mission and Donna are where they raise the citrus fruit and Raymondsville is where they raise the onions.

The name Smith is an abbreviation of the Russian name Smithwiski. They cut the name in two in the middle and took the front end of it, but there isn't a trace of Russian blood in Bob; there may be a trace of Dutch in him away back on his Uncle's side, but not enough to hurt any. He is 100 per cent American and 50 per cent Longhorn and as swell a guy as Texas can boast of.

At Mission they were having their annual Citrus Fruit Fiesta, an event similar to the Corn Palace show at Huron, South Dakota, except that one is an exhibition of all kinds of citrus products and the other an exhibition of corn. Both are very prominent events and have gained a wide reputation.

Bob insisted that we stay over and go with him to an evening style show to be put on at the Auditorium, and when he said style show Elsie said, "Oh, let's do." The only time Elsie ever missed a style show was when she had the mumps. Then Bob asked us to stay and go to his house for a quail dinner, and the only time we ever missed a quail dinner was during the closed season on quails.

Heretofore we have written mainly for the male gender of the picture industry. We have neglected to write anything of interest to the lady exhibitors, but now we are going to write a little crude stuff about this costume style show in the hope that it will please the girls.

The gowns at this show were covered entirely with citrus products, orange and grapefruit leaves were sewed on the dresses and they covered them entirely. The leaves were a dark green and were varnished so that they shone brightly under the electric lights, and these leaves made a complete covering of the dresses. All kinds of fancy designs were cut from orange and grapefruit rinds and sewed on top of these dresses in all kinds of fantastic designs. Orange and grapefruit rinds were used in making belts for the waists and decorations for the head. The costumes were designed to represent some nationality, Americans, Mexicans, Indians, Dutch, also cowboys, and so on, and the show was certainly an impressive one.

We wish we could tell you exactly about these costumes, but describing costumes is not down our alley; it is over on the next street. In fact, when we look at a lady in a fancy costume we generally admire her pretty head of hair, and in 10 minutes we couldn't tell you whether she was dressed in overalls or a gown from Paris, but we could tell you the color of her hair. So we've got to leave any further description of these costumes to some one who knows how to describe them; but if Hollywood had one of these citrus fruit costume designers out there to design some of their costumes they could make quite a hit with the public.

One girl had on a costume with grapefruit seeds sewed all over it which had a polka-dot effect and made it look like she had just come in out of a Nebraska snowstorm.

The girl who won the first prize wore a costume which was covered all over with small grapefruit and orange rinds cut out in various designs which made a gorgeous appearance under the electric lights. We should like for some woman to describe this style show, we can't, but we can tell you a little something about Bob's home and the dinner that Mrs. Smith had. Bob's home looked like we imagine a Fifth avenue home would look like. It was complete in every detail; as fine a home as there is any darn sense of anybody having. Then, there was the dinner that Mrs. Smith had prepared, and say, Elmer, we can't describe that dinner as it should be described either, but boy, what a dinner, roast quail 'n' everything.

Whatever we might say about Mission and their citrus fruit style show would only be just part of it. It's worth going many miles to see, and those gowns the girls wore would make a hit on Broadway and a sensation in Rockefeller Center.

After we get back from upstate we are going down with Bob to his lodge on the gulf and catch fish, and we don't want any of you skeptics to question what we say about it either, for it will be true (some of it maybe).

The other day we asked a colored porter in the hotel if he was having turkey for Christmas and he said, "No sah, Ih'm havin' chicken; you see boss, these turkeys down heah roost too high for us colored folks."

When we haven't anything else to do we can think of the boys we have met over the country, and that helps a whole lot because they are a pretty nice lot of chaps, such as Bert Silver of Greenville and Roy Adams of Mason, Michigan; Joe Hewitt of Robinson, Illinois; T. F. Lee, that Swede at Shulsberg; Roob of Pt. Washington, and Fred Hinds of Whitewater, Wisconsin; Andy and Herb Anderson of Detroit Lakes, Lew Feldman of Pipestone and Herman Jochams of Luverne, Minnesota; Sherm Fitch, Charlie Snyder and Ernie Frace of the RKO office at Sioux Falls, South Dakota; John Piller of Valley City, North Dakota; Harry Huffman of Denver, Colorado; Ray Musselman of Lincoln, Kansas; Stettmund of Chandler and Carl Hartman of Carnega, Oklahoma, and— but oh gosh, what's the use, we can't mention all of the boys, and this leaves out hundreds of 'em, including that golf hound Zimmerman at San Marcos, Texas. You will recall that Zim was the boy who went fishing with us down at Red Wing Lake once.

Well, anyhow, it is a lot of pleasure to think of all the boys we have met and we hope they have as good an opinion of us as we have of them. There may be some of us who ought to be in the penitentiary but we doubt it.

Doggone the doggone luck anyhow, we are having a "Norther" today, as it is called down here, and this means that they are having snow and cold weather up north, and we'll betcha that Bill Miller of Cloquet, up there close to Duluth, Minnesota, is shoveling snow right now. We are going to stop now and go out and pick up some oranges and grapefruit. How's that?
